MARINES LEAVE CHATHAM BASE

1,000 BEING SENT.

LONDON, Jan. 19 (Canadian Press Cable).—Scenes familiar in the time of the war were re-enacted at Chatham today, when Marines detailed for duty in China assembled to commence their preliminary journey to Portsmouth. Three hundred marched to the station with full field equipment, headed by the regimental band, and were frantically cheered by spectators as they marched along. They were joined by another 300 Marines from Plymouth, Portsmouth supplying the remaining 400 necessary to make up the quota of 1,000.

Official quarters again stress that whatever is being done is in no way intended as a departure from the policy of non-aggression. In this connection The Star, a radical newspaper, tonight say: "If it is intended to impress Eugene Chen (Cantonese Foreign Minister), then it may be possible to justify such a demonstration, but a nation like ours cannot make a demonstration and then draw back."

The Marines will sail for China near the end of the month from Southampton and according to the Government will be used only for defensive purposes.

of the human body is dependent upon the nervous system for its activity. The nerves that supply the stomach carry the "Spark of Life" which enables the stomach to digest food. If it were not for the nerves supplying the heart, that important organ would cease to do its work. If it is true that a complete severing of the nerves leading to these organs will cause them to cease functioning, is it not reasonable that pressure upon these same nerves will limit the activity of the heart and stomach and cause them to function imperfectly.
THE ONLY WAY
to relieve this abnormal condition is to relieve the pressure from nerve fibres that supply these organs. This is accomplished by scientific manipulation of displaced spinal segments which are constricting spinal nerves. When the nerves are freed of pressure they are capable of carrying 100 per cent. of mental impulses to the abnormal tissues. THE RESULT IS HEALTH.

WIDE RANGE OF MANUFACTURES BEFORE BOARD

Application Before Railway Board For Increase of Freight Rates.

AFFECT BUSINESS.

Some Say Change Would Put Them Entirely Off Market.

OTTAWA, Jan. 20 (Canadian Press). — From a dozen to twenty witnesses have been before the Railway Commission in the past two days to testify as to the effect on their respective trades should the present scale of transcontinental freight rates as between Eastern Canada and the Pacific Coast be withdrawn and the higher class rates substituted. These witnesses have represented a wide range of manufactures including automobiles, packing-house products, glassware, cotton fabrics, cordage, newsprint and other grades of paper, oilcloth and linoleum, stoves and furnaces, hardware electric supplies, scales, iron and steel products, tin and enamelled ware, and practically every branch of manufacture which is at all extensive in Eastern Canada; and the sum total of their testimony given with monotonous unanimity was that the proposed change if ordered by the Board would seriously affect their business, and not a few declared it would put them out of the market altogether.

Several stated that competition was so severe in British Columbia both from British manufactureers and United States rivals that they were trading at a nominal profit and even sometimes at actual loss in order that they might retain their connection in hope of improvement in the future. Naturally, the question of an alternative water route was frequently discussed and in a few instances witnesses were willing to admit that it would be feasible to use the Panama Canal route, but practically all protested that the alternative was undesirable particularly because of the length of time consumed in transit, the uncertainty of adequate accommodation, the irregularity of sailings and the chances of damage by water and in transshipment.

The witnesses at the afternoon session included W. J. McCallum of the Dominion Glass Company of Montreal; E. W. Middleton, of Page Hersey Co., of Welland; F. J. McCann, traffic and service manager for the Northern Electric Company, Montreal, and Guy Toomry representing a number of newsprint and paper makers and also the Fairbanks-Morse Company of Montreal —these witneses were examined by A. Cannon, K.C., of Quebec, and without exception they endorsed, emphasized, and elaborated upon the evidence given at the previous sessions.

The last witness of the afternoon was E. A. Millar, Assistant to the President of the Canada Sugar Refinery, Montreal, who submitted a vigorous protest against certain discriminatory rates which he claimed were granted to the British Columbia Sugar Refinery some years ago, and which the protestors now sought to have removed. J. H. Smith, of the Montreal Board of Trade, supported the interpolation and furnished the Board with some further details of the situation.

This concluded the hearing of all witnesses at the moment available. Today some further evidence will be submitted in behalf of the Quebec Harbor Commission, and it is expected that the representatives of the railways will open their case per contra after the noon adjournment.

The proceedings will be appreciably shortened by the decision of the Maritime Provinces interests not to call witnesses. Mr. Duchemin, K.C., announced on behalf of this section of the Dominion that he supported the testimony which had been heard from Ontario and Quebec and witnesses would have simply endorsed the evidence already given. He reserved, however, the right to address the board later on when counsel are heard from the Eastern provinces.

POLICE PROTECT YOUNG DURING STAY ON COAST

Crowds of Hero Worshippers Mob Young Canadian on Streets.

TO SIGN CONTRACTS.

Movie and Vaudeville Offers Likely To Be Accepted Shortly.

NEW YORK, Jan. 20 (Canadian Press).—A special despatch to the New York World from Los Angeles to-day says the hero worshippers and the curious are so thick on the trail of George Young, 17-year-old Toronto youth who won the Catalina channel swim, that the Chief of Police has assigned two motorcycle policemen to accompany Young and protect him.

The despatch continues:

"Out of the scores of contracts thrust toward Young, three offers probably will be accepted within the next two days, it was learned. One is from the Famous Players-Lasky Motion Picture Company. Another is from a vaudeville circuit for a tour of the country. The third is from the National Press Association for a series of articles on Young's experiences during the swim.

"Up to a late hour on Wednesday no answer had been received from Young's mother in Toronto in response to her son's urgent request that she come here at once. William Wrigley, Jr., millionaire sportsman, who gave the $25,000 prize for the race Young won, has provided an elaborate home on Catalina Island for her use.

"Young yesterday began his five-day appearance at the Hollywood Theatre, for which he will receive $1,000 a day. When he received the $25,000 prize money on the stage of the same theatre on Tuesday night, a riot among the thousands who blocked the streets outside was narrowly avoided. It was three hours before Young could make his way from the theatre to go home."

LINDSAY, Jan. 20.—This town is being severely hit as the result of the departure of a large number of C.N.R. engineers to other divisions on the system. Some thirty-five engineers who have had years of experience have been transferred to other points to replace younger engineers, a number of whom will be taken on the local division in the capacity of firemen. All of the engineers leaving Lindsay are married men. They have purchased homes here, and their departure means that their families will follow later.

110 Elephants As Prizes For Mills College Graduates

CALCUTTA, India, Jan. 20 (By Special Cable). — Clarane Clarence Wetmore, one of the passengers on the world cruise of the Canadian Pacific flagship Empress of Scotland, now at this port, bought a hundred and ten elephants at Delhi with a view to presenting them to the June graduating class of Mills College, Oakland, California, of which class he is the sponsor and an honorary member.

Mr. Wetmore was the first student to matriculate into the University of California in 1860. The elephants are reported to be doing well and so is Mr. Wetmore. Incidentally it should be mentioned that the elephants are of solid ivory.

Jobless Man Leaps 142 Feet To Seek Death; Finds Work

NEW YORK, Jan. 20.— (United Press.) — Out of work and dependent, Givonnia Sponges, outdid Steve Brodie by leaping into the East River from the central span of Manhattan bridge, 142 feet above the water. Rescued by a tug boat and removed to a hospital, he was offered a job there. He was uninjured by his jump, which was several feet greater than Brodie's famous leap from Brooklyn bridge.

Miniature Radio Set New Police Equipment

A series of tests was announced yesterday with a miniature radio receiving set designed by Michael Rusch, young inventor. Preliminary experiments have convinced Chief Richard O. Zober that the idea may be practicable.

Rusch claims an alarm sent out from the central station here would immediately reach all policemen equipped with the receiving sets within a radius of three and one-half miles.

The sets are about the size of a cigarette case and contain one vacuum tube and miniature batteries.

BANK CLEARINGS SHOW PROGRESS

Total For 1926 Highest Since Record Years 1920 and 1921.

BUSINESS IMPROVES.

Increase in 1926 over previous year $1,120,942, or 2.76 per cent as compared with a decrease in 1925 of $57,385 or .14 per cent. Total clearings for 1926 are highest on record for this city since 1920 and 1921, the two best years on record. The percentage of Peterborough bank clearings to the total for Canada in 1926 is .236. Local clearings exceeded those at the following points: Kingston, Ontario; New Westminster, B.C.; Brandon, Man.; Lethbridge, Alta.; Prince Albert, Sask.; and Medicine Hat, Alta. The foregoing may be accepted as proof of the general improvement in local business during the year just closed.

Chairman, E. S. Martin, Bank of Montreal; Vice-Chairman, E. J. H. Vanstone, Bank of Toronto; Secretary, G. M. Lyons, Bank of Montreal

TROUBLE GROWS IN CHINESE CITY

Servants of British in Changsha Have Been On Strike For Week.

QUIET AT FOOCHOW.

PEKING, Jan. 20 (Canadian Press).—The situation at Changsha, capital of Hunan Province, which is threatened with anti-foreign troubles, is growing worse, said a despatch from there today. All Chinese servants in the employ of British residents, with the exception of those at the British Consulate, have been on strike for a week, and British offices were closed. The German residents there were wearing arm bands denoting their nationality to avoid molestation.

120 Women Leave Foochow

FOOCHOW, Jan. 20 (Canadian Press).—One hundred and twenty women have left or were leaving Foochow today on account of the trend of recent anti-foreign developments and the uncertain outlook for the future. The situation remained quiet. Several reasuring proclamations were issued by government officials.

LAW OFFICER VISITS LINDSAY

Considerable Speculation About Reasons For His Arrival.

MUCH EXCITEMENT.

LINDSAY, Jan. 20.—The visit of a representative of the Attorney-General's Department to this town has set tongues wagging. It was given out that his visit had to do with investigating certain prosecutions under the O.T.A. in the local courts which should have been handled by the Inland Revenue Department. It is also said his visit has to do with certain complaints which have been registered at the Attorney-General's Department regarding the alleged participation of an officer of the law in the recent Provincial election. The latter case has created considerable excitement in the district.

CABINET EXPRESSES APPROVAL OF BRIAND'S FOREIGN POLICIES MINISTERIAL DISCORD IS ENDED

Foreign Minister Will Expound Them Before Chamber Foreign Affairs.

PARTY STRONGER.

Continuation of the Locarno Policy Is Believed Assured.

PARIS, Jan. 20.—When Aristide Briand, the French Foreign Minister, speaks, there is seldom any opposition And all criticism and rumor of discord between him and the Cabinet disappeared when yesterday morning he presented for approval an explanation of his policy, which he will repeat before the Chamber Commission of Foreign Affairs and at first opportunity publicly to Parliament.

During these past few weeks there has been in the press of the Right a campaign against the Foreign Minister which in certain cases is believed to owe its inspiration to some of his colleagues in the Cabinet. But yesterday those criticisms were not heard in the Council room.

"The Council," says the Communique, "approved the sense of the declaration which the Foreign Minister will make today to the Chamber Commission."

For the moment this ends a serious and unsatisfactory phase in the line of Premier Poincare's government of National Union. The Locarno policy and all it entails will remain the policy of the country as it is of the majority in Parliament.

Louis Marin, Andre Tardieu, Louis Barthou, Maurice Bokanowsky and all the other Minister of Right tendencies have approved it once more, whatever their lieutenants of the Paris press may write.

There can be no going back on what has been done during the past eighteen months. Even those who criticise M. Briand for sentimentalism and idealism at Thoiry and Locarno cannot overlook the shrewdness of his work.

Makes Rumanian Treaty Public

And on the eve of the Italo-Hungarian conversations and in contrast to the Italo-Rumanian Treaty, M. Briand has made public the Treaty of Frendship and Alliance which he signed with Rumania last July.

Th text of this treaty will be published today, but its contents have been already fairly widely divulged. In character it is exactly the same as those other treaties which France has made within the framework of the League of Nations with Poland, Czechslovakia, Belgium and is preparing with Yugoslavia.

Its terms are skilfully drawn. France and Rumania mutually reaffirm their League of Nations vow to abstain from any attack or invasion and to avoid any recourse to war except in the case of legitimate defence or in circumstances forseen in Articles XV and XVI of the Covenant of the League.

They bind themselves to examine in common all questions which might endanger their external security or injure the order of things established by the Treaty of Versailles.

Firmly, in the case of non-provoked aggression against either, they agree to give mutual council, help to safeguard their national interests and maintain the status quo.

This treaty constitutes formal recognition by France of he Rumanian title to Bessarabia. France has thus given to Rumania a better treaty than the widely advertised agreement between Premiers Averescu and Mussolini.

The publication of the treaty terms is expected to have no little effect in the Balkans where the two Latin countries have become rivals for influence since the Italian treaty with Albania alarmed Yugoslavia and made a new beginning of the old policy of the balance of power.

Hungary is a country which is still outside the various combines, and it is toward Hungary that Fascist Italy appears to be leaning in search of new friends.

On that side of M. Briand's work no; even his most ardent opponents can find an reproach to make. He may be idealistic and mystical at times, but he has lost none of his old shrewdness.

Among those in the city are: Hon. A. A. Dysart, of Buctouche; Hon. P. J. Veniot, Bathurst; Hon. W. E. Foster, Saint John; John Fred Magee, Port Elgin; Alfred Bourgeois; M.P. for Kent County; Wm. Ryan and A. Hanneberry, Saint John, and several others.

Firemen Oust Pet Mascot Which Rang False Alarms

HARRISON, N.Y., Jan. 20.—Firemen of this village have experienced one mishap after another since they endeavored to adopt a mascot and are endeavoring to find one that will not turn in false alarms.

A black cat that persisted in crossing in front of the apparatus when it was about to respond to an alarm was deposed for obvious reasons; while Rip Van Winkle, an opossum, the Fire Department's latest mascot, has been discarded because of its fondness for hanging on the alarm bell rope and "shimmying in its sleep," thus ringing the bell.

Bylaw 896 was passed to provide for expenditure on township roads for the year 1927.

A resolution was passed appointing Mr. Henry as sanitary inspector, school attendance officer, from now until June 30, at a salary of $100.

LESS TRAFFIC ON TRENT CANAL

Short Season Blamed For Decrease On Most Canadian Waterways.

2,220 VESSELS.

Only three canals in Canada show an increase in the number of tons of freight passing through their waters in 1926 over the year 1925. The Trent Valley Canal shows a decrease of 8,610 tons in freight.

Last year 2,200 vessels passed through the Trent Canal with a registered tonnage of 86,658 tons, 49,727 passengers, and with a total freight of 27,692 tons.

Navigation was very late in starting last year and early in finishing and the total tonnage carried on all the Canadian canals was 13,477,663 tons, or a decrease of 653,004 tons over 1925, which was considered an exceptional year.

Says Bible "Marvels" Get Backing Of Science

LONDON, Jan. 20 (Associated Press).—Bible marvels are receiving growing support from science, says Sir Oliver Lodge, the physicist, and the progress of science is tending to strengthen theology in all its vital aspects.

"Certain Bible occurrences," he says, "have been doubted, such as the direct voice at the Baptism, the Presence of the Transfiguration, Saul's vision on the road to Damascus. All these things science is beginning to show were true happenings.

"I look forward to the time when incarnation will be rationally recognized as both a divine and human fact."

Council Committee Recommends Purchase of Electric Distribution Lines.

PETERBORO CITED.

LINDSAY, Jan. 20.—(Special.)—The special committee of the town council appointed to look into the light and power situation as it affects the municipality, has prepared its report recommending the purchase from the Hydro-Electric Commission the local distributing plant. The council will submit the question to the ratepayers at an early date. The committee in its report told of its visit to the city of Peterborough as follows:

The City of Peterborough purchased their distribution plant in the year 1913, and entered into a contract with the Hydro-Electric Commission to supply to them entry at the sub-station and their experience in operation has been exceedingly satisfactory. The Commissioners claim that they have been able to save to the City of Peterborough between the years 1917 and 1925, based on the rate of cost under private ownership at the time they took over the plant and the rates they have been able to give during the time mentioned, some 2,283,282.90. They have also been able to build up during the said period of time, a sinking fund reserve of $72,125.23; a distribution reserve of $53.742.25, and an operating surplus of 56,239.65. The City of Peterborough has the best rate of any city or town in the province, based on cost of power per horse power per year, assuming an 99 h.p. peak and an average consumption of 60 h.p. per month. The rate in Peterborough on the above basis is $17.88. Peterborough's experience in owning their distribution plant and purchasing power from the Commission at the sub-station has been satisfactory and profitable to the city."

NO STEPS TAKEN FOR TRIBUNAL

Arbitration of Mexican Land Law Dispute Not Begun.

BEING CONSIDERED.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 20 (Canadian Press).—While no definite move has been made either by the United States or Mexico looking to arbitration of the oil and land law dispute, Secretary of State Kellogg's announcement that he has considered the possibility of applying this principle to the question has aroused considerable speculation in Washington and Mexico City.

It is concerned chiefly with the many preliminary obstacles that would have to be surmounted first before any step was taken to submit the controversy to an arbitrator or some impartial tribunal.

Council Of King's Lynn Waxes Wroth At Ex-Mayor For Escorting Queen and Prince During Recent Visit

LONDON, Jan. 20 (Canadian Press Cable).—There is much amusement throughout the country at the controversy in ancient King's Lynn, which started when Queen Mary and Prince George recently visited the town and were shown around by Major S. A. Coxon, social celebrity and former Mayor. The present Mayor and Council, holding that Coxon usurped their privileges, adopted a resolution dispensing with the Major's presence at the Town Hall. Mrs. Coxon, a member of the Council, has just had rejected her eloquent appeal to the Councillors to withdraw the ban on her husband.

Many commentators declare that the Council of King's Lynn in censuring Major Coxon virtually censured Her Majesty, since when paying a strictly private and informal visit she was entitled to accept whatever escort she chose.

Coxon states that he accompanied the Queen and Prince after finding out that the Mayor was not available.

However, one thing is certain, and that is Queen Mary will not call at King's Lynn again very soon.

LLOYD GEORGE CONSULTED BY FOREIGN OFFICE

CABINET ANNOYED.

Press Placing Too Much Emphasis on Military Preparations.

LONDON, Jan. 20 — Canadian Press — Foreign Secretary Sir Austen Chamberlain held a conference at the foreign office to-day with former premier Lloyd George, Liberal leader, on the Chinese problem.

It was stated in official circles that these meetings were in complete accord with established precedent, that calls for complete knowledge by the Opposition leaders of developments in situations affecting the British foreign policy.

Downing street is vexed over the emphasis that the London press has been placing on British military preparations to meet emergencies in the Far East. It was reiterated that the British policy is to negotiate with the Chinese on the liberal basis and that the despatch of warships and marines to China was purely precautionary and to assist in quieting fear and panicky feeling of the foreign population in Shanghai.

MRS. CHAPLIN TO GET MONEY

Receivers Appointed Find Husband Has $17,000 in California Banks.

HAS OTHER ACCOUNTS.

LOS ANGELES, January 20. Canadian Press. — Lita Grey Chaplin looked forward to a pay day to-day as her counsel prepared to go into court to collect from Charlie Chaplin the temporary alimony awarded in the divorce suit against the wealthy comedian, who, it was disclosed, has almost $1,000,000 in cold cash.

The receivers of the Chaplin fortune appointed at the wife's instance, yesterday reported an examination of bank books found in the studio safes, showed cash balances for Chaplin and his corporations totalling almost $1,000,000 scattered through banks in Hollywood, Los Angeles, New York, England and France.

Of this amount $74,547 is in the actor's personal accounts, approximately $17,000 of which is in California banks and in the jurisdiction of the courts. This is sufficient to cover the present sums due Mrs. Chaplin. Her counsel, however, desire that payment of future alimony instalments be assured, and it is upon this issue that the corporation funds may be attacked.

In the great Russian oil field near Baku, on the Caspian Sea, a seat of ancient fire worship, there still exists a burning well that was alight four centuries before the discovery of America by Columbus.

Attempted To Slay Wife; Reports At Police Station

LONDON, Jan. 20.— (United Press.)—A man appeared at the door of Gray's Inn Road Police Station, handed the door keeper his card, and asked that he be taken to the officer in charge. The card read "Robert Willis," but none knew the name. "Oh," said Willis, explaining his presence, "you fellows know me. I am the man that tried to murder his wife."

The door keeper let him in.

$500,000 Necklace To Mark Reconciliation

NEW YORK, Jan. 20 (Canadian Press).—James A. Stillman, as a tender expression of his re-awakened love for his wife and their consequent reconciliation, has presented Mrs. Stillman with a necklace worth at least $500,000, says to-day's New York American.

The bestowal of the necklace was revealed, the story says, by James 'Bud' Stillman, a senior at Princeton. It is of collar design, 1¼ inches wide, and is made of pearls, rubies, sapphires and diamonds.

BRITISH BANKS HAD BIG PROFITS DURING THE YEAR

Prosperity Contrasts With Crisis in Industry Over Great Britain.

SEEM CONTRARY.

Demand For Nationalization of Banking Industry Renewed By Labor.

LONDON, Jan. 20 — Despite the grievances being aired daily by the industrialists about present conditions in Great Britain, British banks appear to be in a particularly happy frame of mind, and having made huge profits during the last year, are predicting general prosperity for this year, basing their optimism on the settlement of the industrial disputes, which, they hold, points to a future of industrial peace.

The assets of the Midland bank of which Reginald McKenna, former chancellor of the exchequer, is chairman, now stand at the record figure of £430,557,103 sterling, an increase of £19,000,000 over last year. The National Provincial bank, too, has increased its assets by nearly £6,000,000, the total now standing at £288,250,000, while the assets of Barclay's bank amount to £348,438,000, also higher than the preceding year's figures.

Curb Banks' Power

These figures are causing some astonishment to those in close touch with the industrial situation, because they are apparently contrary to every economic law, but at the same time it is emphasized that probably more British industries are now in pawn to the banks than ever before in the history of the nation, and that the prosperity of the banks is no real indication of the condition of the economic life of the country. This prosperity in the banking business and the high cost of money has resulted in a demand for legislation to curb the power of the five big banks, and has increased labor's enthusiasm for what is called the "nationalization of the banking industry."

COLD WAVE SWEEPS WESTERN CANADA

WINNIPEG, Jan. 20 (Canadian Press)—Sweeping across the prairies from the far north and working eastward, a cold wave covered Western Canada to-day and sent the mercuries to new low marks for the season, ranging from 16 below at Calgary, Alberta, to 48 below at The Pas, in Northern Manitoba. Fires were numerous in many districts while telegraph companies were grappling to keep communication open west of Winnipeg. The intense cold had snapped many wires and repair men from divisional points were rushed out to repair the damage.

EUGENE CHEN SENDS DEMANDS BRITAIN'S ENVOY

Official Recognition of Canton By Great Britain Is Required.

NOT CONFIRMED.

Rumors of Split in Nationalist Party Are Gaining Strength.

LONDON, Jan. 20 (United Press).—The Daily News at Pekin yesterday cabled that mines were officially reported being laid in the Yangtse River.

Chinese newspapers, the despatch said, were carrying reports that Eugene Chen, Cantonese foreign minister, has made the following demands of Counsellor O'Malley, British representative at Hankow:

1 That Great Britain officially recognize the Nationalist government.

2. That the Nationalist pay a proper sum for concessions at Hankow and Kiugiang after a fair estimate of their value has been made.

3. That all British warships operating in inland waters be withdrawn with the understanding that they will not be returned.

If the conditions are accepted, Chen was quoted as saying: Nationalists will agree to cease anti-British agitations.

Confirmation of the demands was lacking.

Rumors of a split in the Nationalist party are gaining strength, it was reported, and O'Malley will be instructed to await developments before taking any action.

For Independence

LONDON, Jan. 20.—Simultaneously with reiteration by Attorney-General Hogg that Great Britain would be neither ungenerous nor unreasonable if the Chinese authorities were willing to negotiate, the Cantonese foreign minister at Hankow, Dr. Eugene Chen, stiuplates that "Chinese nationalism demands back the lost independence of China."

It was reported yesterday that the government had decided to dispatch tanks and airplane reinforcements to China.

Attorney-General Hogg stressed the point that, should British forbearance at Hankow lead the Chinese to believe that by the use of arms they could compel concessions which might not be had through peaceful discussion, Great Britain was ready to discharge its duty at all costs—namely to protect the lives and property of its nationals.

Hankow Council

In a special message to The Daily Express, Foreign Minister Chen says that when the British municipal council at Hankow abdicated its powers it was necessary to avert the collapse of life in the concession city.

"The constitution of this Chinese ministration," he adds, "has created a new status quo in the concession, which must be regularized by negotiations between the British and Nationalists movements."

Discussing what the powers should do to insure smooth resumption of international relations, he asserts that the British were first "to subject China to western political and economic domination, through opium wars and the imposition of a system of invisible conquest in the form of international control."

Typical features of this regime are cited by Chen, as "British controlled customs, extra territoriality, alien administered settlements, a concession consortum and other limitations on Chinese sovereignty contained in unequal treaties."

Settled by Powers

"A country so controlled and fettered," he continues, "obviously is not independent. Chinese Nationalism demands back the independence of China. Our terms are cancellation of the unequal treaties on which the regime of foreign imperialism in China is based.

"The new status quo in the concession is a direct summons to British statesmanship to take the lead in recognizing the justice of the Nationalist demand for independence and to make redress for a great historic wrong."

No Humiliation

Repuditating a desire to humiliate Great Britan, Chen concludes:

"We do demand a settlement of the queston of the concession which shall not deny its effective re-incorporation within the Chinese territorial system, subject to Nationalist recognition of the valdity of British proggrty rights."

Spends Ice Cream Money On Frankfurter; Chokes

MIDDLETON, N.Y., Jan. 20 (United Press).—Sidney Codichini, nine, of Port Jarvis, asked his father for a nickel to buy "ice cream." He got it, went to a nearby meat market and bought a frankfurter instead. While eating it, Sidney slipped and fell, causing him to swallow a large portion of the frankfurter, which stuck in his throat. He was strangled to death before assistance could reach him.

SECESSION PLOT NIPPED BY POLES

UKRAINIAN DISTRICT

By KARL H. VON WIEGAND, Universal Service Staff Correspondent

BERLIN, Jan. 20.—(Special Wireless to Universal Service).—Poland is in a state of excitement over sensational wholesale arrests which have nipped in the bud what the government alleges was a plot for a communist revolution incited from Moscow for the overthrow of the Pilsudski regime but what in reality appears to have been a movement of the Ukranian, or "white" Russian, section of Poland to secede.

Close to 450 arrests have been made, including three White Russian deputies.

The government alleges that Anton Olschewski, one of the men arrested, is a Soviet commissary from Moscow, sent by Moscow with large sums of money to organise a revolution. It is charged that he had a large staff of propagandists and agents extending even into the most important ministries of the government, some of whom he paid as high as $200 to $500 a month.

The Polish parliament is aroused over the police ignoring parliamentary immunity by arresting three deputies. The government claims to have evidence of wide ramifications of the plot and also that it has discovered an arms depot.

Of all the many nationalities which make up the mosaic of Poland ,the Ukraine White Russian section is the most bitter against the reactionary government methods.

OLD MASTERS

Pibroch of Donuil Dhu,
Pibroch of Donuil,
Wake thy wild voice anew,
Summon Clan Conuil.
Come away, come away,
Hark to the summons!
Come in your war-array,
Gentles and commons.

Come from the deep glen, and
From Mountain so rocky;
The war-pipe and pennon
Are at Inverlocky.
Come every hill-plaid, and
True heart that wears one,
Come every steel blade, and Strong hand that bears one.

Leave untended the herd,
The flock without shelter;
Leave the corpse uninterr'd,
The bride at the altar;
Leave the deer, leave the steer,
Leave nets and barges:
Come with your fighting gear,
Broadswords and targes.

Come as the winds come, when Forests are rended,
Come as the waves come, when
Navies are stranded:
Faster come, faster come,
Faster and faster,
Chief, vassal, page and groom,
Tenant and master.

Fast they come, fast they come;
See how they gather!
Wide waves the eagle plume
Blended with heather.
Cast your plaids, draw your blades,
Forward each man set!
Pibroch of Donuil Dhu,
Knell for the onset!

PROBE WITNESS FAILS TO ARRIVE

Doctor Who Ordered B. C. Man To Travel Called Before Board.

OTHER TESTIMONY.

VANCOUVER, B. C., January 20.—Canadian Press. — When the customs probe resumed here yesterday morning, Henry Reifel, Jr., was called. He failed to appear and R. L. Calder, K. C., one of the Commission counsel, asked that the absence of this witness be noted.

Mr. Farris, counsel for several of the liquor interests, explained that Mr. Reifel was out of Canada, travelling for his health.

Chief Justice J. T. Bro , chairman of the commission, said that Mr. Reifel had been instructed to travel for his health the doctor who gave him the instructions should appear before the commission. This was agreed to.

Examined by Hon. N. W. Rowell, K.C., commission counsel, he explained that he had been interested in three liquor companies before entering the consolidation. The names of the companies were the Dominion Trading Company, the Dominion Distributing Company and the Morgan Company. These companies had been merged into the Consolidated Exporters. Now, in addition t being on the directorate of the Consolidated he was president of the Ranier Brewing Company and also of the Westminster Brewing Company.

When he was connected with the Dominion Trading Company he had imported some shipments of United States whiskey, the witness testified.

"Did you know that you could not import this American liquor without an affidavit that it was for beverage purposes?" asked Mr. Rowell

"Yes," said the witness.

Mr. Farris, representing the witness, said that Mr. Rowell's questions were without the scope of the commission; the commission was not investigating the manner of releasing liquor under the Volstead act.

Chairman Brown told Mr. Farris that the scope of the commission had been enlarged. He thought that Mr. Rowell's questions came properly within the scope of the commission.

Mr. Fiddes admitted to Mr. Rowell that his breweries had contributed to campaign funds of both political parties. Amounts of 4800 and of 6000 were mentioned in connection with the 1925 general election contribution.

"To both sides?" asked Mr. Rowell.

"Yes," said the witness.

"That was impartial," interjected Commissioner Wright. (Laughter.)

"Why did you give it?" asked Mr. Rowell.

"We always give to campaign funds," witness replied.

"Did you know this was prohibited?"

"No; I wish it was."

"Did you know it was an indictable offence?"

"No."

"Well, it is," said Mr. Rowell, and he quoted from the Dominion elections act.

"I'm afraid you'll have to start to build jails because everyone will be in them and no one out," commented the witness.

J. H. Irving, secretary of the Canadian-Mexican Shipping Company, was called. He said that his company owned the Halahat, the Quadra, the Coal Harbor, and other vessels engaged in the liquor business. He did not know where the books of the company were.

First Plane Suicide Leaps 2,000 Feet In Spain Air Liner Turns Back To Find Passenger Dead

MADRID, Jan. 20.—Jumping from a height of more than two thousand feet from an airplane on the Toulouse-Casablanca passenger line, Maurice Boucher a Paris engineer is reported as the first man to adopt this method of committing suicide.

The tragedy occurred near Alicante in Spain. M. Boucher, who was 62 years old, was killed instantly. He had mentioned personal troubles to his travelling companions at dinner previous to leaving Toulouse.

The pilot reported that thirty minutes after leaving Alicante he noted a heavy jerk of the machine, which jumped owing to loss of weight. Turning, he saw an overcoat hanging on the rudder and decided to go back to the flying ground. When he alighted he found one passenger missing. An automobile was dispatched to search the country and the body was found in the village of Bacarot.

MOSCOW PAPER CONDEMNS MOVE

Says U. S. Intervention Blind for War Against Mexico.

BRITAIN TOO BUSY

(By Universal Service. Special Cable Dispatch.)

The Investia alleges that this intervention is a "mere blind" for a projected war against Mexico, and that "America's attempts to blame Bolshevism for all honest, just and freedom-loving movements leave out of consideration the fact that such tactics only aid the growth of class consciousness among the masses and their organizations for fighting."

The United States chose a favorable moment, when England was occupied with China and could not protest against the extension of American interests, the Investia concludes.

ROBERT BULLOCK.

LAKEFIELD, Jan. 20.—A highly esteemed resident of the village assed away on Wednesday, in the person of Robert Bullock. He had been ill for some months.

Mr. Bullock was a son of the late Mr. and Mrs. James Bullock, and was born in Warsaw nearly 69 years ago. His parents were of English birth, and were married shortly after their arrival in Canada, settling on a farm near Warsaw, on which the deceased lived until failing health compelled him to give up active work about eight years ago. Since that time he has resided in Lakefield. The fact that five generations have lived on the Bullock farm is a unique record.

Mr. Bullock was twice married, first to Eleanor Stephenson, and later to Cynthis Owens, who survives him. He is also survived by one son, Wesley of Port Arthur, six daughters: Mrs. Thomas Cooper and Mrs. Joseph Tedford of Warsaw, Mrs. Allen Jackson and Miss Florence Bullock of Detroit, Mich., and Mrs. Clifford King and Miss Edith Bullock of Flint, Mich., also two brothers, Thomas of Essex and George of Leamington, and one sister, Mrs. Mary Jane Doman of Vancouver. One son, George, and one daughter, Mary, also two infant sons, predeceased him.

Mr. Bullock had always taken an active part in community life, and was for fifteen years salesman and secretary of Warminster Cheese Factory. He was for many years secretary of Warsaw School Board. In Lakefield he identified himself with the Regent Street United Church, where he was elected a member of the board of stewards, being also envelope steward. He was a staunch Liberal in politics.

Mr. Bullock had many friends in the village, where he was well-known and his kindly nature appreciated.

The funeral will be held on Friday afternoon at 1.30 from his late residence, Katherine Street, proceeding to Warsaw Cemetery for interment. The Rev. T. M. Wesley will be in charge.

Next to beef, the British working man as a rule prefers rabbit to any other food. He likes it best stewed with onions.

PARTY ACCEPTS GEORGE'S OFFER

£300,000 in Addition To Annual £40,000 To Be Used in General Election.

CONTROL FUND.

LONDON, Jan. 20 (Canadian Press).—Acceptance of David Lloyd George's offer of a £300,000 fund for the next general election in addition to £40,000 annually for headquarters and party purposes, was reaffirmed yesterday by a majority vote of the Liberal organization.

The former Premier's offer of the use of the income of his electoral fund, which was arranged after he left England on a holiday, was accepted by the organizing committee of the Liberal party by a vote of 19 to 14 on December 16 last. Mr. Lloyd George attended the meeting yesterday. He made it a condition that he retain control of the fund, but it is understood that he is taking steps to secure it permanently for Liberal party purposes. Vivian Phillips and other strong supporters of the Earl of Oxford and Asquith, representing the Asquithian faction, have been asked to resign from the committee.

APPROVES SALE OF C. M. RAILWAY

Receivership Judge Approves of Re-organization For Two Banking Houses.

BOTH OPPOSED.

CHICAGO, Jan. 20 (Canadian Press).—Sale of the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul Railway for $140,000,000 to representatives of Kuhn Loeb and Company, and the National City Company of New York, re-organization managers, was approved yesterday by Federal Judge James H. Wilkerson, on whose court the railroad went into receivership March 18, 1925.

Judge Wilkerson also approved the re-organization plan of the two New York banking houses.

Both steps had been bitterly opposed by a bondholders' protective committee.

The re-organization involves naming the railroad the Chicago, Milwaukee and Pacific.

DUFF RUMORED CABINET POST

OTTAWA, Jan. 20.—Election of William Duff in Antigonish-Guysboro Tuesday sets the stage for the oft-talked-of Cabinet shuffle at Ottawa. Mr. Duff, it was commonly reported, carried the portfolio of a new Cabinet post in his pocket in the general elections. If he held his old seat, Queens-Lunenburg, he was to have been made Minister of Fisheries, it was reported. To aid the Maritimes the Government was going to separate Marine and Fisheries. With all the new harbor commissions and harbor works now going on Marine is quite a sizeable job by itself. It is now stated here in usually reliable quarters that Mr. Duff was given a renewal of the promise of the portfolio of Fisheries if he could redeem Antigonish-Guysboro. He has done that handsomely and is expected here to collect his new job almost immediately.

E. A. Lapierre of Nipissing and John Sinclair of P.E.I. are believed to be likely to be taken into the Cabinet as Ministers without portfolio. Mr. Lapierre would represent the French-Canadian minority in Ontario, and Mr. Sinclair would complete Mr. King's ideal of having Cabinet representation from each of the nine provinces. P.E.I. is at present not represented.

The official sources are all silent on this proposed Cabinet change, and also with respect to rumors recurring that Hon. W. R. Motherwell is to leave the Cabinet and the House of Commons to accept a post in Saskatchewan.

FOUND GUILTY

OTTAWA, Jan. 20 (Canadian Press)—Romeo Gregvoire, of Embrun, near here, charged with manslaughter in connection with the death of a young child in a motor accident here on December 1 last, was found guilty here yesterday afternoon, with a recommendation to mercy.

BATTLE OPENS OVER TAXES ON FORD INCOMES

Former Stockholders Fight Assessment on Their Sale of Shares.

LONG ENGAGEMENT

Each Side Has Already Announced Appeal if Defeated.

(By FRANK BOGART, Universal Service Staff Correspondent.)

DETROIT, Mich., Jan. 20.—It cost only $10 apiece for the nine defendants in the greatest tax appeal case in American history to start the battle against paying $34,000,000 added income taxes on their sale of Ford Motor minority stock, but it will cost them millions before the battle, which it is estimated will last from three to five years, is ended.

The $10 is the fee which each had to pay to get the matter before the Federal Board of Tax Appeals. A division of three judges of the total of 16 is now sitting here, and will continue to hold hearings in another two weeks at least.

Other hearings will be held next month in Washington. Both sides have stated an appeal will be taken, whatever the finding of the judges may be as to the valuation of Ford Motor stock in 1913, which is the hub of the whole case.

The appeal will be tried in the Sixth Circuit Court of Appeals at Cincinnati, and from there, should the defendants lose ,they are prepared to carry the matter into the Supreme Court.

Three local legal firms and those headed by Joseph E. Davies, of Washington, former Trade Commission Chairman, and John W. Davis, of New York, former Democratic presidential candidate, will be engaged in this lengthy litigation on behalf of Senator Couzens, the estate of John F. and Horace E. Rodge, and the other original incorporators of the Ford Company.

A total of 33 persons are engaged upon the present case, which is being heard in a ball room of the Hotel Statler here. Two entire floors of the hotel are given over to improvised law offices and living quarters of the Government and defense legal staffs.

The evidence already submitted is mountainous. Much of it is of the most expensive nature, being photostatic copies of documents, patents and other data related to the history of the Ford Company and the motor industry generally. One stipulation alone dealing with the Selden patent suit that Ford won in 1911, when the gates were really opened and he was freed from all competition, contains $1,800 worth of these photostats.

The Selden patent matter will occupy all of Monday's session, it is said. Next, two of the defendants, Horace H. Rackham and John K. Anderson, from whom the Government wants another $6,000,000, will take the stand.

To date the question of the proper valuation of Ford stock has been the only one dealt with. Percy S. Talbert, who fixed it for the Government in 1919 at $9,489, as of March, 1913, has been a defense witness and stuck to his theory that the value was the only one that could be made if common sense and good business judgment prevailed.

The Government wants a much lower value established, for, oddly enough, the lower the valuation the higher would be the taxable gain upon which the sellers would have to pay. Many other valuations, made at different dates, have tangled up the case. The stock was sold at different figures, between $12,500 and $13,400. Talbert has admitted that when he was making his valuation he ignored the figure his chief accountant gave him of $2,055 per share, because, he said, he was convinced the future prospects of the Ford Company in 1913 were such that the earnings could not have helped but multiply as they did.

VESTRY MEETING.

MARMORA, Jan. 20.—The annual vestry meeting of St. Paul's church was held on Monday evening, Rev. A. B. Caldwell presiding. The financial statement was read by Mr. J. A. Bleecker as alternative.

The rector appointed a selective vestry as follows: Messrs. S. B. Wright, R. E. Bonter, H. R. Pearce, C. A Lummiss, J. A. Rice, W. R. Reynolds, R. Hunter, A. V. Yates, R. Jones, W. Derry, C. Jones and Dr. Crawford, this appointment being approved of by all present. Various other matters affecting the welfare of the parish were well discussed. Votes of thanks to Ladies' Guild and choir were passed and in conclusion the rector expressed his thanks on behalf of himself and Mrs Cardwell for the many kindnesses marking their advent to the parish.

Wary Woman Causes Raid Asks For Whiskey Test

EAST ORANGE, N.J., Jan. 20. — The arrest of Michael Simsi, a dealer in ice at 246 North Clinton Street, following the seizure by the police of twelve bottles of whisky and six 50-gallon barrels of wine in his home, revealed that Chief of Police William O'Neill of East Orange had received a tip from a woman who said she had purchased a bottle of whisky from an ice dealer and wanted the Police Chief to recommend a chemist to analyze the liquor before she served it to guests.

Simsi was arrested and, with the whisky and wine, was turned over to the Federal authorities. A charge of illegal possession of liquor was made against him.

SMITH PRESENTS HIS CREDENTIALS

SENATORS DEBATING.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 20 (Canadian Press).—Frank L. Smith of Illinois made his long expected bid for a place in the Senate yesterday but was kept on the anxious seat while senators argued whether they had a constitutional right to exclude him.

As the debate over legal technicalities stretched out through the afternoon hours, there were multiplying predictions that the vote would be close.

Smith, elected on November 2 to take office on March 4, was appointed by Governor Small, of Illinois, to fill the unexpired term of the late Senator McKinley, of Illinois.

During his campaign, at Senatorial nomination, it was brought out by the Senate campaign funds committee that he accepted large contributions from public utility interests.

IMPROVEMENT IN CANADIAN STEEL

Statistics Show Considerable Improvement of Quantity Over Previous Year.

OTTAWA, Jan. 20 (Canadian Press).—During 1926, says the Bureau of Statistics, Canada's primary iron and steel industry showed considerable improvement in quantity production over the previous year, largely because of the pronounced prosperity of the construction and automotive industries, and the improved condition of Canadian railways as reflected by large orders for rails and new equipment.

Production of pig iron totalled 737,500 long tons, an increase of 29 per cent over the total for 1925, while steel ingots and direct steel castings at 776,888 tons showed little change from the 752,695 tons of 1925. While the greater tonnages indicaed some general improvement in the iron and steel business in Canada the returns to the industry were restricted by the lower prices prevailing during the year. Imports of European steel into the Maritime Provinces and foreign iron into the Eastern United States, both at low valuations, tended to keep prices down.

SAYS WAS SPIRIT OF CONFERENCE THAT COUNTED

New Zealand Premier's Address To Canadian Club at Winnipeg.

UNITE EMPIRE.

Emphasises Loyalty, Public Criticism and Liberty as Principal Bonds.

WINNIPEG, Manitoba, January 20 —Canadian Press. "We are proud to be associated with the British Empire and all it means, but we of New Zealand also recogniz some of the difficulties, it is possible other portions of the empire may have and it is for us to help them out where we can," declared Right Hon. Joseph G. Coates, Prime Minister of New Zealand, in an address to the Canadian Club of Winnipeg yesterday.

Referring to the work of the recent Imperial Conference, Premier Coates said: "I think I correctly interpret the results of the conference when I say it was the spirit of the conference that really counted. I have no doubt personally but that the conclusions we reached did not conflict with resolutions of previous conferences. But what was written down at the recent conference will, however, go in the direction of making our empire better known and better understood, and our people more of one mind than ever before."

During his address the New Zealand Prime Minister emphasized the loyalty of Britons to the throne, the peculiarly British privilege of public criticism of the acts of public men, and the liberty and justice provided by the British institutions, as the principal bonds of the British Empire.

Dealing with trade and commerce Premier Coates expressed the desire of New Zealand for more and greater trade relations between herself and Canada.

"Our policy has been to do business with our people—our own Empire," he declared. "New Zealand understands Canadians and we want to do business with Canada."

Stressing the necessity of the interchange of views in order to build up a thorough understanding of prevailing conditions, Premier Coates extended a hearty invitation to the business men of Manitoba to visit New Zealand.

Following his address at the Canadian Club, Premier and Mrs. Coates visited Transcona, Man., near Winnipeg, where the railway shops were inspected, and in the evening the visiting statesman was the guest of Lieut.Governor T. T. Burrows, of Manitoba, at a dinner given in his honor at Government House.

At nine o'clock, the Prime Minister entrained for Vancouver, from where he will depart for his homeland.

Lyrics Of Life

(By Douglas Malloch.)

HOW AM I?

While down the busy street I sped,
A friend I met today
Who slapped me on the back and said,
"How are you, anyway?"
How am I? Well, the truth to tell,
Until that hearty slam
I really hadn't stopped to think
Just how I really am.

How am I? First, I have my health,
And that is quite a lot;
And some might say that I had wealth,
And some that I had not.
If wealth is just a heart you trust,
A home when home you need,
And children glad to see you come,
Then I am rich indeed.

How am I? Let me thank you, man,
For asking that of me.
I find that I am richer than
I ever hoped to be.
Although I ought, I hadn't thought
Of blessings that are mine;
But, come to think about it, friend,
How am I? Why, I'm fine!

Russia Went Dry In 1915 and Went Crazy in 1917 President Elect Tells American College Of Surgeons

WASHINGTON, January 20. — (Canadian Press) — Heart disease and cancer have given way temporarily to prohibition in discussions here at the meeting of the American College of Surgeons. Addressing the annual banquet of the organization last night, Dr. George David Stewart, its president- elect, declared alcohol was a most excellent drug, which he wished the justices of the Supreme Court could be made to believe.

"Russia went dry in 1915," he said, "and then went crazy in 1917." He added that congress in passing the Eighteen amendment should have passed another law to prevent the people from eating certain kinds of food.

Dr. Charles H. Mayo, world famous surgeon, added his word on the dry law. He said he favored prohibition, but was "no bigot."

NICHOLLS HOSPITAL.

Reports presented at the annual meeting of the Board of Nicholls Hospital reveal the fact that more patients were treated in the hospital during 1926 than in any other year in the history of the institution

Year by year there is a steady increase in the amount of service rendered by the hospital and the dmand upon the accomodation has made it necessary to consider further extensions

Particularly is this true of the obstetrical department where more adequate facilities are required, an expansion that will engage the attention of the Board in the near future

The growth in the service provided by the institution is indicated by the fact that the expenditures last year reached the substantial total of $86,292.42.

Nicholls Hospital, well managed by its staff, and with its affairs carefully handled by a competent Board, is doing a great work in this city and it is but fair that when the annual meeting brings to attention some features of the hospital's service the community should recognize that in this splendid hospital Peterboro has a most valuable asset

THE RED CROSS RECORD.

In view of the establishment of a Red Cross outpost hospital in the northern part of our own county the report of the work done in such hospitals, as given to the Registered Nurses' Association by Miss Kraggs, in charge at Wilberforce, is full of interest.

In this outpost in Haliburton the nurse in charge has no reason to complain of lack of employment.

At the hospital itself she had twelve patients during the year and eighteen operations to attend, while she had to visit eleven schools, examine 155 children and assist in their treatment, in addition to helping 286 treatments at the hospital and 328 in the homes.

Throughout the province the Red Cross is accomplishing a fine work along these lines, in districts where there is no hospital accomodation and the nearest doctor is often many miles away.

Altogether the Society has 97 outpost hospitals in Ontario, with 46 nurses.

These hospitals had a total of 1,709 patients last year, while 2,300 visits were made to homes and over 3,000 children were taken care of in the schools.

That is a splendid record of service and the Apsley outpost, the latest in the Red Cross list will undoubtedly justify its existence by similar good work.

IT'S DIFFERENT NOW.

Recalling all the circumstances surrounding George Young's departure in search of fame and gold in California there is something that would be amusing—if it were no so pathetic—about Toronto's anxiety to get the swimming hero back and fall on his neck.

All Canadians are proud of what Young accomplished, but those living outside of Toronto are able to see the funny side of the situation.

The youngster was allowed to leave for California, unassisted by any one in Toronto but his invalid mother and the chum who provided the motorcycle.

No one offered to help in financing the expedition, only a few friends displayed the slightest interest in Young's attempt, not a single telegram reached the boy before the race to wish him success.

As Raymond Hitchcock used to warble, "Ain't it funny what a difference just a few hours make."

Overnight Young became a world-famous figure and the city which did nothing for him when he needed help is almost hysterical now in its anxiety to shower honors upon him, proving once more than the world loves a winner.

A TIMELY WARNING.

It is to be hoped that the notice in regard to the reporting of contagious diseases, published yesterday by Ald. W. J. Hancock, chairman of the local Board of Health, will have the desired effect.

The greatest obstacle the health authorities have to overcome in seeking to check the spread of contagious diseases is the failure of families to report the presence of such disease when they occur in such a mild form that the services of a physician are not necessary.

The law requires that a report must in each case be made to the Medical Officer of Health and this regulation, it should be understood, applies to chicken pox as well as to other more serious contagious diseases.

The chairman of the Board of Health has issued a warning that the law in this respect is to be enforced and that failure to obey will result in penalties being imposed.

A general compliance with the regulation concerning the reporting of contagious diseases would do much to check the spread of these diseases in Peterboro.

ANOTHER PETERBORO BOY MAKES GOOD

Among the large number of Peterboro old boys who have climbed steadily up the ladder of success may be listed Bolton S. Armstrong, head of the Mabley and Carew Company in Cincinnati, who has just been appointed a member of the Board of Trustees of the Railway Board in that city.

How he is regarded in Cincinnati can be judged from the following editorial reference to his appointment which appeared recently in the Cincinnati Enquirer:

The judges of the Court of Common Pleas of Hamilton County have shown splendid discrimination and excellent judgment in the selection of Bolton S. Armstrong, President of the Mabley & Carew Company, to fill the vacancy on the Board of Trustees of the city's valuable railway property.

In the forefront of the most enterprising citizenship of the city, Mr. Armstrong adds to the board a mind thoroughly trained and disciplined to the consideration of big business problems, and the Southern Railway is a big business problem. The great ability and the fine character of the new trustee holds the respect and commands the confidence of the entire community. His capabilities and his well-attested integrity, together with his vision and enthusiasm, are sufficient guarantees that the city's interest will be ably conserved.

The designation of such a man to important public office is another indication of the passing of that period wherein public places were bestowed in payment or recognition of political service rather than with an eye to the fitness of the appointee and the welfare of the public. In the passing of the old order and the advent of the new Cincinatti has additional reason to congratulate itself. The Judges of the Common Pleas Court of Hamilton County deserve the commendation and gratitude of every citizen of Cincinnati for designating a capable, unblemished man to serve in an important official capacity.

A KEY TO THE CHINESE PUZZLE.

Notwithstanding all that has been written concerning the situation in China, there are probably lots of people who are at a loss to understand what all the trouble is about. It is said, or rather hinted, by some writers, supposed to be well informed on the subject, that the tumults in Canton are simply a phase of the internecine war that has been waged throughout the country for several years past. Others tell us that they arise from an agitation on the part of the Cantonese for national recognition. A third view is that they represent a violent reaction or revolt against what is called exploitation by foreign, and especially British, interests; while, in some quarters, it has even been suggested that resentment of overzealous missionary effort has been a contributory cause.

Amid the confusion of opinions, it has been reserved for certain Labor groups in Canada to penetrate to the true inwardness of events at Hankow and other parts of China. It is not clear where they got their information, nor are they frank enough to indicate the extent of their knowledge. But, apparently, they are convinced that poor old Britain is to blame for the mess, and, accordingly, they have been passing resolutions demanding the withdrawal of foreign armed forces from China. Presumably, these Labor pacifists would be content to leave the foreigners in Canton, most of whom are British and American, without protection of any sort, and would accept without a murmur the grave consequences which, in all probability, would follow such a course.

One is tempted to wonder whether their attitude is as disinterested as they would have Premier King, and others in authority, believe. If they know anything at all about the conditions in Canton which have precipitated the recent turmoil, they must be aware that influences other than those of British traders and Chinese Nationalist leaders have been at work in the disturbed territory. It is known, for instance, that the Russian Soviet has not been inactive in China, and it is certain that in Canton, particularly, it has obtained a footing which is, to say the least, significant.

In a recent despatch from Hankow to the London Daily Mail, Sir Percival Phillips, a British journalist and traveller of repute, described certain events following the removal of the Cantonese capital from Canton to Wuchang, opposite Hankow, as marking "the emergence, for the first time, into the glare of publicity of Jacob Barodin," who, for the past three and a half years, had acted as the representative of the Soviet in Canton, and who, in that brief period, had so insinuated himself into the good graces of the Cantonese Government as to be recognized as its resident official adviser.

As "the driving force of the Cantonese Communist movement," and the power behind the Government, the distinguished British correspondent had no hesitation in attributing to Barodin responsibility for the ferment. He was, he wrote, "the hero of the hour" among the natives; a sinister personality regarded by many as "the liberator of the Chinese people."

This significant revelation has been received by the Labor party in Britain with an affectation of incredibility. Forgetting the recent experience of Soviet dictation in their own country they have memorialized the Baldwin Government to pay no heed to what they characterize as jingoistic propaganda. But, unfortunately for their complacency, the statements of Sir Percival Phillips derive confirmation from a source that cannot be associated with the jingo elements of Fleet street.

Some months ago, an American traveller visiting the capital of Canton, reported that he found a staff of 34 Russians assisting the Government of the Province in political, financial and military affairs, among whom "the most powerful is Barodin," the Soviet representative. "Many think him," he added, "the most powerful man in the Province."

No doubt it is possible to attach too much importance to the activities and machinations of the Moscow "Reds," but in attempting to solve the Chinese puzzle it may be well for the Labor groups in Canada, who are calling to Britain "hands off," to keep in mind the fact that so-called British exploitation may not be the only key to the mystery in the land where the almond-eyed laundrymen come from. —Ottawa Journal.

EDITORIAL NOTES AND COMMENT.

Sharks did not bother the Catalina swimmers but George Young will have to look out for them on land.

Peterboro is well represented on the Ontario Tourist Association board, which should not exactly prove a bad thing for Peterboro.

Camels are to be tried out on Saskatchewan farms. They wont' need to go nine days in that province without a drink.

Ban Johnson may furnish another example of how easy it is to talk one's self out of a good job.

Better roads for Ontario's hinterland are promised by Hon. George S. Henry. They are needed if the tourist harvest is to be complete.

MONTREAL GRAIN AND PRODUCE

MONTREAL, Jan. 20 (Canadian Press.)—The demand from foreign buyers for wheat on the Montreal market yesterday was steady and a moderate amount of business was done with the United Kingdom and the Continent.

The trade in cash grain in the local market was slow but the undertone was steady and prices were unchanged.

A moderate trade was transacted with foreign buyers in Spring wheat grades of flour. The local demand was quiet but values were firm. The winter wheat trade was dull but prices were unchanged.

Prices for all lines of millfeed were fully maintained under an active demand from all sources. The market for standard grades of rolled oats was quiet but values were steady.

The undertone to the potato market was steady with a fair amount of business passing. Car lots of Prince Edward Island Green Mountains were sold at $1.85 to $1.90 per bag of 90 pounds, and Quebec White stock at $1.50 per bag in bulk, ex-track.

The butter market was moderately active and firm. The receipts were 76 packages.

The local and export trade in cheese was quiet but values were firm. The receipts were 109 boxes.

CHICAGO GRAIN

CHICAGO, Jan. 20 (Canadian Press).—Wheat turned downward yesterday affected chiefly by apparent discrediting of reports that the Argentine government would artificially suit in values. Closing quotations on wheat were heavy, 3-8 to 7-8 net lower; corn 5-8 off to 1-8 up; oats 1-2 down to a shade advance, and provisions varying from 37 cents decline to 50 cents gain.

Corn and oats reflected wheat weakness and larger country offerings of corn to arrive.

CHICAGO, Jan. 20 (Canadian Press).—Hogs 14,000; late bulk desirable hogs, all weights $12.00 to $12.10; most 210 to 280 pound averages $12.00 to $12.15; bulk desirable packing sows $11.00 to $11.35; small supply slaughter pigs $12.00 to $12.25; largely.

Sheep 19,000; top fed western lambs to yard traders $13.00; packers top most desirable lambs $12.75; few extreme weight lambs sorted from load lots $11.50 to $11.75.

SUGAR MARKET

NEW YORK, Jan. 20 (Canadian Press).—The raw sugar market declined 1-32 of a cent early yesterday to the basis of $4.90 on sales of 12,000 bags of Porto Rican for late January shipment and early February arrival. Later the market rallied on sales of 4,600 bags of Cubas, late January early February shipment, to an operator at $4.96 duty paid.

Raw sugar futures closed two points higher to two net lower. The steadiness was attributed to increased demand from Europe in the Cuban market. Approximate sales 11,000 tons. January closed $3.09; March $3.17; May $3.27; July $3.39; September $3.45; December $3.26.

The refined sugar market was unchanged at $6.20 to $6.25 for fine granulated.

A Thought For To-day

RECREATION NECESSARY.

We all need a little recreation to lift us out of the routine of the regular grind.

Lagging ambition, waning interest, come from too close contact with work.

Renewed enthusiasm and new ideas more often come after we are rested.

So I say, Play some and have some pleasure, but watch out: Fun gets to be a habit, then work is hated, then a good man goes wrong.

JUSTAJINGLE

Wee Willie pleased the neighbors much
With one small prank, no jokin'.
When sister tried to play her harp
She found the strings all broken.

DR FRANK CRANE'S DAILY EDITORIAL

"COMING INTO MY OWN"
By Dr. Frank Crane.

The other evening I ran across this human paragraph in a volume otherwise largely technical:

"A man, as he walks in the crowd, feels himself to be an ordinary individual. But in the back of his mind is a more than half-formed phantasy: 'I seem to be an ordinary man, but I am really a man of great importance. People take me for just one of themselves; dressed like anyone else, they don't realize what an extraordinary man they have in their midst. But let an emergency arise—a crisis, an accident to the King—I spring to the rescue and everyone exclaims, "Who is this? A prince incognito! A genius in rags!" At last I come into my own'."

This is as true to human nature as scratching a mosquito bite.

Everyone has enacted such beguiling little dramas of the mind in which he plays the hero and "comes into his own."

Every subway or street car full of people is a stage whereon meek, homeward bound clerks are enacting in their minds just what they would do if a burly rowdy should insult a beautiful girl, or an insane man run amuck with a razor.

They strike the villain down, "come into their own"—and then walk back, having ridden past their station.

On all sides we catch glimpses and flashes of what people imagine "their own" to be like.

"I've played golf for thirty years and have never been on my game yet," a man is quoted as saying. His idea of what "his game" was like was something superlative and unattainable. The actual game he played was merely a failure to come up to "his own."

When a woman says, "I have had dozens of photographs taken and have never had a good picture yet," it indicates that her conception of "her own" includes an idea of personal pulchritude which her features, struggle as they will, can't live up to.

It is a truism that, in this world, sooner or later we get about what we deserve. We really "come into our own."

The reason we so rarely realize that what we get is "our own" is that our conception of what it is like is based on our desires instead of our deserts.

HOW DO YOU SAY IT?

(By C. N. Larte.)

Common Errors in English and How To Avoid Them.

(Copyright, 1927, McClure Syndicate.)

"UNDERSTAND"

Some persons have the habit, uncomplimentary to their hearers, of asking them frequently whether they understand what is said to them. These users of "understand" employ it as in the following sentences.

"I was walking down the street, understand, when I met Jones, and he did not seem at all glad to see me. I said nothing to him, understand, but he yelled at me," etc.

The Standard Dictionary says that such use of "understand" is "decidedly objectionable," and that "see" is also misused in the same manner.

It should be noted, however, that from the strict point of view of the grammarian alone, such use of "understand" is not incorrect. It means "Do you understand?" or "You understand." But the expression offends against good usage and good taste, and therefore should be avoided.

WISE AND OTHERWISE

The mystery to us is that a man ever turns bandit when there are so many landlord jobs open.

The head of the barbers' union opposes tips. Well, boys and girls, let's humor him.

Lloyd George attended his first public moving picture show the other day. The generation certainly is going to the dogs.

Keep walking to keep well, the doctors advise. To be sure, and, occasionally, jump.

HOW THE BLOOD CIRCULATES

A good circulation of pure blood is absolutely necessary for the enjoyment of perfect health. Circulation of the blood varies in different parts of the body. Even in good health, there is a very marked difference in the rapidity of the flow of the blood in various portions of the anatomy. Where a partial stoppage exists in any part of the body, that part will become cold and partially paralyzed. If the hands and feet are habitually cold, you can rest assured that your circulation is defective, and slow death of those parts is taking place.

The blood is the great porter of the system; that transfer agent which supplies all parts of the body with required life material, and also picks up and carries to their outlets all its waste and used-up material. Its presence is life; its absence is death. A rapid circulation is the paramount condition of all life and all functions.

The theory that the heart propels the blood around the body is only partly true. If the heart did all of the pumping of the blood, it would have to exert a pressure equal to fifty pounds at every pulsation, which would be about five million pounds of pressure exerted each day in order to circulate the blood around the body. This amount of pressure would be absolutely impossible, as the delicate blood vessels could not stand it.

The office of the heart is really to regulate, cut off and measure the blood, ont to create its propelling power. Of course, such regular working of the heart muscles requires considerable power, but its main office is regulatory, not propulsive, and the propelling power barely suffices for such regulation.

If the heart does not do the pumping of the blood, what then does generate that tremendous power necessary to propel the blood throughout the system? From my experience and observation, it is apparent that that mysterious force called vital energy is really responsible for the circulation of the blood.

This vital force is generated or transformed through physical exercise, and through breathing exercise. The blood will not continue to circulate, unless oxygen is taken into the lungs and then transferred to the tissues, which tissues give up carbon-dioxide gas as a waste. When air is inhaled, it contains 21% oxygen; when it is exhaled, only 12%, having lost 9% during inhalation and exhalation. No matter how much blood is required for bone material, hydrogen, nitrogen, carbon, etc., it cannot furnish life unless it is supplied with oxygen, and the scarlet thread of life will not continue to circulate unless it has sufficient oxygen to supply the tissues with all they need.

Breathing propels the blood more than any other muscular action of the body, but the muscular action of the lungs is not responsible alone for propelling the blood. The chemical action of the oxygen in the air being transferred to the tissues, and the constant giving out of carbon-dioxide gas creates a sort of perpetual motion, which generates the required amount of motive power and circulates the blood just when it is required for use.

Drawing the breath in crowds energy into the lungs, and the iron in the red cells takes up at least one-hal f of the oxygen which is inhaled. From the lungs, it rushes away through all of the various blood channels of the body and the cells of the body grab this oxygen to use it for their purpose. The blood circulating through the arteries is positively charged with energy; going back through the veins it becomes negative and empties out the impurities into the lungs.

MIRACLES!

Some of the accomplishments of Osteopathy sound like miracles to those who do not understand the facts on which the Osteopath bases his treatment.

When Signaller Thomas Sheyhill's sight was restored to him in a single treatment after he had been totally blind for seventeen months, it seemed to him as though a miracle had been performed. It wasn't. The Osteopath merely removed the obstruction to the blood and nerve supply to the eyes, and Nature, given a chance to do her work, did the rest.

Don't Tell the Wife

BY WILLIAM B. COURTNEY

SYNOPSIS

Ranny Forbes, star polo player, and his beautiful wife, Joan, are temperamental mismates. Joan wants a divorce. Ranny balks, loving her, though secretly knowing she loves Abner Gratman. Lacking proof that Joan is faithless, he plans to trap her and Abner while they are all on a week-end trip on the yacht of Stivner, a billionaire lumber king. Complications multiply. Joan, jealous when Ranny flirts with Claire, a widow, encourages Abner's advances. Stivner, loving Clare, resents Ranny's interest. A swimming party is arranged. Clare's suit shocks the crowd. She appeals to Ranny for approval.

CHAPTER VII.—Continued.

Clare had what is known in the parlance of the theatrical world as "stage presence"—an instinctive dramatic trick of capitalizing attention and focusing it upon her merest words and actions.

She worked the gift to its utmost in that moment. She made sure that Joan and everyone was watching her before she whispered, soft and low, to Ranny:

"I just adore men who have the courage of their own—likings!"

Ranny, staring with deep concern into those limpid firepools of eyes, felt that he was beginning to "just adore" their owner!

Despite the intensity of his feeling against Abner and Joan, he was beginning to grow abstracted in that matter.

While his open and shameless flirtation with Clare, which was originally meant as a means to an end in his campaign of vengeance, was beginning to collect heartfelt dividends on his emotions!

CHAPTER VIII.

Captain Marty Wales was a Maine man born and bred. Social graces do not accrue naturally to the genuine Jean and old fashioned brand of "down-

"I could stay in the water forever with Ranny," Claire said.

t'-hummers," whose eyes are adjusted to the far horizons of open seas rather than to the foreshortened ones of drawing rooms, and whose hands grow red and coarse of winters hauling up lobster traps.

Despite his derivation, however, there was a positive quality of manly gentility about Captain Marty, with his ramrod back and his six-foot-three frame of two hundred hard pounds, that fitted him eminently well to the bridge of a gentleman's yacht.

Yea, even to the bridge of the finest and most fastidious gentleman's yacht afloat, the Speedwell of Livingstone Stivner.

When he caught a signaled order from Stivner to nose the Speedwell in toward a sandy spit of beach and drop anchor, there was a regal gesture in the manner in which he touched his cap in salute that seemed to distinguish him as owner instead of employee.

More, there was no end of disdain and derision plainly visible in Captian Marty's mien and voice as he surveyed the scantily clad society folk waiting upon the forward deck for him to heave the yacht to so that they might dive and swim.

Many times during his career on the billionaire's yacht had Captain Marty seen bizarre escapades which he could overlook, or merely smile about in his remote way. But no blue nosed man from Maine could be expected to observe with equanimity people going in swimming on an autumn day.

A man of many thoughts, but few words. That was Captain Marty. To his first mate now he grunted:

"Nutty bunch! The old ones even more'n the young ones. The gals as plumb silly as the men."

The first mate was as dry as the fish racks in the little Nova Scotian town of Lunenburg, from which he hailed. He grinned:

Now the Speedwell's engines were stopped and she swung gently on a flood tide from her chains, while Captain Marty and his mate hung over the bridge to shiver and marvel at the spectacle of grown men and women carrying on like boys and girls, diving and splashing about in water which, according to Captain Marty's own way of looking at it, "wouldn't of been no Turkish bath for a polar bear!"

Stivner had counted upon the plunge to arrent a further development of heat in certain rather young bloods. He had expected, too, a chance to gain the undivided attention of Clare away from Ranny.

He had planned to teach her to swim, for he was sure that she could not swim. Who ever heard of a lisping blonde widow who could swim?

Livingstone Stivner was proud of the sturdy breast stroke that remained with him as a heritage of the naked days of his skinny youth in Northwest lumbering rivers.

But when he came to look for her, Clare, the weak and languishing, was comparing crawl stroke technique with Ranny and easily outdistancing even that athletic chap as she clove the pearly water like a butter spreader.

Stivner was so sore that he involuntarily swallowed several mouthfuls of briny water—mishaps in, themselves, which are not calculated to improve a testy rich man's temper.

Whose yacht and whose party was this anyhow?

He had brought the widow for his very own, and here was Forbes stealing her away from under his very nose.

Stivner had too much money and too grand a social and business position to be accustomed to the experience of having fond desires whisked out of his hands.

He breathed maledictions upon Ranny and wished he had not invited him. It did not seem to be enough that Ranny had lost him a cool fifty thousand on that polo game. He must cheat him of his woman, too.

Wanted to make a business deal with him, did he? Hah! Ranny would be lucky if he met him, Livingstone Stivner, ever again.

Clay Varick read Stivner's mind. Clay was adept at mind reading. No woman had ever been able to make up her mind to engineer a proposal out of Clay that he had not been telepathically warned in advance of her nefarious design.

Clay stroked over to Ranny, who, treading water on the outskirts of the swimming group, was feasting his eyes upon the delectable picture Clare made as she exhibited for his edification certain postures of floating which she had learned and acquired at the Lido.

A gold and cream feather was Clare, upon the fortunate water.

"Idiot!" sputtered Clay when he paused alongside Ranny. "You are messing things up in fine shape. Stivner's over there giving you looks black and hard enough to sink anyone with a less thick hide than yours! Abner and Joan feel they have carte blanche so long as you act as you do with this blonde. In short, we came out here to set a trap for your wife—and you've crawled into one of your own making and pulled it in after you!"

"Don't spit in my ear," chided Ranny. "I've just begun to live!"

Clay, who weighed two hundred and fifty in his B. V. D.'s, put a ham of a hand on Ranny's head, forced him under water and sat on him until the indignant Clare raced over and scrached him away with her tiny hands.

Stivner, seeing that the purpose of the swimming interlude had miscarried woefully, decided that in perpetual variety of action there was hope, and, clambering upon deck, bellowed to his guests a summons to come aboard and dress for dinner.

"It's unhealthful to stay in the water more than fifteen minutes—when it's chilly!" he explained.

"Dear, dear," complained Clare, putting one graceful little hand on Ranny's shoulder and allowing him to play tugboat to her until they reached the gangway, "I didn't think we were in fifteen seconds!"

She turned lazily on her back to float and watched Joan swimming easily and sturdily in her straight-forward way side by side with Abner as they returned from a trudgeon excusion to the sandy beach.

Clare's long lashes drooped, not altogether with the dewy freight of water drops upon them. She waited until Joan was abreast of her. Then:

"You know," she called, ostensibly up to Stivner, and in answer to his summons, but really for Joan's ears: "I could stay forever in the water near Ranny without feeling the cold. He's better than axle grease or steam heat. There must be something in yachting parties that makes his blood boil"

And Clare rolled her great big eyes very knowingly. All the wisdom and instinct of feline and feminine, from the cat of Bubastes and Eve, were in the sly wink in which one lid fluttered down and up softly, like a parchment shade covering and uncovering a luminous window.

The striking of bells on board ship dates from the time of the half-hour sandglass. The bell was struck each time the glass was turned.

WOMEN'S MUSIC SOCIETY MEETING

Miscellaneous Programme Given, Including Interesting Paper.

The fortnightly meeting of the Women's Music Club was held yesterday afternoon in the studio at the Conservatory of Music, with a good attendance of the members. The president, Mrs. J. Forbes Allan, made the opening announcements, and the numbers following were announced by Miss Lilian Hurley, who with Miss Marion Adams, was responsible for the entertainment of the afternoon, in a "Miscellaneous programme," which included vocal and instrumental selections and a delightful paper on "The Power of Music," given by Mrs. H. W. Morphet. This paper was extremely interesting and was listened to with appreciative attention.

The musical programme included two brilliantly played pianoforte solos by Miss Isabel McKee, in Grieg's "Norwegian Bridal March," and Torjussen's "To the Rising Sun," three pretty songs by Miss Kathleen Conner of Campbellford, in "Before the Dawn," "Requ..." and "Lie there, my Lute;" two violin selections played by Mrs. Percy Hooper, in a "Frenc' Gavotte,' and a beautifully-played rendition of Wienawski's "Legende," with its difficult sections played in double-stop effect; two dainty songs by Mrs. Ford Turner, in "When at Morn," and Rubenstein's "Romance," a charming pianoforte solo by Miss Marion Adams, playing the gay marionette music of Rachmaninoff's "Polichinelle," and two songs by Mrs. A. A. Perrin, the "Sun whose Rays" number from "The Mikado," and Leonora's song from "Il Trovatore." Mrs. Perrin's attractive voice was displayed to much advantage in the exacting measures of the last song, which was rendered with splendid effect.

Accompanists of the afternoon were Mrs. W. A. Logan, Mrs. Dorothy Allan Park, Miss Hurley and Miss Gwen Donley.

At the conclusion of the programme votes of t...ks were tendered to those taking part in the programme, and Mrs. R. Gliddon, seconded by Mrs. W. A. Logan, moved a vote of thank to the president, Mrs. Allan, and the members of the committee, Mrs. G. E. Porter, and Miss Wood ,who had charge of the arrangement for the recent trip to Toronto.

"The duty of each generation," said Mrs. Morphet, in the opening sentences of her paper on "The Power of Music," "is to gather up its inheritance from the past, and thus to serve the present and prepare better things for the future. The status of music in education has changed with the changing motives that control education. The truism that it is an appeal to the emotional nature first, leads many to regard it as being merely recreational and incapable of possessing any influence but the production of pleasant sensation. One who seeks merely emotional appeal will find it, but he who seeks discipline for both heart and mind will find it also."

Plato, among the Greeks, said, in a treatise on education, "Education shall begin with music. Musical training is more potent than any other, because rhythm and harmony find their way into the musical places of the soul, on which they mightily fasten, imparting grace and making the soul graceful of him who is rightly educated."

Again, in his laws, Plato says: "When anyone says that music is to be judged only by pleasure, this cannot be admitted."

Ancient Greek music was considered as exercising a great sway over the mind, expressing noble sentiments, inculcating religion and morality, exciting generous feelings and inspiring patriotism and courage. In the realm of influence, it shares in the attributes of education, amusement and intellectual enjoyment, seeming to share in the natures of all three.

Milton, speaking of music as a recreation, says: "Convenient rest may with both profit and delight be taken up in recreating and composing their travailed spirits with the solemn and divine harmonies of music, heard or learned."

Shakespeare, in one hundred and forty references in his plays, voiced the beauties of music to the world. "All the world," said the speaker, "loves a good tune, but it is given only to the elect to enjoy the intricacies of harmony and counterpoint."

"The development of the artistic instinct cannot fail to have an effect on the life of the nation. If, by our manner of education, we can cultivate and develop the inner nature of our citizens, we will be raising up a nation full of vitality, striving after ideals, and ever pressing on to higher and higher stages. Even the weariness of life which is felt so deeply by many of us will disappear with our new ideals, for the art of music will give the means of self-expression and will provide a new interest in life. When we are so misunderstood that relatives and friends turn away from us in merciless prejudice, when we are alone in our little abode, alone with our distress, alone with our God, music will softly spread its magic wings and fan away our earthly sorrow. It will cool our tear-smarting eyelids, console our heart, placate our soul, lead our thoughts heavenward to new hopes and resolutions, and brace us for the morrow to face the world anew. How can we humans ever thank God enough for this sublimest and sweetest of His gifts!"

"Good music has been responsible for changing the lives of many persons from bad to good. Beautiful tones, divine harmonies, perpect melodies, soothe the fevered mind of man. They lift him from the lower depths to higher and nobler thoughts and actions. Music is the expression of a divine aspiration. A half hour or more spent in listening to good vocal or instrumental music, after a long day's contact with the frictions of this workaday world, will act as a balance wheel to restore the jaded soul, the perplexed mind, the tired body. It is a convincing fact that the man who is worried or downcast will find in good music a stimulus, or it may be a sedative, which will go far to correct the strain under which his whole being has been laboring. In these days of agitation and unrest, when the very foundations of established institutions seem to be crumbling, and men wonder what great events impend, good music and an abundance of it will prove a powerful agency which will heal the sickness in the human soul and help to restore civilization."

Mrs. Morphet went on to speak of the influence in war time of music, inspiring soldiers to greater deeds of valor, and of the modern discovery in factories and elsewhere of the power of music in soothing the nerves of the workers and enabling them to pursue their tasks in greater peace and comfort.

"Peggy Hopkins Joyce Can't Have My Stan"

MIAMI BEACH, Flo., Jan. 20.—(By Universal Service)—"Peggy Hopkins Joyce cant have my Stan". This was the defiant assertion of Miss Connie Almy, cabaret entertainer, whom Stanley Comstock declared was en route to Miami Beach to renew her engagement with Comstock.

A New York theatrical magazine was responsible for the report of Miss Joyces trip south. But whether Miss Almy will keep Comstock was problematical, as the real estate operator of New York and Miami was still missing today. He left Miami Beach hotel, from which he and Miss Almy planned their airplane elopement to Nassau Saturday, in company with his brother and sister and has not reported back to Miss Almy since.

Comstock was under a physician's care Saturday but it is believed he has about recovered from a threatened nervous breakdown suffered when he left Miss Almy.

Search being made by county officers for Comstock, to serve him with a writ secured by his first wife, Mrs. Evelyn Comstock, was slackened when it was reported that Comstock's relatives had reached an understanding with Mrs. Comstock, whom he divorced in September 1925. She claimed the divorce was illegal because she was not notified of the action.

THEATRE

AT THE REGENT

NEW PICTURIZATION OF "THE SEA WOLF" IS NEW SCREEN MARVEL

Said by leading critics of the country to be one of the most dramatic sea stories ever to reach the screen, Jack London's powerful picture, "The Sea Wolf," will be the feature attraction at the Regent theatre for the next three days. This red-blooded adventure novel which made Jack London famous, was filmed by Ralph W. Ince with highly successful results, and its leading characters are portrayed by Mr. Ince, Claire Adams, Theodore Von Eltz, Snitz Edwards and Mitchell Lewis.

According to the Regent management "The Sea Wolf" is packed with spectacular and highly thrilling scenes, all of which are presented on the screen just as Mr. London incorporated them in his world-famed story. They have been filmed with a vividness that the printed pages seldom, if ever can hope to attain.

The photoplay has been splendidly adapted by J. Grubb Alexander, and the photography by J. O. Taylor is extremely artistic and satisfying. This is notably true as regards the incidents attending the collision, and the burning of the schooner. The mutiny in which the "Wolf" fights his murderous crew single handed, is said to be tremendously thrilling.

OUTLINE OF SCIENCE

LXXXII—The Milky Way.

by MAX HAHN

WE MUST ADMIRE THE SUCCESS WITH WHICH GREEK WISE MEN SOLVED THE RIDDLES OF THE SKY BEFORE TELESCOPES WERE INVENTED. IT IS NOT STRANGE THAT IN THOSE EARLY DAYS MYTHS CENTERED IN THE MILKY WAY, SUN AND MOON.

© McClure Newspaper Syndicate

ONE MYTH RELATED THAT THE MILKY WAY WAS THE SCORCHED PATH LEFT BY PHAETON WHEN HE LOST CONTROL OF THE SUN. THIS STORY SAYS JUPITER KILLED PHAETON TO PREVENT THE WORLD FROM BURNING.

DEMOCRITUS (BORN 460 B. C.) POSSESSED A REMARKABLY KEEN MIND. THE MYTHS DIDN'T FOOL HIM. HE WAS THE FIRST TO TEACH THAT MILLIONS OF STARS COMPOSE THE SOLID-LOOKING MILKY WAY.

IF WE COULD FLY BILLIONS OF MILES FROM HERE WE WOULD SEE THAT THE MILKY WAY VIRTUALLY CIRCLES THE HEAVENS AND THE SUN IS NEAR THE CENTER OF THE CIRCLE.

JAPAN APPROVES CONFERENCE TO PLOT DISARMAMENT SCHEME

But, in the Meantime, Oriental Empire Will Build Battleships.

DEFENCE ONLY.

Premier Discusses World Affairs—Hopes For Accord With U. S.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 20 (By Universal Service).—Japan approves another disarmament conference and confidently hopes that "Fair and practicable schemes", for the limitation of armaments may be worked out.

This was announced at the Japanese embassy, in making public the addresses of Premier Wakatsuki and Baron Shidehara, Foreign Minister, before the Japanese Diet at Tokyo.

In endorsing the basic principles of disarmament, however, Premier Wakatsuki made it plain that Japan will maintain her navy up to the 5-5-3 ratio of the Washington Conference and will continue to modernize her battle fleet. He said:

"In order to define and to uphold international justice, defense cannot be neglected. Our military and naval strength has been fixed in commensuration with the present situation of the world.

"It follows therefore that unless notable changes happen therein we must continue to maintain existing armaments. As warships, constituting the basis of sea power, become gradually superannuated and lose their strength and efficiency with the passing of time, the Government has adopted the program of the construction of vessels to replace the old auxiliary craft, thereby preventing diminution of the present naval strength, insuring security of national defense."

Hands Off China.

Discussing the Chinese situation, both Premier Wakatsuki and Baron Shidehara announced a non-interference policy, but said that Japan would continue to "safeguard the legitimate economic interests of Japan" in that country. Baron Shidehara said:

"We have no objection to the levying of the surtaxes provided in the Washington Customs Treaty, but we must make reasonably certain that such additional revenue shall not be applied directly or indirectly to the purposes of civil war or shall not be appropriated to the private use of any faction." He urged early resumption of the Chinese Customs Conference.

Premier Wakatsuki said that relations between Japan and the Russian Soviet Union "have been marked by a growing cordiality."

Declaring that the question of Japanese exclusion from the United States "still remains unadjusted," Baron Shidehara said:

"A mutual understanding is the first essential step for the settlement of all international questions, and I am firmly convinced that the two nations, conscious of their important missions of guardians of the peace of the Pacific, will stand side by side for all time in friendly accord for the fulfillment of such responsibilities."

ST. ANDREW'S Y.P.S. REGULAR MEETING

CAMPBELLFORD, Jan. 20.—St. Andrew's Young People met on Monday evening and held a most instructive meeting. There was a goodly number in attendance, which added to the interest of the meeting. The meeting opened with the hymn, "More Love, O Christ To Thee," followed by the repetition of the Lord's Prayer in unison. After the singing of another hymn, Psalm 40:1-8 was read.

The most interesting part of the meeting was the topic taken by Rev. Grier. It was based on Psalm 40, and entitled, "How to Develop Our Devotional Life." Mr. Grier pointed out many good points and left good thoughts in the minds of his listeners. These were in brief, "Prayer," "Song (singing for a purpose"), "Waiting on God," "Delight in God's Will" and "Heart Religion." Another paper was read by Mr. John Campbell. This paper explained the topic as well. A summary of the points dealt with was given by Mrs. Scott, in charge of the devotional part of the meeting. Her summary was: Bible study, prayer and meditation, conversation, world of nature, music and art, and attending devotional services and taking part in same.

Miss Watson brought a few points of importance before the young people of the society.

All joined in singing "I need Thee every hour," and Mr. Grier closed the meeting with the Benediction.

Lord Birkenhead Turns Tables On Crook Gang

LONDON, Jan. Jan. 20. — Lord Birkenhead has again provided England with a good laugh. It appears that during the holidays a gang of continental crooks at Funchal, Madeira, tried to play a confidence trick on him. He made a counter offer to dive from the top spring board of a swimming pool for £100, and the surprised trickster agreed. When the man failed to turn up at the appointed time, Lord Birkenhead demanded that the money should be forfeited to him. The gang refused, so he bluffed them by declaring that he knew them for an organization of crooks and ordered them to get off the island, threatening that if they did not do so he would have them arrested. Alarmed, the men obeyed, although Lord Birkenhead afterward admitted he really knew nothing about them.

HUGHES PLEADS FOR FREE PRESS

But Urges More Adequate Accounts of National Activities.

PROMOTES GOOD-WILL

WASHINGTON, Jan. 20.—(Universal Service).—The press as the "guardian of the resources of good-will" should carry more adequate accounts of national activities in order to promote international amity, Charles E. Hughes, former Secretary of State, told the American Society of Newspaper Editors here.

"If the press faithfully interprets not simply the acrimony of politics," said Hughes, "the passion of dispute, the schemes of propagandists, but the reasonableness of the American people, and if the press not only interprets that disposition, but cultivates it by leadership, seeking to develop sound opinion on international questions, it will perform the best available service to the cause of international amity."

Hughes made a strong plea for the maintenance of freedom of the press and declared against a "controlled or reptile press," and at the same time warned against the danger of a free press being used as an instrument for propaganda "which may afford a distorted view of both our own and foreign opinion."

"A free press, much as it may be abused, is still the first condition of international amity," he said. "We need restraint, but it must be the self-restraint of reasonable men."

In bemoaning the lack of information regarding national activities Hughes declared that the United States was far ahead of European nations, but urged a widening of the field of foreign correspondence to promote good-will among the nations.

"There is only one true way for maintaining peace," he said. "That is, so far as possible, before controversies arise, to create a feeling of mutual respect as between peoples, and when controversies do arise to keep pegging away to procure their settlements."

CHURCH DEBATES SUNDAY DANCES

Kansas Pastor Says They Keep Young People From Dance Halls.

SOME OPPOSITION

(By VINA LINDSAY, Universal Service Staff Correspondent.)

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Jan. 20. — There was a time when the question, "Should a church member dance?" would have stirred a deacon to frenzy. Now, nowever, the members of the Linwood Boulevard Christian Church here are debating quite calmly whether or not the church should continue to hold dances on Sunday nights.

Dr. Burris A. Jenkins, modernist pastor of the church, is on the side of the dancers. Dr. Jenkins, who has a habit of shocking conservative religionists, several years ago stirred up a hub-bub when he advocated Sunday golf. He was one of the first ministers to hold Sunday night picture shows in his church. He has been a storm centre at many national conventions of the Disciples' Church over his practise of open membership.

The church recently has been holding an open forum on Sunday nights, after which the young people go upstairs to the church parlors and dance. The dances have aroused some criticism among the church membership. Dr. Jenkins has invited the members of the congregation to discuss the matter at their regular mid-week dinners at the church. The discussion has found a surprisingly large number of grey-heads aligned with youth in asking that the dances continue.

"It is better for the youth of the country to dance in the church than to dance in the public dance halls," says Dr. Jenkins. "Young persons must be brought under the influence of the church. There will be no church of the future unless youth is drawn into it. Our Sunday night dances are an experiment to increase the influence of the church."

John I. Williamson, former State Supreme Court judge and a leader in the church, also has lined up with the dance advocates.

"The church dance solves the problem for the thousands of young men and women who live in drab hall bedrooms in big cities," says Mr. Williamson. "To them Sunday usually is the dullest day of the week."

Critics of the Sunday night dances maintain that they foster the Sunday dance habit, and that the dancers later will want to go to the dance halls where there re better orchestras and more excitement.

"HOUSE IN ORDER."

Hon. G. S. Henry Addresses Tourist Association of Ontario.

TORONTO, Jan. 20.—At the second annual meeting of the Tourist Association of Ontario, held yesterday in the Pompeian Room at the King Edward Hotel, Frank Kent, of Toronto, was elected president for the ensuing year; Dr. P. E. Doolittle, of Toronto, first vice-president; George B. France, of Sarnia, second vice-president; Fred Newman, of Picton, third vice-president, and Leon Frazer, secretary.

Some interesting information about tourist traffic in this Province gleaned from tourists last year by the Government was given by Hon. George S. Henry, Minister of Highways, who was the principal speaker. Fifty-four per cent. of the tourists were sightseers according to Mr. Henry, 22 per cent. came to visit friends, 9 per cent. came to fish, 6 per cent. to visit the Canadian National Exhibition, 5 per cent. were taking the short route between Windsor and Niagara Falls, and the remaining 4 per cent. came to see Niagara Falls.

The speaker said he was pleased that Ontario had not had more tourist traffic in the past than she had, because the Province was not in a position to accommodate more visitors than had come prior to the present time. Now, however, Old Man Ontario had set his house in order, so to speak, and was ready and willing to accommodate all the visitors who cared to partake of his hospitality. Soon the trunk road running between Windsor and the Quebec border would be a pavement, and much traffic along the route was to be expected. The Government had contemplated forming a department to co-ordinate the various activities of the Ontario Tourist Association as a Government activity, but in view of the good work of the Association that was left in abeyance for a year or two to let the Association grow.

No Unlimited Speed

In reply to Mayor Foster's oft-repeated plea for unlimited speed on the highways, reiterated by His Worship in welcoming the delegates to yesterday's convention, the Hon. Mr. Henry stated emphatically that such a thing would not be tolerated.

"Why, only two hours ago I was in conference with the Prime Minister, and he was discussing the case of a motorist who had been caught going at 75 miles per hour," said the speaker, "Mr. Ferguson was asking why we did not have a law to take away such a man's license altogether. We have had a 25-mile speed limit for a long time, and I think most people have been driving forty. I don't know what will happen when they get a 35-mile limit, I suppose they'll take 50 anyway." (Laughter).

Mr. Henry promised financial support equal to last year's grant.

The second annual report of the Association, submitted by Secretary Leon Fraser, pointed out that generous assistance had been rendered by the Ontario Government, but that the main difficulty encountered in securing financial aid from the public was due to activities of local associations of a similar nature. The first Ontario exhibit for tourist traffic was shown at the National Automobile Show, New York City; the Association co-operated in the plans for the Cleveland-Canada last June; an information bureau was established at Cleveland, Ohio; another at Niagara Falls, Ontario, and a third at the C.N.E.; welcome cards had been supplied to automobile tourists and a great deal of advertising and publicity had been done.

"It is estimated that tourists have expended in the Province during the past year nearly $60,000,000, of which 51 per cent. represented expenditures by automobile tourists," the report continues. "There were over 9,000,000 visited the Dominion, of which 6,668,416 entered at Ontario points, or over twice the provincial population. Of these 83 per cent. represented automobile tourists. It is estimated that during the past year nearly 100,000 was expended by the Government in the interests of tourist traffic development. Approximately $216,000 was contributed to the Provincial Treasury by visitors to the Province from the United States in the form of gasoline tax, to which must be added the revenue from non-resident angling and hunting licenses, which amounted to $184,620.

Local Executive Members

G. K. Fraser of Burleigh Falls, G. J. Overend of Orillia, and Mayor Holloway of Peterborough are included in the Board of Directors. They are representatives of municipalities along the Trent Waterways.

On motion of H. K. Carruthers, Ottawa, and W. J. Wilison, Gananoque, the association recommended to the Federal and Provincial Governments that every effort be put forth to encourage and to co-operate with the Thousand Islands Bridge Corporation for the successful completion of a proposed bridge for motor traffic crossing the Thousand Islands in the vicinity of Alexandria Bay, New York, and Gananoque, Ontario.

FEDERAL FORCES QUELL UPRISINGS

Fanatics Have Failed To Carry Out Nation Wide Mexican Resolution.

MEXICO CITY, Jan. 20. (Canadian Press).—Attempts by "fanatical" elements to carry out a nation-wide revolution have thus far failed, President Calles declared to-day in refusing arms to the Agrarian party which recently ordered its members to co-operate with the Federal forces, in stamping out the so-called Roman Catholic rebellion.

"The army is at present strong enough to quell the uprisings," the President says, "although arms were distributed among the Agrarians of Jalisco and Guanajuato recently because of the exceptional 'fanatical' activities there.

Fighting is still going on in the State of Jalisco, notwithstanding the serious defeat inflicted on the rebels in Repatitlan, but the authorities are confident and declare that the "Catholic rebellion," as they term it, is almost crushed.

Documents are said to have been abandoned by the revolutionists at Repatitlan, disclosing that the Union Polular, a religious organization with branches in most of the towns in Jalisco, is directing the uprising.

RAILWAYMEN ASK ELECTED SENATE

Wait on Premier Ferguson To Discuss Many Legislative Matters.

TORONTO, January 20. — Canadian Press. — Co-operation of the government in securing a change in the British North American Act so that the Senate should be chosen by election was the novel request presented by a deputation of railway-men which waited on the Ontario government to-day. The delegation was met by Premier G. Howard Ferguson and matters regarding industrial disputes, legislation, grade crossings, duplication of taxation by federal and provincial authorities, text books for schools and colleges, and amendments to the assessment act affecting income were dicussed.

Medical men agreed a lubricant is better than a laxative

MORE than half the doctors questioned in a recent coast to coast investigation stated a lubricant is better than a laxative for constipation.

One prominent doctor stated "the continued use of laxatives produces an obstinate intestinal inflammation which only aggravates the constipation. Laxative drugs increase the condition which they are supposed to cure. The worst cases of constipation are those which have long made use of laxative drugs."

Doctors Advise Nujol

Nine doctors out of every ten told us they were advising the Nujol type of treatment for their patients in place of laxatives—and for these reasons: 1. Nujol is not habit-forming; 2. A more natural method; 3. A lubricant is better than a laxative; 4. Does not gripe; 5. Is not irritating; and 6. Nujol gives lasting relief.

Unlike Laxatives

Laxatives and cathartics act by irritating the intestinal tract. They cause the bowels to frantically expel the contents of the intestines and thus rid the system of the drugs that pills and potions contain.

Nujol acts entirely differently. It contains no drugs, no medicine. Its action is mechanical. It merely softens the dried waste matter in the intestines and lubricates the passage so that the muscles of the bowels can expel the waste matter regularly, naturally and thoroughly.

Nature-given Remedy

Nujol appeals to the medical man because it is a simple, scientific and safe remedy for constipation, no matter how severe the case may be. It is gentle in its action and pleasant to take. Children love it!

Get a bottle of Nujol from your druggist today. Doctors advise it for constipation, whether chronic or temporary. Avoid substitutes.

HOUSE DESTROYED.

John Stevens, of Seabright, Suffers Loss When Fire Guts Home.

LINDSAY, January 20. — Fire destroyed the home of Mr. John Stevens, of Sebright, Victoria County, on Wednesday morning. The blaze is supposed to have started from overheated pipes in the kitchen. Very little of the contents were saved, the fire having obtained a good start before it was noticed, and help was scarce, as the men were away chopping. The loss is a heavy one as there was no insurance on the house or contents.

In the early days the lighthouses erected round the coast of Great Britain were the property of private individuals, who claimed toll from all passing ships.

BURNBRAE CHURCH ANNUAL MEETING

BURNBRAE, Jan. 20.—An event of more than passing interest in this community took place on Thursday, Jan. 13, when the members of St. Andrew's congregation met in the basement of the church to hear the annual reports of the different organizations. The attendance was large and the keynote of the meeting optimism, with a unanimous desire to go forward to a greater work in the future.

With the pastor, Rev. A. D. McKenzie, in the chair and the veteran of the congregation, W. A. Milne, as secretary, the meeting was called to order and the reports given. Mr. Milne, secretary of the congregation, reported a balance on hand of $639.23, this after paying all regular expenses including salaries, fuel and other expenses peculiar to church management, as well as an additional burden of $327.00 in repairs to the heating plant. The Ladies' Aid reported a very successful year with total receipts of $954.06. Through their efforts the balance of the manse debt was written off and they face the new year with $343.96 on their books.

The Sabbath School committee reported $115.00 to missionary endeavors with a balance on hand for the purchase of library books. With the W.M.S. raising $108.00 and the recently organized mission band $37, the total amount raised for missions was $443.25.

The Young People's Society which meets every other Sabbath evening took as its task the renovating and re-decorating of the vestry, carrying out the same successfully with the purchase of additional hymnals and a mission grant.

The cemetery, in proximity to the church is one of the beauty spots of Central Ontario and under the efficient care of Mr. George Craighead and family is a credit to the community. While contributed to by many outside the St. Andrew's congregation the cemetery fund is controlled by a committee appointed by that congregation and they report a balance of $51 on the year's work.

At the close of the meeting refreshments were served by the ladies and a happy social hour spent. The pastor, Rev. D. A. McKenzie, is now in the third year of his pastorate here and everything gives evidence of a successful year ahead for both pastor and people. A great many young people are growing up within the congregation and are taking an active part in the work of the church which is always a sure sign of spiritual well being in any community.

POLISH NAVY CHIEF JAILED

Found Guilty of Accepting Bribes to Purchase Worthless Supplies.

OTHERS CONCERNED

By KARL H. VON WIEGAND, Universal Service Staff Correspondent

BERLIN, Jan. 20.—(Special Wireless to Universal Service).—The first battle of the new Polish navy has been fought. It lasted for three months. Its foes were corruption and bribery. The battle took place in the high courts at Warsaw.

Commodore Bartoszewiez, head of the navy department in the ministry of war, charged with bribery and swinding in war materials, has been degraded, expelled from the navy, and sentenced to five years in prison. No less than 85 cases of fraud and forgeries and 34 cases of taking bribes for accepting worthless materials for the Polish navy, were proven against him.

Four other commodores and four lesser officers were tried for minor offenses. Though the medium of the trial the discovery was made that Poland has a navy.

Breakfast

best meal of the day

Physicians urge satisfying breakfasts because in the forenoon most people are called upon to do two-thirds of their most important work.

To enable body and brain to reach their highest capacities in the shortest time, digestion must be easy and quick.

The delicious taste of Quaker Oats invites digestion. Gratefully warm, it is welcomed by the stomach. It assimilates quickly and its bulk and tender bran assist in the assimilation of other food. They aid in a function which doctors say is the first essential to good health.

And Quaker Oats sustains throughout the day's most vital working hours. No other cereal has such perfect balance of food elements. It contains 16% of the tissue builder, protein; 65% of the energy producer, carbohydrates; and the all-important vitamines and mineral salts.

If you are not using Quaker Oats at breakfast, start now. You will take up your morning work more eagerly and will feel more vigorous and alert throughout the day.

Two Kinds

You can get Quaker Oats in two forms—the large, plump whole flake or the half flake, rolled thin, and partly cooked. Both are of the same Quaker Quality, famous in 58 countries.

If you wish to make porridge while you boil the coffee, or make the toast, use Quick Quaker. It cooks in 3 minutes.

FIRE CHIEF VISITS KINGSTON SCHOOLS

Board Asks Him To See That They Are Equipped For Protection.

KINGSTON, Jan. 20.—At the request of the Board of Education, Fire Chief Armstrong is making a thorough inspection of the Public Schools to see that they are properly equipped for fire protection. There are upwards of 150 fire extinguishers in business houses and public institutions, and in order to cut down fire losses the Fire and Light Committee is asking the Council for the cost of recharging the extinguishers. The cost of recharging them with soda and acid is seven and a-half cents. The work is done by members of the Fire Department. Fire Chief Armstrong can cite a number of cases where these extinguishers were the means of saving serious fires around the city.

Don't Feel Badly When Company Crowds Your House; Society Leaders At Palm Beach Short of Chairs

(By Universal Service.)

PALM BEACH, Fla., Jan. 20.—Some of the richest people in the country who winter here haven't enough chairs for their guests when they entertain.

Consequently it is the custom here for society women to borrow chairs, especially folding chairs, from each other.

Joseph Riter has a supply of folding chairs done in orange and black, and the women borrow them from him constantly.

There are only about three families in town with enough servants to staff their establishments when they entertain. And so when a woman borrows chairs for a special occasion she also has to telephone around to her neighbors and borrow butlers, maids and other domestics.

Mrs. Edward T. Stotesbury is one of the very few persons in the society colony with enough servants and chairs to meet her social needs.

SAINT and SINNER

By ANNE AUSTIN

As Cherry guided Bob Hathaway's roadster through the streets of the downtown business district, she chatted gaily with Bob, turning her head occasionally to call out a laughing comment to her sister, perched on the little seat that had been unfolded from its concealment in the rear of the car.

"We mustn't let anyone suspect there's anything up," she had told Bob, as they left the residential section. "Talk about anything under the sun, just so you talk—and laugh."

It was an apparently gay and carefree quartet—for even Pete Gonzales was grinning more humanly and adding his bit to the conversation—that drew up before the ten-story office building in which Alexander Cluny, prominent corporation lawyer, had his suite of offices.

"Pete and I'll go up to see Alexander, and you and Faith had better drive on over to my office and wait there for me. Here's a key. If Lola Gonzales has returned by any chance—and I'm darn sure she hasn't—hold her 'till I get there. I don't imagine I'll be long, but wait for me in any event," Bob told Cherry.

"I'm afraid you're a very masterful man," Cherry laughed. "I'd been counting on getting an awful kick out of hearing Alex Cluny hiss between clenched teeth, 'Coises Foiled!' Good luck, Bob."

They found Bob's offices deserted, as they had expected, and settled themselves comfortably to wait for Bob's return. Cherry soon grew tired of talking over the strange events of the day with her sister, and found a magazine to read.

Faith pretended to read an afternoon paper which they had found in front of the locked door, but her eyes were soft and sightless, turned upon the contemplation of the happiness which had come to her in that room a short two hours before.

"I believe I'll make Ralph ask Bob to be his best man," Cherry dispelled the quiet suddenly. "Hasn't he been a peach today? And Ralph would probably want some gray-haired old grandpa to stand up with him, if I'd let him have his way."

"Won't it look rather odd?" Faith smiled. "Half the audience would whisper to each other that the young chap certainly looked like the best man, if you asked them."

"Don't be a killjoy, darling," Cherry pouted. "If Bob turns it down, Ralph shan't have any best man! Maybe Bob'd be an usher, anyway. George and Bill have accepted, you know. I've got to get the wedding invitations out tomorrow or next day. Two hundred and fifty," she announced complacently.

"Good heavens, Cherry! Are you going to invite the whole town?"

"No, just the social register," Cherry grinned impudently. "Ralph's going to help me make out the list tonight. I've put down almost everyone I can think of already. Presents? Oh, boy, I do wish we didn't live in such a dump."

They had been waiting forty minutes when Bob Hathaway's unmistakable brisk step was heard in the hall. Both girls sprang up to greet him as he flung the door open.

"Well, did he confess?" Cherry demanded, her golden eyes sparkling with excitement. She seized his arm and clung to it with such a pretty, confiding gesture that Faith's heart contracted sharply with jealousy.

"I'll say he did!" Bob laughed down at her, but there was pain and bitterness in his eyes. "Lord! You love it—all this row, don't you? Getting an awful wallop out of it. I wish I were."

"Tell us, Bob," Faith's voice was quiet and a little cold.

He sensed her hurt instantly, and disengaged his arm from Cherry's clinging fingers. He flung himself down upon the divan, wearily, one hand drawing Faith to a seat beside him. Cherry perched on the overstuffed arm of the couch and swung one tiny foot provocatively near him. She was utterly blind to the truth of his love for Faith, for she did not dream that any man, seeing the two of them together, could fail to prefer her.

"He bluffed at first, of course, but I told him in mighty short order that Pete had confessed fully and that Lola had been caught red-handed. I'm afraid I let him infer that Lola had confessed to his part in the scene, too, though I suppose she phoned him as soon as Faith and I left the office. At any rate, I made him come clean, and then he began to bargain with me. Said if we'd let the matter drop, without telling Uncle Ralph a thing about the poison pen letters or Pete's shadowing Cherry, that he'd see that the family swung into line and made a pretense of welcoming Cherry as Uncle Ralph's fiancee. Said he was willing to fight if we were—that Cherry had more to lose than he did, for it seems he believes he's got the low-down on her—"

"I'll fight him!" Cherry cried. "I'm not afraid of him—"

"No, you won't; I've given a promise for the three of us," Bob interrupted her sternly. "There's no use making Uncle Ralph miserable with the whole dirty business, and if the Allbrights and the Alexander Clunys live up to Alex's bargain, and withdraw opposition, you've really beaten them. Can't you see that?"

Cherry's face cleared instantly as her agile brain jumped ahead to a new phase of the matter.

"Tell you what—" she laughed gleefully, swinging both feet in mad triumph, "I'll ask Muriel Allbright to be one of the bridesmaids, and she'll have to do it. Wow!"

NEW UMBRELLA TO HANG ON ARM

Ladies Burdened With Hand Bags and Make-up Boxes to be Relieved.

CROOKED HANDLES

By EDWARD M. RUTTENBERG
Universal Service Fashion Expert

NEW YORK, Jan. 20.—"What I think about you is nobody's business", tartly remarked a lady on the subway stairs as she gracefully extracted the ferrule of an umbrella from her optic. Her remark was addressed to the owner of the umbrella who was carrying same under her arm. All of which recalls the statement of a man about town to the effect that he met many interesting people in the city under the ground—most of them women.

However relief from threatening blindness is in sight if one can rely upon the words of the umbrella stylists. Universal Service has it from several reliable quarters that an umbrella soon to stretch its ribs is designed in such a manner as to reduce the perils of life in a great city. The handle will be in the mannish style of a Prince of Wales crook and the ladies can hang the implement on their arms when unnecessarily agitated or disturbed.

Stylists for the umbrella manufacturers have been studying the New York woman closely and having noted the mannish trend in dress concluded that the time is ripe for the introduction of a mannish umbrella. It is also expected that the overburdened ladies with huge handbags and make-up boxes will find the mannish umbrella the proper and convenient thing. The new umbrella is to be short like its predecessors, but the handle will be curved malacca—plain and with gold trimmings.

DRESS

By MARY MARSHALL

Most effective but really quite simple is the trimming of this bouffant evening frock of light pink chiffon. The skirt has a row of appliqued chiffon roses with embroidered centers and a deep lace flounce.

There is no longer any practical necessity for using applique designs on frocks. Wonderful printed materials may now be bought to suit any taste and there really is no practical advantage to be gained by cutting designs out of one material and sewing them on another when a material printed with the same design could be bought.

Still the fact is that appliques of all sorts are among the tricks of fashion at the present time, and there is a sort of cleverness about such work that is attractive to the beholder.

Some of the new dance frocks in Paris show elaborate use of applique flowers. A famous dressmaker there has shown a lovely light blue organdie frock with applique roses of pink silk on the skirt. Another dressmaker is responsible for a frock of black cloth trimmed with appliques of floral design cut out of printed velvet ribbon. Considerable ingenuity is displayed in the actual work of applique. Sometimes the cut-outs are fastened down by invisible stitches, and sometimes silver threads are used to make applique stitches that are intended as part of the decoration. Sometimes beads are applied with the stitches that hold the appliques in place. In some cases the appliques are put on by means of glue or some other sort of adhesive.

Sometimes really remarkable effects can be gained by using appliques of some cheap material. A good quality blue and white gingham was used to make a row of small square appliques that ornamented a dark blue wool frock. Chintz or cretonne may be used to make appliques on fine evening fabrics. In one instance brilliant flower designs cut from chintz were veiled with the thinnest flesh-colored chiffon and then applied to a flesh-colored taffeta evening frock.

When making the appliques from figured material all that one must do is to follow the design of the figure in cutting out the appliques. In making the appliques from a plain material it is best to buy a stencil pattern for the rose or other outline desired. If you are of an artistic bent you can cut your own stencil pattern from heavy stencil board and then trace the outline with a pencil on the material before cutting.

Chaplin Debarred From Visiting Children—$4,000 To Attorneys.

(By EDMOND BEHR, Universal Service Staff Correspondent)

LOS ANGELES, Jan. 20.—Mrs. Lita Grey Chaplin is given the custody of the two children of Charlie Chaplin and $4,000 a month for their maintenance, according to the court order of Judge Walter Guerin.

Mrs. Chaplin was on the stand only a few moments and said that her household expenses while living at her husband's home were $3,000 a month exclusive of rent. She had suggested to the court that $5,000 a month would be a reasonable sum.

The court also made permanent the order restraining Chaplin from visiting his children.

Mrs. Chaplin's attorneys were awarded $4,000 in attorney's fees and $250 for expenses. Judge Guerin also ruled for the payment of $2,150 as a premium on the $300,000 bonds under which the receivers and Mrs. Chaplin have been placed.

There was a brief bitter word battle between Attorney Lyndol Young, counsel for Mrs Chaplin, and Gavin McNab of San Francisco, Chaplin's chief legal adviser, when the latter was asked to take the witness stand by the plaintiff's attorney.

A recess was taken at 3 o'clock and Mrs. Chaplin posed on the witness stand for photographers.

FLESH COLORED STOCKINGS OUT

New Sandy Red Shade Now Favored by Leaders of Fashion.

NEW NOVELTIES

By C. F. BERTELLI,
Universal Service Staff Correspondent
(Copyright, 1927, by Universal Service)

CANNES, Jan. 20—(Special Cable to Universal Service).—Approximately $5,000,000 worth of silk stockings will be scrapped within the next fortnight. So say the fashion experts who are here in force to study the turn of popular taste in order to launch successfully the novelties for the 1927 season.

No smart woman will want to be seen wearing the flesh colored stockings which were the rule here until a few weeks ago. And as every smart woman had several dozen in stock, the ladies' maids, who generally come in for their mistresses' discarded odds and ends, are already offering them at less than a dollar a pair and finding no takers.

Sand color is the thing this year. A peculiar sand, perhaps, because it has a tinge of red, but it is unmistakeably different from flesh color. As gossamer silk cannot be dyed there is nothing to be done but invest a fresh thousand dollars in a new stock and thus remain fashionable.

Mrs. Kingsley Macomber, Mrs. Jay O'Brien, Princess Ratzfeld, and Lady Dudley were among the first to discard the old color for the new. Lady Dudley, the former Gertie Miller, has added a personal note to the new fashions by launching a tam o'shanter for wear with elaborate afternoon gowns.

Lady Davis, wife of the Canadian tobacco magnate, is also noted for her novel shoes which are Oxford style and trimmed with short haired gazelle and calf skin of the same sand color as the new stockings. It is this sand color which predomnates everywhere and for every occasion.

Summery white has been practically abolished for the morning stroll and other colors for afternoon gowns have given way to a sober but becoming mastic which is usually relieved only by large flowers entirely made of feather and which this season rival the splendid imitations launched last year and made entirely of the inside skin of eggshells.

INDIANS STORM FAIR GROUNDS

DEFY POLICE.

BRANTFORD, Ont., Jan. 20. — (Canadian Press.)—A mob of about 400 Indians, including women, ignoring the orders of three members of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police, stormed the gates of the agricultural grounds at Oshweken on the Six Nations reserve, forcibly removed the locks placed upon the gates and buildings about a week ago by order of the Six Nations Council and the Federal Department of Indian Affairs, and took possession of the premises.

The agricultural grounds are the property of the Six Nations, and their use until last year was granted as a concession to the Six Nations Agricultural Society. Owing to certain irregularities recognition of the Society was withdrawn. Since then the new society had won the recognition of the government.

MRS. YOUNG WANTS SON TO COME HOME

Urges Him To Return When Present Contract Has Been Kept.

TORONTO, Jan. 20 (Canadian Press).—Mrs. Jenny Young, mother of the 17-year-old Toronto boy who swam the San Pedro Channel on Sunday, sent the following telegram to George last night:

"Your wire received. Keep your nine days' contract, then come home to reception if possible. Future plans will then be made. Longing to see you. Feeling better. Be a good boy; read your Bible and remember your prayers every day. Love."

Mrs. Young, who has been confined to a local rest home for a few days, is recovering from the partial collapse she sustained as a result of the excitement coincident to her son's victory. She is unable, however, to comply with her son's request that she go at once to California.

Business Better To-day On Toronto Stock Market

TORONTO, Jan. 20.—(Canadian Press.)—Business brightened up on the Toronto stock exchange to-day, and a wide range of issues received attention from the traders. Prices were inclined to be higher although no large gains were recorded. British Columbia Fishing, International Nickle, Brazilian Traction and Industrial Alcohol were, as usual, the leaders. Fishing was weak, ending the early session at 74 1-2, down 1-4. Brazilian was up one at 198 1-2, Alcohol unchanged at 32 1-4 and Nickel up 1-4 at 40 5-8.

The unlisted stocks were brisk. Gooderham and Worts declined 7-8 to 43. Walker was up 1-8 at 32 1-8, and Seagrams gained 1-8 at 16 5-8, while Imperial Oil, up 3-8 at 40 3-8, International Petroleum, up 3-8 at 33 7-8, and the new issues of British American Oil, down 1-2 at 20, were all fairly heavily dealt in.

The bank stocks received some attention. Commerce was down one at 246 1-2, Imperial up 1 1-2 at 220, and Royal up one at 262.

Lake Shore Goes Up Other Shares Fall Back

TORONTO, Jan. 20. Canadian Press. — Lake Shore shares furnished the pyrotechnic display on the Standard mining exchange to-day, when in a falling market, the issue rocketed 76 higher to a new high at 1875, with 17,700 shares dealt in.

Nearly every other stock on the exchange declined. Aconda declined 5c at 28 1-2, Argonaut Consolidated was down two at 47; Area declined 1 3-4 at 58; Castle Trethewey was down one at 105; Corona receded 3 at 22, and Duprat was down 1 1-2 at 21 1-2; Laval, Quebec, joined the weaker uses, being 1 1-2 lower at 34 1-2; Kirkland Hunton was down 2 at 30, and Tough Oakes was down½ at 61.

Wall Street Trading Very Irregular To-day

NEW YORK, Jan. 20 (Canadian Press)—Frequent shifts of speculative sentiment imparted widespread irregularity to to-day's stock market. Trading appeared to be dominated by professional operators. Sharply contrasting price movements took place in the same group of stocks. For instance, R. S. Macy jumped five points to a new record high at 137 3-4, while Crerory Stores 'B' broke 12 points to 58, the lowest price ever recorded. Selling of Foundation company, which yielded three points, was inspired by fears of recession in building activity. Liggett and Myers 'B' broke three points following the announcement of extra dividends of $1 in cash and ten per cent in stock and American Bosch Magneto sank three points to 13, also a new low record.

"Kity" preferred, touched 99, a new high record, and Pennsylvania 58 3-8, the highest price since 1916, but weakness cropped out in Chicago and Eastern Illinois preferred.

Wheat Prices Falling On News From Argentine

CHICAGO, Jan. 20 (Canadian Press).—Fresh downturns in wheat to-day began early. Enlargement of the Argentine official crop estimate was the chief depressing influence.

Opening ⅜ to ½ cent off, wheat continued to sag. Corn, oats and provisions also were higher, corn starting at ¼ cent to ⅜ cent lower and holding near to the initial range.

Opening prices were: Wheat, May 139⅜; July 130½. Corn, May 81½; July 84¼. Oats, May 48¾; July unquoted.

London Exchange Busy; Securities Move Upward

(By Universal Service Special Cable Dispatch)

LONDON, Jan. 20. — Business continued brisk on the Stock Exchange during the past week, with giltedge, industrial and oil share markets providing the best features.

British government securities moved upward.

In the foreign market Belgian sevens rose to 104 1-4 and European reconstruction advanced well particularly Hungarian seven and a half and Greek sevens. Brazilians were again sought on expected resumption of sinking fund operations. Chinese and Mexicans recovered from early depression.

Among the foreign rails there was a brisk rise in United out of Havana despite poor traffic return. Leopoldinas developed strength and Brazilian tractions were active on increased dividend which is now six percent.

All leading oil counters were in demand which recorded a general rise.

A rise in the price in the rubber market brightened up the market in that commodity despite the increase of rubber stocks to over fifty thousand tons.

Mining markets were generally firm under the leadership of Kaffirs.

NEW COAL FIELD.

ROME, Jan. 19.—Anthracite coal, claimed to equal the quality of British anthracite, has been found in Sardinia, a small island off the coast of Italy. The field is estimated to give an output of 30,000,000 tons. Samples of the coal were sent to Mussolini, Italian dictator.

Words to the number of 500 a minute can be sent over the new cable between London and New York.

TO A FISH HOOK

Tho' snow and ice now reign supreme,
And cover o'er the luring stream,
'Tis not for naught I catch your eye
As on the pin tray there, you lie.

I see the springtime come again—
I hear the brooklets ripple then—
And 'mongst the flowers, beneath green trees
I watch the busy, humming bees.

But now, I must no longer wait,
And loading you with tempting bait—
I cast you where the shadow lies,
And bring you forth with speckled prize.

And, so you've led me on to where
The sunshine's warm and skies are fair—
There's singing birds, and gurgling brook
And solace in the sylvan nook.

You've taken me from drear and chill,
And called my mind to cheer and still;
To think upon the gladsome day
When done below, we're just away.

WITNESS TOLD CHIPPS WHERE NORRIS WORKED

D. E. Redmond Says He Showed "A Large Man" Way To Office.

HEARD SHOTS.

AUSTIN, Texas, Jan. 20.—(Canadian Press.)—The companion of Dexter E. Chipps on his climb to death in the church office of Dr. J. Frank Norris in Fort Worth last July, told his story of how he had directed Chipps to the room in which he was shot to death. Dr. Norris is on trial for the slaying of Chipps.

D. E. Redmond, Chipps' companion, proved to be another of those accidental witnesses of the tragedy which cost the life of Chipps, when the latter went to Norris' office to protest against the pastor's attack on Mayor H. C. Meachim.

He happened to be going to the office of the Searchlight, in the First Baptist Church office building for a Bible, when he ran across Chipps, who was on his way to the same place.

He knew Chipps then only as "a large man," who accosted him on the street and inquired the way to Norris' office, the witness said. He said he told "the large man" he would show him the office, and the man said: "How in —— will I know him when I see him?" This was the same remark R. B. Ridgeway testified he had heard as he sat in his automobile across the street from Norris' office.

Redmond mounted the stairs with "the large man," showed him the door to Norris' office, and then went for his Bible. The man, whom he afterward identified as the same man who was shot in Norris' office, walked into the pastor's studio without knocking, he said. While Redmond, who has been a gospel song student, was examining Bibles in a rear room of the building, he heard the shots that ended Chipps' life. Rushing out into the hall he saw the big man, who had a few minutes before been his companion on the stairway. The man was stooping over and in a few moments he saw him sink to death on the floor in a corner of Norris' office.

FORMER CITIZEN OF PETERBORO' NAMED FOR POST

Bolton S. Armstrong Receives Important Appointment at Cincinnati.

RAILWAY TRUSTEE.

Has Reached High Place in Adopted City Through Energy and Ability.

Bolton S. Armstrong, head of Mabley and Carew Company, was selected by the judges of the Common Pleas Court yesterday, to be a member of the Board of Trustees of the Cincinnati Southern Railroad to fill the vacancy caused by the recent death of former Judge M. Hoffheimer.

Mr. Armstrong was selected without opposition, no other name being presented, when the nine Common Pleas Judges went into session, at the call of presiding Judge Fred L. Hoffman, and his election was by acclamation.

As soon as the court went into session, Judge Hoffman read a petition, signed by City Solicitor John D. Ellis, notifying the court of the vacancy in the trusteeship caused by Judge Hoffheimer's death, and asking that a successor be appointed.

Shook Names Armstrong.

Judge Chester R. Shook immediately placed the name of Mr. Armstrong in nomination, and it at once received seconds from several of the other judges. As there was no other nominations offered Judge Hoffman called for a viva voce vote upon the one candidate, and he was elected by acclamation.

Mr. Armstrong had the endorsement of the Republican executive committee for the appointment.

Mr. Armstrong is one of the outstanding business men of Cincinnati. He was elected Prseident of the National Association of Retail Merchants in 1924 and filled the office during that year in a manner which won for him the esteem of the retail merchants of the entire country.

He is a director of the Ohio State Council of Retail Merchants, which has a membership of 30,000. He is secretary of the Commercial Club and is a director of the Cincinnati Club and the Queen City Club.

Appointee is Club Member.

Mr. Armstrong also is a member of the Cincinnati Golf Club, the Maketawah Country Club, and of the Ft. Mitchell Country Club. He is a Knight Templar, a Shriner, and a member of the Elks. He was a director of both the Fifty-third National Bank and of the Union Trust Company, and since the merger of the two banks had been a member of the new board of directors.

The Mr. Armstrong referred to in the above article, from the Cincinnati Enquirer, is a brother of W. W. Armstrong, Manager of Barrie's, Limited, Regina, Sask., and formerly of Peterborough, Mrs. C Hunter, 193 London street, city, and Mrs. A. M. Laing, North Monaghan. Mrs. R. S. Merrell, 85 Benson avenue, and Mrs. P. L. Allison, 529 King street, are nieces.

Mr Armstrong was born at Peterboro, Ont., Canada, Nov. 10, 1870, and was educated in the high school and business college there. He came to Cincinnati in 1892 and has been associated with the Mabley and Carew Company for 35 years. He started as a salesman and by industry, application and intellectual ability worked himself up to the top.

He has been president of the company since 1914, having succeeded the late Joseph T. Carew, also a trustee of the Southern Railroad for a number of years prior to his death.

Mrs. Armstrong married Miss Harriet Baldwin, at Weston, a suburb of Toledo, in 1901. They live on Garden place, East Walnut Hills.

Mr. Armstrong, it will be remembered by citizens of about thirty-five years ago was a clerk in the fur store of the late Joseph Mills. On leaving here, and after a short residence in Montreal, he went to Cincinnati, where he has resided since.

The firm of Mabley and Carew Company, of which Mr. Armstrong is the president, is the finest departmental store in Cincinnati, employing over 800 hands.

Mr. Armstrong's old friends in the city and district will be glad to hear of the business standing he has in Cincinnati, and of the important position he has earned by his industry and application to business.

No matter what you have tried for your stomach and bowels, Adlerika will surprise you. At leading druggists. In Peterboro at McDermid and Jury and all other druggists.

BUYING METHOD

Nowadays, many persons buy their silver in sets of six or twelve of each article, but in complete services for one or two persons at a time, thus collecting a workable set more rapidly.

The popular chocolate confections as we know them today were the result of an accident. Many years ago a candymaker got the idea of covering the creams with chocolate in order to make them hold together. His purpose was solely to be able to sell the creams, but his customers took a fancy to the chocolate. Gradually the creams were replaced with other fillings, such as nougat, nuts, caramel and fruits.

If you think that the surgeon's knife is the only method of escape from the misery of piles, it's because you haven't heard of the new treatment known as Dr. Leonhardt's HEM-ROID.

This Doctor's treatment is internal. By experimenting for years he discovered the exact cause of piles and then went further and compounded a remedy that would remove the cause.

Every pile sufferer should benefit by his discovery and so that there will be no doubting or delay, McDermid & Jury and all druggists are authorized to sell HEM-ROID with guarantee that it will do as stated or money back.

On that honorable basis every sufferer should secure a package of Dr. Leonhardt's HEM-ROID today.

GRAND OFFICER VISITS LOCAL PYTHIAN LODGE

Gives Address on Principles and Benefits of Order.

OFFICERS INSTALLED.

Chancellor Congratulates Marathon Lodge on Splendid Progress.

On Tuesday, January 18, Brother Homer Lockart, Grand Chancellor of the Grand Domain of Ontario, paid an official visit to Marathon Lodge No. 39, Knights of Pythias, of this city.

The convention was held in the Pythias Bastle Hall which was filled almost to capacity with enthusiastic brothers.

After the usual business of the convention was disposed of, the first rank team initiated seven candidates into the mysteries of the rank of Page.

The Grand Chancellor was introduced by Chancellor Commander Ralph Knox, in a few brief words of welcome and introduction.

Bro. Lockhart then made a very able address to the brothers. He began by showing that Pythianism started about 2500 years ago, but that, like radio, it was only in the last century or so that men began to organize that virtue. He then went on to show how in the same way many people were professing Christians but acting atheists, just so there was the possibility of men becoming Pythian brothers in name and yet failing to carry out its principles. He urged the Peterborough brothers to be ever on their guard against this possibility.

Bro. Lockhart then showed how the Pythian order was a practical fraternal organization and went to some length to tell of the number of Pythian Homes instituted, the charitable funds created and the fine Christmas cheer funds which are doing so much for the good of the aged and ailing Pythian brothers and their families.

He explained the new insurance policies available to a Knight of Pythias now and contrasted them with other policies.

The membership of the order, he stated was increasing very rapidly on this continent, being now well over the million mark. Much of this increase is due to the friendship, charity, benevolence and sincerity of those belonging to the order.

The Pythian Order now operates eighteen homes for aged members, their widows and orphans. Five other states are building homes. Investment in this phase of Pythian endeavor amounts to more than $4,000,000 and over 2,000 men, women and children are provided with home comforts. Five grand domains have established educational trust funds by which worthy young men and women are given opportunity for advanced college training. Nearly two hundred are now being kept in colleges through loans from these funds.

He congratulated the rank team on the splendid manner in which the Page rank was exemplified. He would place that team against the oldest rank teams in the Domain with favorable results for the Peterborough boys.

This gave him a chance to address the lately-created Pages more personally and he went to great lengths to show them their advantages in Pythian work. Rendering two very appropriate poems, "Your Chance," and "The Bee," he appealed to the Pages to give to Pythianism their earnest co-operation when they became full-fledged Knights.

His closing remarks had to do particularly with the Peterborough lodge. He was very pleased with the growth, expansion, and able management of the lodge. He congratulated the members on the officers they had elected for this year. He stated that in this Domain, Marathon No. 39 was the lodge to beat, and foretold a very bright future for Peterborough Lodge and even spoke of the prospects of starting a Pythian Home in Peterborough in the near future.

He closed by wishing the brothers every success in their lodge building and social activities of which the Pythians have a great number.

Brother Lockhart's address was replied to very ably by Vice Chancellor, Bro. Webb, and Bro. N. Henry. Bro. G. Gimblett was the acting Grand Master at Arms for the evening.

Bro. D. Munro rendered a delightful piano solo and also led in the sing-songs.

The lodge was closed at eleven-thirty but the brothers remained for a social get-together chat with the Grand Chancellor.

The officers elected for the year 1927 were: R. J. Knox, C.C.; A. Jobe, V.C.; E. K. Catton, Prelate; A. W. Guppy, M.W.; W. K. Sloane, K.R. & S.; V. Hamilton, M.E.; F. Milliken, M.F.; N. Henry, O.G.; H. Hair, I.G.

SEARCHING FLOES TO RESCUE MAN

Aeroplane and Fire Tug Lead Efforts Off Cleveland Harbor.

CLEVELAND, Jan. 20. Canadian Press. — Hoping for the stroke of luck that some times brings back those who seemed doomed to die, efforts went forward feverishly to-day to rescue from the icy waters of Lake Erie the man or boy sighted last night on a bobbing cake of ice, just out of reach of land.

An aeroplane circling in the murk that hung low over the lake, and a fire tug nosing its way through the ice floes off the shore, led the rescue attempts.

Could Not Sleep Heart and Nerves Were So Bad

Mr. Geo. Meek, Windsor, Ont., writes:—"I suffered with my heart and nerves and could not sleep at night for noises in my head. I managed to keep at my work somehow, until I began to have dizzy spells which got so bad I could not go to my work. I was afraid to go out any place, for very often I would stagger on my feet, and everything in front of me would turn black and fade away. While I was home sick a friend told me to take MILBURN'S HEART NERVE PILLS. I got four boxes and by the time I had used them the pains and noises in my head ceased and I was able to get a good night's rest. Although that was six years ago I have never been troubled with that complaint again."

Fires Smouldering Beneath Surface of Baseball Showdown

OUTWARD CALM IS PREVAILING OVER BASEBALL CONTROVERSY

American League Leaders Gathering For Showdown Meeting on Monday.

FIRES SMOULDER.

Incompetency, Reason Given By Johnson For Their Expulsion.

CHICAGO, Jan. 20 — While outward calm prevailed yesterday in the baseball controversy involving the ousting of Ty Cobb and Tris Speaker, fires smouldered beneath the surface as commissioner Landis and Ban Johnson, president of the American League, marshalled cohorts for the showdown meeting here Monday.

The meeting is expected to determine whether Johnson should be condemned for causing Speaker and Cobb to be dropped for "managerial inefficiency," or Commissioner Landis should be censured for publishing the charges against the idols of the diamond.

Commissioner Landis returned from the committee meetings in French Lick Springs, Ind., but declined to comment.

Incompetency, rather than crookedness, was given as the principal reason by Johnson for the expulsion from the American League of Speaker and Cobb.

"Talk of crookedness had no great part in our decision to demand the resignation of these managers," president Johnson said. "They simply were not equal to their jobs and had to go."

OMEMEE CUBS BEAT LINDSAY

SCORE 3-2.

OMEMEE, January 20. — The first hockey game of the season to be played on local ice was staged in Omemee on Saturday afternoon when a junior team from Lindsay journeyed here to battle with the team of High School boys, known as the "Cubs." Both teams put up a hard fight; few penalties were imposed by the capable referee Mr. Stanley Tripp. The locals proved one too many for the visitors ,with the result that at the end of the third period Omemee had three goals while Lindsay had two.

Manager P. Parsons had a good sheet of ice each night and the local senior team is preparing to stage a few games with visiting teams in the very near future.

DUKES AND N. TORONTO ARE PLAYING TO-NIGHT

Senior O.H.A. Game Should Be Hard Fought Battle.

TORONTO, January 20. — To-night Marlboro seniors back into North Toronto at the Arena in a scheduled O.H.A. fixture, and it should be a smart contest from beginning to end. The north enders are practically out of the O.H.A. race but they are anxious to carry as many of the other clubs as they can out with them and they think they are about good enough to hand Frank Selke's hopes a trimming. It will be a hectic affair anyway as there is very little love lost between the two clubs. Last year the Dukes (playing under the name of St. Mary's) were the strongest opponents of North Toronto in the local intermediate group, and finally the team handled by Jimmy McFayden won out. The Dukes still think they are much the best, and to-night they are out to show the fans they have a club that is still in there battling for a place in the play offs. They cannot afford to lose another game if they wish to stay in the hunt.

A lot of players who are playing senior hockey for the first time will be in the game, and they have been making a real name for themselves in the games played so far this season. Primeau ,the star front line player of the Dukes, is in his first year of senior company, and Crompton, their defence man, also played junior last year. Graham, Ross, Courtney, and Heintzman are other players who are new to the ranks of the seniors.

The line-up will likely be as follows:

CONNIE MACK REAL AUTHORITY

Can Go Back 40 Years For Picking All-Time Team.

NAME PLAYERS.

(By Billy Evans.)

Perhaps no one man in baseball is better fitted to select an all-time team than Connie Mack. He can go back over a period of 40 years as player and manager without greatly taxing his memory.

One day last summer, while discussing the relative merits of certain star players, I asked him to name for me the players he regarded as outstanding at their positions over the last 40 years.

It didn't take him long to express himself. I am inclined to think that at various times in his career he must have given such a question much consideration.

Here are his selections, and, by the way, they make a pretty fair ball club. To that I am sure you will agree.

Mack's All-Time Team.

He named Buck Ewing as his catcher, Christy Mathewson as his right-handed pitcher and Rube Waddell as his southpaw. Mack qualified the Waddell selection thusly:

"Waddell easily was the best left-hander of all time as far as natural ability went, and likewise was a consistent winner. Yet, between Plank and Waddell, I would have picked Eddie for team value.

"Chase was a better fielder than Sisler, but for all-round value I would name Sisler as my first baseman."

For shortstop and third base Mack goes back to the old-timers, naming Hans Wagner as best at short and Jimmy Collins as the premier at the difficult corner.

"Give me Eddie Collins for second base; there is a great player," said Mack.

It is rather interesting that Connie recently acquired Collins after the White Sox had cut loose from him.

Overlooks Babe Ruth.

As his outfield Mack named Fred Clarke in left field, Tris Speaker in centre and Ty Cobb in right field. Here are his reasons:

"Clarke was a marvel at playing the batters. Speaker covers more ground than any outfielder in the history of the game. All things considered, Cobb is in a class by himself."

Admirers of Babe Ruth are certain to give Mack an argument in naming Clarke in preference to the Bambino.

There is no doubt about Ruth being one of the greatest outfielders of all time. Were it not for his remarkable slugging ability the experts would be writing columns of praise about his fielding, for he is a wonder for a big man.

However, I am willing to ride along with Connie's judgment and refuse to take any exceptions. Over a period of 21 years I have found him wondrous wise as to baseball.

Adds Pennant Punch.

Connie Mack is of the opinion that the addition of Outfielder Zach Wheat, former star of the Brooklyn club, will supply his team with a needed pennant punch. If there is one thing Wheat can do, it is hit.

With Wheat added to the outfield of the Athletics, Mack boasts about the hardest hitting bunch of gardeners in the country. Al Simmons, Bill Lamar and Frank Welch all are of the slugger type.

PROMOTOR FUGAZY IS HIGHLY PEEVED

Believes Tunney Used Him As Sort of Ballyhoo of Rickard.

NEW YORK, Jan. 20—Add one more to the long list of those who are peeved at the actions of Gene Tunney, heavyweight champion of the world.

It so happens this person is none other than Promoter Humbert Fugazy, who has gone to the mat several times with Mr Rickard in an effort to prove that he is a more important figure in the fight game than the irrepressible Tex.

Promoter Fugazy is even more than peeved, he is sore, because he believes that Gene Tunney has been using him as a part of the ballyhoo of Rickard for a return match between Dempsey and Tunney.

For a time Fugazy thought he had the inside track with Tunney, provided he could show him as much money as Tex and he promised to add a few kopecks to any sum Rickard might offer.

All the time, according to the wise folks, Tunney was signed to a Rickard contract, calling for exclusive rights to his services for one year. It is said Rickard's trip to St. Louis to turn the trick was all hooey, press agent stuff.

It seems Fugazy has Jack Delaney tied up to a contract similar to the one Rickard holds with Tunney.

"Seeing Tunney defeated by Delaney will be balm for the hokum Tunney handed me," says Fugazy.

74.55 Cents a Stroke Fee Paid To Geo. Young

LOS ANGELES, (Jan. 20. — (By Universal Service).—Here's one for the old comptometer. One of the judges in the Catalina channel swim, waiting through the long dreary hours before dawn while George Young was nearing shore, got out his pencil and did some figuring. When he had covered several sheets of paper with figures, he announced, simultaneously with the Canadian youth's arrival, that George had been paid 74.55 cents per stroke for every time his arms cleft the water. His calculation was based on Young's average of 35 strokes a minute. The prize was $25,000 and the victor was in the water 15 hours, 48 minutes and 35 seconds. The figures have not been verified.

LEADERS GATHER FOR CONFERENCE

CHICAGO, Jan. 20. — Silence seemed ominous yesterday as baseball leaders marshalled their forces for the hearing in the office of Commissioner K. M. Landis next Monday, at which one of the greatest rows in the history of the sport is expected to be aired.

There was one notable point that stood out from each man connected with the higher powers of the game—his ability to keep his mouth shut.

No one wants to talk and it was apparent that those leaders of baseball who are directly or indirectly involved in the row between Landis and Ban Johnson, president of the American League, over Landis' attitude in making public what the American League considered confidential facts, are apprehensive.

Johnson, who censured Landis for giving out what he knew of the Cobb-Seaker case, commented "it looks like a merry session, but I'm going to back up every word."

A full-sized boom in behalf of Edward G. Barrow, business manager of the New York Yankees, as a successor to Ban Johnson has gained headway among American League club owners, it became apparent here yesterday.

While Barrow remained silent on whether he would become a candidate for the American League presidency, Col. Jacob Ruppert, owner of the Yanks, was said to favor his subordinate.

SCORE 4-3.

CHICAGO, Jan. 20. — "Babe" Dye, former St Patrick's player, had a big part in the 4 to 3 overtime defeat handed to his former team here last night as he scored two goals, the first and the tying ones for the Black Hawks, and made the pass for the second Chicago counter which started the locals on their rally in the third period which wiped out a two-goal lead that the Irish had secured and made it possible for Gordon Fraser to decide the game after two and a half minutes of overtime play. Fraser secured near his own goal and went right through the visiting team to beat Roach for the most brilliant goal of the game. In addition to scoring the winning goal Fraser played a strong game on the defence, his checking being very strenuous and the visitors frequently called the officials' attention to Fraser's methods.

The game was one of the most thrilling of the season, and once again the Black Hawks demonstrated that they are a team that is not beaten until the final bell sounds. The Irish were two goals in front with nearly half of the final period gone, but the fans were confident the Hawks would come down in front, having memories of the great victory over the Montreal Maroons a couple of weeks ago, and the locals did not disappoint their supporters. Dye gave Dick Irwin a pass for the counter that reduced the visitors' lead to one goal and from then on the Hawks had five men up on the attack, striving for the tying goal. With less than two minutes to go Irvin returned Dye's courtesy on the previous goal and the leading scorer of the league beat Roach for the equalizer. In the overtime play ranged up and down, Roach having three saves and Lehman four before Fraser started on his victory-winning rush.

RIVAL LEADERS FEAR STRENGTH OF TIGERS

NEW YORK, Jan. 20.—American League managers already are beginning to worry about the pennant chances of the Detroit club. While some are skeptical of George Moriarty's chances to do big things in his first year, all frankly admit he knows baseball and has a pretty good club to work with.

While the rival managers look for a general improvement in the play of the club, on the theory that the spirit will be better, it is improved pitching that is being given the most consideration.

"I look for Detroit's pitching to be at least 30 per cent more efficient this year," says a certain American League pilot. When pressed for a reason he replied:

"While Cobb's intentions always were of the best, his system of trying to tell the pitcher what he should use on every batter will not work out.

"In a short series, such as the world championship games, it might be all right. John McGraw worked it successfully one year. However, it won'tfunction properly over a season's play.

"Moriarty will allow his pitchers to work out their own salvation, to use their own judgment, and is certain to get much better results."

Minneapolis is preparing for the entertainment of the annual bonspiel of the Northwest Curling Association during the week of January 17. The event is the most important annual fixture of its kind in the United States.

FIGHT EXPECTED AT CONFERENCE

Predicted That Either Johnson or Landis Will Have To Go.

CHICAGO, Jan. 20. (Canadian Press). — The principal charges against Ty Cobb and Tris Speaker, which caused President Ban Johnson of the American League to demand their resignations as managers, involved incompetency and not crookedness, Mr. Johnson stated today. He called the "Dutch" Leonard charges against them of throwing games "inconsequential."

This new and vital sidelight on the Cobb-Speaker case gave a rather wan aspect to the possibility that any sensational disclosures would be made at the American League conference here, Monday.

A real row, however, seems to be brewing in two quarters. One relates to what will come to pass when President Johnson and his American Leaguers meet here, preliminary to the conference with Baseball Commissioner Landis, who was severely criticized by Mr. Johnson for making public the Leonard charges. The other is the question of what will come of the Johnson-Landis feud when the two baseball leaders face each other. It is predicted in many quarters that one of the two will have to go and as Landis is assured of the support of some of the American League club owners, Johnson's resignation is forecast.

BRISTLING BATTLES of BARE FIST DAYS

(MY LIFE STORY)

by Jack McAuliffe

CHAPTER THIRTEEN

Did you ever hear of a prospective opponent giving an undefeated champion $5 to kid him along and prevent him running out of a fight?

It gave me a laugh, but it really happened In the fall of 1885 I became my own manager because Bill Madden was too busy campaigning for Charlie Mitchell I made a match with Billy Frazier, boxing instructor at Harvard University. I wired for Patsy Sheppard a well-known sport and saloon keeper of Boston, whom I had never met before, to be my second

Arriving at Boston I went into Patsy's saloon to wait for him. I was cold and had eaten nothing since leaving New York, so I ordered two bottles of stout. They made me dizzy and I soon fell asleep with my head on the table. Patsy came in, took one look at me and said, "I'll not second that drunk and I'm going out and put my money on the other fellow."

That put me in fine. I had no money as I thought I could get some from him. I went around to Dave Blanchard's gym on Washington street to see Frazie train. It was then I had my first look at a punching bag, crude as the thing was. Frazier brought a bottle of tea along with him and sipped it as intervals. He busted the punching bag and that gave me a cue to have a little fun so I hollered, "I'm not going through with this fight. He's too strong. I'll have none of him!"

They all gathered around me trying to make me change my mind. Frazier then did the magnificent act of digging down into his pocket and handed me a five-dollar bill!

I spent it all on steaks, I was so hungry.

We met in a wholesale house's loft three days later. Frazier had a terrific uppercut, but nothing more than that. He was easy because I was cautious with him for about ten rounds and then stepped out and mowed him down in the 21st round.

That night I learned something. I went back to Pat's saloon and who did I find behind the bar with a mirror in his hand sorrowfully gazing at the bumps and welts on his face but Frazier. He was vain and I had marked him quite a bit.

That gave me an idea. In later fights when I began to cut an opponent up I always told him about it as I went along.

NOTE: In the next chapter McAuliffe tells about a drastic rule against prize fighting and how a friend of his was given 10 years in prison for attempting to promote a fight.

SPEED ON SIDE OF CHAMPION

Short Distance Is Advantage To American in Defense To Champion.

BRITISH PROMOTING.

NEW YORK, January 20. — The pugilistic pot bubbled about Madison Square Garden as Tex Rickard set his stage for one championship battle, while Fidel La Barba, flyweight champion from California and Elky Clares, king pin of Europe's little men in that division, entered the final stages of training for the first international flyweight championship struggle since the days of Jimmy Wilde, which is to be held in the Gardens on Friday night.

Paolino Refuses.

Reilly asked for a match with Paolino Uzoudun, Spanish heavyweight, who knocked out the Cuban champion Ferro in one round at Havana Saturday night, but was told Uzeudun did not wish such a match at this time. The terms offered Reilly for a Maloney match are understood to be satisfactory to the light-heavyweight king. Mahoney's attitude is not known.

Meanwhile in the East LaBarba is favored to defeat the British challenger for world honors, Friday night. The speed and punching power of the Western youth, not yet 22 years old, is expected to count heavily in his favor over the comparatively short 12-round route. Clarke, skilled veteran of 29, is admittedly more at home over a distance of 15 to 20 rounds.

Genaro is Semi-Finals.

The semi-final of ten rounds will bring together Frankie Genaro, who lost his American title to La Barga, and Newsboy Brown of Sioux City, Ia. Trip Limbogo, Filipino flyweight and Billy Kelley of Scranton, Pa., are booked for ten rounds on the same card.

WESTCLOX GIRLS DEFEAT DE LAVAL

The Westclox girls defeated the De Laval 10-8 in a League game last night. This was a speedy game, showing good checking on the part of both teams. No baskets were scored in the first period. The second period was fast, Westclox scoring the first basket. Miss B. Scott and Miss E. Forster for De Laval evened things up. Miss T. MacPherson added another to the De Laval score. In the fourth period Miss B. Scott evened the score for the Westclox. Miss Scott scored the five baskets for the Westclox.

The teams:

De Laval—R. MacPherson, S. Huston, E. Forster, B. Conroy, and H. Carson; subs., F. Giroux and M. Guthrie.

Westclox—J. McIlwain, J. Thirnbeck, B. Scott, C. Finley and G. Thomas; subs., B. Graham and K. Murphy.

REBEL MOVEMENT DEFEAT ANNOUNCED

Paper Says Revolution in Coahuila, Mexico, Has Collapsed.

MEXICO CITY, Jan. 20.—Collapse of the revolutionary movement in the state of Coahuila, with capture and execution of the "clerical leaders," is announced by the newspaper "Presidencia", based on reports from the chief of military operations in that district, General Amaya.

In annihilating the rebel force at Huachichil, the government asserts the federals have captured Antonio Acuna, upon whom incriminating papers were found, signed by Rene Capistran Garza, recently proclaimed "provisional president" of the revolutionary movement; and Jesse F. Ganara, his military adviser.

These documents are considered sufficient evidence for the immediate execution of Acuna, whose force has been dispersed with losses of seven killed. General Amaya is now devoting special vigilance to the frontier, to prevent the ingress of rebel soldiers, arms and munitions.

Evidence Against Church.

Further evidence supporting the charge that the Catholic church is involved in the present uprisings is claimed by the government, following the examination of prisoners captured in the vicinity of Mexico City.

These prisoners are said to have been encouraged by agents of the Catholic Episcopate and others who asserted that those failing to rise in defense of the priests would be condemned to eternal punishment.

The government claims progress in cleaning up the states of Guanajuate, Jalisco and Zacatecas, where rebel outbreaks gained headway. Thirty-four of 52 priests brought to the Capital from surrounding regions on charges of complicity in the uprisings and lodged in the military pirson, are said to have been freed in Mexico City on their promise to leave. The remaining 1 are still held.

BASKETBALL

Some real form was displayed by the Junior basketball team at the work out last night and judging from the material on hand they have a team that will give a good account of themselves when they commence the group games. The team has been entered in the Junior O.B.A., but have not been informed yet as to what group they will be in.

In Bert Grenik, the coach and manager of the team, they have a man who has had lots of experience and who should prove a valuable asset.

All basketball players under 20 are asked to be at the Y. M. C. A. next Tuesday night at 8 p.m. for practice in order that the strongest possible team may be selected to represent Peterborough.

BOXING NEWS

NEW YORK, Jan. 20 (Canadian Press)—An obstacle to the Jack Delaney-Jim Maloney heavyweight bout arranged for February 18 at Madison Square Garden loomed yesterday in the statement of James A. Farley, chairman of the State Athletic Commission, that Delaney should confine his activities to the 175-pound divison, in which he holds the title.

Farley's opinion, while expressed as a personal view, may force an issue before the boxing board in the near future. The other members, George Brower and William Muldoon, are understood, however, to oppose any interference with the heavyweight programme mapped out by Tex Rickard to produce a challenger for Gene Tunney.

KIWANIS CLUB CELEBRATES INTERNATIONAL ANNIVERSARY WITH SPLENDID PROGRAMME

M. B. Tudhope, of Orillia, Delivers Address on Human Speech.

THE WORTH OF WORDS

Birthday Message From Kiwanis President Read By Rev. J. D. Paterson.

Peterborough Kiwanis Club today celebrated in fitting form the twelfth anniversary of the International organization, with M. B. Tudhope of Orillia as the special speaker. The luncheon overflowed with optimism and good will, the programme including musical selections by Harold Snelgrove, tenor, and Ronald Fleming, baritone, accompanied by Martin B. Chenhall. Coleman Blewett, of the Robert Neill stores, boosted the shoe business, and his prize winners were Roy D. Taylor and John J. Turner. E. Vernon Morphet, an old member returned to the club, was welcomed by Charles D. Cook. Rev. J. D. Paterson read an anniversary message from the International President, Ralph, Ammerman.

His Worship Mayor Holloway, a guest, paid a tribute to the work of Kiwanis Club in the city and took occasion to criticize The Examiner in regard to its editorial policy on playgrounds. The Examiner told of the wonderful progress made by Toronto, and His Worship objected to the comparison with Peterborough, declaring that the achievements of Toronto should be divided by thirty in order to get a parallel for Peterborough. "The revenue taken in by Toronto last year was $25,166,000, and that received by Peterborough was only $750,000," he said. "If you divide the number of playgrounds and rinks that Toronto has provided by thirty, you will find that we are away ahead. We should keep in mind that Peterborough is just as good as Toronto, on its own scale."

Human Speech

Mr. Tudhope, after congratulating the club upon the celebration of the International Kiwanis birthday, commented upon the changes that take place with the passing years. All the changes are not for good, he remarked, although the general trend is that way. And blessings may, in a way, change into curses, as, for instance, human speech. Speech is merely a code of sounds given humanity to express thoughts, the sounds representing something that is taking place in the mind.

Dancing Is Taught By Radio Telephone

NEW YORK, Jan. 21. — Arthur Murray, whose school of dancing is at 3 East Forty-third Street, gave London a dancing lesson by telephone yesterday morning, probably the first time that the art has been thus taught. Beginning at 11 o'clock, Mr. Murray for fifteen minutes taught the steps of the Black Bottom to Santos Casani, principal of the Sasani School of Dancing, 90 Regent Street.

101 YEARS OLD.

Joshua Anderson, aged resident of Stirling, who was born on Jan 21, 1826, and who celebrates his 101st birthday today.

JOSHUA ANDERSON 101 TODAY; PIONEER OF STIRLING DISTRICT

Aged Citizen of Anderson Island born in Murray Jan. 21, 1826.

MARRIED IN 1855

Mrs. Anderson Still Living—Have Lived Peaceful, Vigorous Lives.

Joshua Anderson, of Anderson Island, in the Trent River, is 101 years old to-day, having been born in Murray Township, a few miles from his present residence, on Jan. 21, 1926. He has lived on Anderson Island, which is named for the family, for ninety of those 101 years, and for more than seventy-one years has had as his faithful helpmate and wife, Mary Parcels, also born in Murray Township, to whom he was married on October 29, 1855.

The life of Mr. Anderson has been that of a pioneer. On their marriage, he and Mrs. Anderson had literally to hew their home out of the wilderness, but they overcame all difficulties and obstacles, and are now spending their declining years in peace and comfort.

The married life of Mr. and Mrs. Anderson has been uneventful. They have seen little of the outside world and have had no ambition other than the proper up-bringing of their children. Still they kept pace with modern progress and adopted the various inventions which were introduced from time to time to make the lot of the pioneer easier.

Mr. Anderson is remarkably bright and vigorous for his years. His sight is good and all his faculties unimpaired except for a slight deafness. He has used tobacco all his life, but never drank any liquor to speak of, and has only required medical attention once—about ten years ago. In politics he has always been a Conservative, and for most of his life he has attended the Methodist Church, although brought up an Anglican.

Longevity appears to be a matter of heredity in the Anderson family. His mother died at the age of 95, no monument in Stirling Cemetery revealing any older person buried there. All his brothers and sisters are dead, one having reached the age of 85 and another 79.

Although from very early times there was a stage from Stirling to Belleville, Mr. Anderson always made that journey on foot, although it was 23 miles. In the year his parents moved to Anderson Island, when he was only eleven years old, he and one of his brothers made the journey over the rough woods trails to visit an older member of the family, who was in barracks there. This brother was a member of the militia and was called out to assist in quelling the rebellion of 1837, but the fighting was over be-

703 Cases On Docket Of London Divorce Court

LONDON, Jan. 21.—(United Press.)—Divorces in 1927 got a flying start here when the mid-winter term of the divorce court opened with 703 cases on the docket.

It is an increase of 163 over the same time last year and only 10 less than during the record year of 1925.

Pre-war divorce dockets in the divorce court usually listed about 300 cases. The 703 docketed this year do not reflect the aggregate increase in this country since many divorce cases now are heard in provincial assizes, although divorces formerly always were heard in London.

CAR DESTROYED IN SERIOUS FIRE

CIGARETTE BLAMED.

A touring car owned by Mrs. Emma King was completely burned and a sedan owned by Dr. Pulkinghorn was damaged in a fire which broke out last night in the sheds at the rear of the Pulkinghorn garage.

When the firemen arrived the flames were spreading fast into the surrounding sheds, where other cars are stored. Fire in these sheds might have been serious, as many buildings surround them, and one is built against the south wall of Brock Street Rink.

It is not exactly known how the fire started, but from appearances it must have started in the touring car, which was blocked up with all the tires off.

It is thought that some person has been loitering around these sheds, and perhaps sitting in the car, in which he left a live cigarette butt. The sheds were badly scorched with the heat, but there was very little damage done to them.

GAY BACHELORS.

VIENNA, Jan. 21.—With more than 150,000 bachelors in Vienna, marriage is becoming more and more unpopular with the young men. In 1925 the marriage numbered only about half the total of 1920. Housing conditions are reported as one drawback. The birthrate is said to be falling in all parts of Austria, but illegitimacy has been on the increase.

Falls Seventeen Storeys Through An Open Shaft No Bones Broken—Doctors Say That He Will Survive

BROOKLYN, N.Y., Jan. 21 (United Press).—Giuseppe Zavarano, a laborer, fell seventeen storeys from a building under construction yesterday, and was picked up alive.

Doctors said he probably would survive.

Zavarano was working on the seventeenth floor when he slipped and fell down an open shaft, five feet square. Workmen on the lower storeys could hear him shout as he dropped. At the third floor a beam projecting into the shaft broke the fall.

When workmen ran to the sub-cellar, expecting to see Zavarano dead, they found him still breathing. A surgeon was called and he administered stimulants, whereupon Zavarano opened his eyes. An examination showed that not even a bone had been broken. Surgeons believed that he must have been injured internally, however, and Zavarano was removed to a hospital to recover from shock and for observation of the case.

PAPER SUPPORTS FERGUSON VIEW ABOUT TITLES

MORBID AVERSION.

Canadian Prejudice Possibly Originated Across Border, It Concludes.

LONDON, Jan. 21 (Canadian Press Cable).—"Only one thing is worse than hunting for titles and that is being morbidly adverse to them," the Saturday Review, Weekly, declares to-day, evidently referring to the remarks of Premier G. Howard Ferguson on Tuesday night, urging that the Canadian ban on titles be removed, which remarks were cabled to English newspapers.

"It seems to us," the Review continues, "entirely wholesome that certain prominent Canadians should now be agitating for the removal of the self-denying ordinance whereby great public services to the Dominion go unrewarded. Other parts of the Empire are glad to see their distinguished citizens honored by the King. We can only suppose that Canadian prejudices against the acceptance of such intangible rewards have their origin across the frontier, in the democratic affectation of an equality nowhere to be more sought than in the United States.

"One effect, as the Toronto speaker pointed out, is that leading Canadians are seemingly placed on a lower level than men with a similar record of public labor in the other Dominions."

CATHOLIC RISING DOOMED TO FAIL SAYS MINISTER

Political and Social Defeat of Mexican Clergy Long Attained.

HAS PASSED PEAK.

Early Gains of Church Would Have Turned Other Revolutionists Away.

MEXICO CITY, Jan. 21. Canadian Press. —Adalberto Tejeda, Minister of the Interior, is quoted by the newspaper Excelsior as declaring that the "Catholic rebellion" has passed its peak.

The Catholic clergy, he said, made a fundamental mistake in attempting to organize such a movement. The uprisings now being put down by the federal troops were the maximum efforts of which the clergy were capable, he added.

The political and social defeat of the clergy was long ago attained; logically the armed rebellion was due to failure. However if the army had not controlled the situation and the revolution instead of being stamped out had gained in vigor, the world would have witnessed all the revolutionary forces rush forth to the support of the government.

BRITISH CHANCELLOR EXPRESSES HIS APPROVAL OF FASCISM RULE

Says If He Was Italian, Enter Whole-Heartily Into Battle.

PROMOTE RELATIONS

Are United With Great Britian in Fight Against Communism.

ROME, Jan. 21. Canadina Press.—Firm approval of Fascism as applied to the people of Italy, was expressed yesterday by Winston Churchill, the British Chancellor of the Exchequer, in a statement given out to the newspaper correspondents. The chancellor, like Sir Austen Chamberlain, British Foreign Secretary, came to Rome to see for himself the achievements of Fascism, and confer with Premier Mussolini, finance minister Count Volpi and other Fascist statesmen.

In one part of his statement, Mr. Churchill said:

"If I were an Italian I am certain I would be with you from the start until the end in your victorious battle against the bestial appetite and passions of Lenisism.

"But in Great Britain we have not, as yet, been face to face with that danger under the same form. We have our own methods of dealing with such things. But on one subject I have no doubt whatsoever—that we are united in the fight against Communism abroad."

In regard to the United States attitude toward Europe the British watchdog of the treasury had this to say: "An entente like that of Locarno excludes no other power and it does not prejudice the interests of anyone who ally himself with the general structure of the league of nations and facilitates the development of that vital instrument, and the United States cannot very much longer remain aloof. On the contrary, I am sure that nothing would give more satisfaction to the American people than to see the great nations of Europe work together loyally and in co-ordination, as nothing else could more easily induce the U. S. to aid with her efficacious contributions those who are for the cause of humanity."

In the course of his written statement the British chancellor said:

"Despite the fact that my visit to Rome is of a private character, on the urging of the British ambassador I would like to make a statement for the newspapermen, who can do so much, and have done so much, to promote friendly relations between Italy and Great Britain.

"Amity between Great Britain and Italy dates from the foundation of the unity of the Italian state and has never been interrupted nor disturbed. I well recall my emotoins in the spring of 1915 when I learned of a secret clause in the treaty of the triple alliance (Germany, Austria and Italy) by which Italy stipulated that in no case should this alliance require Italy to go to war against Britain. The memory of this ought to be cultivated and made familiar to the general public.

"Of course you want to know of the conversations I had with Italian statesmen, particularly Premier Mussolini and Count Volpi ,but these interiews were confidential and of a purely general scope.

"It is well for Europe to-day that statesmen of the various nations who who for a long time have been in contact with their respective affairs, now meet as friends, and have an opportunity to form a personal idea of each other. That is one of the mediums by which they attain accords of an international character and by which they continue frank and confidential relations.

"I cannot but be stirred, as all other persons, by the amiable and simple attitude of Mussolini and by his calm and serious demeanor in face of weighty problems and great dangers. It is easy to perceive that his only thought is the lasting welfare of the Italian people, whom he understands so well, as to eliminate all other interests, which to him or of little or no importance.

"I am certain I do not violate any confidence in saying that the greater part of my conversation with the premier, as well as with the finance minister, revolved around the economic position of the Italian wage earner. This has ameliorated perceptibly under the Fascist regime.

"I am pleased to encounter and to see proof by facts and figures that there has been a decisive improvement, month by month, in the past year. This is particularly satisfactory in a period when so much effort is being made for the purpose of maintaining Italian finances on a severe and rigorous basis, with the object of sustaining the credit and foreign exchange of the nation and to satisfy all obligations.

"I myself was made the object of much criticism for having decided on the return to the gold standard in Great Britain and for two years the prime minister, Mr. Baldwin, was assailed for his debt settlement with the United States. In this period,

Wine-Makers Fearful Under New System

TORONTO, Jan. 21.—Premier Ferguson told a deputation of grape-growers and wine-makers from the Niagara Peninsula yesterday that the Government would do nothing under the Government-control bill that might effect their status without first advising them of any change. The deputation had requested that their status as producers of intoxicating beverages under the O.T.A. be not disturbed.

HOSE TO MEASURE.

LONDON, Jan. 21—The Princess de Polignac, the former Alice Weisinger of New York, has established a new fad among the fashionable in London. She has her stockings made to measure, declaring that she cannot understand why women who refuse to wear a suit off the shelf will appear with hose that are much too loose or too tight.

Educational System Of Canada Is Failure Says Agnes Macphail

Obsolete and Infected With Dry Rot, She Tells United Farmers of Alberta—Appeals To Them To Lead a Campaign For New Structure.

PROPOSES EXPERIMENTAL SCHOOL WITH PRESENT TEXT BOOKS BARRED

Tells U.F.A. To Have Commission Study Systems of Other Countries—No Consideration Given Agriculture, She Charges—Urban Minds Govern Schools.

EDMONTON, Alta., Jan. 21 (Canadian Press).—Describing the prevailing educational system of Canada as a "complete failure, obsolete and infected with dry rot," Miss Agnes Macphail, Progressive Member of Parliament for Grey South-east, appealed to the United Farmers of Alberta here last night to lead the way in a nationa-wide campaign and in arousing public sentiment to compel the introduction of a new educational structure.

"The future of Canada, the reconstruction of our country rests to a large degree with agriculture, and the progress shown already by the U.F.A. fully justifies the hope and confidence that this province will lead us on to a higher plane of civilization," Miss Macphail asserted.

"You have an educational department in this province that really wants to serve the farmer. I would suggest that the U.F.A. urge the government of Alberta to appoint a commission to conduct a thorough survey of educational systems in other countries of the world, where genuine efforts have been made to provide for the needs of agriculture. At the conclusion of such study and when a comprehensive report is presented, endeavor to put into practice the recommendations made. Start by establishing an experimental school and embody in the curricula the most revolutionary ideas you can think of as far as education is concerned. Do not permit those attending this experimental school to have admission to present text books. If necessary burn them up. Then let us try and inspire children to improving their environment. Try many methods, but eventually adopt one that proves most suitable and apply it to the Province at large."

Stressing the importance of the Public School, Miss Macphail asked: "Is it not strange that in an agricultural country such as Canada all our institutions should be dominated by the urban type of mind? In Ontario it is too often true that those who benefit by the system of special privilege are in control on our university boards. They see to it that the gospel of conformity is preached and reward any suggestion of change as Radicalism or an act of rebellion. I don't see much hope for an immediate improvement of conditions in Ontario. There is one redeeming feature, however, the people are not satisfied, although they don't know what they actually want to put in place of the present educational system."

MRS. H. C. EDWARDS PRESIDENT OF LOCAL COUNCIL OF WOMEN

WORK TAKEN UP.

Mrs. A. Stevenson, Retiring President, Speaks of Opportunities of Council.

The annual meeting of the Local Council of Women was held in the green room of the Young Women's Christian Association yesterday afternoon, with a very good attendance of the representatives of the affiliated societies, many of whom gave reports of their year's work. The election of officers for the new year were announced, this being done by choice of the affiliated societies at their regular meetings, and the result announced at the annual meeting. As there was not more than one choice for any office this year, no balloting was necessary.

The new officers for the year are: Past President, Mrs. Arthur Stevenson; President, Mrs. H. C. Edwards; Vice Presidents, Miss A. Lancaster, Mrs. G. A. Helson, Mrs. F. H. Dearborn, Mrs. F. A. Hodgson, and Mrs. J. J. Polock; corresponding secretary Mrs. A. Mowat; recording secretary, Mrs. Joseph Wearing; treasurer, Mrs. N. D. Seaton; Convenors of Standing Committees: Citizenship, Mrs. K. S. Wightman; Equal Moral Standard, Mrs. A. Stevenson; Objectionable Films and Printed Matter, Miss A. Walton; Household Economics, Miss E. Morrison, superintendent of the Y.W.C.A. Residence; Public Health, Mrs. N. H. Sutton; Education, Miss M. Hamilton; Laws, Mrs. Charles Ray; Professions and Employments for Women, Mrs. J. Mills; Soldiers' Pensions and Dependents, Mrs. W. R. Morris; Fine and Applied Arts, the President of the Women's Art Association Mrs. William Blackwell; Immigration Miss Leta Brownscombe, General Secretary of the Y.W.C.A.; League of Nations, Mrs. H. R. H. Kenner.

The new president, Mrs. H. C. Edwards, was a newcomer to the city last year. She lived formerly in Ottawa, and is Convenor of the National Committee on Equal Moral Standards, taking Dr. Margaret Patterson's former place on that committee. Mrs. Stevenson, speaking from the chair, remarked on Mrs. Edwards' high qualifications for the office of President in the Local Council.

Mrs. Stevenson, in a brief speech, also thanked sincerely her fellow-workers in the Council, during the three years of her term as president, and expressed especial appreciation of the help given by "my valued friend, Mrs. Mowat." Referring to the wonderful opportunities thrown open to an organization like the Local Council, she spoke of the interest which should be taken in such things as the enforcement of laws regarding admission of children to theatres, "and this should be looked after, not only by the managers, but by the parents. Parental authority should not be delegated entirely to the Government.' Other matters of interest to the ladies were pasteurization of milk and inspection of meat, and ameliorative steps with regard to the very high rate of infantile mortality and of maternal mortality in the Province, twenty-five mothers dying in childbirth every week in Ontario. The work of the local Well Babies' Clinic in caring for infants' health was highly recommended by Mrs. Stevenson.

CHAPLIN BEATS TAX OFFICERS

TAKES IT IN CASH.

NEW YORK, Jan. 21. Canadian Press. — Although Charlie Chaplin's deposits in New York banks, estimated at $1,500,000, were securely tied up by income tax liens to-day, the comedian had on hand $500,000 in cash which he succeeded in withdrawing before the arrival of the federal agents, the New York American says in a copyrighted story.

The money was withdrawn from the Bowery and East River National Bank just fifteen minutes before the federal men arrived with the lien yesterday morning, the newspaper says.

When the bank opened, it says, representatives of Mr Chaplin were waiting, and immediately presented for payment a personal cheue of the comedian for $500,000. It was paid without question and the representatives left the bank.

NEW ORLEANS, La., Jan. 21 (Canadian Press).—The Bulk, an oil tanker, was beached about 80 miles south of New Orleans in the Mississippi River today with full steam ahead awaiting tugs after a collision with the inbound Southern Pacific steamship Creole near Fort Point last night.

The Creole, laden with about 200 passengers, was only slightly damaged.

CHAPLIN'S WIFE FAILS TO OBTAIN MONEY DUE HER

CHARLIE TO FIGHT.

Issue Statement Thanking Loyal Supporters For Kindness Towards Him.

LOS ANGELES, Calif., Jan. 21 (A.P.).—Lita Grey Chaplin, who is suing Charles Spencer Chaplin for divorce and division of the Chaplin property, failed yesterday to secure any of the $14,400 temporary alimony and attorney's expenses awarded her by the court early this week.

Insistence by government solicitors at a court conference that "the government wants its money" first, prevented the release from government tax liens of cash in California banks under the comedian's name, which Mrs. Chaplin sought.

Chaplin Issues Statement

NEW YORK, Jan. 21 (United Press).—Abandoning further interviews with the press, Charlie Chaplin yesterday issued a statement through a representative in which the film comedian said he would return to Los Angeles to combat the divorce suit brought by his wife.

The statement follows:

"I shall return to Los Angeles to fight my case. Other than the following I shall have no statement to make; my lawyers will make all future statements and announcements.

"I wish to take this opportunity to thank the thousands of friends and well wishers for their thoughtful letters and loyal support, also the women's clubs of America, the great majority of which have shown their fair-mindedness. This is typical of the sanity and sympathy of American womanhood.

"The press throughout the United States has more than shown its unbiased and friendly attitude toward me.

"I wish to express my heartfelt thanks for the treatment everyone has accorded me—all of which strengthens me in my fight for my children."

BRITISH CHANCELLOR EXPRESSES, ETC.

however, we have the experience of seeing the gains surpass the losses.

"In regard to the Fascist foreign policy I may say that your movement has rendered a service to the entire world. The great fear which torments any democratic or socialist leader is that he might be ousted or succeeded by another leader more extremist than himself. It has been said that a continuous course towards the Left, and a kind of final evolution towards the abyss, are the characteristics of all revolutions. Italy has demonstrated that there is a way of dealing with subversive forces. That way consists of the co-operation of the great mass of the people for the honor and interests of the state.

"Italy has demonstrated that the great mass of her people, since it was well guided, appreciated and desired to defend the honor and stability of civil government. She has found the necessary antidote against the Russian venom. Yet at present no nation can be said to have been deprived of a last protective measure against malignant political tumors, and every Socialist chief in every country must feel himself more certain in resisting dangerous and nebulous doctrines.

The policy of the British government in Europe followed by Sir Austen Chamberlain, the foreign secretary, is very simple, in fact so simple that any minister or member of parliament finds little difficulty in explaining it either to a foreigner or to a public meeting of nations. Our policy is that Great Britain, France, Italy and Germany must work together for the rebirth of Europe and for healing of the wounds of the war.

"Antagonism among these great nations would cause ruin to Europe. The great war combatants now must unite to lend reciprocal aid, the same as among loyal friends who traverse a dangerous road. They must maintain contact one with the other and in such manner that their interests become more intimate and that all thought of another fratricidal war disappear absolutely from their minds.'

Lyrics Of Life

(By Douglas Malloch.)

INDEPENDENCE

Here's the fortune I desire:
My own house, and my own fire,
And a chair to rest my bones
That no other fellow owns.
Though the house be but a cot,
And the fire be great or not,
And the chair be only pine,
All I want is what is mine.

This my fortune: Let me go
Up and down the streets I know
Meeting men with level eye—
Paying for the things I buy,
Paying for the wage I get
With a service greater yet;
Paying for men's kindness, too;
With some kindness that I do.

This my fortune: Let me be—
While we talk of freedom—free;
Asking neither alms nor odds,
And no clemency but God's,
Owing nothing, giving much;
Common as the common touch;
With a wooden chair I own
That I sit on—like a throne.

Murderer Of Hundred Killed By Red Troops

SMOLENSK, Russia, January 21. Canadian Press.—After committing more than 100 murders and endless robberies and assaults in Smolensk province over a period of two years, Smirnoff Antonenkiff, leader of a gang of desperadoes, was killed yesterday in a battle with red troops. His followers, who were arrested, will be executed.

POLICE PROBE CAUSE OF FIRES

HUNT FIREBUG.

TORONTO, Jan. 21.—Headquarters detectives were yesterday afternoon straining every effort to run to earth those responsible for three incendiary fires which occurred on the sixth floor of the Hobberlin Building 366 Adelaide Street West. Scores of girls and women are employed in the building.

The large sixth floor is occupied by the United Headwear Company, and in the manufacture of hats much light material is used, which could easily be ignited.

The first call to the Fire Department came in at 8.30 yesterday morning, but the blaze was put out without their assistance. When, at 12.20, a second alarm came in, and it was found that fire had occurred on another part of the sixth floor, it looked serious. At 1.49, when yet another call came in, and an another part of the floor, fire from unknown cause, was found, the police were hastily called in and every precaution taken to prevent another outbreak.

In each case the damage was trifling. Special watchmen and police guarded the building last night.

Members of the firm expressed themselves completely baffled as to the cause of the fires, which clearly are incendiary.

Another Firebug Busy

The police are also investigating another fire which did damage of $1,000 to building and $2,000 to contents of 207-9-11 Lippinsott Street, a three-storey frame building, which years ago was occupied as a planing mill. Of recent years it has been simply used as a place of storage for its owner, David Bundy. While the fire blotter records the fire as of unknown cause, its owner believes it to be of incendiary origin. He has not entered the premises since about three months ago. The building contained old wood turnings of considerable value.

MOTHER AND SON BURNED TO DEATH

Use Of Kerosene To Revive Fire Causes Blaze at Flint.

FLINT, Mich., Jan. 21. — Mrs. Eva Wells, 20 years old, and her nine-months-old son, Richard, were burned to death in a fire that destroyed their small home at 515 McKinley avenue, Tuesday night, following an explosion when Mrs. Wells attempted to revive a dying fire by throwing kerosene upon coal embers.

Wilbert Wells, the husband and father, who was dragged by neighbors from the flaming house in which his family was trapped, was taken to Hurley Hospital, suffering from burns about the face, neck and arms.

GIRL STUDENTS LEAD RIOTERS

Bobbed-Hair Girls Lead Mob That Stormed Spanish Convent.

CHILDREN SOLD

HONG KONG, Jan. 21 (United Press). — Chinese girl students, bobbed in the manner of their western sisters and wearing horn-rimmed glasses, led the mob which sacked Christian institutions at Foochow, refugees from that city told the United Press yesterday. Orphan children were sold in the streets during the disorders.

The day before the trouble began, a group of Chinese girl students visited the Spanish convent at Foochow and asked to be shown through the institution. The request was granted. The next day a mob with girls in the lead invaded the convent building and removed the body of an orphan who they alleged had been murdered by the sisters.

Mob Persisted.

American, Japanese and Chinese physicians certified that the child had died of natural causes, but the mob persisted, and later entered the convent morgue, where were found the bodies of several infants. It led to a violent demonstration and threats that the nuns would be paraded through the streets carrying the bodies of dead children.

It was explained that the bodies were those of waifs who had been left dying outside the convent door by their parents. Chinese convent employees had refused to carry the bodies through the streets for burial for fear of being seized for military service.

Eventually the situation became so serious that the sisters were compelled to flee, taking a few orphans with them. Most of the children were seized by the mob and sold in the streets.

Girls Not Appeased.

The girls were not yet appeased. They boarded the vessel upon which the sisters had found refuge and created continuous trouble by seeking to induce the crew to strike. Another crowd of Chinese came aboard at Amoy and demanded the release of the orphans and the surrender of Father Benedict as a hostage pending inquiries into the circumstances of the children's deaths. The demands were complied with.

The refugees said that none of those who had arrived at Shanghai had been maltreated by the Chinese.

WEDDING BELLS.

GARBUTT—FREEMAN

The wedding took place on Wednesday of Herbert Clarke Garbutt of Smith township and Cora Luella Freeburn of Lakefield. The ceremony was performed at St. Paul's manse by the Rev. William Allan.

MORRISON—NICHOLS.

OMEMEE, Jan. 21. —A winter wedding of great interest to many people in Omemee and vicinity was solemnized on Dec. 30th, 1926, at the home of Mrs. Hore (nee Lillian McConnell) of Saskatoon, when Miss Bertha Nichols, of Hanley, Sask., eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Nichols, of Omemee, became the bride of Mr. James Morrison, contractor, of Hanley. The nuptial knot was tied by the Rev. A. D. Wrenshall, also of Hanley. Mr and Mrs. Hore were witnesses of the ceremony, following which the happy couple left on a wedding tour to Vancouver, Victoria and San Diego, Cal., where they will spend the winter months. The heartiest good wishes of a host of Omemee friends are extended to Mr. and Mrs. Morrison for a long and happy wedded life.

A unique shower was given in honor of Miss Bertha Nicholls on Dec. 14th, when sixty of her lady friends of Hanley, Sask., met at the home of Mrs. E. Ward and presented her with a miscellaneous shower of not only useful but beautiful gifts.

Miss Nicholls has been a valued teacher in Hanley for seven years, where she has made many warm friends.

The guest of honor was escorted to the dining room where a beautifully decorated Christmas tree, laden with gifts, greeted her eyes. A miniature Santa Claus, in the person of Master Teddy Ward, presented the gifts, among which was a silver tomato server given by her 1926 Entrance class.

The extremely cold weather kept many from attending who would have liked to have been there and those who were present showered Miss Nichols not only with gifts, but many good wishes for a happy future, for although she had decided to change not only her occupation but her name, the residents of this western town were pleased to know that Miss Nichols, who is now Mrs. Morrison, will reside among them on her return from Southern California.

In the great Russian oil field near Baku, on the Caspian Sea, a seat of ancient fire worship, there still exists a burning well that was alight four centuries before the discovery of America by Columbus.

Financier By Day, Taxi Driver In Gotham At Night. New Yorker Seeks Thrills Along Great White Way

NEW YORK, Jan. 21.—The fictionist's pet yarn about the fellow who is a wealthy stock broker during the day and cruises about Manhattan streets as a taxi driver at night, turns out to be true after all. He is John B. Carrington, Jr., of 565 Park Avenue, an address taxi drivers heretofore have known only from the outside.

Carrington is a stock salesman working out of the office of Libaire & Co., where he has a large account. His father is publisher of The New Haven Journal-Courier, and the president of the New Haven Savings Bank.

So apparently it is not the need for money that caused Carrington to take out a license on December 6 and thereafter drive a car for the Yellow Taxi Corporation, wearing the traditional uniform and cap. The city's best mystery solvers decide he is doing it for fun and thrills.

Carrington split his college career at Yale to serve with the French ambulance corps during the war and later the British Air Force. He has two automobiles of his own.

COKE PRODUCERS INCREASE DEMAND

Broader Legislation Now Asked at Ottawa—Propose 70 Cent Bonus.

OTTAWA, Jan. 21.—Hon. Charles Stewart, minister of the interior, is listening to arguments these days respecting the bonusing of coke by-product plants on the coke they produce. First designed as an aid to coke plants to enable them to handle Canadian coal and help the Maritimes, the demand is now for much broader legislation.

It is reported that they are asking for a bonus of 70 cents a ton on coke, which, they claim, is equivalent to a duty of 50 cents a ton on coal. They also ask the right to use a proportion of American coal with the Canadian coal, declaring that Canadian coal alone is unsuitable for coking. They do not specify the amount of U. S. coal they desire to use.

Hon. Mr. Stewart stated yesterday that he had not decided what amount of bonus he would recommend to the government, or what general form the legislation promised would take. The Duncan commission took evidence from the federal advisory fuel board, and in its report said that the fuel board was satisfied that coke could be produced from most of the Cape Breton seams of coal that would equal American anthracite, "as now imported into Canada," in heating value.

SPANISH CRUISER OFF TO YANGSTE

Despatched by Government in View of Anti-Foreign Movement There.

CONVENTS RAIDED

MADRID, Jan. 21.— (Canadian Press.)— Dispatch of the fast cruiser Don Blag Lezo to Shanghai has been decided upon by the Spanish government in view of the serious anti-foreign movement there.

An official memorandum containing this announcement also says the secretary of the Spanish Legation in Peking has been ordered to Shanghai.

Advices to the government are that more than twenty children were slain when a Chinese orphans' home and Spanish churches at Foo Chow were sacked by Chinese students.

The residence of the Spanish Bishop in Fukien was looted as well as various Protestant churches and meeting places of Anglican religious bodies.

Thirty Spaniards and 270 Filipinos have sought protection of the Spanish authorities in Shanghai.

Along the Yangtse river there are more than 200 Spanish missionaries and a number of bishops as well as colonies of Filipinos who emigrated there during the period of Spanish rule in the Philippines.

The memorandum says the situation is grave and requires immediate adoption of measures for the protection of Spanish nationals.

So soon it forever
From all eyes is hid.

MARX REQUESTED ORGANIZE CABINET

President Demands Constitution of Cabinet at Earliest Possible Moment.

BERLIN, Jan. 21. — (Canadian Press.) — President Von Hindenburg is taking a more decisive stand in the formation of a new ministry, Chancellor Marx having failed to bring together a coalition of the middle parties. The president addressed a letter to Dr. Marx insisting upon the constitution of the Cabinet at the earliest possible moment commanding a majority in the Reichstag.

Fearing, however, that Germany's efforts towards peaceful reconciliation with the allies might be jeopardized by Von Hindenburg's determination that his own nationalist party shall be represented in the new ministry, the Catholic Centre has refused to give Dr. Marx unconditional permission to accept the president's second mandate to him to form a cabinet.

The Centrist members of the Reichstag during a stormy two hour caucus to-day at which several of the leaders are reported to have threatened to quit the party, voted to demand that the nationalists answer a series of questions to be formulated to-morrow before the centrists will agree to participate in Von Hindenburg's move to force a rightist ministry.

ACCEPTS ARBITRATION.

MEXICO CITY, January 21. Canadian Press. — The Mexican government accepts in principle arbitration of its differences with the United States government. The foreign office made this announcement in a written statement last night.

TWO OFFICIALS ARE ARRESTED

Canadian Customs Officers Are Taken Prisoner U. S. Authorities.

SMUGGLING ALE

BUFFALO, N Y., Jan. 21 — It was made known here yesterday that two Canadian Customs officers have been arrested on charges of tempting to smuggle ale into this country. They were taken prisoners by the U.S. authorities at the American end of Fort Erie. The men, Alan Ferguson of Fort Erie, and Louis Lamb, of Bridgeburg, Ont., are alleged to have tried to smuggle auto loads of ale over the border.

American and Canadian customs authorities are now investigating the case and refuse to discuss the matter until they complete their task. Both men are now out on bail. Reports state that the men were arrested several days apart.

MRS. H. C. EDWARDS

The minutes of the last annual meeting were read by Mrs. Joseph Wearing, who also performed quite an achievement in secretarial work later on in the afternoon, when, at the conclusion of the session, she had prepared in businesslike fashion, the minutes of yesterday's meeting, which were at once read and approved by the meeting.

Mrs. Mowat read the correspondence, which included a recommendation to the ladies of a report in book form, of the proceedings of the Seventh Quinquennial Conference of the International Council, held last year at Washington, D.C. It was decided to buy this book for the use of the president. A letter was read from Miss Ethel A. Preston, lecturer and demonstrator at the Department of Agriculture, Ottawa, offering to come to the city and give, free of charge, a lecture and demonstration on the good qualities of Canadian fruits and vegetables. It was decided to make arrangements with the local Exhibition Board, with regard to having this lecture and demonstration take place at the time of the annual Fall Fair, if possible. Miss Prestons lecture and demonstration includes a talk on the food, dietetic and vitamin values of Canadian fruits and vegetables, a distribution of literature along this line, and a practical demonstration in the way of desserts, sundry dishes and conserves, also methods of pickling and canning.

A communication was also received with regard to making a presentation, in commenoration of their golden wedding, to Lord and Lady Aberdeen, the latter being president of the International Council of Women.

Financial Report.

The financial report for the year was given by Mrs. N. D. Seaton, as follows: Receipts — Balance from 1925, $155.56; fees, $60; interest, $6.86; total, $222.42. Expenditures —Provincial Council fee, $2; fare of Mrs. A. Stevenson to the Ottawa meeting, $20; to the National Council, $80.15 (including allocation, fee, etc.); stamps, $1.85; to Y.W.C.A. (rent of room), $13.50; to Examiner Printing Company, $18.86; total, $136.36. Balance in bank, $86.06.

Mrs. Mowat also gave the secretarial report of the thirteenth year of the Local Council's activities, just finished, recording eight meetings held, and 38 affiliated societies at the beginning of the year. The various resolutions endorsed and passed by the Local Council, also the local activities engaged in, were recounted. Speaking of the comparatively unimportant nature of some of the undertakings, Mrs. Mowat said, "But who can estimate the potentialities of small matters?" going on to refer to the important tasks which are started in little ways.

Mrs. Mowat also spoke of the regret of the Council in losing as president Mrs. Stevenson, whose home ties and far from robust health compelled her to relinquish office after three years' occupancy of the president's chair.

Miss A. Lancaster, rising to second the adoption of the secretary's report, spoke of the very valuable and faithful service rendered the Council by Mrs. A. Mowat, and also spoke later with great pride of the achievements of the members of the affiliated societies, pointing out the great variety of the endeavors undertaken by the ladies, and the splendid manner in which they carried them out.

Affiliated Societies Report.

Reports of the affiliated societies, many of the representatives being present at yesterday's meeting, were made as follows:

Ladies' Auxiliary of All Saints' Church (reported by Mrs. W. Lundy), Female Voice Choir (Mrs. R. Bugg), Central Home and School Association (Mrs. C. E. Staunton), King Edward Home and School Association (Mrs. F. Finnie), King George Home and School Association (Mrs. E. Scott), Queen Alexandra Home and School Association (Mrs. H. Tremain), 57th Regimental Chapter I.O.D.E. (Mrs. G. A. Helson), Otonabee Chapter I.O.D.E. (Miss S. A. Tomkins), Ladies' Aid Society of Mark Street Church (Mrs. George Marshall), Mission Circle of Trinity Church (Mrs. Norman Andrews), Nicholls Hospital Alumnae (Miss F. Dixon), Women's Art Association (Mrs. N. D. Seaton), Ladies' Auxiliary to the Canadian Legion (Mrs. M. Budd), Women's Canadian Club (Miss A. Lancaster), Young Women's Christian Association (Miss Leta Brownscombe) and Women's Christian Temperance Union (Mrs. A. B. Cunningham). Mrs. G. A. Helson also gave a report of the work of the Well Babies' Clinic during the past year, and Miss A. Walton reported for the committee on Objectionable Films and Printed Matter.

Mrs. A. Stevenson, commenting on the excellent work done by the ladies during the year, commended to their notice especially the work done by the Ladies' Auxiliary to the Canadian Legion, saying that the memory of the services performed in war time by our soldiers was apt to dim in the days of peace, and referring to the actual conditions of want and idleness occurring among the ranks of the ex-soldiers and their families.

It was decided to make arrangements to put on another theatre night, as was done last year, this to take place in the near future.

Mrs. J. Forbes Allan in a neat speech, moved a vote of thanks to Mrs. A. Stevenson, the retiring president, speaking of "her great mental ability, executive power and delightful personality," and of the qualities of tact and pleasantness that had made things run smoothly during her tenure of office.

The vote was seconded by Miss A. Walton and was accorded a standing vote by the ladies. Mrs. Stevenson applied in appreciative terms.

SCOTLAND YARD TO WAGE WAR

Determined to Squelch Operations of Gunmen Around London.

SHOOT TO KILL

LONDON, Jan. 21.—(Canadian Press.)—Scotland Yard, spurred by a recent increase in the operations of gunmen in London and the provinces, is organizing a flying squad under orders to shoot to kill when in pursuit of desperadoes.

The squad will consist of picked men having speedy automobiles. Citizens volunteer police of 1,500 men has also been sanctioned in Hertfordshire by the home secretary as an aid to the police in the preservation of law and order.

The methods employed by burglars and other criminals in England of late have brought the authorities to the belief that United States' gunmen have reinforced English crooks, and have introduced a tendency toward the use of firearms, when cornered.

JOSHUA ANDERSON

On another occasion Mr. Anderson was summoned to the county town for jury duty, and made his way in on foot, reaching Belleville ahead of the stage. The case on which he was called was concluded at ten o'clock at night, and he immediately started to walk home, arriving there just at daybreak. On his arrival he took up his daily duties just as if he had spent the night resting in his bed.

Tragedy has entered the life of Mr. Anderson and his wife on two occasions. Years ago two of their ten children, Angelina and Richard, aged ten and eleven years, broke through the ice of the river on their way to school, and were drowned. Another son, Wilson, who kept a store at Wellman's Corners, was killed by a horse a few years ago.

The living members of the family are three daughters and four sons, and grandchildren and great-grandchildren so numerous that Mr. and Mrs. Anderson have long lost count. The daughters are Mrs. Chester Hoard, who lives on the next farm to her parents; Mrs. William Reaume of Wallaceburg, and Mrs. William Hannah of Stirling. The sons are Walter of Hoard's Station, Fred, who lives with his parents, George of Saskatchewan, and Frank of Quebec.

RENEW PARLEYS WITH CANTONESE

NO MOB LAW.

LONDON, Jan. 21.— Owen St. Clair O'Malley, British charge d'affaires in China, has been instructed to go as far as possible towards meeting the demands of Eugene Chen, Cantonese foreign minister, according to authoritative information reaching the British United Press yesterday.

Reports from O'Malley state that he is now in the middle of negotiations with the Nationalist leader, but concerning these negotiations there has been much secrecy. It is known, however, that the question of Great Britain retaining control of the concession areas is being fully discussed.

Chen, it is understood, is short of money, and this fact has apparently brought him to a more reasonable frame of mind, particularly as he is worried over the hostility of the British banks. The cabinet has decided that it will protect the Nationalists to the fullest extent, and that it will never submit to "mob law" in China.

She died 15 minutes after entering.

ILLINOIS CLAIMANT DENIED ADMITTANCE

Pending Further Investigation of Financing of His Primary Campaign.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 21.—(Canadian Press.)—Frank L. Smith, of Illinois, was denied admission yesterday to the Senate by a vote of 48 to 33 pending further investigation of the financing of his primary campaign in large part by operators of public utilities.

Arrangements for a public hearing for the senator-designate will be made Saturday by the privileges and elections committee and Senators said he would be given every opportunity to amplify testimony already taken by a senate committee concerning contributions by Samuel Small and other officials of the rail and light corporations in his home state.

After the elections committee reports—and it will act as speedily as possible—the senate will vote again to determine whether it will admit under the credentials issued by Governor Small naming him to fill out the unexpired term ending next March 4 of the late William B. McKinley, whom he defeated in the primary contest.

APSLEY CHURCH VESTRY MEETING

Splendid Reports Presented By Officers—School Meeting Held.

APSLEY, Jan. 21 — The annual vestry meeting of St. George's Church was held on Monday evening when encouraging reports were presented. The rector stated that the allotments of all the churches in Apsley Mission had been paid in full, which it is believed is a record event in the history of the parish, and that the sum of $33.34 was all that is needed to pay off the mortgage on the Parsonage and Parish Room. A financial report showed receipts from collections and subscriptions $332.09 and expenditures $358.31, a debit balance of $26.22. This was accounted for by the cost of lamps and paint for the cost of lamps and paint for the church which amounted to $75, an expense which will not occur again for years. The following officers were elected for 1927: Wardens, re-elected, Hubert James and Stanley Windsor. Finance committee, the Wardens, George Kilborn and Frank Tanner. Auditors, C. S. Windsor and F. Tanner It was unanimously resolved to raise the clergyman's stipend by $100. After hearty votes of thanks had been accorded the Wardes and Mrs. J. Downing the organist and also Mrs. C. S. Windsor for highly efficient services.

The meeting adjourned until Monday next.

Ratepayers Meet

A meeting of ratepayers of the Apsley Consolidated school section was called by the Board of Trustees for Saturday, January 15, to submit the question of continuing or discontinuing the Consolidated school section. About sixty attended the meeting which was held in the Town Hall and presided over by Mr. R. H. Knox. The Rev. J. W. Ogden addressed the meeting, dealing with the operations of the Board during the past two or three months, and read correspondence that had passed between him and the Deputy Minister of Education regarding the legality of the present meeting which it appeared was not in accordance with the provisions of the Public School Act. Mr. Ogden concluded by declaring there would be no vote and left the hall taking with him the ballots which he destroyed.

The chairman then called for a vote on the question by a show of hands, which showed not a single vote in favor of continuing consolidation.

A local resident, Mr. Patrick B. Condon has had his house entered twice recently and a small sum of money, about $18 altogether, was stolen. MAIL MAN MAKES SPLENDID RECORD

Has Covered 33,669 Miles in Five Years, Using Only One Horse.

CAMPBELLFORD, Jan. 21. — Thirty-three thousand, six hundred and sixty-nine miles in the past five years, and still going strong, is the pround record Charles Cochrane and his little gray mare have hung up for others to shoot at.

Mr. Cochrane is the rural mail carrier on Route No. 4 from Campbellford post office. His contract puts the distance covered at 21½ miles, and he hasn't missed a day in his five years at the job. More than that, he uses only the one horse, and the little mare is as sound today as the day she was foaled, twelve years ago. Despite all her pounding over hard, dusty roads she has never had a sore foot or has she been sick a day. A good share of the credit for the mare's fine record goes to her driver, Mr. Cochrane, for the excellent care he has given her.

Mr. Cochrane's route takes him to Healy's Falls. That popular resort for American tourists is becoming more so each year, if one is to judge by a record Mr. Cochrane has kept for 1924, 1925, and 1926. In 1924 he delivered mail to 250 tourists. In 1925 the number of summer visitors had more than doubled itself or to be exact 525, and in 1926 the number classed as tourists or summer campers had exactly doubled the previous year's figures, 1,050 receiving mail over rural route No. 4 during the tourist season. That the number will increase the coming summer seems assured, but even the most optimistic proprietor of the numerous resorts at the Falls can hardly look for the number to double itself as has been the case the past three seasons.

When that chill wind blows from the east or the thermometer is hovering around 30 degrees below zero, there are plenty of people who say "I wouldn't want the mail carrier's job," but they need have no regrets for Mr. Cochrane. He is satisfied with his job, and with the weather and what is most important, the people served with mail on Mr. Cochrane's route are entirely satisfied with the service he has given them.

CANADA AND TITLES.

Mr. Ferguson's statement at the Cockshutt banquet in regard to titles has caused quite a flurry of argument—it is not likely, however, to have any other result.

They see no particular benefit to this country in a crop of betitled personages.

If the honours were only conferred upon those who had earned them by outstanding public service most people would not particularly object to them, even if they were unable to regard them as of much general value.

But the system by which they were granted on the recommendation of the head of the Government was too obvious an opening for the rewarding of political services, and any attempt now to restore titles, even on a restricted basis, would be regarded as likely to prove the thin edge of the wedge.

THE INCOME TAX.

While on deputation waited upon Premier Ferguson to protest against the proposed increase in the exemption allowed under the Municipal Income Tax Act, another arrived a day or two after at Queen's Park to urge that the municipal income tax be abolished completely.

Increased exemptions from the tax were part of the Government's campaign programme, and the Premier is not likely to fail to implement the promises made in this regard, despite the Ontario Municipal Association.

Assessment officials will not approve, but the public generally is not keen about retaining the municipal income tax and will endorse the proposal to give relief from this form of levy.

In fact, in most urban communities the feeling that both municipal and Federal income taxes might well be abolished is increasing, and in many quarters there will be keen disappointment if Mr. Robb's next Budget Speech does not contain an announcement of further relief from the income tax, even although the Progressive allies of the Government are insistent that the tax be maintained.

BRINGING MORE TOURISTS.

Hon. Geo. S. Henry, Minister of Public Works, informed a deputation the other day that improved roads in the northern part of the Province were included in the immediate plans of the Provincial Government.

Many regions at present shut off from motor traffic will be thrown open when those improvements are completed, and the result will be an influx of tourists into these sections that will amaze most people by its extent.

The volume of tourist traffic depends upon two main factors.

A district must have scenic or other charms to commend it, and then it must be accessable.

Traffic follows good roads, and the programme foreshadowed by Hon. Mr. Henry will undoubtedly lead to a striking increase in the number of visitors coming into Ontario.

As every tourist means the putting of a substantial amount of money into circulation, it is evident that the expense of carrying out these improvements will eventually seem small in comparison with the ultimate financial benefits that will result.

Even without new roads in the North, there is every reason to believe that the number of visitors entering Ontario next summer will break all previous records.

A NATIONAL ORGANIZATION.

The announcement from Alberta of an effort on the part of the United Farmers of Alberta to bring about the formation of a national farmers' organization foreshadows a development that should cause no surprise.

How far the campaign will get is another matter, but the first steps have been taken by the United Farmers of Alberta in placing themselves on record as being prepared to amalgamate with any or all organizations of farmers that will adopt the principles of industrial group organization as the fundamental basis of industrial and political action.

It was decided that overtures should be made to organized farmers elsewhere in the Dominion inviting them to adopt the Alberta plan.

A national organization of this kind would unquestionably exert a powerful influence politically; whether or not it would be a good thing for Canada as a whole depends upon how this influence would be used.

If the power represented by such an alliance was devoted simply to furthering the interests of one class, regardless of how much harm might be done to others, its value in terms of the whole country would be open to question.

Canada's problems cannot be solved by class movements.

MacDONALD AND LAURIER.

An American journal foresees a heated dispute in Canada as to whether Sir John A. Macdonald or Sir Wilfrid Laurier was the greater statesman. There is no reason why there should be a heated dispute, or any dispute, nor is it necessary to arrive at any decision. To begin with, the two men were contemporaries only in a limited sense, and could hardly be described as rivals. Sir Wilfrid Laurier was born only three years before Sir John Macdonald entered public life. Sir Wilfrid Laurier took practically no part in pre-Confederation politics, in which Sir John Macdonald was a very conspicuous figure. Sir John was one of the Fathers of Confederation and had a large part in shaping the new Dominion at a time when Laurier was under thirty years of age.

Laurier entered the Federal arena in 1874, when Macdonald had already been thirty years in public life. Even after that, the two men came into conflict very little. Laurier was regarded for some years as a man of philosophic and poetic temperament with very little inclination for acrimonious controversy, and when he was made leader of the Liberal party in 1887 doubts were expressed as to whether he was hard enough metal for the battle. This doubt proved to be unjustified. The new leader turned out to be as firm and courageous as he was urbane. But the relations between him and the veteran were not marked by acrimony. Sir John died four years afterwards and Sir Wilfrid was rather his successor than his rival.

Sir Wilfrid's work was done in the main in a new era, and he had to deal with new questions. It is generally agreed that under his premiership Canada entered upon a new stage of progress. Population in the decade from 1901 to 1911 increased as much as in the three previous decades. Immigration and settlement of the West progressed at an unprecedented rate. The prairie region became one of the granaries of the world, and the two new Provinces of Alberta and Saskatchewan were created. Manufacturing industry also made wonderful progress.

One may dwell upon the achievements of the younger statesman without belitting those of his predecessor. The keynote of Sir Wilfrid's career was national unity based upon good-will, and it would be ungenerous to deny that Sir John was moved by similar sentiments. Both were constructive statesmen. Conservatives adored the one and Liberals the other, and naturally party preference would influence judgment in both cases. It is not necessary to quarrel over their merits, or to endeavor to strike a balance between the two.—London Advertiser.

CANADA'S UNIQUE POSITION.

In one of his speeches in Canada Premier Bruce of Australia said that a very large proportion of the people of that country—all but a small fraction, as we remember—are of British birth or descent. In that respect Canada is in a very different position. The racial origins of the people of Canada, according to the census of 1921, were as follows: English, 28.06 per cent.; Irish, 12.61; Scottish, 13.35; French, 27.91; the percentages of others being very small. The total of those tracing their descent from countries other than the British Islands is considerable, but no single country is credited with much more than three and a third per cent.

It is not certain that this mixture of races is a disadvantage. It compels our statesmen and our people at large to take a broad outlook. They have had to consider the problem of maintaining good relations between those of British and French descent, and also the problem of training those coming from other countries in citizenship. Another feature of our situation is our neighborhood with the United States, which places us in a position unique in the British Empire. Nowhere else in the Empire or in the world is there seen the spectacle of two countries of vast extent under separate governments, inhabited by people speaking mainly the same language, and to a large extent of the same racial origin. Nowhere else is there an unguarded frontier thousands of miles long.

This proximity also has advantages far outweighing its drawbacks. It is true that we hear a good deal about the danger of Americanization of Canada. There is and can be no customs barrier against the exchange of customs and ideas, desirable or otherwise. As to this we must exercise our own judgment, accepting the good and rejecting the bad, safeguarding ourselves by cultivating a strong Canadian sentiment and encouraging Canadian originality.

But even those who dwell upon the drawbacks of proximity to the United States would hardly exchange our position for that of a country on the European continent with neighbors regarded as potential enemies. Canada is so situated as to receive also many influences from Great Britain. It is one of the highways between Great Britain and Australia, and to this we are indebted for the visits of Premier Bruce and Premier Coates. In short, we have here an abundance of material for education in statesmanship and citizenship, and if there is anything narrow and parochial in our outlook it cannot be ascribed to our position. It must be due to perversity and obstinate refusal to recognise facts. Burke said that a great empire and little minds go all together. Perhaps narrowness of mind, where it exists, is due not so much to defective understanding as to perversity—a fault which is sometimes found in persons of acute understanding and education intended to liberalise the mind.—London Advertiser.

EDITORIAL NOTES AND COMMENT.

Hon. William Duff has helped to give a knock to the old proverb, "They can't come back."

The unfortunate part about the Catalina race is the publicity crowded upon William Wrigley, Jr. That sort of thing must be painful to the chewing gum king.

If Premier Ferguson acts upon all the advice he is receiving from deputations these days, the coming session of the Legislature will undoubtedly prove a record-breaker.

It has not yet been announced as to whether or not the movie rights to the Judge Landis-Ban Johnson fight have been allocated.

The Montreal mother who took her child, rescued from the Laurier Palace fire and left her for two hours in another moving picture theatre, must be a keen student of the law of averages.

Mr. Ferguson must have had his "strong man" in mind when he advocated a restoration of titles in Canada.

TORONTO LIVESTOCK.

TORONTO, Jan. 21.—Only a single car of mixed stock arrived for yesterday's market at the Union Stock Yards. This small offering consisted of six cattle, five calves, 48 hogs, and five sheep.

The market was practically cleaned up of the entire mid-week offering at the close of Wednesday's market. Even the rough heavy half-finished steers left over from Monday and Tuesday, found a berth, through at lower prices than for the more desirable handyweight but well finished butcher steers and heifers.

Exporters shipping to seaboard this week 440 cattle. A few choice steers $7.50 to $7.60. Next week about 600 steers will be required for export.

Choice butcher steers and heifers steady at $6.75 to $7.25. Good heavyweight beef steers, $7.25 to $7.50. Choice fat cows, $5 to $5.50.

MONTREAL GRAIN AND

MONTREAL, Que., Jan. 21 (Canadian Press)—The export trade in grain on the Montreal market yesterday was rather more active. There was an increased demand from both the United Kingdom and the continent and a large volume of business was worked in Manitoba spring wheat and Canadian Western barley for shipment now and the middle of next month.

There was no improvemnt in the local market for cash grain, the demand being still somewhat limited, but the undertone was firm and prices showed no change.

Owing to the continued strength in the Winnipeg cash wheat situation, a stronger feeling developed in the local market for spring wheat grades of flour and prices were marked up ten cents per barrel. Th export trade was fair, but the local and country demand was quiet.

The undertone to the winter wheat flour market was steady with a small trade passing.

A good trade was done in all lines of millfeed and prices were unchanged. The demand for standard grades of rolled oats was limited but prices ruled steady.

A fair amount of business was done in eggs at firm prices. The receipts were 740 cases.

A weaker feeling developed in the market for potatoes and prices were reduced five to ten cents per bag. Sales of Prince Edward Island Green Mountains were made at $1.80 per bag of ninety pounds, and Quebec white stock at $1.40 per bag of ninety pounds in bulk, ex-track.

The butter market was slightly more active and values were steady. The receipts were 23 packages.

Prices for all grades of cheese were well maintained under a quiet demand. The receipts were 120 boxes.

CHICAGO GRAIN

CHICAGO, Jan. 21 (Canadian Press) — Export buying of North American wheat estimated to aggregate 1,000,000 bushels helped to lift wheat values yesterday despite a weak start. The export business included some durum wheat from the United tSates at the topmost prices yet this season. Closing quotations on wheat were firm, 3-8 to 3-4 net higher, with corn unchanged to 3-8c off, oats at 1-8 to 1-4 to 3-8 advance and provisions varying from 5c decline to 10c gain.

Corn failed to rally with wheat. Sales of corn to arrive from the country were larger. Oats followed wheat rather than corn.

Provisions were responsive to the late firmness of grain.

WORDS THAT ARE MISUSED

In the "Handbook for Newspaper Workers," by Professor G. M. Hyde, there is a useful list of "Nouns that Are Commonly Misused." From it the following examples are taken:

"Anthracite coal." The word "coal" is not necessary, as "anthracite" means hard coal."

"Autoist or automobilist." Prefer "motorist."

"Banquet"—except when occasion warrants; not for all dinners.

"Better half." Trite for "wife."

"Capitol"—unless you mean a building; a city is a "capital."

"Casket"—the better word is "coffin."

"Conflagration"—for "fire," unless the extent of the fire warrants.

"Individual"—when you mean simply "person."

"Name of"—write, "a man named Smith, not "a man by the name of Smith."

THE EMPIRE.

To the Editor of The Examiner:

Sir:

A number of our good Canadian people seem to be unable to grasp the new idea of empire. They seem to think that the mother country has deserted them. They want still to run and get under the old mother's wing at dusk. But we must remember that a time comes when even chickens must grow up and that if the brood will not go out and assume the responsibilties of grown-up hood the old birds shove them out and make them go. The gap from babyhood to manhood is thus bridged. It is so with us. The old colonial system had become a burden to the Mother country. Something had to be done. Great Britain called the conference and took the leadership of it with Earl Balfour in the chair. The British government opposed the now famous report establishing an empire unit out of a mere loosely related lot of colonies. The King named the new empire, Lord Balfour wrote the charter of it. Now then what is the matter? Are we going to chide the King, the British government and the British press with disloyalty or are we going to take the very broad hint the Mother Country has given us, either to accept the duties of empire or to quit talking about being such wonders.

Is it possible that the lesson of the war is to be lost on these dear people? For the first time in history at the call to arms the "Colonies" did their own fighting and paid their own shot. What a glorious time they had in London as they embraced each other at the end of the war.

We were no longer beggars. We had paid our own way. This then was the supreme moment to perpetuate those grown-up and fully responsible condition of the "colonies". They are invited by Great Britain to a conference to do just as they did in the loan, viz: To do their own work and pay their own way and to do it themselves without saddling the burden, as formerly, on the Mother country. By great good fortune under the inspiration of the moment the wishes of all concerned met just as they did in 1914 and became crystalized in to what the King has called "The British Commonwealth of Nations." It is possible that there are those who cannot grasp the idea?

HOW TO INCREASE THE CIRCULATION

Those who are well, breathe enough at each inspiration to last them until the next breath, and, therefore, have a pulse perfectly regular; whereas, those who are ailing in any way show it by a pulse rapid or irregular. Thus the air, the moment it strikes their lungs, creates a strong, quick pulse, while the next pulse is slower and slower and the third still feebler and longer. The longer the breath is held, the slower and feebler the pulsations become in every person, sick or well. Just try it and notice the dimunition of the pulse, until a complete full breath is taken.

If the blood has become thickened with the waste products of the system, the circulation will be sluggish. In that case, it is a good plan to cleanse the blood by fasting and dieting.

Regular systematic physical culture exercises are invaluable for increasing the circulation of the blood, as the relaxation and contraction of the muscular tissues at regular intervals develops the muscular tone of the blood vessels, so that they can carry the blood more easily.

Regulated breathing exercises are probably the best means for bringing about a freer circulation in all parts of the body, and at the same time purifying the blood stream, which will circulate more freely when thus purified.

A poor circulation below the waist is often caused by tight corsets, belts or garters. Tight neck-bands will cause the slowing up of the circulation in the neck and face and will produce a puffy face and double chin. Likewise, tight hat-bands cut off the circulation to and from the scalp, and constitutes a common cause of baldness.

You cannot expect your sluggish circulation to increase, if you sit around and wait for it. Those who work at sedentary occupations will always have a poor circulation, if vigorous exercise is not taken at some time during the day.

Obesity is caused to a large extent by a sluggish circulation, and the encumbrances of fat accumulate wherever the circulation is most defective. The fat which forms on the abdomen is dependent there more than any other place, because the abdominal muscles are not used. Heavy buttocks and thighs could not develop, if the muscles covering these places were exercised enough.

Wrinkles grow because of regular creases being formed by the skin folding in a certain way and thereby shutting off the blood supply. A good way to erase these wrinkles after they have formed, is to rub them lengthwise with a clean tooth brush which has been dipped in almond oil. This will stimulate the circulation in the wrinkles and they will soon disappear.

For all kinds of defective circulation, both of the blood stream and the lymphatic system, it is a good plan to take long walks each day. This increases the heart action and also induces more rapid breathing, which is so necessary for oxygenizing the blood.

If you feel sluggish and wish to increase the circulation of the fluids of your body; you must take deep breathing exercises and increase your physical culture exercise, until your rich, red blood is sent bounding to every cell of your body.

SAVE THE CHILDREN

By Dr. Frank Crane.

No two children since the world began have been just alike.

He grows up into a different sort of man or woman from any that has ever lived on the earth before.

When a child is killed a combination of characteristics is lost without having had a chance to demonstrate itself.

The few great men the world has had have been great because of rare combinations of character.

A nation that saves the lives of its children produces more combinations and has a greater chance of containing a great man.

One of the really important forms of progress made in the last fifty years is the development in saving the lives of children.

Several things have contributed to this progress.

Popular education in hygiene, replacing superstitions and fish-wives' tales, have increased the chances of a child's living over those of a century ago.

The better understanding of diet, both for grown-up folk and for children, has been another influence.

The microscope, bringing an understanding of bacteria and how to sterilize foods and to protect against disease, has saved millions of infant lives.

In New York City last summer a number of new playgrounds was provided for the children of that city by public subscription.

A recent report from the Community Councils quotes figures from the Police Department, which show that almost fifty per cent fewer children were killed in street accidents in July of this year than in the same month of last year.

The drop is attributed to the new playgrounds provided by public spirited citizens.

On these playgrounds nearly one hundred thousand children played in safety. They otherwise would have been in the streets.

Increasing efforts to save the children is a sign of health in modern society.

GAS EXPLOSION WRECKS HOUSE

OWNER INJURED.

HAMILTON, Jan. 21.—A pocket of illuminating gas which exploded and almost immediately ignited destroyed the home and village post office of Charles Keys at Ryckman's Corners, yesterday morning. Mr. Keys was trapped in the cellar and badly burned. He was removed to St. Joseph's Hospital. Mrs. Keys and a son, named Walter, were both hurled forty to fifty feet by the force of the explosion, but escaped serious injury. Miss Clara Keys, a daughter, was compelled to jump from the wreckage of her bedroom on what had been the second story of the building.

Shortly after 5 o'clock in the morning a strong odor of natural gas was detected by Walter Keys. He awakened his father, who descended to the cellar to investigate. The elder Keys did not commit the folly of lighting a match, he declares, as there were electric lights in the cellar and he turned on the switch. A moment later there was a deafening explosion, caused, it is thought, by the escaping gas from the cellar ascending to the kitchen and there ignited when it came in contact with a coal stove.

The violent explosion rocked the house and a great part of it bulged outward and then collapsed. The place was a mass of flames. Mr. Keys was burned about the head, face and hands before he succeeded in escaping from the building. Mrs. Keys was hurled into the back yard and Walter, their son, out to the roadway, by the force of the explosion. While the fire, which broke out was an intense one for almost an hour, the building and contents had been wrecked first by the explosion. A piano was turned upside down by the shock, and one entire end of the house was blown out. The damage is estimated at $5,000.

A leak from a gas pipe conducting to the cellar of Mr. Keyes' home caused the explosion and fire, it is stated. Neighbors who attempted to extinguish the fire said that a flow of gas still burned under the pile of debris in the cellar.

Michael Kosmoski Goes To Chair Protesting His Innocence.

OSSINING, N.Y., Jan. 21. — (United Press).—Michael Kosmoski, one-legged murderer from Buffalo, died last night in the electric chair at Sing-Sing Prison. He had been convicted of killing Miss Mildred Durkee in a wild automobile ride, shooting his companion while driving the machine at a mad pace with one hand.

Before leaving the death-house, Kosmoski's wooden leg was removed and attendants carried him to the death chair. The cathode, which usually fits on the right ankle, was switched to the other side.

Kosmoski maintained his innocence.

Don't Tell the Wife

BY WILLIAM B. COURTNEY

SYNOPSIS

Ranny Forbes, star polo player, and his beautiful wife, Joan, are temperamental mismates. Joan want a divorce. Ranny hesitates, loving her, although secretly knowing she loves Abner Gratman. Lacking proof that Joan is faithless he plans to trap her and Abner while they are all on a week-end cruise on the yacht of Stivner, a billionaire lumber king. Complications multiply. Joan, jealous when Ranny flirts with Clare, a widow, encourages Abner's advances. Stivner, loving Clare, resents Ranny's interest. Ranny is trying to arrange a business deal with Stivner. Swimming off the yacht, Clare's suit shocks the crowd; her brazen flirting with Ranny promises scandal.

CHAPTER IX.

Night had tucked a sable shroud over the uneasy seaway. A blue-black gauze, pinned to the top of the universe by stars, arched tautly overhead, its ends lost in the dark voids of the horizon.

The wind had freshened and wisps of clouds scudded in low from the East, telltale forerunners of stormy legions to come.

Long Island Sound, in its Atlantic extremity, is black of nights—almighty black. Lighthouses are few and far between, and the gap from the Connecticut shore to the sandy strands of the Island is so broad that even the customarily heavy shipping does not give a crowded aspect to the nocturnal passages and cannot overcome the impression of lonesomeness and immensity.

Calm, though the night be otherwise, and smooth the seas elsewhere, the confluence of many currents off Point Judith lends turbulence always to the waters there and spreads its choppy effect in a radius of many miles.

The Speedwell, slicing silently along under full headway again, was beginning to feel the influence of the boistercus Cape.

She loved Abner—body and soul.

Sometime after midnight the big yacht would veer south and slip out to the open sea, between towering Montauk light on the starboard and lonely Block Island far to port. That was the sailing plan.

Braced on the bridge against the increasing roll, Captain Marty cocked a weatherwise Maine eye upon the bespangled heavens, sniffed the message of the salty wind and 'lowed to the mate that "it's goin' to blow up a bit thick."

"Small difference to that bunch, blow high, blow low," grinned the mate. "Two hours more, the way they're steamin' up now, and they won't know whether we're comin' or goin' or whether we're in Davy Jones' locker. Well, if it kicks up too smart we kin stay offshore an' ride it out. Do that crowd good to get shaken up a bit!"

Captain Marty glanced aft and grunted.

Rumbles and clack of dinner revelry came from the brilliantly illuminated lounge deck, which was closed now at the sides by sliding glass partitions that had been noiselessly adjusted by the moon-faced steward to shield delicate, bare shoulders from the chilly night air.

Livingstone Stivner and his guests had dressed formally for dinner. The Speedwell was that kind of a yacht.

It was a resplendent scene. By the wizardry of the suave steward and his efficient assistants, coupled with the ingenious mechanisms of the luxurious fittings, the lounge had been converted for all intents and purposes into a palatial secondary dining room.

In mild summer temperature the Speedwell's lounge often served this dual role while unclosed to the air, but for just such occasions as this, when there was a bit too much zest in the breeze, it could be virtually enclosed like a huge conservatory.

It was merely to humor a very rich man's idea of a lark and not because of any lack of a dining room proper that the lounge was sometimes so used. The real dining room, one deck below, with its walnut panelled walls and open fireplace and gorgeous tapestries and genuine antique Italian renaissance furniture, was known as the finest dining room afloat in the world. It had cost Livingstone Stivner many hundreds of thousands of dollars, that dining room—the income from many acres and many deals.

Tonight it had contributed only its silver service, the sheen of its crystal and glass, and the immaculacy of its napery to the dinner. These, with the flowers and potted plants indigenous to that lounge deck, formed a colorful background for the glittering evening gowns and the bared shoulder, back and bosom flesh of the women, and for the Tuxedo dress of the men.

It formed, too, a fitting social battleground for the tournament of jealousies, the eye and wit jousts of the host and four of his guests, and for the delighted scandal mongering through the medium of furtive nudges and covert whispers of the remainder of that smartest of smart society parties.

Abner Gratman was counting the dragging hours until these communal gatherings would be over for that night and the week-enders would be asleep in their respective cabins.

Then he could go about the spicy business of his tryst with Joan.

Joan, with her mature beauty and marble skin, as proud and defiantly calm as Clare was restless and brazen under the ever watchful eyes that table round, felt herself treading on the edge of an uncertain abyss.

Given as much to quick tears as to swift rages, Joan silently fought within herself the question of whether to melt into weeping or to indulge a tantrum vicarously by surrendering herself without constraint or reservation to the consuming impulse of the hour—the surcease to her heart promised in Abner's long beckoning arms.

Joan was quite sure of her own mind. She loved Abner. Body and soul she desired him.

But it was provoking to see her husband, even though she did not love HIM any more, passing wholly and shamelessly into the wily toils of an adventuress. It was one thing for Joan to fall in love, extramaritally, herself, but to have the humiliation of seeing Ranny race her publicly, neck and neck—or rather, necker and necker—along the primrose path of dalliance, aroused at least a point of pride.

It was not that she cared. Joan avowed to herself, but it would have been so much more decent if the thing had been done with clean hands—if Ranny had gotten a divorce and given her the freedom she needed to consummate her new love without deception.

One thing she had always admired about Ranny was his consistent disinterestedness in women since their marriage, even after their quarrels had attained the status of utter and unbridgeable incompatability. Much as Joan had wanted the divorce she secretly admired the innate fineness which had kept Ranny from illicit liasions.

Now, suddenly, in one fell swoop, Ranny had apparently cast aside all his inhibitions and reverted to crude and unrefined first principles.

But there were compensations in being disillusioned, Joan felt, for over and above her hurt pride she grew conscious of a sense of being unshackled.

Heretofore Ranny's exemplary loyalty to their marriage vows, added to her own spirit about such things, had kept her from cheating. Now, divorce or no divorce, she considered that Ranny's patent desertion of his ideals, his lapse from their joint loyalties, unfettered her own actions.

Joan, too, therefore began to count the hours until she could be alone with Abner after quietude had descended upon the yacht and upon all its passengers except these two whose hearts beat for each other alone.

Joan bent upon Abner a glance as affectionate and caressing as those she had been casting at Ranny and Clare were icy.

Clare meanwhile was continuing her desperate play for Ranny.

When the seating arrangement placed her next to Stivner she had arbitrarily usurped the place of another guest next to Ranny and refused to surrender it. There could be no denying favors to that sweet baby voice, that wistfully pleading smile, both of which could assume an adamant underground of finality. Etiquette to the four winds, she had carried her point!

Livingstone Stivner and the dispossessed guest made the graceful best of the situation, and there was much bantering.

So it came that Ranny had the ravishing aroma of golden hair brushing close to his nostrils and clinging little fingers constantly touching his arm during dinner.

But Clare had begun to pall on Ranny!

Gospel According To Joseph Discovered, Claims Italian But Theological Schol ars Want To See Manuscript

ROME, Jan. 21.—Theological scholars here express interest in the claim of a certain Signor Moccia, living in Cerignola, a small city near Foggia, that he has discovered a copy of the Gospel according to Joseph, a disciple of Christ, which was known to exist in early Christian times. They are skeptical, however, until they see the parchment and learn where Moccia got it.

"I must see it before uttering an opinion," said the Vatican librarian "The latest discovery of this kind was made two and a half years ago, when Professor Boyer Dagen, the French savant, found in the Vatican a letter written by Pontius Pilate to Emperor Tiberius, stating a Jewish Messiah had arrived, restoring the blind, healing the sick and raising the dead. Pilate gives a succinct description of Christ's activities, fully bearing out the Gospels, even to the Resurrection, which Pilate says the Jews tried to cover by bribing the Roman guards to say the disciples stole the body. Tertullian knew of this letter, but it was unknown in the original until a couple of years back. There is no reason why the Fifth Gospel should not be buried amidst the wealth of manuscripts yet unedited in the Vatican library."

LEIS ON DISPLAY

WAILUKU, Maui.—Probably one of the most interesting exhibits ever seen at an American fair will be the Hawaiian leis displayed when the island of Maui holds its annual exposition. The leis, or floral neckpiece is used by residents of the Hawaiian islands to decorate arriving or departing friends. Prizes will be given for neck-sized lei made by individuals: hat-sized made by school children and leis made from red, yellow, blue, orange, pink or white flowers, with or without greens.

MUCH BUILDING IN COMING YEAR

Germany Now Seems to be Entering Era of Solid Prosperity.

STEEL WORKS BUSY

(By O. D. TOLISCHUS, Universal Service Staff Correspondent. Special Cable Dispatch.)

BERLIN, Jan. 21.—This year promises to become a big building year in Germany.

Following the crisis of 1925, and the recuperation in 1926, Germany is seen entering a period of "solid prosperity," in which she will be secure for some time, according to predictions, and which is likely to be enhanced by what is considered here the "amends" of her former enemies expressed in the return of confiscated properties and the lifting of numerous trade barriers.

The paradox of this prosperity is the rapid growth of the army of unemployed, which added 275,000 during the last half of December and which brings the total number of dole recipients to 1,745,000.

But Germany is finding it cheaper to pay out unemployment doles at the rate of $1,000,000 a day to keep those employed working intensively full time than to clutter up industry with half the idle workers for whom no actual work exists, as was done right after the war.

As a result of the ruthless rationalization process, individual concerns are doing well. That steel industry is working 100 per cent.; Krupps announced the December steel production as the biggest in their history.

But returning prosperity reveals that, due to the war, revolution and currency upheavals, Germany is far behind in the general equipment necessary for a modern nation, especially in respect to housing, auto roads, municipal transportation, gas, electric supplies, etc., and ambitious programs calling for expenditures of many hundreds of millions by both municipalities and private individuals also for this year are slated.

The building industry is facilitated by the gradual abolition of socialistic experiments, which practically confiscated house owners' incomes, by the return of normal interest rates and by the rapid accumulation of capital, making mortgages popular again.

The Reichsbank has just cut its discount to 5 per cent., compared with 9 per cent. a year ago. This lessens the inducement for capital to come to Germany, which is in line with the policy of the Reichsbank President, Schacht. For this, Germany bankers are bitterly fighting him.

The general assumption is prevalent, especially in commercial circles, that prosperity will continue. A faction led by Peter Kloechner expresses pronounced pessimism, but he is charged with merely strategising to discourage workers from expecting wage increases in view of the increasing prosperity.

AT THE GRAND.

FAMOUS MILLION - DOLLAR PRODUCTION 'BEAU GESTE' SECURED FOR GRAND OPERA HOUSE, JAN. 28TH AND 29TH.

An event that Peterboro theatregoers have long awaited, the coming of "Beau Geste", Paramount's famous million-dollar production, is announced for January 28th and 29th at the Grand Opera House.

There will be one performance Friday at 8.30 and two performances Saturday, 2.30 and 8.30.

The French Foreign Legion, the endless, gorgeous, giant sand dunes of the Sahara, a famous missing sapphire, hundreds of desert warriors sweeping on horseback to attack a lonely fort manned by 40 men, practically all in mutiny. There you have just a glimpse of the romance and thrills contained in "Beau Geste".

No greater effort was ever put into the making of a motion picture This romantic, thrilling screen mystery story, adapted from Percival C. Wren's world's famous book, represents a larger undertaking than even the Ten Commandments, which was also produced by Paramount.

Ronald Colman, Alice Joyce, Noah Beery, Mary Brian, Neil Hamilton, William Powell, Norman Trevor, Victor McLaglan and Ralph Forbes are featured, but there are scores of others nearly as prominent.

"Beau Geste" is a mystery story of the Foreign Legion on the deserts of Africa that will tighten your very skin with excitement. It tells of three young Englishmen who disappear from home after a famous sapphire, the "Blue-Water" belonging to their aunt, is stolen. All this leads to a remote fort on the Sahara and the ever feared attack of an Arab host. The magnificent broad sweep of this drama of the Foreign Legion has never before been surpasesd, nor has there ever been a finer theme more masterfully executed, than that of the devotion of three young brothers, and their smiling, unflinching sacrifice for each other.

The ambition of every motion picture director's life, the casting of a motion picture in exactly the way he wished, was realized by Herbert Brenon in filling the many roles of this great production.

"Beau Geste" opens at the Grand Opera House Friday, Jan. 28th, and is accompanied by their own orchestra and special musical score by Dr. Hugo Reisenfeld as presented at the Criterion Theatre, New York City. All seats are reserved and will be on sale Wednesday, Jan. 26th.

AT THE CAPITOL.

"WE'RE IN THE NAVY NOW"

Wallace Beery and Raymond Hatton, the two gentlemen who afforded so much amusement for their audiences in the picture entitled "Behind the Front," are once more prominent in the roles of "Whiffer Hanson" and "Shrimp Dolan," in the week-end feature at the Capitol Theatre "We're in the Navy Now." They make their bow as a prize-fighter and his manager, the big bohunk that Wallace Beery impersonates in this picture having a brief session in the ring with "Homicide Harrigan," who knocks him out at the beginning of the first round. Dolan, the manager absconds with the money, and Whiffer's efforts to apprehend him lead them both into the clutches of navy recruiters. In bewildered fashion, they fall foul of the various departments that govern entrance to the ranks of the blue-clad sailor boys, and finally find themselves on board a man o' war sailing for France. They have a wild time with the scrub bing gang and with a visiting Admiral, mixing things up generally at every possible moment. Then they fall victims to the charms of a lady spy, or rather a lady who impersonates a spy, and find themselves later in an open boat on the raging sea, after the lady has stepped onto the upper deck of a submarine and vanished beneath the waves. Their rescue is one of the hilarious moments of the production and their final meeting with the captain of their own ship, who is really their erstwhile friend, "Homicide Harrigan," also has its thrills. They foil the plot of a spy who wishes to dynamite their ship, and have the honor grabbed from them by their tormentor, but "Whiffer" does himself proud when he unwittingly fires the gun that causes the surrender of an enemy ship. The ending, like the beginning, is full of laughs, with the entire navy, just disbanded by the Admiral, running wild after the two gobs.

The comedy is a rapid-fire affair and there is an amusing section of "Bill Grimm's Progress."—Jeanette.

BETHANY PASTOR REPORTS ON WORK

Progress in Every Department Noted at Annual Meeting.

At the Bethany Tabernacle annual meeting held last week the reports from all departments of the work were quite satisfactory, showing an advance in every part.

The pastor's report following shows, in detail, the work accomplished:

"Ye have not chosen Me, but I have chosen you, that ye should go and bring forth fruit, and that your fruit should remain: that whatsoever ye shall ask the Father in My name He may give it you:"—John 15 : 16. "But we will give ourselves continually to prayer, and to the ministry of the word."—Acts 6 : 4.

We are permitted, in the kindness of the Lord, to gather again as a church (a body of believers) to transact the business of another year, to elect spirit-filled men and women to the offices of leadership in this church—and to consecrate ourselves afresh to the work of the Lord as He is carrying it on in Bethany Tabernacle of the Christian and Missionary Alliance of Peterboro'.

Bethany has stood for years in this prominent place in this city, and has always stood for the truth of the Scripture and God has honored it in a singular way. Fourteen have gone from Bethany to carry the banner of truth to nine foreign mission fields in Africa, Japan, India, China, Palestine, South America, etc. Two have answered the call of the Lord to become pastors. At present, six are studying in Bible schools to prepare for the Lord's service, and a great number are scattered far and wide in United States and Canada who look back with choicest memories to the blessings received in Bethany.

The spirit of the founder of the Alliance, Rev. A. B. Simpson, was stamped on this work at its beginning under Dr. Zimmerman's spirit-filled and fruitful ministry at the time of the building of this building. Dr. Simpson had received marvelous revelation of God's love and Grace. His teaching was always free from harshness and censoriousness, and was remarkable for its balance of truth, and for the absence of strained interpretations and extreme views that have always tended to divide Christians. Many were drawn to Bethany and it became the spiritual centre of Peterboro'. For the past few years there have been many evidences of the Lord's blessings and we earnestly pray that we shall again become the spiritual centre in this community.

The preaching of Christ as the pre-eminent One will bring together people of various doctrinal beliefs, will create a charity among them through a vision of Christ and His fullness, and then will follow, naturally, the fulfilling of Christ's plan and program. The exaltation of the Lord Jesus Christ as, the centre of all our teaching and worship should result in a church consecrated to faith and prayer, to love and sacrifice. All agree that we are living in days of crisis in the history of the church and of the world. We are in the time of transition and, it would seem, in the overlapping of the ages, new and peculiar conditions are developing so rapidly in the political and religious world that those who are looking forward to His coming are, indeed, beginning to lift up their heads for their redemption draweth nigh. May we be like "the children of Isochar which were men who had understanding of the times to know what Israel ought to do." Surely we must strive to stand firm in our belief in the inspiration and full authority of the Scriptures both Old and New Testaments. The fundamental doctrines are being assailed, its enemies are growing ever in numbers and boldness and in their defiance to God and the church.

All signs indicate that the age is drawing near its close. However, we should not only defend the truth, and hold it as a doctrine, but we should preach it also as a living message from God to the hearts of men, and we should be diligent to live it, as an example and rebuke to the lightness of Christian living in our day.

The work of the pastor has been a continual joy and blessing to him, there has been some disappointing things, but the times of blessing have helped to lift him above the discouraging things. As far as I am aware, there is unity and harmony prevailing. The attendance is the regular services has shown a slight increase. Seventy-six knelt at our altar this year, some for salvation, and others for deeper life. On October 3, eight were received into our fellowship. The pastor has made two hundred and twenty calls and preached one hundred and fifty times during the year. The church prayer meeting is not as well attended as we would like to see, but believe it will steadily increase this year. The source of our blessing is in the prayer meeting, and the measure of it is in the number of our people who attend and unite their petitions with all the saints for His blessing.

The cottage prayer meeting, under the leadership of our brother, George Stenton, has been singularly owned and blessed of God. As high as fifty-five have been present in the cottage meetings. Believers have been helped and unbelievers saved.

The men's prayer meeting, held every Saturday evening at eight, has been used of God to cement our brethren together, and its power has been felt in all our services. We would urge that those men who do not attend this meeting to come a few evenings, and you will be loathe to miss them after.

Special Meetings.

On May 23, after several disappointments, four students from the Canadian Bible Institute of Toronto visited us under the direction of Mr. T. Watson. Their services were owned and blessed of the Lord, forty knelt at the altar at the evening service, after an inspiring message from Mr. Gordon Wishart.

On June 7-13, Rev. D. N. Cameron, of Bedford Park Baptist Church, Toronto, held a series of meetings which were helpful to our people.

On October 4-17, Rev. D. J. Davies, of Huntington, Pa., gave us a series of special meetings. The attendance was not what we anticipated, but I believe there was a general uplift in our work, and the Lord gave us two choice young people.

Missionary convention was held April 5-11, Rev. D. N. Cameron was the principle speaker, bringing splendid messages from the Word. Rev. E. C. Jago, the honored veteran missionary to Palestine, was the missionary speaker and his message contributed the greatest to the services of the convention. The missionary pledge was $864.50. Of this amount, 64 per cent has been paid in up to this reading. In all the special meetings, the Lord blessed us financially, and every need incurred was fully met.

Other speakers during the year were Dr. Ralph Hooper, Dean of the Canadian Bible Institute of Toronto; Rev. Walton, of the Bible Society, and Mr. Ralph Emery, graduate of C. B. I., who took charge during the pastor's absence in evangelistic meetings in Detroit, July 12-August 8. Brothers Stenton, Miller and Milroy also ministered acceptably during the absence of the pastor.

Outside Work.

Many have been the meetings, and with very marked blessing, that were held by workers from Bethany this past year. In February a Sunday school was opened by the young people on Orpington road. Mr. Johns has had charge of it until just recently. The average attendance has been, for the year, sixty. A consecrated band of young people from Bethany are teaching the six classes. We are praying that the Lord will raise up a leader to take charge. South Lake work was given services regularly every two weeks until the bad weather. In June, Mr. Milroy held a two weeks' meeting with real blessing, and a number were saved. They are a hungry people, and recent word has come that Mr. Davis, one of those saved during Brother Milroy's meetings, is beginning a weekly prayer meeting. July 19-25, Dr. Hooper, with Mr. Emery, assisted by Mrs. Beamish, Mr. Milroy and Mr. Miller, held a week of meetings in Lindsay. Great crowds listened to the Gospel on the streets and in the park. September 8, we began cottage meetings in that part of Lindsay known as Pumpkin Hollow. The meetings have been blessed of the Lord, and a number of interested people have been gathered together. Three have been saved. The average attendance has been nineteen. Pray for our work in Lindsay.

Besides this, our workers were quite active in work in and around Peterboro'. Over sixty meetings were held in the Indian camps, villages, and towns, on the streets, and in schoolhouses and halls. About three thousand Gospel tracts were distributed at the meetings, and calls on the road to and from the places of meetings, a number were saved. Brother Stenton, with workers from Bethany, did a very profitable work this summer. He held five conventions for Brother Wicks. I wish to urge that prayerful steps be taken by Bethany to provide a Gospel truck for the coming summer's work, the need is so great.

King's Messengers.

In the summer, volunteers organized a band of "King's messengers." Their task was to distribute the Gospel tracts Sunday morning, and at other times. This was faithfully done during the summer—but was discontinued at coming of bad weather. But four of our young men will take up this work again Sunday morning. There have been eight thousand tracts distributed in this way. Every house in Peterboro' has been visited at least once. This is a great work and we recommend it to the prayers of all our people.

The Sunday school has been on the upgrade during this year under the leadership of Mr. Bolam. In July, a change was made in the classes, which has been a decided improvement. The Sunday school has sent, in the past year, $125.00 to the Alliance Missionary Board and $25.00 to the Russian Missionary Society.

The Young People's Society has had a very prosperous year under the splendid leadership of Mrs. E. V. Warne. In February, they assumed the teaching of the Orpington Road Sunday School. Their home and hospital visitation work has been a great help to many, as well as to the young people. A splendid tract work has been done through the young people. At present, the young people are studying a personal worker's course under the direction of the pastor. Everyone is invited to this class.

One of the best meetings we have is our Friday evening children's meeting. Mrs. Hill took this off the pastor's hands the first of November and has done splendid work. As many as ninety-six boys and girls have been present at this meeting. They are taught songs, scripture verses, and are given a Bible talk, illustrated by lantern slides. Many mothers in and outside our church have expressed to the pastor their appreciation of the help and teaching their children have received in these Friday evening meetings.

In conclusion, bear this word:

Everywhere there is felt the need of a Heaven-born revival. Indifference and unbelief are becoming so marked and evident that there is danger of them affecting our own ranks. We are grateful that during the year there have been special seasons of refreshing—and more time has been devoted to prayer. The fact remains, however, that the church still waits for that gracious working and convincing power of the Holy Spirit which will give to all a profound sense of our utter helplessness and the need for the renewing, cleansing and filling of the blessed spirit of God. Revival or judgment is imperative. The loudest call that comes to the church from the Lord in the Glory is for humiliation and contrition on our part, and for such whole-hearted consecration and fervent prayer as will prepare the way and make room for a mighty outpouring of God's Spirit upon the church these last days.

Is it not possible that we may become contented with a small measure of success and be so at ease in Zion as to fail to hear the Lord's call in this hour? We can not substitute service, methods or organization for intercessory prayer, and hope to succeed. Everywhere people are hungry for the Bread of Life. There seems to be no room for question, however, that before we can properly give "them to eat" there must first come to the church showers of blessing from on High. Prayer and prayer alone will make all this possible. The Lord would say to us, as He said to Joshua of old, "Be strong and of good courage." "All power in heaven and in earth is given unto me," and His promises are sure. The precious Blood is just as efficacious as ever and the Holy Spirit still waits to manifest his saving and sanctifying power. By the consecration unto Him of all our powers and talents and by bringing all the tithes into the store-house let us prove Him, and He will fulfill His promise by opening the windows of heaven and pouring out such a blessing that there shall not be room enough to receive it.

Soon He will come from yonder glory to claim His own. In the meantime, let us remember that He has called us and ordained us to go and bring forth fruit. Let us, therefore, give ourselves continually to prayer and consecrated service, and thus occupy till He comes.

—Rev. R. K. Mills.

SAVED BY CAT.

BATTLE CREEK, Mich., Jan. 21.—A man who represented himself as a meter reader recently attacked Mrs F. C. Philo. Her pet Angora cat attacked and drove off the intruder with claws and teeth. The cat is unusually large and put up a vicious battle with the intruder who shook the animal off as it ran.

MISSIONARIES LEAVE SZE CHWAN PROVINCE

Under pressure from the British Consul many Canadian missionaries on active service in China have left Sze Chwan province. A cable to United Church mission headquarters names those whose photographs appear above as among the families leaving. At the upper left is Mr. and Mrs. Burwell and their family, and at the upper right Mr. and Mrs. M. P. Smith and their family. From left to right those in the second row are Mrs. J. G. Endicott, Mr. Endicott, Miss Jean Graham, and Rev. Harold Swann, who has remained. The lower pictures are of Rev. and Mrs. T. A. Pincock, who have left the province.

SHORT STORY

Joan Lanark was sitting trying to decide whether she should don her goggles and see whether or not she could be arrested for breaking the speed limit within an hour or whether she had not better employ her time by 'phoning Edward Manning that she had changed her mind and would speed along the marriage road with him.

She didn't exactly want to marry Manning. He wasn't just the type of man her heart and mind craved as a life companion but—was that type to be found? Joan wondered.

Suddenly Joan's heart pounded dully against the peach-colored sports coat she wore. Outside on the quiet side street was a car and in the car was a man. But outside, perched on the extra wheel on the running-board, was The Man.

Joan knew it the moment she looked at him. He was apparently instructing the man in the car on the art of driving, and had brought him in to turn and twist, backward and forward and every way in the limited space of the blind alley.

Joan gazed joyfully at the alert face of the instructor and liked his brilliant smile and fine high brow from which dark hair rolled back.

He was making his pupil do most preposterous things with the car but somehow the man obeyed.

"Humph!" muttered Joan, "I wonder if he could make me obey like that? I almost think he could."

She watched the maneuvers for some time and reflected that it would not be an easy thing to maneuver a meeting with similar proficiency, but Joan slit her lips tight and braced her shoulders. Those signs usually preceded a skirmish of some nature with Joan and, most always she succeeded in her purpose.

Next morning saw Joan leaving the house on foot. A most unusual sight. Usually her big racing car roared out of the garage with only Joan's well-cropped head and motor goggles visible above the driver's seat.

Chance rather favored Joan for in the first garage she went into in the vicinity she saw the man she was looking for.

Joan's knee shook when a man approached her to ask what he might do for her.

"I want to learn to drive," she told him and added swiftly, "I was watching one of your drivers the other day and he seemed to be so thoroughly efficient—I thought he might teach even me to drive." She gazed innocently up at the man.

"Humph! I wonder who it was? They're all good men."

"That looks a little like him—over there—with gray——"

"Keene—oh—a——" he excused himself and Joan watched him pull The Man aside and confer with him. The man smiled swiftly, cast a look at Joan and nodded.

A second later Keene was standing beside her and Joan felt that the floor beneath her would give way.

"It's most flattering," he was saying, "that you should single me out—I hope I do not fail you. When can you begin?"

"Straight away," Joan managed to say, "I expect to prove very stupid—at driving—I'm not mechanical?" She turned her wide, innocence on Keene also and in his mind he questioned if he had ever seen any lovelier eyes.

"No—I wouldn't say there was anything mechanical about you," he told her and went forward to get out a compact little car for the first lesson.

Joan knew now that she had found The Man and she only hoped that things would take a perfectly natural course without her behaving in some silly manner.

He didn't let her take the wheel until they were well beyond heavy traffic and when she did take the big wheel still warm from contact with his hands Joan did indeed feel stupid and could easily be taken for a novice.

Keene was very explicit about gears, brakes, etc., and told her that he wouldn't stand for any speed.

"You put other people in danger as well as yourself," he told her and Joan blushed hotly, remembering the fines her father payed so regularly for her.

So intent was she on recalling past arrests that she failed in her stupidity about driving and when she mechanically and very masterfully avoided a nasty smash when a car whirled at them from an unseen turning Keene merely turned his head and looked at her.

Joan bit her lip but kept on driving straight ahead. She dared not look at him, but knew he was extracting something from his pocket.

"Draw up quickly beside that boulder," he ordered and Joan found herself obeying. "Well done," he said. "Now turn straight to me and I'll show you something I've had in my pocket for seven months."

Joan swallowed hard at a laugh in her throat. She was looking at a newspaper photograph of herself taken in the courtroom. And at the top the heading, "Fifth conviction for breaking speed limits."

"I'm not an instructor," laughed Keene, "but when a man finds someone he's been seeking for months he's not likely to——"

"Don't break the speed limits," warned Joan softly, but with eyes that urged him to step on the gas.

Did You Ever Stop To Think

By Edson R. Waite Shawnee, Okla.

THAT public utilities are directing their efforts toward the safeguarding of service and the protection of human life.

The nature of the service rendered by gas, electric and transportation utilities has brought to the management of these companies the realization of the necessity to use every means of rendering this essential service in a manner which assures the employe, the customer and the public of the greatest protection.

The safety department has become an essential factor in the organization of the modern utility. Employes are instructed, through safety meetings, personal letters, bulletins, moving pictures and other means, in the safe and proper method of carrying on their work. Instructions in applying First Aid in emergency cases are also given to employes, especial emphasis being laid on the Prone Pressure Method of Resuscitation. The First Aid equipment furnished and maintained by the company, together with trained employes, is available to the public in any emergency.

Hundreds of thousands of dollars have been spent in perfecting and installing protective equipment and safety devices. Systematic inspections and tests are made on all equipment of this nature that it may be dependable and functioning satisfactorily at all times.

Public service companies realize that it is a part of their responsibility to their employes and to the public to safeguard their service and protect human life and they are earnestly endeavoring to fulfill that responsibility.

GYPSIES' PARTY ENDS WITH RIOT

Police and Firemen Called When Fight Ends Celebration.

IN TORONTO STORE.

TORONTO, Jan. 21.—Police and firemen responded yesterday afternoon to a riot call at a store at 106 Queen street west, with the result that 18 gypsies, men and women, are under arrest on charges of being disorderly. Steve Demetro and his wife, Anita, of that address, are charged with keeping a disorderly house. The offenders were bailed out later.

The cause of the trouble was a five-gallon keg of wine and four bottles of gin which the menfolk had purchased with which to celebrate St. John's Day. This the feasters imbibed until they became quarrelsome. An altercation between two of the men precipitated a free-for-all fight. The women participated. The noise which ensued reached the ears of P. C.'s Lawlor and Gilgan, of West Dundas Station, who were on duty nearby. Lawlor started for the scene of the disorder, while Gilgan waited only long enough to call for reserves before he ran into the store to assist his comrade. When he got there he found Lawlor with his hands full. Gaudily garbed, gypsy men and women were pawing and clawing at him, the while he was trying to fend them off with fists and feet with right goodwill.

The disturbance attracted a crowd. Someone called the fire department. The firemen and police patrols arrived at about the same time. P. S. Dickenson and Plainclothesmen Boyd, McCaffery, Sunderland and Jackson sailed into the crowd, and in a short time the fighting throng had been disentangled and were being loaded into the wagons.

The place in which the fight occurred is in the rear of a store. The front has been rigged up as a palmistry parlor. The rear is given up to living and sleeping quarters. The inmates sleep on the floor. The celebrants gathered there yesterday were from all over the city.

"RISING LIGHTS"

LONDON, Jan. 21.—For "rising of the lights" takes a dose of gunshot or a globule of mercury. That seems to be the favorite rural prescription for an ailment that is common in this county, according to a doctor who wrote to the British Medical Journal to ask about the affliction. A woman of his acquaintance, he said, swallowed small handfuls of shot regularly to "keep her heart and lights down."

If you are an asthma sufferer keep away from rabbit hair, house dust, duck feathers, horse dander, cat hair and ragweed.

Competent to judge

There is no better way for you to learn the true value of commodities in general use than to read the advertisements day by day—regardless of whether or not you have any immediate intention of buying.

Those young housekeepers whose first experiences in marketing began in war-time have a fixed idea of high prices. Those of an older generation have an equally strong conviction that prices should be lower.

With the shifting changes of a rapidly moving world both prices and values are bound to fluctuate. A financier studies these trends with scrupulous care in published financial reports compiled by experts.

An intelligent housewife may similarly make herself a competent judge of values by studying each day's advertisements of the things she needs—just as the broker studies his stock list.

Then as she comes to buy she may do so with full confidence in her knowledge.

Uncle Wiggily

To-day's Bedtime Story.

By Howard R, Garis

UNCLE WIGGILY AND THE STICKERY BALLS

Copyright, 1926, by McClure Syndicate.)

Once upon a time when the forty 'leven little bunny boys and girls in Uncle Wiggily's hollow stump bungalow had become tired of playing with their Christmas toys, Baby Bunty said:

"Let's ask Daddicums to take us adventuring with him!"

"Oh, yes!" sang all the others in a chorus.

"I'll ask him," went on Baby Bunty, for she was a cute little tyke and often Uncle Wiggily would grant favors to Bunty when he might think twice about doing it for the other forty 'leven.

For you see Baby Bunty was the forty twelfth rabbit, and, besides, she was an orphan, living by turns with all the other animal folk of Woodland. Just now it was her turn to live with Uncle Wiggily. And very lucky it was, too, being the Christmas season.

So Baby Bunty went dancing on her tippy tip toes to where Uncle Wiggily, whom she called "Daddicums," sat in his easy chair, dozing before the blazing fire of logs on the hearth.

"I'm coming! I'll be right down to breakfast, my dear!" answered Mr. Longears, jumping up and rubbing his eyes. For he had fallen asleep and thought his wife was calling him to breakfast.

"Ha! Ha!" laughed Baby Bunty.

"Ha! Ha!" laughed all the other little rabbit boys and girls.

"Ha! Ha!" chuckled Uncle Wiggily himself, and then Baby Bunty knew it would be all right to ask him the favor.

"Will you take us adventuring?" she begged.

"Why of course I will!" answered Mr. Longears.

A little later there was quite a procession of rabbits marching over the hill, across the fields and toward the woods. Many sharpt little eyes looked for an adventure, for that was what Uncle Wiggily had come in search of an adventure!

"I see one!" suddenly cried Jingle, who was walking with her sister Jangle.

"Where?" asked Uncle Wiggily.

"Over by that old stump," answered Jingle. "It's a tail wagging adventure. Oh, I hope it isn't one of the bad chaps!"

But it wasn't even adventure for it was only a brown oak leaf blowing n the wind, and Uncle Wiggily laughed when he saw it.

"We shall have to hunt farther for an adventure," he said. And a little while after that, all of a quickness, Baby Bunty gave a shout and said:

"Oh, look what I've found—a lot of stickery balls!" She was beneath a big tree and on the ground were a number of balls, with long stems. Each ball had a number of spikes or sharpi stickers on it, like the burr of a horse chestnut before it opens to let the brown nut pop out. Only these brown stickers were not so large as those from the horse chestnut tree.

"They look just like Christmas tree ornaments, only they aren't gold or silver or red, green and other pretty colors," said Scooter, one of the boy rabbits.

"Maybe they are next year's Christmas tree ornaments and they aren't finished yet," said Tooter, who was Scooter's brother.

"You might call them that," said Uncle Wiggily when the children asked him about the stickery balls. "But these are really the seed pods from the sweet gum tree. Every year they fall off the tree like this. If you like you may take some of the stickery balls home and next Christmas we can color them. But be careful not to hurt yourselves, for the spikes on the brown seed balls are very sharp."

This the little bunnies soon found out for themselves. But they picked up many of the stickery balls, taking as much care as they could. And when they were ready to go home, all of a sudden, out of the bushes popped the Bob Cat with his silly little tail.

"I suppose you know what I have come for!" growled the Bob Cat to Uncle Wiggily.

"I suppose you mean my ears!" sighed the rabbit gentleman.

"Yes," snarled the bad chap. But just then Baby Bunty, very politely, said to the Bob Cat:

"Won't you sit down on that flat stump right behind you and rest yourself before you nibble Daddicum's ears." And the Bob Cat sat down, but all of a sudden he sat up very quickly, howling and yowling and shouting:

"I'm stuck! Oh, I'm stuck! I must have sat down on a pin!"

"Oh, no," said Baby Bunty sweetly as the Bob Cat ran away. "You just sat down on some of the stickery balls I put on the stump." And that's what happened. They all said Baby Bunty was very clever, and I think so myself. And if the flour sack will give the rubber boot a bunch of pansies for its button-hole, I'll tell you about Uncle Wiggily's red cakes.

Kiwanis Club Celebrates.

"We cannot think without a knowledge of speech ;children born without hearing do not develop their mind. You must have a vocabulary before you ca.. think; words are the chest of tools used by the mind in the art of thinking."

In commenting upon the beauty of the human voice to-day, the speaker remarked upon the progress made from the monosyllabic grunt of the early human race, and called attention to the danger of mistaking the tool for the craft. "To-day the human voice has been so developed and the printed word so common, all wisdom being gathered in the world's books, speech becomes a common thing, and people are too apt to take talking for performance. There are many great truths in the world so common we cannot see them; nearly all the great mysteries in the world are plain, but we don't know it.

"In Kiwanis Club we are builders, and how do we build? The foundation must be true and clean; there must not be a part of it left to crumble. The foundation is no better than the worst part of it.

"The danger in this world is that we are inclined to look at the roof, and as long as the band is playing, and there is paint on the shingles, we think we have a building. We must build ourselves first.

"Charity is not the throwing of husks to swine, nor is it the giving, with some magnanimous gesture of something we don't want to someone on a lower plane than ourselves. But that is the kind of thing that has made the word 'charity' despised. It used to be 'Faith, hope and charity, and the greatest of these is charity.' What is charity that it is greater than faith and hope? It is the giving of something that is the better part of ourselves. We ourselves are the needy, the poor, lame, halt and blind, we are little children.

From that we get back to one of the greatest and most beautiful declarations of our faith, so beautiful that in the plethora of words that curse the world today we have lost the grip of it. "Ye shall love one another."

A great deal of harm is done in the world by backbiting and gossip. We should cultivate the charity of spoken word. We should cultivate charity that casts the mantle over the failings of our brothers. Let us praise their good deeds and be charitable in the things wherein they fail, and thereby help carry their burdens. Let our words be kindly and clean and helpful. And in that way we may cause the rose to bloom in the little desert spot of the soul of the man who is weary of the world's struggle, and cause a little song of joy to be born in our own souls."

Charles Saunders expressed the appreciation of the members for the address and music.

MEXICANS HATE INTERVENTION

Newspaper Says Americans Can be Lead Into Warlike Mood.

ARE CHANGEABLE

MEXICO CITY. Jan. 21.— Declaring it "quite evident that the Washington government has embarked on an active campaign to produce in the American people sentiment of aggression against Mexico," the newspaper Excelsior recalls incidents before the Spanish war leading up to the blowing up of the battleship Maine.

Four generations of Mexicans, with governments good and bad, have hated the menacing cry of "intervention," the Excelsior says, arguing that while the great majority of the American people were "pacifist," they can be led into a war-like mood.

Both the Excelsior and El Universal warns Mexicans that they shouldn't participate unrestrainedly in deluging Senator Borah with congratulatory cablegrams, because Americans are changeable, as evidenced under Wilson prior to and during the World War.

El Universal also suggests the idea of other Latin-Ameerican nations mediating in the Nicaraguan controversy.

Trading Lighter To-day Area Goes Up Again

TORONTO, Jan. 21 (Canadian Press).—Business was lighter than it has been for some time on the Standard Mining Exchange today, only 651,356 shares being dealt in. Area, up 12 1-2 to 74 1-2, was a feature of the session. Lake Shore receded from its high price of 19.00 yesterday and was down 20 at 18.20 on today's market. Generally, prices were firm and gains outnumbered losses. Duprat gained three at 24 3-4, Laval Quebec was up 1 1-2 at 37, Corona was 1-2 higher at 22, and Buckingham was up 1-2 at 8 1-2.

Wide Range Dealt In With Few Price Changes

TORONTO, Jan. 21 (Canadian Press).—While a large range of issues was dealt in, price changes on the Toronto Stock Exchange today were of little importance, declines and gains being merely fractional in the majority of cases. Consolidated Smelters, up 1 1-2 at 250, was practically the only exception, and very little business was transacted in Smelters. Brompton gained 3-8 at 34 1-8, Industrial Alcohol was up 1-4 at 22 3-4, and on the unlisted side the new issue of British American Oil gained 1-2 at 20 1-2.

Brazilian and International Nickle were the market leaders, both issues, however, closing unchanged at 109 and 40 1-4 respectively. The unlisted market also had fairly heavy dealing in Canadian Breweries, with 1,450 shares sold at 30, Hiram Walker unchanged at 32, Seagram unchanged at 16 3-4, and Imperial Oil unchanged at 40 3-4.

Sudden Upward Swing In New York Exchange

NEW YORK, Jan. 21 (Canadian Press).—The Stock Market was heading downward this morning and appeared to be on the verge of a sharp break when large buying orders poured into several groups of stocks and started a brisk rally. Early losses of one to five points were substantially reduced or wiped out and by early afternoon dozens of issues were selling one to five points above last night's final quotations.

The sudden revival of activity and strength in the "merger rails" was based on unconfirmed reports that brokers previously identified with the Van Sweringens were heavy buyers of the Wheeling and Lake Erie issues, the inference being that the road probably would be included in the revised "nickle plate" consolidation.

Wheeling and Lake Erie Common extended its gain to five points by touching 40½, the highest price since it was listed ten years ago. Western Maryland issues also touched their highest price in years.

Woolworth rallied sharply on publication of a favorable 1926 earnings report. Studebaker, with an early gain of 2½ points, showed the greatest vitality in months. The advance in oils was resumed, but it appeared to encounter strong resistance.

New Export Business Sends Wheat Prices Up

CHICAGO, Jan. 21 (Canadian Press).—With indications pointing to considerable new export business in North American wheat, prices averaged higher early today, despite a weak start. Liverpool quotations were lower than due but buying here readily took care of offerings. Opening at 1-8 cent to 1-2 cent down, Chicago wheat rallied to above yesterday's finish. Corn, oats, and provisions were firm, corn starting unchanged and then scoring gains.

Opeing prices were: Wheat, May 140 1-8, July 131 1-8; Corn, May 81 1-2, July 84 3-4; Oats, May 49 1-8, July unquoted.

EMPLOYEE HELD BALCONY DOORS WITNESS SAYS

Man Made No Effort To Help Children During Theatre Panic.

INQUIRY OPEN.

Preliminary Hearing of Manslaughter Charge at Montreal To-day.

MONTREAL, Jan. 21 (Canadian Press).—Preliminary inquiry into the manslaughter charge laid against Ameen Lawand, proprietor; Michael Arie, manager, and Camil Bazzy, ticket-taker, of the Laurier Palace, scene of the fire and panic which resulted in the death of 78 children on January 9 last, was started today before Judge Becarie.

Maurice Brown, the chief witness, told of someone holding the doors closed at the foot of the fatal stairway and telling the children to go back upstairs after the alarm had been given. The man, according to the witness, must have seen the children falling and piling up on top of each other, but made no effort to get them out of the tangle, or to help them in any way.

The witness said he came downstairs from the balcony twice. The first time he was only able to get out after breaking the glass in the door and fighting with the man who was trying to hold the children back, at the foot of the stairs. The second time he went up to search for his girl companion and only succeeded in saving himself by crawling over the bodies of the little victims, which by that time, were piled up to within a foot and a half of the ceiling. Others in the balcony did the same. When he had crawled through to safety, Brown stated, he saw an employee of the theatre standing in the lobby, but this employee was making no effort to rescue the victims.

BODIES SHOWN TO CAUSE RIOT

65 REACH SAFETY.

MANILA, Jan. 21. —(Canadian Press.)—Sixty-five American missionaries, refugees from Foochow, arrived here to-day aboard the United States' destroyer Pillsbury with stories of the anti-foreign demonstration in the Chinese city which resulted in violence to British and American women.

The refugee party was made up of 31 women, 31 children and three men from the Methodist, Baptist and Congregational missions of Foochow. The majority are Methodists.

Among them was Mrs. E. G. Price, wife of the United States' Consul at Foochow, and her four children.

Mrs. Price said the outbreak started when the bodies of natives in a convent there who had died of cholera, were carried out while a riot was in progress. Seeing the bodies and not knowing the cause of the deaths the Chinese ran wild and the convent was stormed and looted.

PEKING, Jan. 21. —(Canadian Press.)—The anti-foreign situation at Hankow has developed seriously, says a telegram received to-day from unofficial foreign sources at the Yangtze River City. One thousand British and American men are leaving, it says.

The British concession at Hankow has remained under control of the Cantonese ,or Nationalist, government since the coolie mob swept over it early this month. British and United States' warships lie in the Yangtze opposite Hankow, ready to assist their nationals if necessary.

There is no official confirmation of the telegram from private sources ,of the evacuation of the British and American men. who had remained at Hankow after sending their women and children to Shanghai and elsewhere for safety after the riotous demonstrations by Chinese mobs December 3 and 4.

NORRIS TELLS ABOUT KILLING

Weeps As He Gives Evidence On Shooting Of Chipps.

PAST RAKED OVER.

AUSTIN, Texas, Jan. 21 (Canadian Press).—Dr. J. Frank Norris, Fundamentalist, Pastor of Fort Worth, on the witness stand today told his story of how he killed Dexter E. Chipps in his church office last July 17. Weeping and halting over each word, he related how Chipps had come to his office, had demanded that he cease attacks on Chipps' friends, and had threatened to kill him, and of how he shot Chipps when he said the latter came at him with his hand on his hip pocket.

Before giving this part of the story he had heard himself bitterly lambasted and warmly defended by attorneys in arguments over the admission of certain evidence. He sat silently in the witness box for more than an hour listening to these arguments in which much of his past was raked over.

CLAIM THAT REBELS ARE UNDER CONTROL

MEXICO CITY, Jan. 21 (By Universal Service—Special Cable Despatch). — The Government claims that the rebels fighting under the banner of religious real are under control.

Meanwhile, a general offensive is in full swing against Durango, the sole remaining stronghold of the rebels.

It is admitted that the rebels may offer stubborn resistance against the Federal troops.

Sporadic attacks upon railroad lines continue through the country.

Federal troops are guarding workers who are repairing damage to the railroad line to Guadelajara. An attempt made by the rebels to burn a bridge north of Otinapa was thwarted by the Federals.

Mining companies report that in some instances their operations were delayed through rebels carrying off available supplies of explosives.

Women's Lives

are relieved of a great hygienic handicap in this way. Positive protection—discards like tissue

By ELAINE S. BUCKLAND
Registered Nurse

THERE is now a new way in woman's hygiene. A way scientific and exquisite that ends the uncertainty of old-time "sanitary pads."

It is called "KOTEX." Eight in every 10 better-class women have adopted it.

You wear sheer frocks and gowns without a second thought, any time, anywhere. You meet every day, every business or social demand unhandicapped.

Deodorizes, too. And thus ends all fear of offending.

You obtain it at drug or department stores simply by saying "KOTEX," without hesitancy. Be sure to get the genuine. Only Kotex itself is "like" Kotex.

KOTEX

No laundry—discard like tissue

UNIQUE SERVICE NEAR THOROLD

Ukrainians Observe "Jordan Day" at Ice Cross Erected on Lake.

ORTHODOX RITES.

ST. CATHARINES, Ont., Jan. 21.—Worshipping before a unique altar and cross of ice on the surface of the canal lake near Thorold Wednesday morning, Ukrainians observed what they term "Jordan Day" and celebrated the Ukrainian Epiphany in accordance with Greek Orthodox rites and ceremonies.

The pilgrimage of Ukrainians, Russians and Roumanians to the lakeside began after a service had been held in All Saints' Ukrainian Church, where Rev. Maxim C. Chawrink, Anglican Ukrainian minister for the district, officiated. The unique service held at the lake and before the icy altar and cross was in memory of the baptism of Christ at the River Jordan. Hymns were sung by the various nationalities represented, prayer offered and the ice cross and altar and the people blessed.

At the conclusion of the service each of the members of the Ukrainian congregation took home with him a bottle of the blessed water. Assisting Rev. Mr. Chawrink in the service was Rev. Canon Piper, Rev. M. Dumas, Rev. E. F. Maunsell and Rev. E. J. Harper. Fully a hundred and fifty took part in the pilgrimage.

A feature of the service in the church was the presentation and dedication of a Union Jack by Rev. Canon Riley. The flag was given to the Ukrainian community by J. H. Ingersoll of this city. In his address Canon Riley told the congregation they were not considered as foreigners but as fellow citizens in the British Empire.

LOSE IDENTITY

WASHINGTON, Jan. 21. — Alien tribes are steadily encroaching on the land occupied by the San Blas Indians of Panama, according to Herbert W. Krieger, ethnologist of the United States National Museum, and the tribe is losing its identity. The only method by which the San Blas could preserve their racial characteristics would be to establish a reservation and isolate the "white Indians" on it, Krieger says.

Although the average period of bearing is from fifty to eighty years, it is nothing unusual for orange trees over a century to continue to produce crops.

RECEIVES GIFTS ON 25TH ANNIVERSARY

CAMPBELLFORD, Jan. 21.—An event, interesting to residents of Campbellford, took place on Monday December 27th, when Mr. and Mrs. John Shapter of Calgary, Alberta, celebrated the twenty-fifth anniversary of their wedding.

On December twenty-fifth, 1901, the marriage was solemnized in St. Andrew's Presbyterian church, Campbellford, of Miss Margaret Gwynne, daughter of Mrs. Gwynne to Mr. John Shapter, son of Mr and Mrs. Peter Shapter, Centre street, Rev. Mr. Reeves, pastor, officiating. Mr. and Mrs. Shapter resided in town for several years, later moving to Calgary, where they have since resided.

On Christmas day a number of friends presented Mr. and Mrs. Shapter with a beautiful silver tea service as a token of the high esteem in which they are held. At the last regular meeting of the A.Y.P.A. held Monday evening of last week the programme took the form of a Cambridge debate on the locally interesting subject: "Resolved that the Memorial Hall is of greater value to the community than the rink." Mr. C. C. Stenner led the affirmative supported by Mrs. T. Waldon, Misses Odell Watson and Winnifred Payne; the negative was led by Miss G. Graham, who was assisted by Miss Grace Watson and Messrs. W. Chappela lnd E. Robertshaw.

The affirmative brought the fact that the Hall was a handsome building situated in a prominent and commanding position and built for a purpose. It was the headquarters of the village clerk and also the police headquarters, the fire brigade had its offices there and the village siren was attached to the tower. The hall was useful as a community gathering place for dances, concerts and public meetings. It also contained the public library which was a distinct asset to the village. Tourists passing through would recognize it as a building of importance. Also it was substantial and not likely to be destroyed by fire and also that it was available the year round.

Among the points brought out by the negative were the informality of the rink where expensive apparel was not necessary to spend an evening there. There was a variety of amusements to be found there in their season, land and ice sports, skating, curling, hockey, and softball and all at a small cost. The rink was built by subcsribed capital and is an asset without being in any way a liability to the village, while the hall was a financial debt in the past and present and a burden in the future. The hall was inadequate to the village needs as already the library, fire hall and veteran's room were found to be much too small for future expansion such as the village demands, and the kitchen accomodation in the hall was very much too limited to be of any value whatever.

More points were brought out by the speakers who waxed eloquent in attack and defense.

The judges who were Miss Watson and Mr. W. S. Remnant brought in a verdict that the negative had won the debate.

It was decided to hold the annual sleigh drive on January 25th.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

WHAT JESUS TAUGHT ABOUT PRAYER

Text: Mark 1:35, 14:32-36; Matt. 6:9-13.

And in the morning, a great while before day, he rose up and went out, and departed into a desert place, and there prayed.

And they came to a place which was named Gethsemane: and he saith to his disciples, Sit ye here, while I shall pray.

And he taketh with him Peter and James and John, and began to be sore amazed, and to be very heavy;

And he went forward a little, and fell on the ground, and prayed that, if it were possible, the hour might pass from him.

And he said, Abba Father, all things are possible unto thee; take away this cup from me: nevertheless not what I will, but what thou wilt.

After this manner therefore pray ye: Our Father which art in heaven, Hallowed be thy name.

Thy kingdom come. Thy will be done in earth, as it is in heaven.

Give us this day our daily bread:

And forgive us our debts, as we forgive our debtors.

And lead us not into temptation, but deliver us from evil' For thine is the kingdom, and the power and the glory, for ever. Amen.

The International Uniform Sunday School Lesson for January 23: What Jesus Taught About Prayer.—Mark 1:35, 14:32-36; Matt. 6:9-13.

By Wm. E. Gilroy, D.D.,
Editor of The Congregationalist.

Few subjects are more difficult to expound than the subject of prayer. It may also be said that while there is no more important thing in life, there is no point at which we may more easily go astray.

The other day I heard the story of a little boy who urged his mother very persistently to wind up a clock which had been set aside because it had refused to go. The woman finally responded to the child's plea and wound up the clock which, to her surprise, actually did go. The child was not surprised. He told his mother that he had prayed to God about the clock, and he evidently expected it to go.

Childish Prayers.

Such anecdotes are often quoted to indicate the place of prayer in life, and its efficacy. We question very much the wisdom of this process or its Christian validity. As a matter of fact, how many of us cannot recall innumerable such childish prayers that were never answered?

And we may, perhaps, recall the fact that the great preacher, Frederick W. Robertson of Brighton, once emphasized the wisdom of God in not answering such petitions. He referred to such a prayer that he had made in his childhood and to the great doubt and disappointment that came when the prayer of his childish faith was not answered; but he came afterwards to see that the answer of that prayer would have been the worst possible thing that could have happened to him.

It would have given him a sort of childish confidence in a magic power by which he could accomplish things that were not possible for others. We might well give heed to that danger, for it may be said that nothing is so inimical to the practice and power of prayer as the divorcing of prayer from its true place and purpose.

Prayer, it should always be remembered, should be definitely related to righteous and spiritual ends. It is not a means of magic, but a means of grace. It is a means of discovering and adapting our lives to God's will, not a maige power that bends God's will to our feeble, and possibly selfish, desires.

There is no better place to study prayer both in its power and in its limitations than in the life of Jesus himself. Jesus felt the need of prayer. He went into the desert to pray; he prayed in the garden. In one place we are told that he continued all night in prayer. What was this prayer? Was it asking God to give him certain things or to do certain things for him, or was it a seeking of full communion with God, a coming into that nearness with the Father that would give him strength to do the Father's will?

If Jesus, the pure and true, the Savior of man, needed prayer in his earthly life, how much more do we need prayer? But prayer, if it is to accomplish its purpose in our lives, must be for us what it was for Jesus. The spiritual promises are true only upon a spiritual plane.

Spiritual Petitions.

God does not offer us wealth and pleasure, immunity from pain and suffering. There is nothing in the lives of the saints to indicate that mere possessions are ours for the asking. But, on the other hand, there is everything in the lives of the saints and in the records of the Scriptures to show that there is no limit to the willingness and readiness of God to fulfill all our spiritual longings and petitions.

The man who prays for the deepest things may pray with the full assurance that his spiritual longings will be satisfied. Does this seem to lessen the place and power of prayer? Only to those whose vision of God and of their own life and of the world is still largely material, who have not found that the supreme thing in life was what in the mind of Jesus in all his teaching concerning prayer; namely, the doing of the will of God.

Prayer is not only a discipline, not only a means of communion, but a power of supreme accomplishment in bringing our lives to their highest plane.

ZION LEAGUE

Mrs. Simmonds Renders Address on Mission Work in China.

PETHERICKS CORNERS, Jan. 21.—In spite of storm and heavy roads, the regular League services at Zion on Thursday evening drew attendance of forty-five. The Whites were several points in the lead on the strength of their church attendance. The meeting was in charge of the citizenship department, led by Lindsay Anderson.

A special programme was presented by outside talent including Mrs. R. W. Scott of Campbellford, who gave a splendid talk on "The Value of Temperance" pointing out in a very convincing manner the evil efforts of alcohol on the human system. Miss Emma Meiklejohn, also of Campbellford, who won recognition as an evangelistic singer, rendered two beautiful solos, which were much appreciated. A number which was unexpected, but none the less welcome, was a short address by Mrs. Simmonds, a missionary from China, who is visiting relatives in this vicinity. Her talk dealt with the religious experience of a member of her flock and showed that the missionary work is of real worth. Messrs. Fred Barnum and Thomas Fry made a motion of a vote of thanks to the vistors who took part in the programme, which was heartily applauded. The next league meeting on Thursday evening is in charge of Miss Gladys Simpson, social convener. A feature of the evening will be a Bible spelling match, the words to be taken from Matthew, chapter 10 and 11.

Rev. Mr. Daniel had a signal honor conferred upon him at the Cobourg Winter school when he was apointed as principal of the 1928 Winter School.

On Sunday morning at Zion church Rev. Mr. Daniel began a new series of sermons dealing with the characteristics of a Christian. His first topic was the joyous Christian.

Wood cutting is the order of the day in this district now, and the sawing machines are already beginning to buzz. Messrs. S. G. Meiklejohn and son are busy in their swamp and have orders for about 200 cords of wood in four-foot lengths. Most of these orders come from cheese factories. A number of local farmers who are short of wood on their own premises have secured good hardwood, second growth, from Chester Irwin, Stanwood. This can be bought in quarter or half acre lots, the purchase to cut and haul the wood himself. The supply seems to be unlimted.

SAINT and SINNER

The next day Bob Hathaway met Faith, by appointment, in a little tea shop. Over the sandwiches and tea, Bob finished his account of the adventures of the day before, or rather the finale which Cherry and Faith had not been allowed to witness.

"Of course I rushed out to that West Tenth Street address, and found that Lola Gonzales had skipped. We expected that, you know. But I found she had called for a Western Union messenger, and surmised that she had sent Alexander Cluny the carbons of the letters with which she had hectored poor Cherry. So back to his office I hied myself and found my suspicions correct. He made no difficulty about turning over to me every scrap of paper connected with the whole nasty business—Pete's reports, which Lola had typed out most beautifully, detailing every move that Cherry had made for weeks—ever since she announced her engagement to Uncle Ralph, in fact—and the carbons of Lola's letters to Cherry. Here's the lot." He passed a thick manilla envelope across the painted little table to Faith, who took it gingerly, as if it were unclean.

"What shall I do with it?" Faith asked him.

"Give it to Cherry, and tell her to burn it. It may make her feel better to look it over and find out just how lucky she is that it hasn't done any more harm than it has already. But if it were I, I should burn it without reading it. I looked the stuff over and I believe it's all there, unless Alexander has copies locked away in his safe, to use as a club somehow in the future. Of course I had to take his word for it that he was turning it all over to me. Now—let's order everything else on the menu and see if we can collect enough for a square meal. I'd like to see you take hold of this place for just a week, darling. I believe you're the best cook in the world."

"You're prejudiced," Faith laughed. "I'm not an artistic cook at all; cooking for a family of six doesn't make for artistry, you know, especially when there's no money for trimmings. Madame Denise wants me to become her assistant and later her partner as a modiste and you want me to run a tea shop, but I have other plans." She laughed softly, with a note of pure happiness which made him reach impulsively for her hands.

"I don't want you to run a tea shop, except for two, and there'll be a cook to help you. Oh, Faith, I don't see how we're going to manage if we have to meet like this! I've got to hold you in my arms at least once a day—"

Those last words of his were still singing in her heart when she let herself into the living room of the little Myrtle Street house.

"Oh, I'm sorry! I didn't know you had a caller, Cherry," Faith tried to cross the living room as hastily and unobtrusively as possible, but her fleeting glance at the newly decorated old wicker chair had registered a portrait of a tall and stately woman, of middle age successfully held at bay, a woman richly dressed, but strangely ill at ease.

"Just a minute, darling!" Cherry's most honeyed voice stopped her sister at the dining room door. "I'm so glad you came home in time to meet Mrs. Allbright. This is my dear sister, Faith. Mrs. Allbright. Faith, this is Mr. Cluny's daughter, Mrs. Allbright."

"I'm very glad to know you, Mrs. Allbright," Faith said composedly, her voice betraying no hint of the agitation which fluttered in her heart.

"I have been explained to er—Miss Lane," Mrs. Allbright's cold, grey eyes and the cold, mechanical even voice matched her cold, pale smile upon her chastely roughed thin lips, "that I should have called much sooner, to — er welcome her into the family, but I have been so extremely busy preparing to go abroad. Mr. Allbright and I are taking my daughter, Muriel, to Switzerland, to place her in school. I am so sorry we shall not be here for the — er wedding." Any reference to the forthcoming marriage puckered her lips as if they were tasting the acid of an unripe persimmon.

"Isn't it a shame, Faith?" Cherry demanded, with polite regret, as she tweaked rather self-consciously at the hem of her short skirt which did not cover her knees. "I was just telling Mrs. Allbright that I had hoped Muriel could be one of my bridesmaids. Oh, youre not leaving so soon, Mrs. Allbright? I know Mother will be very much disappointmd at not meeting you. Thanks so much for calling. I shall be so glad when Muriel finishes school. I know we will have a lot in common."

When the imposing Mrs. Allbright had taken her departure, solicitously sped on her way by the impudently gay and cordial Cherry, Faith waited in the living room for the flood of Cherry's confidence and exultations." But it was a blazing-eyed Cherry who returned to face her.

"The old cat!" she cried. "I'd like to scrunch her! Whisking Muriel away so Ralph can't make her be my bridesmaid, and so they can get out of coming to the wedding! I'll make 'em all eat dirt yet!"

DRESS

By MARY MARSHALL

Undyed lynx fur forms the generously made collar and cuffs of this green cloth coat.

Clever as the furriers undoubtedly have been in dyeing moleskin purple, and white rabbit, rose or apple green—a reaction against all these rainbow peltries was sure to come. Colored furs are still worn and may still be considered smart but there is an inclination on the part of many well-dressed women to choose furs that are of more natural colors. In fact, many of them go so far as to wear no fur save that which is really undyed. Not that any harm can come from properly dyed garments, but they seem to feel that furs like beautiful flowers and precious stones are at their best when left in their natural hues.

It is a mistake to think that all the finest peltry comes to us undyed. Seal and Persian lamb are apparently always dyed, though certain conventions are followed in the matter. Mole too is almost always dyed so that the light under fur may be bought to match the darker surface color. American opossum and racoon are usually left undyed save when an attempt is made to make them look like some other fur. Dyed opossum makes a very good sort of stone marten or skunk. Racoon when dyed also makes good imitation skunk. Muskrat, when this imitation that some furriers feel that there is no deception whatever in calling dyed muskrat Hudson seal—since as they think everyone knows that Hudson seal is muskrat. Squirrel and mink are among the furs which are at their best when undyed. It is only the inferior squirrel pelts that are dyed to imitate chinchilla or sable.

While the fur dyers have been very busy recently accomplishing really remarkable results in the treatment of certain furs there has been a tendency quite recently to leave them undyed. Nutria, which is sometimes called the South American beaver, is much less frequently dyed now than it once was. As one furrier puts it "four or five years ago 90 per cent of the nutrias were dyed. Today most of the nutrias are used natural."

It sometimes happens that you see what appears to be an entirely new fur It may form the trimming of a coat worn by some friend of yours and quite eagerly you ask her the name of the strange fur. You are surprised when she gives the name of some most usual pelt. What kept you from recognizing it was that it had been used in the natural state.

FOOD AND HEALTH.

FOOD PORTIONS

(By Winifred Stuart Gibbs.)

It is neither necessary nor advisable for the average housekeeper to measure and weigh the foods served to the members of her family.

There is nothing new in this idea, but some women in their zeal to apply newly acquired information on the subject of diet are apt to let themselves slip into the way of dwelling too much on the mechanical side of a diet plan.

There is a simple rule, however, that once thoroughly understood and applied, will help almost any one to plan meals more intelligently. This rule might be expressed very simply as follows:

Learn to recognize the general dimensions of food portions. For example, it takes only common sense to realize that the older children have larger portions than the younger ones and adults larger than the older children. The matter, simple as it is, however, is worthy of a little detailed thought.

Usage and practice have established certain more or less standardized portions for serving food. It is because of this fact that it seems advisable for the housekeeper to keep this matter of portions rather continuously in mind Let us not worry at each meal as to whether each individual has sufficient calories. Let us, by all means, know in a general way how much food each one needs and then let us train our eyes to apportion foods in such a way as to give each member of the family what he requires without laborious mathematical calculations.

One excellent illustration of the principle I am trying to inculcate is this: The rounabount child—two, three and four years old—is at a most critical period. It is vitally necessary that his food should be of proper quality and quantity so as not to undo the good results of a well-fed infancy. It is equally important that this same food should be helping the runabout lay the foundations for a well-fed school period. I venture the statement that a considerable proportion of the ills to which the toddler falls heir may be traced to very large portions. The mother, let us say, has gone to great pains to inform herself as to what the children should eat. She may, however, be making the common error of giving the runabout too much food at one time.

The runabout's cereal, for example, should be served in portions of two to three tablespoons. His vegetables, should either green or potato, should be in about the same quantity. His milk is given by the scant cupful. His deserts such as junket fruit gelatine and so on, do not increase in the size of portions until he is of the school age. Even then the tablespoon will still figure very largely in measuring his portions.

HOROSCOPE

The Stars Incline, but do not Compel.

SATURDAY, JANUARY 22 1927

Although there is a menacing aspect early in the morning of this day, astrologers read the planetary influences as generally good, for the evil stars are dominant before business hours.

This is held to be a rule most favorable to signing contracts or forming new business partnerships.

It is a fair day for writing letters and for going over accounts for figures are supposed to make a special appeal.

Newspapers should flourish exceedingly in the coming year, if astrology is to be relied on, for the stars appear to indicate that they will develop mush literary interest.

Advertising today is well directed and should bring big returns, publicity of every sort will be in demand as never before, the seers foretell.

Art now comes under a sway in America that promises the best attainment and the most generous support.

Sculptors should benefit from architecture which is to outstrip other artistic development.

There is a sign indicating for this country gardening as a new national interest in which there will be splendid beauty and originality achieved.

Beauty in all its forms is to attain a supreme significance in the United States where there will be a general reaction against machine-made ugliness in many forms.

Foods and their values will be of wide interest in the new year, inasmuch as the results of unwise "reducing" methods will be apparent.

Tendencies in this new era are toward extremes and 1927 will show the best and the worst of humanity.

Persons whose birthdate it is have the augury of a happy year in which they will enjoy many favors.

Children born on this day are likely to be successful as aviators or inventors of aerial apparatus of various sorts.

MISSION SUNDAY SERVICES HELD

W.M.S. Responsible for Service in Omemee United Church.

OMEMEE, Jan. 20.—For many months past it has been the custom in the United church Sunday school to observe one Sunday of each month as missionary Sunday, when the Missionary society is responsible for the topic. One of the best was given by Mrs. S. D. Vaughan, she having a brother, Howard Veals, a missionary in China.

At the conclusion of the talk, Mrs. Vaughan's three children contributed a very pretty trio, which was a fitting climax to the carefully prepared address:

"In trying to hit upon some missionary theme, which has not already been dealt with in any of the many interesting mission talks to which I have listened in this Sunday school, I decided to tell you a little about your own missionary's work in China.

"In connection with the Western China Mission station in the city of Luchow are: a preacher, a doctor, nurses, two ladies in charge of a girls' school, and a principal of a boys' school, the latter being your missionary, Howard J. Veals. There are also the respective families of the preacher, the doctor and the principal. To carry on their work, a hospital, a church and two schools have been built, besides homes for the missionaries.

"Their houses are fairly large, since they are often called upon to entertain travellers. As at a railway centre, we change cars; so, at Luchow, travellers change boats, and often have to wait a day or two, or even longer, for the desired boat in which to continue their journey. Travelling missionaries, of course, are among their guests, but foreign merchants (that is, foreign to the Chinese), and travellers of various descriptions also take advantage of this accommodation at times. During this last year they were proud to entertain so distinguished a guest as a son of King George V.

"It is necessary for their houses and also their beds (which latter are moved to the porches during the hottest weather) to be carefully screened, as they dare not let the mosquitoes bite them for fear of malaria. It was a form of that dread disease which took their fellow-worker, Dr. Clark, a year or so ago.

"Each home has a spacious garden where they grow their own vegetable food, as they cannot depend upon the natives for this supply. They also grow abundance of beautiful flowers in all seasons of the year. These flowers are a great blessing to the missionary who sees about him daily so much that is pure and sweet. They call to mind that 'God's in His Heaven: All's right with the world.'

"There are whole fields of flowers grown in China by the natives—beautiful fields of poppies—but the missionary can not rejoice as he looks upon them, for alas! their product, opium, is the curse of the Chinese nation. How stupid of the Chinese government to allow such poison to be made! What can we expect of China when our Christian Canada tolerates the making of alcohol to the hurt of her own people? This is a shameful disgrace in a country where the voice of the people is heard and where that people know the love of God. 'Ye are my witnesses,' sayeth the Lord. Are we His witnesses if we love not our neighbor?

"But let us return to the consideration of the work at Luchow. In the boys' school, of which Mr. Veals is principal, there are about one hundred boys in classes ranging from beginners to what would correspond to our lower grades in high school. The teachers, with the exception of the principal, are Chinese. The students are by no means all Christian boys, but some find the Light, as did a boy in the school where Mr. Veals was stationed before being sent to Luchow. After he had gone he received this card from the boy:

"'Dear Sir: We are far away. How are you now? I am very well. I have a good time, the God is with me and care me so I am very thank God. God must always with you. I know you must well. You are about a year in Luchow, it must better of your school. It is good! Please give me some letter to teach me. I am very happy to get your letter. Good-bye. Your sincerely student, Li Chi.'

"It is difficult to express oneself in a foreign language, but the spirit of the message is unmistakable.

"Besides this central school, he oversees six or seven country schools, which he visits about every three weeks, taking three or four days to complete the circuit.

"On these trips he is accompanied by the preacher or evangelist, who conducts a service each evening at the school where they stop for the night. In the absence of the evangelist for a time, the principal was also preacher.

"When they make this journey, it is necessary to take with them all the food they require until they return, their cooking utensils and their bedding. They engage a native to carry these in two baskets slung on the ends of a pole, which is placed across his shoulders. This is only one of the methods by which the Chinese carry loads, burden carrying being a life-work for many men in China. The missionary walks when his strength warrants it. Otherwise, he hires a chair, which is supported by long poles at the sides, and thus carried by the Chinese, by two, three or four of them, according to the weight of their burden. These can be had at certain places along the way if the chairs of that place do not happen to be all in use when they call; if so, they may obtain one at the next stopping place.

"I have a letter here, which relates your missionary's experiences on one of these trips. I shall read all of it which concerns his work and with that I shall close.

"'Dear Mother: Two weeks ago today in writing to you I told you I was going to the country next day. I went and was away four days. On the early morning of the next day after I wrote (about four o'clock, there was a battle just across the little river from us between two of the opposing factions. It did not last long as the party which was attacked retreated at once.

"'Their line of retreat was right along the road over which I passed on my itinerary, when I crossed the river about nine o'clock there was no sign of the retreating force but about two miles beyond the river I came to the outposts of the advancing side. They were not anxious for me to go one but being a foreigner, they let me go.

"'I went on for another three or fourmiles and had the road absolutely to myself, as there was no sign of either soldier or civilian. Here I came to the outposts of the retreating faction. They stopped me to learn where I was going, how far behind the enemy were, and so on, after which they let me pass.

"'Soon after this, I reached our first outstation, where I had dinner. I did not stop long, however, as I wished to avoid getting mixed up with a crowd of soldiers on the road—having passed through them, I wanted to keep ahead. So I pushed on to another of our outstations, which is a little over twenty miles from the city and also on the main road to Chungking.

"'I reached this station about six o'clock, and right after me the soldiers began arriving. They continued to arrive at intervals throughout the evening and most of the night. When they come to a small town like that they simply walk into the people's homes and turn them into barracks and there are none to say them nay. Worse than that, they often burn the benches and doors and other furniture of the simple Chinese home, and next morning pass on, no compensation ever being made.

"'About eleven o'clock, they came banging on the doors of the building where we hold our chapel and school. A party had just arrived and wished to spend the night with us. The evangelist got me up to see what could be done, as he feared the loss of furniture. They agreed to stay in the outer part of the place at the street and we had still a set of doors which we could close between that and the school and the rooms off the school where we were sleeping. When they got settled, we closed and barred the inner doors and so had peace for the remainder of the night, since those who came later could see that we already had soldiers.

"'There were soldiers, first of one side and then of the other, on the roads and in the towns all of the four days I was out. These passing troops are a terror to the people of the country places. The places of business are all closed and the towns deserted, save for women and children. If you go back a bit from the main road, you will see men and the older boys off in hiding in the fields, for if they stay they run grave risk of being impressed to carry loads for the soldiers. In many cases they are made to labour thus until they drop. The unfortunate is left on the roadside to die beneath a blazing sun while another victim takes his place. In this district, in particular, this passing of soldiers to and fro, is going on almost constantly.

"'Last Sunday, the students all over China were parading because, on the same day late in 1915, Japan served twenty-one demands upon China, restricting her national development and insulting her national honor in several ways. Japan was never able to enforce these iniquitous demands, both because of the storm of indignation which arose from one end of China to the other, and because other nations also frowned upon it; but the students have remembered the day ever since; and now it is a signal for anti-foreignism of all kinds and also for anti-Christian propaganda. They passed by our church en route, and, as they passed, they yelled in chorus, 'Oppose Christianity!' but did nothing more, and as soon as they had gone by we had our service as usual.

"'Many of our so-called Christians have not cared to continue to keep up their connections with a movement that is suspected and that is the subject of criticism and persecution: but some are faithful and seem to see that there is something in this thing called Christianity, and so the work goes on.'"

OMEMEE Y.P.U.

Splendid Address Given on Topic—Missionary Speaks.

OMEMEE, Jan. 20.—The Young People's Union of Trinity United Church met in the Sunday School room as is their custom on Monday night. The devotional exercises were in charge of Miss Helen Johnson. Following the opening hymn, the Scripture lesson found in Psalm 97 was read by Miss Rita Kennedy followed by prayer by Mrs. F. G. Sandy.

An invitation from the A.Y.P.A. of Christ Church to spend a social evening with them on Monday, January 24th, was accepted with thanks.

Misses Eva and Lillian Rae rendered a pretty piano duet, much to the pleasure of all present.

The topic was then ably taken by Mr. Cyril Elliott, the subject being "What does following Christ mean?" The speaker commenced his talk by relating the followings of the early disciples. We are living in a Christian land; we count ourselves Christians, but is Christ satisfied with us? We must do what we think Jesus would do if He were in our place. Do it with expectancy, regardless of the consequences. Do it honestly and thoroughly. Let us not fear what people may say, but let us be able to look to Jesus and say, "What wilt Thou have me to do?" and we will soon arrive at the right conclusion. It is for each of us to decide, what Jesus would do if He was placed in exactly our own circumstances. It costs something to follow Christ, but nothing worth while is accomplished without some cost. Religion is just like everything else; we get what we pay for. Is it worth while? Is a heart at rest and a mind at ease worth while? Is fellowship with Jesus worth while? Is a pathway strewn with flowers that leads to the Great Beyond better than a thorny road that leads to destruction? Who would put a value on this pearl of such a price?

On behalf of the membership Mr. Sandy expressed a few words of thanks to Mr. Elliott for his splendid heart to heart talk which showed careful preparation on his part.

An additional feature on the programme was a few minutes' talk from Rev. Mr. Kitchen, who is home on furlough from India after an absence of six years. Mr. Kitchen made reference to the topic. Following Christ means more to the people of India than to us, for oftentimes they have to give up their occupation and homes, very much like the disciples of old did. We do not all receive the call to be missionaries, but whatever our calling is we must commit ourselves to the ideal of the Kingdom of God in order to become Christians. It means just the same today as in the days of John the Baptist.

The meeting closed with an appropriate hymn, "He Calleth Thee," followed by the watchword in concert.

WORTERS WINS FOR PITTSBURGH

TIE IN NEW YORK.

MONTREAL, Jan. 21.—Roy Worters, sensational little Pittsburgh goal-tender, beat the Montreal Maroons in a National Hockey League game here last night. While his team-mates were scoring three goals Worters was holding the Montrealers to a single tally.

Pittsburgh got the jump on the Maroons, and took a two-goal lead. Montreal fought desperately to get into the scoring, but Worters blocked the most promising attacks in spectacular fashion. With three minutes to go in the game and all the Maroon team up on the attack, Noble finally beat Worters and Montreal needed only one goal to tie it.

Three minutes was all too short, but it was enough for the Pirates to clinch matters. Johnny McKinnon coralled a bad pass by Noble and with no one in front of him, put Pittsburgh two goals up in the last minute of play.

Pittsburgh can thank their goalie. When the Pirates buckled under the savage Maroon attack he held the fort. He stopped 30 shots to 21 by Benedict.

Rangers, 2; Boston, 2.

NEW YORK, Jan. 21.—New York Rangers and Boston Bruins battled to a two goal tie in a National Hockey League game here last night. Twenty minutes overtime failed to break the deadlock. Rangers played poorly during the first two sessions when Boston scored twice through New York lapses, but came back in the final period to crash the Bruin defence for two counters.

Chabot, Ranger goaltender, was hit by a flying puck in the second period, retired from the ice while three stitches were taken to close the wound and returned to play invincible hockey.

Rangers—Goal, Chabot; defence, Abel and Brown; centre, Boucher; wings, Bill Cook and Bun Cook; subs., Boyd, Murdock, Thompson and Mackey.

Boston—Goal, Winkler; defence, Shore and Hitchman; centre, Frederickson; wings, Oliver and Galbraith; subs., Cleghorn, Stuart, Boucher, Coutu and Meeking.

Referee—W. O'Hara, Ottawa, and W. Bell, Montreal.

MARLBOROS WIN BY GOOD MARGIN

Beat North Toronto 8-4 in Senior O. H. A. Game.

EARN VICTORY.

TORONTO, January 21. — Marlboros took a step nearer a play-off position in the O. H. A. senior group No. 2, by defeating Nort Toronto 8 to 4 in the scheduled game at Arena Gardens last night. After the first period the Dukes had things pretty much their own way, outscoring the Black and White 5 to 1 in the last 40 minutes. The score was 3-3 at the first recess.

The defensive display by Marlboros in the opening clukker was wide open and easy for the fast passing North Enders to solve, the Dukes trailing at one stage 3 to 2. But Selke's team played much improved hockey in the last two periods and were best by just as wide a margin as the score shows.

Joe Primeau reported at the Arena ill, and the Marlboro did not get into the game until well on in the second period, but sick boy though he was he soon made his presence felt, engineering many of his team's goal getting plays. And he should have had more than one goal. In the last period he was through the North Toronto defence three times only to shoot wide by inches.

After they settled down the Marlboros played smashing good hockey, giving a smart display of combination and showing a punch when in close. The surprise of the night was the playing of Harold Frost up front. Frost has played on the defence ever since he broke into O.H.A. hockey with the Moose A. C. several years ago.

ACIDS IN STOMACH CAUSE INDIGESTION

Create Gas, Sourness and Pain—How To Treat

Medical authorities state that nearly nine-tenths of the cases of stomach trouble, Indigestion, sourness, burning, gas bloating, nausea, etc., are due to an excess of hydrochloric acid in the stomach and not as some believe to a lack of digestive juices. The delicate stomach lining is irritated, digestion is delayed and food sours, causing the disagreeable symptoms which every stomach sufferer knows so well.

Artificial digestents are not needed in such cases and may do real harm. Try laying aside all digestive aids and instead get from any druggist a few ounces of Bisurated Magnesia and take a teaspoonful in a quarter glass of water right after eating. This sweetens the stomach, prevents the formation of excess acid and there is no sourness, gas or pain. Bisurated Magnesia (in powder or tablet form—never liquid or milk) is harmless to the stomach, inexpensive to take and is the most efficient form of magnesia for stomach purposes. It is used by thousands of people who enjoy their meals with no more fear of indigestion.

ANK OFFICIAL ECLINES OFFER OR PRESIDENT

Says Not Eligible as He is Stockholder in Yankees.

KEEN SITUATION

Colonel Ruppert and Ed. Barnard Are Also Mentioned.

By HENRY L. FARRELL

NEW YORK, Jan. 21.—(United Press).—Ban Johnson, president of the American League, at a salary of $45,000 a year, will be removed unceremoniously from office next week, when the club owners of his circuit meet in Chicago, to referee a bout between Johnson and Landis.

While Chicago has been the key point for the exposure of all the recent baseball scandals, the plans for the muzzling of the vociferous American League president have been arranged and decided upon in New York.

Up to a certain point the National League felt reasonably happy that all the scandal talk involved only the American League, but when Johnson, with his heated attack on the commissioner incidentally cast suspicion on a world's series between the New York Giants and the New York Yankees the National League owners went to the drawer for their guns.

While the National League owners have no fear that the magnates of the younger league will not support the commissioner, they will force the hand of the American League owners if Johnson is not requested to resign.

Ed Barrow, business manager of the New York Yanks, was the first nominee proposed, but Barrow told the writer yesterday that he couldn't see how he would be eligible as he is a stockholder of the Yanks.

Colonel Ruppert, owner of the Yankees, and Ed Barnard, president of the Cleveland Indians, have also been mentioned, but the same restrictions hold against them unless they should dispose of their holdings in the two clubs.

Barnard might resign from the presidency of the Indians, but it's a dead cinch that Ruppert would not dispose of the sole ownership of the Yankees since in his position, he can exert almost as much influence on the politics of the league as the owner of the Yanks as he could as the president of the league.

It would not be a wild bet, however, to wager that after all the excitement and reorganization that can be expected to follow that Barrow will become at least the acting president of the American League.

It was learned from a positive source of information yesterday that the American League owners are considering the situation to be one of greatest emergency and that in the emergency, Barrow would be allowed to accept the appointment under a leave of absence from the Yankees.

LANDMARK PASSES.

PARIS, Jan. 21.—The celebrated Restaurant Maire, at the corner of the Grands Boulevard and the Boulevard de Strasbourg is no more. For years it was the favorite dining place for gourmets and many distinguished patrons. It has been transformed into a cafe-bar for which there has been a growing demand in Paris recently.

Matt J. McGrath, whose world records in the hammer throw never have been beaten, is now a captain on the New York police force.

SCOTTISH CUP PLAY SATURDAY

Glasgow and Edinburgh Drawn To Meet Weak Opponents.

DUNDEE FEATURES

Scottish clubs "take a birl at their ain cup" on Saturday but whose hand will stretch out for the trophy on April 16, time alone will reveal. Thirty-one games will be played, Buckie Thistle having already accounted for Fraserburgh by 2 goals to 1. The draw has not proved any too kind to the Glasgow and Edinburgh clubs, Celtic and Rangers both having to travel to meet comparative weaklings in Queen of the South and Leith Athletic respectively. Hibernians will certainly find the opposition stiff at Cowdenbeath and Hearts with a recollection of how Clyde recently upset Rangers, will resolve to go warily at Shawfield. So far neither home club has been reported as having changed the venue for a consideration.

The Big Battle.

What will happen in a majority of the games is about as uncertain as the weather. In four of the games clubs of the first division will clash and the best of the lot will be at Dens Park, where Dundee meet Motherwell, who for several weeks held the leadership of the first division of the league. At the moment the Fir Parkers are bracketed with Rangers at the top, equal in points but the Ibrox team are a game to the good. Dundee are seven points below Motherwell with a game in hand and a slightly lower goal average, so that on league performances the odds are a shade against Dundee but this may be countered by ground advantage.

According to the draw there are two Arbroath teams in the line-up, the Gayfield "Maroons" being pitted against St. Mirren at Love street and Arbroath Athletic at Dundee United. For once luck has gone against Inverness Caledonians who must go to Hampden Park to tackle Queen's Park.

LABARBA WILL DEFEND TITLE

2 TO 1 FAVORITE

NEW YORK, Jan. 21 (Canadian Press).—A twenty-nine-year Scotsman will sally forth into the resin dust of the Madison Square Garden ring to-night in quest of the world's flyweight crown which famous Jimmy Wilde lost here more than three years ago.

Elky Clarke's attempt to regain the title for Great Britain from Fidel Labarba of California will mark the far west titleholder's most important eastern conflict since he mounted the throne a year and a half ago. It also will be the champion's first "long distance" fight here during his brief reign among the little men of fistiana, for Labarba, after being limited to six round contests in New York before reaching his majority, this time will have twelve three-minute rounds within which to clinch his claim to world supremacy.

Ring critics have not been favorably impressed with the challenger's training exhibitions, and Labarba has been made a 2 to 1 favorite.

YOUNG INTERVIEWS LASKY

The picture was also sent across the continent by wire.

HYDRO WINS TOP IN TOWN LEAGUE

Hangs up 11 to 4 Victory Over Menie Team at Campbellford.

CAMPBELLFORD, Jan. 21. — The Hydro went to the top of the Town League standing when they defeated Menie, 11 to 4, at Covert's Arena Wednesday night. While there is no doubt the better team won on the night's play, the Electric Boys were hardly entitled to a seven goal margin, for while Owens in the Menie net made some clever saves he was easily beaten on other occasions. The Midget goaler clearly had an offnight and with the exception of Kerr and Shillinglaw, none of the Menie gang played up to their usual form. Rannie in particular being a big disappointment. The lanky centre lacked his usual speed and aggressiveness and had difficulty in controlling the puck. The Menie forwards failed to show the slightest semblance of combination, and were more inclined to over-skate the puck, on the sticky ice, than the Electric Boys were.

The biggest crowd of the season, even larger than the High School drew against Deseronto, jammed their way into the rink in anticipation of a close game, and while it was far from being the best game of the season, the teams played good hockey in view of the condition of the ice. With a fast sheet of ice there is no doubt Menie would have made a better showing against their heavier opponents.

It just took the Hydro ten seconds to open the scoring when Johnston grabbed Cowell's pass from the face-off and raced right in on Owens. Watt got Number 2 for the Hydro on a shot from the wing after a run down the boards, and a minute later Cowell picked up a loose puck in front of the Menie cage and made it 3 to 0.

Menie took a hand in the offensive and Shillinglaw went from end to end twice, Saunders made a nice save on the first attempt and Shillinglaw shot wide on his second try. Hay got through to the defence where he was stopped by Beatty. Just before time, Watt went around the Menie defence for a nice goal, and the period ended 4 to 0.

Watt was right in on top of Owens, but the young net guardian blocked the shot, and sent the Hydro wing man sprawling. Watt grabbed the puck out of a scramble in front of the Menie net and bulged the twine for No. 5.

Hay went down alone, but Saunders came out to met him, and the fast skating Hay took a nose dive into the net. Kerr by a beautiful piece of stick-handling, got the first for Menie. He carried in but shot wide of the mark, regaining possession behind the net, he wormed his way around three Hydro men to shove the puck in the corner of the net.

Then Watt landed his fourth goal of the game on a long shot that Owens played poorly. Cowell circled the net to score another easy one a minute later.

Rannie made a nice try for the Orange and Black boys, but Saunders was in the way, and Brunnelle threatened the Menie net as the whistle blew. Hydro 7, Menie 1

Menie opened up at a fast clip at the start of the third and Kerr waded through the Hydro defence for a goal in half a minute. The Hydro got that back when Hay, attempting to clear, shot the rubber into his own net. Menie were having slightly the better of the play, till Kerr drew a penalty for hooking Johnston. Cowell got two in quick succession, the first on an individual effort and the second on a pass from Johnston.

Shillinglaw drew a penalty for bodying Beatty outside the blue line and Brunnelle came down the vacant side for the Hydro's last tally. When Shillinglaw returned he and Kerr staged a nice run down the ice but the effort came to grief on Saunder's pads. Kerr came back again and Coulter camped in front, shot the rebound into the Hydro net and the same player went down the south boards for another counter shortly after. For the remaining time the Hydro played a defensive game and Menie were unable to better their position.

Menie.—Ted Owens, goal; Shillinglaw and Hay, defence; Rannie, centre; Lynn, right wing; Kerr, left wing; Coulter, W. Owens, Daniel, subs.

The Elks trimmed the Tigers in the Midget game 1 to 0, and are leading the parade by a slight margin. None of the Midget teams are showing the improvement expected of them and refuse to obey instructions of their managers. Unless they do so and show some semblance of team work it is likely the series will be discontinued. Line up:

Referee—F. Ingram, Stirling.

REDS DEFEAT GREYS AT MARMORA RINK

Poor Ice Hinders Work of Players on Tuesday Night.

MARMORA, Jan. 21.—On Ice a little the worse for the weather, at Deloro rink on Tuesday evening the Reds prevailed over the Greys to the extent of 3-0. The latter team, renowned for speed, could not get going on the poor ice with the result that their opponents warmed up and made a keen tussle. J. Quinn scored twice in the first period and Eric Mantle secured the final counter in the last period. G. McWilliams of Marmora refereed.

Teams:

Reds—Goal, H. Palmer; right defence, A. V. Yates; left defence, H. F. Berry; centre, J. Quinn; right wing, E. Mantle; left wing, F. Leal; subs, L. Crawford, C. Buchmann.

Jim Thorpe, the famous Indian football player of former days, is now managing a semi-professional eleven at South Bend Ind.

BRISTLING BATTLES of BARE FIST DAYS

(MY LIFE STORY)

By Jack McAuliffe

CHAPTER FOURTEEN

(Copyright 1927, NEA Service, Inc.)

If Tex Rickard had been promoting fights around Boston and New York at the time I was fighting and he was just half as active as he is to-day he'd have been convicted to serve about five life sentences in prison!

Just when the Puritanical war against the manly art was at its fever heat my best pal, Ned O'Baldwin, was sentenced to ten years for just attempting to stage a fight.

Notwithstanding all this I went ahead and matched myself against Harry Gilmore, a Canadian, fighter of great reputtion and the dude of the day.

And where do you imagine we fought? On January 14, 1887, we met in a small room in the presence of 8 well known New York and Boston sportsmen, including the original Jack Dempsey, who seconded me, right under a Salvation Army meeting.

They were on the floor above and as I jumped out of my corner to meet Gilmore the Army lassies started singing "When the war is over we'll wear a crown."

I laughed out loud but Gilmore with a snakey left, smeared the grin off my face and we settled down to one of the toughest battles of my entire career. One that nearly blinded me for life!

Gilmore was superby built and Jack Dempsey, looking him over said, "He's slim around the waist, go after his body." So I tried to get in close but he kept spearing me with his left—the best left in the game at that time.

Gene Tunney has a clever way of hitting down over an opponent's eyes with his left fist. He nearly closed the modern Jack Dempsey's eyes that way. Well, this fellow Gilmore was the same way only he had barefists to do his eye-closing damage with.

It was the custom in those days to try to blind your opponent if you were good enough. Well Gilmore was plenty good. I was being slowly cut to ribbons and didn't know it.

When Dempseys aid in a warning whisper "Your eyes are going," he knew it, but I didnt. My face was sore and puffed but I could see fine, though I could not see my eyes closing as Dempsey did.

In the 19th round I went stark blind. I though someone was trifling with the lamps and yelled:

"Turn up the lamps!"

Then it seemd a million knuckles were tearing at my eyes.

NOTE: In the next chapter McAuliffe tells how the fight came out and how a doctor at the ringside was going to lance his eyes between rounds.

YANKS TO KEEP INFIELD INTACT

Huggins' Team Will Be Better as Result of Experience.

SEES IMPROVEMENT.

NEW YORK, Jan. 21.—The club that smashed its way to the 1926 American League pennant, upsetting pre-season predictions, probably will take the field intact for the 1927 campaign.

Seasoned by their victory as well as by a world's series fight that was lost only by a narrow margin, the New York Yankees, most critics believe, have a well balanced combination of youth and experience, speed and hitting power that will be difficult to stop.

While many of their rivals face reorganization this spring—five of them having acquired new managers—the Yankees have the advantage of keeping their ranks solid. They went through a drastic shakeup a year ago but packed sufficient punch to offset any weaknesses developed in moulding a new "kid infield."

Sees Improvement.

This inner cordon, Manager Miller Huggins believes, will be the high-spot of the 1927 Yankee drive. He looks for the combination of Gehrig, Lazzeri and Koenig, along with the veteran third sacker, Dugan, to smooth out the kinks and show big improvement. Koenig was an uncertain link last season and there was talk that he would be replaced but Huggins has not lost confidence in the former St. Paul star.

Babe Ruth, who staged a comeback last year, is out for another crack at his home-run record. Huggins believes the Babe again will be the main gun on the attack, flanked by Bob Meusel and Earl Combs, other outfield regulars, as well as the big bats of Lazzeri and Gehrig.

Depend on Veterans.

Unless new pitching strength is acquired from a batch of recruits or via the trade route, the club again must depend on its veterans. Of these, Shawkey and Jones have shown signs of shipping, but Pennock and Hoyt, stars of the world series, again are counted on as mainstays, along with Shocker and Reuther, southpaw veteran.

Behind the bat, Bengough, his arm recovered from last season's break, will do the bulk of the work, aided by Grabowski, acquired from the White Sox, along with Ray Morehart, infielder, in exchange for Aaron Ward. This deal is he only one of consequence the Yankees have made this winter so far.

MRS. SHULMAN IS DISMISSED

Justice Lennox Finds No Proof She Supplied Bad Alcohol.

ANOTHER CHARGE.

TORONTO, Jan. 21. — Mrs. Justice Lennox yesterday dismissed the charge of manslaughter against Fannie Shulman arising out of the death of Irene Colesnick. It was alleged that Mrs. Shulman had sold Mrs. Colesnick poison alcohol.

His Lordship dismissed the case without defence witnesses being called. He pointed out that the evidence showed that the Colesnick woman had been drinking on Saturday and Sunday prior to her death, and that he felt she had probably been drinking again on Monday and Tuesday. "Fannie Shulman certainly supplied liquor," he concluded, "but there is no proof that she supplied the bad alcohol."

Mrs. Shulman was then bound by $5000 bail pending argument by counsel as to what action would be taken in the second manslaughter charge facing her, which was laid following the death of Richard Atkinson. The date for this hearing was not decided.

TOGO TO ENTER DOG SLED DERBY

Dog That Helped Take Anti-Toxin To Nome In One Team.

RACE NEXT MONTH.

MONTREAL, Que., Jan. 21. — (Special.) Togo, one of the two wonder dogs, who with Balto, was the hero of the race to Nome at the time of the influenza epidemic, and who carried the anti-toxin that saved so many lives in the depths of an arctic winter, will take part in the Eastern International dog sled Derby to be held at Quebec, on Feb. 21 to 23.

Information received at headquarters from Leonard Seppala, driver in the Nome race against death, states that he will enter for the big race at Quebec next month, and that Togo will take part in the contest.

Entries for the dog derby are coming in well and it is expected that there will hardly be less than 21 contestants in the 120 mile race spread over three days, in which the pick of the dog sled racers from all over Canada and the United States will participate.

Melodramatic Suicide In New York Restaurant

NEW YORK, N.Y., Jan. 21 (United Press).—An auburn haired young woman melodramatically committed suicide in a fashionable upper East Side restaurant during the afternoon. Another girl and two men companions fled during the excitement, leaving unpaid a bill of $16.

Patrons at nearby tables were startled by a cry, "I'm through with you all."

They saw the young woman stride from the table to a retiring room, dragging a fur coat on the floor. A moment later there were screams. She had drunk the contents of a bottle of poison, and was dead before an ambulance arrived.

IN MEMORIAM.

In loving memory of my dear father, Mr. Ambrose Jones, who died Jan. 21st, 1924:
Deep in my heart lies a picture
Of a dear one laid to rest
In memory's frame I will keep it
Because he was one of the best.

My lips cannot speak how I loved him,
My heart cannot tell what to say,
God only knows, I miss him
In a home that is lonesome to-day.

Father dear, I think of you,
And think of how you died,
To think you could not say goodbye
Before you closed your eyes.

CUSTOMS OFFICIALS SMUGGLED LIQUOR

U. S. Officers Arrest Two Canadians at Buffalo Ferry Dock.

NIAGARA FALLS, Ont., Jan. 21. —News of the arrest of two Canadian Customs officials, well-known here, came as somewhat of a sensation yesterday. Although one was arrested ten days ago, it did not become known until yesterday afternoon.

Allan Ferguson, formerly stationed at Fort Erie, was arrested as he drove his own car off the ferry boat at Buffalo. In the car were found 252 quarts of whisky. He was held for questioning before a United States Commissioner and later released on bail. The car was ordered confiscated.

On Wednesday Louis Lamb, Bridgeburg, was caught under similar circumstances as he drove onto the Buffalo ferry dock. The officers found in his car 264 quarts of Canadian ale. His car was seized and is being held until bail can be procured. Both men have been suspended by the Canadian Customs Department.

Both officers are very well-known here and along the border. Both are returned soldiers and Lamb was an unsuccessful candidate at the recent municipal elections in Bridgeburg. According to the authorities on both sides of the river, an agreement had been reached to keep the arrests quiet until an investigation being made along both sides of the border is completed. Pressed, however, the officials admitted the truth of the arrests and indicated the likelihood of further arrests.

The case stirred public interest considerably because the 16 year old fiancee of the youngest defendant committed suicide in despair over his erring ways.

FEAR ENTRANCE OF SPANISH 'FLU

Special Precautions Announced by Federal Department of Health.

IS PREVALENT

(By Universal Service, Special Cable Dispatch.)

MEXICO CITY, Jan. 21.—Special precautions to prevent the entrance of the dreaded Spanish influenza were announced this morning by the Federal Department of eHalth, with the explanation that similar measures are being taken in the United States and Cuba in an effort to bar the disease now prevalent in Southern Europe.

Certain forms of influenza are always feared in the Mexico City valley at this season, and the authorities are especially desirous of keeping out the virulent Spanish type.

Considerable grippe is already prevalent in the capital, on account of the wind, dust and the unusual cold, with no prospect of final relief until it rains in April or May.

Prepare and Serve Meal For Better Halves—Annual Meeting.

The Men's Association of St. Andrew's Church is a very live organization and one of its big meetings each year is the annual Ladies' Night. This year the men undertook to provide a supper for the ladies, it being understood that the men themselves were wholly responsible for the tables, food, serving, etc. Under the skillful hand of Harry Dicken, ably seconded by the president of the association, Herb. Gillespie, and others, the supper was a great success. Dainty refreshments served by a scose of young men, splendid singing by a quartette consisting of Messrs M. H. Park, T. H. Gilespie, Douglas Carlisle, and R. A. Brown, and a crowded dining room characterized the event. A four-piece volunteer orchestra, led by Pearson Mowry, supplied music.

T. H. Gillespie was in the chair and called upon the Pastor, Rev. J. W. Gordon, to introduce the speaker of the evening, Rev. David Wren of Trinity United Church. The subject of Mr. Wren's able, timely, and stirring address was "The Importance of the Pacific Ocean for this Present Age."

The address was characterized by careful thought and earnestness and was an ideal deliverance for such an occasion.

The supper was followed by the annual meeting of the congregation for which a very large number remained. Owing to the fact that for this year the church year does not end until March 31st, reports were incomplete. Careful consideration was given to the various interests of congregation and plans made for the year 1927. The attendance and interest shown marked the meeting as one of the best in the history of the congregation. The Pastor, Rev. J. W. Gordon, presided.

Y.M.C.A. OFFICIALS GIVE REPORTS SHOWING VERY SUCCESSFUL YEAR

Association Seems To Have Passed Period of Hard Times.

ANNUAL MEETING.

Retiring Directors Re-elected —Tribute Paid George Young.

A most successful year was reported by all officials of the Young Men's Christian Association, at the annual meeting, held last night. The president, George A. Gillespie, was in the chair, and a large number of directors and active members attended. The financial report showed an even break on the year, although last year's deficit still stands.

Among the many interesting things brought out in the various reports, which will be given in full at a later date, was a compoarison with other associations in cities of similar size, which showed more work done than the average, although the operating cost was only 48 per cent.

Tribute was paid to George Young by John R. Marshall, and the secretary was instructed to write Mrs. Young, extending the congratulations of the local association on her son's feat, and conveying the pleasure felt that he had received his training in a Y.M.C.A. pool. Pleasure was also expressed that he had shown, by his character, that he was a true member of the Y.M.C.A. in every sense.

Speaking on this motion, the general secretary, G. H. Roper, said that now that the Association had seemed to pass the period of great difficulty, it was hoped that the construction of a new pool, larger and better equipped, would be possible.

The nominating committee's report, recommending the re-election of J. J. Turner, Joseph Wearing, W. A. Richardson, E. B. Fowler, and B. D. Hall, and the election of J. H. Vernor in place of H. R. H. Kenner, who wished to withdraw, was accepted. These elections to the board of directors are for a term of three years.

HONOR MUSICIAN.

PARIS, Jan. 22. — Clara Damrosch Mannes, a member of the famous American Damrosch family, recently received a rare honor from the French government—the rosette of an "officer de l'instruction publique." The decoration granted the woman musician recognizes her services as an artist and educator. She is very much interested in the teaching of music to children.

Head Of Murdered Woman To Be Produced In Court

WOODSTOCK, Vt., Jan. 22 (United Press).—John Winters, 31, an ex-convict on trial for his life here, may find himself next week face to face with the head of the woman he is alleged to have murdered.

Dr. Fred I. Kent, attached to the State Laboratory at Burlington, revealed on the witness stand late on Friday that the head of Miss Cecilia Gullivan, the victim, had been carefully preserved and would be introduced as a State exhibit.

The prosecuting attorney plans to use the head in an effort to convince the jury that wounds which caused the womans death were inflicted with a chisel discovered in a bed in Winter's home.

Miss Gullivan, formerly of Whitman, Mass., was killed at her Windsor home on November 7th last. Winters is alleged to have murdered her during a criminal attack.

BRITISH AND U. S. GOVERNMENTS SHOW ANXIETY

Washington Orders Minister Back To Port—British Cabinet Meets.

MEN LEAVE HANKOW.

Unconfirmed Reports Say 1,000 Have Started For Hankow.

(By Canadian Press).

Although no new anti-foreign outbreaks are reported in despatches from China, British newspapers regard instructions of United States Government to John A. MacMurray, Minister to China, to return to his post, as an indication that there must be ground for anxiety in Washington.

A Cabinet meeting held in London yesterday is also regarded as an indication of the receipt of important late news.

A despatch received in London from Hankow is interpreted by the Evening News as meaning that business is to be resumed in the British concession, now controlled by Chinese Nationalists, following riots there early this month. On the other hand, an unconfirmed report Friday said 1,000 British and American men were evacuating Hankow and joining their wives and families in Shanghai.

The British Government and President Coolidge state that military steps now being taken are for the protection of nationals of their respective countries. There has been no modification of the conciliatory attitude adopted toward the legitimate aspirations of Chinese nationalism.

Two battalions of British troops have been ordered to prepare themselves for service in China.

Chu Chaohein, China's representative on the League of Nations Council, predicted the abolition of all "unequal treaties" sooner or later.

Friendlier feelings and increased commerce to Powers who voluntarily relinquish their extracrdinary treaty privileges are predicted by the Chinese representative.

Evacuation Unconfirmed.

PEKING, Jan. 22. — (Canadian Press).—There is no confirmation here of the report that Hankow is being evacuated by foreign men. Rumor was widely circulated here yesterday. All indications are, however, that the Hankow situation is growing more tense daily.

U. S. Sends Ammunition.

MANILA, Jan. 22 (Canadian Press).—The United States steamer Stewart sailed to-day for Chinwangtao, north of Tientsin, with stores of ammunition for the Fifteenth Infantry. A United States army contingent maintains headquarters at Chinwangtao.

Outlook Serious.

LONDON, Jan. 22 (Canadian Press).—Notwithstanding the hopeful tone of the Foreign Office regarding the situation in China, some of the morning papers believe the outlook is more serious than in recent months. This is mainly because of cabled reports that the United States Government is anxious over Chinese affairs and the announcement that the United States Minister at Peking, John MacMurray, who had started for Washington, was instructed to return to his post. The assumption of the press seems to be that if Washington is gravely concerned there must be ground for anxiety which is not known to the general public here.

Babe Ruth Charged With Labor Law Breach

SAN DIEGO, Calif, Jan. 22 (United Press).—Babe Ruth today faced charges of violating the California Child Labor Law.

A complaint charging that several children appeared in Ruth's vaudeville act at a theatre here last week and charging Ruth with violation of the Labor Law, was sworn out last night by Stanley M. Gue, Deputy State Labor Commissioner. On the pretext of giving them autographed baseballs, Ruth invited children on the stage, and then asked them to sing, dance, and recite, according to information at the Labor office.

PETERBORO MEN APPLY FOR JOB

Three Seek Constable's Position—Wm. Londerville Injured.

CURLERS ACTIVE.

HASTINGS, Jan. 22. — Of the many applications received by Mr. Alex. Wilson, Muncipal Clerk, for the position of police constable, three were from Peterborough, and were to be opened with the other score or more at last nights meeting of the Council. Meanwhile Reeve Hess is getting ready for the County Council sessions next week with three requests,—one for the lighting of the local bridge, another for re-flooring it, and the third is the scheme for paving the main streets that link up the county road systems of Peterborough and Northumberland counties. The Reeve is grooming himself to meet any opposition that may blow up.

While returning from the home of a distressed family where he had performed a neighborly act, William Londerville fell on the icy sidewalk Thursday morning, dislocating a shoulder. He was attended by Dr. J. A. MacDonald.

The curlers are planning a knock-out competition for next week and are as yet undecided about the date of the visit of several rinks to Campbellford.

It was understood yesterday that electric power would be shut off for several days next week on account of alterations to the local plant.

Reeve Hess' Chevrolet showroom is stocked with new models for the 1927 automobile season. The improvements and also the lines and colors of this year's offerings ar especially attractive features.

ALBANY, N.Y., Jan. 22. — (United Press). — Thomas Kindlon, of this city, was electrocuted in Sing Sing Prison in June, 1925.

GREAT BRITAIN HAS NOT MODIFIED ITS ATTITUDE OF CONCILIATION

Issues Statement Regarding Precautionary Military Action Taken By British.

PROTECT SUBJECTS.

Foreign Office Expresses the Hope That Negotiations Will Succeed.

LONDON, Jan. 22 (Canadian Press).—Great Britain has not modified its attitude of conciliation toward the "legitimate aspirations" of Chinese nationalism, says a statement issued by the Foreign Office last night. The statement deprecates "sensational announcements" regarding the precautionary naval and military action taken by the British with regard to the Chinese situation, and expresses hope that the negotiations now going on in China will succeed.

The statement follows:

"The naval and military dispositions made in connection with the Chinese situation are precautionary. Sensational announcements regarding them are to be deprecated and disregarded. Their sole object is to enable His Majesty's Government to fulfill the elementary duty of protecting the lives of British subjects whose safety is, in their charge, if such protection is proved necessary. Undertakings to that effect were given during the last session of Parliament by the Prime Minister and by the Foreign Secretary.

"There has been no modification whatsoever of the conciliatory attitude toward the legitimate aspirations of Chinese nationalism, so clearly laid down in the memorandum upon the Chinese policy which the Government issued Christmas. On the contrary, conversations are in progress at Hankow and Peking, which, if successful, will go far toward complementing the conces-

Prince Takes Exercise On An Electric Steed

LONDON, Jan. 22. — (United Press.) — The Prince of Wales has purchased an electric hobby horse, and has the "beast" tethered in one of the rooms of Saint James' palace, which is his London home.

When weather conditions or social engagements prevent the Prince from getting into the open to hunt the fox behind the hounds at Melton Mowbray, he joggles to his own satisfaction aboard "Sparks," which may or (or may not) be the name of the new mount.

LONDON, Jan. 22 (United Press) —Two thousand Caspian fishermen have been frozen to death at Astrakhan, and hundreds of homeless waifs have met a similar fate in Crimean and Ukranian cities in one of the coldest winters in the history of Russia, a dispatch from the Moscow correspondent of The Daily Mail said today.

Trains are snowbound in many sections of the country and passengers are arriving at their destinations with frozen hands and feet.

ROYAL COMMISSION TO PROBE DISASTER

Premier Taschereau, of Quebec Announces Thorough Inquiry.

MONTREAL, Jan. 22 (Canadian Press).—Premier L. A. Taschereau of the Province of Quebec announced here today that a Royal Commission would investigate the Laurier Palace disaster in which 78 lives were lost. The announcement came after the Premier had received several delegations who demanded a thorough inquiry of the catastrophe.

SEVEN BUILDINGS DESTROYED BY FIRE

Serious Blaze Occurs During Last Night at Rossland, B.C.

ROSSLAND, B.C., Jan. 22 (Canadian Press).—Fire originating in the Frank Morris vacant store, owned by W. F. McNeil, last night destroyed seven buildings on the south side of Columbia Avenue, including the store named, the Thomas Brown Store, the Robert Stevens Building, the office of W. F. Esling, M.P., the office of Police Magistrate R. E. Plewman, and two vacant buildings.

Rest Home Now Claims War Hero of the Somme

LONDON, Jan. 22. — Galloping about riderless on the Somme battlefield, "Roger," now a famous war horse, reached Lieut. Day of the Machine Gun Corps, just in time to provide that gallant officer with a much needed mount. Vaulting into the saddle he galloped across the Hindenburg line in triumph, at Thiens.

MOTHER SAVES YOUNG CHILDREN

AT MAPLE LAKE.

LINDSAY, Jan. 22—The settlement of Maple Lake, Haliburton County, almost furnished another holacaust to the number that has saddened a number of Ontario centres during the past several weeks. A few days ago, at an early hour, fire destroyed the house of Edgar Barry, at Maple Lake, together with all the contents. It was due to the work of Mrs. Barry that her children were saved. The fire started from the stovepipes. Mr. Barry was away at the time and the flames had made considerable progress before being noticed by his wife. She hurriedly wrapped the children in the bed clothing and carried them from the burning building to safety. There was no insurance on house or contents.

URGE REMOVAL TAX ON CHARITY

Kiwanis Club To Send Delegation To Government With Request.

SEND RESOLUTION.

Peterborough Kiwanis Club, in co-operation with the Federation for Community Service of Toronto, will send a delegate to Ottawa on Wednesday, January 26, to request the Government to remove the income war tax imposed on contributions to charitable and educational objects. Harry Huffman, Chairman of the Committee on Public Affairs, has been selected as the Club's representative.

A previous request was made in 1924, but the Government could not then see its way to make the exemption. In view of promises of tax reduction during the present year, the time is considered favorable for a renewed effort to have contributions to charitable purposes deducted from income tax reports and thus exempt from tax.

Whereas the work of the educational and charitable institutions of Canada depends to a considerable extent upon voluntary contributions, and

Whereas no deduction from income tax is permissible in respect of such contributions, and

Whereas many who would otherwise be willing to contribute are thus deterred from doing so,

Be it therefore resolved:

That the Federal Government be requested to amend the Income War Tax Act, 1917, at the present Session of Parliament, so that every person or corporation shall be entitled to deduct from his or its income all sums donated to charitable or educational foundations or institutions,

Provided that such foundations or institutions are duly registered as approved foundations or institutions in accordance with regulations to be made by the Governor General in Council.

Signed on behalf of the Kiwanis Club of Peterborough, Isaac P. McNabb, president.

NEW FLOWERS.

HONLULU, Jan. 22.—Two mysterious hibiscus blossoms are promised Hawaii by J. do Rego, Honolulu's latest 'flower "inventor.' The blossoms will be known as the "blue bell" and the "pagoda." It is thought that the "blue bell" is a hybrid obtained by crossing the blue bell of Scotland with the rare and delicate mauve hibiscus. The "pagoda" will be a three-tier blossom, with a deep red base, a white centre and small single blue top.

ROLAND DENNE AGAIN ELECTED PRESIDENT OF EXHIBITION BOARD

Election Yesterday Marks Tenth Consecutive Year as Head of the Board.

FINANCE REPORT.

More Room Needed in Main Building For Outside Exhibitors.

Roland Denne was elected president of the Peterborough Industrial Exhibition Board for the tenth consecutive year at the annual meeting that was held in the Council Chambers yesterday afternoon.

The financial statement of the Board shows a surplus for the year of $2,778.45, which is a remarkable achievement as there were two wet days during the week's Exhibition. The president in his address thanked the members for their co-operation during the past, and he stressed the fact that the Exhibition had got to a point when more thought and energy was required than ever before. "One thing that I would like to see accomplished this year would be the construction of a new main building, for more room is necessary for outside exhibitors," said Mr. Denne.

In discussing the financial statement, W. Merrill, chairman of the Dog Show Committee, took exception to the statement in regards to the dog show, as this department really had a surplus of about $200, as the gate receipts were put in with the general gate and stand receipts.

Tragedy Ends Party; Alcohol Blinds Girl

BROOKLYN, N.Y., Jan. 22 (United Press).—A night club foursome that started out in a dance threatened to end in tragedy as a result of a single drink.

Miss Lillian Courtney, a pretty blonde, reached for her companion's bottle, poured out a small drink, and swallowed it.

Then she gasped: "For God's sake don't drink that. It's burning my stomach out."

She collapsed and was rushed to a hospital and there became totally blind. Physicians said that if she recovers, which they doubt, she will be blind for life.

The owner of the bottle, William Smith, also of Brooklyn, is under arrest on a technical assault charge.

The bottle contained wood alcohol—colored and flavored to resembled whiskey.

UNTAUGHT BOYS UNABLE TO TELL WHAT A LIE WAS

Lads Living Within Ten Miles of City Unable To Read.

APPEAR IN COURT.

Had Never Been To Sunday School Or Heard of Bible.

Two brothers, aged 12 and 10 years respectively residing within 10 miles of the City of Peterborough, told Magistrate O. A. Langley in police court this morning that they could not write; did not know what an oath was; and that they had never been to Sunday school or heard of the Bible.

Dealing with the youngsters in his usual kindly manner towards young people and trying to get them accustomed to the police court surroundings, His Worship endeavored to discover their knowledge of the difference between right and wrong. The boys professed complete ignorance of every question asked, even saying that they did not know what a lie was. His Worship expressed amazement that such a condition could be possible, declaring: "Why two boys aged 12 and 10, living within 10 miles of Peterborough cannot write their names, warrants an immediate investigation."

Provincial Constable Norman F. Maker volunteered the remark that the boys simply would not go to school.

The boys were called as witnesses in an assault case when an elderly woman, a resident of North Monaghan, charged her nephew with assaulting her.

The dispute arose over a gate and in the ensuing argument the complainant alleged that the accused had struck her, knocking her over the oven door, after which she fell on the floor. He then jerked her up by the collar of her coat, she said.

The accused was fined $5 and $21.80 costs.

IN POLICE COURT.

A woman, a resident of Belmont Township, bearing in her arms a two weeks old baby, appeared before His Worship this morning, charged with a serious offence. Her son is already in custody on a similar charge.

The case was adjourned until Monday.

Lodge Title Is Applied To Presiding Magistrate

A police magistrate receives many different appellations from witnesses who are unacquainted with the proper method of address but who are anxious that the form they use should be in strict accord with the dignity of the office.

This morning, in police court, a witness who was called by the accused in an assault charge, to give character evidence on his behalf, pulled a new one.

The remark caused His Worship to smile, as he proceeded to inform the witness as to the proper mode of address.

DROWNED IN CAR

Automobile Goes Through Ice Without Warning—Son Escapes.

KINGSTON, Ont., Jan. 22.—Mrs. James Howard, who resided at Indian Point, Prince Edward County, lost her life yesterday afternoon at three o'clock when an automobile in which she was driving broke through the ice when a short distance from the shore. The car was driven by her son, Vere Howard.

The mother and son were returning from Stella and were close to shore near Indian Point when the two felt the ice giving way. The son was able to get out of the car and jump to solid ice, but the car containing his mother sank before he could render any assistance. The body of Mrs. Howard was located about one hour later.

For a week horse-drawn vehicles have been crossing and it was considered that the ice was perfectly safe. Mrs. Howard was 85 years of age. She had recently sold the farm on Amherst Island and was residing with her son.

Chaplin Greatly Puzzled By Income Tax Troubles

NEW YORK, Jan. 22. — Canadian Press. — Penniless, weak, and without money enough to hire a taxi, Charlie Chaplin today was hoping that his difficulties with the government over his income tax returns, would be settled within a few days.

"I don't know what it all means," was Chaplin's only comment made to a reporter who met him on his return from a short ride in Central Park, his first venture out of doors since his nervous break down. "I've just got up out of bed, and I'm still pretty weak and wobbly," he said. Chaplin, according to Nathan Burkan, his counsel, would be absolutely penniless, and "unable to hire a taxi" if it were not for his friends.

DEMAND PROBE CAMPAIGN FUND IN B.C. HOUSE

Customs Sittings Find Echo in British Columbia Legislature.

SWEEPING INQUIRY.

Measure Authorizes Investigation of Payments To Liquor Employees.

VICTORIA, B.C., Jan. 22 (Canadian Press).—The question of campaign funds and alleged bribery of government employees, which has been bobbing up in the legislature almost daily since the beginning of the session, loomed up larger yesterday with the introduction by Attorney-General A. M. Manson of a bill providing for departmental inquiries under oath; the announcement by Speaker Buckham that a Labor motion for a campaign fund probe would be passed upon by the house in committee next Monday, and by a personal demand voiced by J. Hinchcliffe, Conservative, Victoria, that the government conduct a sweeping inquiry into the whole campaign funds question.

Searching Probe

Mr. Manson promised that under his bill a searching investigation into the reported improper payments of money to liquor board employees would be held.

In introducing his bill, the attorney-general said he followed the line of existing federal legislation and empowered ministers to start department inquiries and to examine officials under oath. The bill was given first reading.

FOREIGNERS FLEE INTERIOR CHINA

Report One Thousand British and American Men Leaving Hankow.

PEKING, Jan. 22.— (Canadian Press.)— Harassed by the steadily growing antipathy of the Chinese, foreigners continued their exodus from interior China yesterday. One thousand British and American men were leaving Hankow, said a private telegram from foreign sources.

Since coolie mobs stormed the British concession December 3 and 4 and its administration was taken over by the nationalist government authorities, British and American men have remained in barricaded buildings awaiting the subsidence of Chinese hostility. They abandoned their business houses and homes largely in the concessions after sending their women and children to Shanghai, 585 miles down the Yangtse river.

British and U. S. warships have stood in the river ready to go into action or land men if the nationalist troops proved unable to prevent violence. There has been no report of such necessity, but radical agitation and the urging of strikes has continued, and it is believed the foreigners became convinced that there was no immediate prospect of restoration of normal conditions.

Twenty-seven American missionaries left Chung King, Szechwan province for Hankow yesterday. Twenty-five arrived at Chung King from interior points Thursday, obeying instructions from their superiors to go to places of safety as a precautionary measure.

Word was received here of the arrival at Manila of sixty-five American missionary refugees from Foochow, where some foreigners were roughly handled by Chinese mobs Sunday and their church premises looted.

SEEKS NEW MEANS OF MAKING PAPER

Lord Beaverbrook Is Reported Probing System For Possibilities.

LONDON, Jan. 22.—Lord Beaverbrook has gone to Ceylon on the warship Resolute and, the British Press learns, has excited considerable curiosity in London.

In some circles it is asserted that the publisher is interested in finding a new method of manufacturing newsprint in view of the anticipated rise throughout the newspaper world, which is causing no little concern to those huge combines having no means of ensuring their future supplies.

It is considered likely that when various groups of newspaper publishers and proprietors become stabilized they will follow the example of Lord Northcliffe and establish their own newsprint mills in Canada.

LLOYD GEORGE CONTROLS PARTY

Following Resignation Leaders of Asquithian Wing From Organizing Committee.

ACCEPT FUND.

LONDON, Jan. 22.—(Canadian Press.)—Resignation from the organizing committee of leaders of the Asquithian wing of the Liberal party yesterday left former Premier David Lloyd George in complete control of the whole party organization. His followers now expect him to take steps to infuse new life into the party which of late years has lost much of its former power.

Viscount Grey, Vivian Phillips, Sir William Plander, Sir Robert Hudson and Lady Violet Bonham Carter, all strong supporters of the Earl of Oxford and Asquith, resigned from the committee in accordance with a vote requesting such action on Wednesday.

The organizing committee on Wednesday re-affirmed its acceptance of Mr. Lloyd George's offer of a £300,000 funds for the next general election in addition to £40,000 annually for headquarters and party purposes.

The former premier made it a condition that he retain control of the fund, but it is understood that he is taking steps to secure it permanently for Liberal party purposes. Vivian Phillips and other strong supporters of the Asquithian faction also were asked to resign from the organizing committee. The Earl of Oxford and Asquith, long leaders of the Liberals resigned his leadership last October after a long controversy with Mr. Lloyd George over party policies particularly with reference to the attitude of the Liberals during the general strike last May.

Lyrics Of Life

(By Douglas Malloch.)

WHEN TWO CATS PLAY

When our two cats begin to play
They seem so happy and so gay.
They're up the stairs, and down the stairs,
And under tables, over chairs.
They seem to be the best of friends;
And yet, before the frolic ends,
They start to spar, they start to spat—
I wonder why cats act like that?

Though Skeezix seems so full of fun,
And Tarzan (that's the other one),
It isn't ever very long,
It seems, before there's something wrong.
Their fur stands up, and claws appear.
And there's a fight, or pretty near.
It's always that way with a cat.
I wonder why they act like that?

You'd think two friends, two brothers, too
Could play the way they ought to do,
And, even if they chance to fall,
Could keep their tempers through it all.
But one gets rough, and one gets mad,
Before their romp they've really had.
I wonder, too—not just a cat—
Why children sometimes act like that?

NO DECISION YET GIVEN IN APPEAL OF BUS COMPANY

Motor Bus Accident Case Comes Before Toronto Court.

JUDGMENT RESERVED.

TORONTO, Jan. 22.—Only a few days before it collided with a White Star Transit Company's bus on the road between Hamilton and St. Catharines, Harry Johnstone had paid $300 for his second-hand car. In the interval, however, he had put some repairs on the car and he told the jury in his action for damages that he would not have sold it for $700. The jury awarded him $300 for the damaged car.

The appeal of the White Star Company from the judgment of Justice Mowat, who awarded Harry Johnstone $2,431, Rita Johnstone $3,571 and Christopher Jordan $608, was resumed before the first divisional court yesterday. M. J. O'Reilly, K.C., counsel for plaintiffs, answering the court as to the woman's losses, stated that Mrs. Johnstone conducted a dancing academy and that as a result of her injuries, earnings were reduced. Mrs. Johnstone had to get 26 stitches in her face, and her nose was broken.

Unsatisfactory, He Says.

T. C. Agar, K.C., counsel for appellants, stated that the evidence of Mrs. Johnstone and Jordan was very unsatisfactory as to their former earnings. He could get nothing out of them except a general statement as to their average earnings.

As to the complaint that defendants were refused an application for a physical examination of the female plaintiff, Mr. O'Reilly argued that the trial judge was right in refusing such an application made during the trial.

Irrelevant Evidence.

Justice Ferguson: It seems to me that a lot of irrelevant matter has been allowed on the record in this case. What, for instance, has dancing in olden times to do with this issue? That is not an issue up here.

Mr. O'Reilly: I don't think it had any effect on the jury.

Mr. Agar: It was to show the difference in earnings between old time dancers and Charleston dancers.

Justice Ferguson: There are pages and pages of irrelevant matter that would tend to create an atmosphere which would not permit of a proper assessment of damages.

Mr. O'Reilly: Mrs. Johnstone was a Scotch step-dancer and the evidence is that she will never be able to dance again, owing to an injury to her knee. Johnstone stated his earnings to be $200 a week.

Justice Ferguson: He says that when he works he gets $200 a week, but there is no evidence as to how often he worked.

Mr. Agar put in affidavits to show that Jordon, who drove Johnstone's car, was a confirmed epileptic, and other affidavits to show that the Johnstone car swerved into the path of defendant's 'bus.

Judgment was reserved.

BELIEVE FISHING SCHOONER LOST

Emtpy Lifeboat Bearing the Name "John Collier" Found By Seamen.

NO TRACE OF CREW.

BOSTON, Jan. 22 (Canadian Press).—An empty lifeboat bearing the name of the collier John Tracy, ten days overdue from Norfolk for Boston, was picked up yesterday by a Boston fishing schooner seventy miles southeast of Highland Light, Cape Cod. Shipping men here expressed belief that the Tracy had been lost with all on board.

The lifeboat was picked up by the fishing schooner Breaker, which communicated the news by radio to the Bay State Fishing Company here. The John Tracy, which carried a crew of 27 men, was last seen off Pollock Rip Lightship on January 11, fighting through the worst blizzard of the present winter.

The Tracy was commanded by Captain Rudolf Richter, of Belmont, with Morton B. Clark, of Norfolk, as first officer. The crew had been recruited from New England and from Norfolk.

To pump water into the large reservoirs from which water is distributed all over Golden Gate Park, San Francisco, the largest windmill in the world is employed.

Net surplus for year—$2,778.45

It was decided to have a field crop competition this year, and the grains to be entered are fall wheat and oats. T. M. McIndoo and R. C. Grandy were appointed delegates to the Ontario Fairs Convention. It was left with the Amusement Committee as to whether a class of hunter horses would be brought this year to the Exhibition. The members were of the opinion that more money should be charged for the grand stand attractions, and Webber Turner was asked to get prices on making part of the grand stand a reserve seat section.

The idea of having Old Boys' Week the same week of the Exhibition did not receive much enthusiasm with the Board.

Last year, due to the efforts of the secretary, F. J. A. Hall, the exhibition and all other fairs in "B" class received their Federal Government grant. When Mr. Hall heard that the Minister of Agriculture was going to cut out the grants to Class "B" Fairs, he immediately communicated with the secretaries of these Fairs and had them petition the Government and their representatives so as these grants would be forthcoming.

The board of directors are going to ask the City Council for a $5,000 grant this year, and E. F. Mason, W. R. Breyfogle, T. M. McIndoo, G. W. Morrow, R. M. Glover, G. H. Duncan, A. J. Reynolds and J. DAILY JANUARY 22 (17) ZEIHR

Where are the swallows fled?
Frozen and dead
Perchance upon some bleak and stormy shore.
O doubting heart!
Far over purple seas
They wait, in sunny ease,
The balmy southern breeze,
To bring them to their northern homes once more.

Why must the flowers die?
Prisoned they lie
In the cold tomb, heedless of tears or rain.
O doubting heart!
They only sleep below
The soft white ermine snow
While winter winds shall blow
To breathe and smile upon you soon again.

The sun has hid its rays
These many days;
Will dreary hours never leave the earth?
O doubting heart!
The stormy clouds on high
Veil the same sunny sky
That soon (for spring is nigh)
Shall wake the summer into golden mirth.
Fair hope is dead, and light
Is quenched in night.
What sound can break the silence of despair?
O doubting heart!
The sky is overcast,
Yet stars shall rise at last,
Brighter for darkness past.
And angels' silver voices stir the air.

Elected at Annual Meeting Friday Afternoon—Balance $67 in Bank.

BUILDING NEEDED.

Accommodation Required For Merchants' Exhibits —A Satisfactory Year.

(Special Correspondence.)

CAMPBELLFORD, Jan. 22. — Henry Waters was elected president of the Seymour Agricultural Society at it annual meeting here yesterday, succeeding W. A. Wynn. The appointment was by ballot, Mr. Waters having been nominated by Robert Innes and F. C. Hendy, and Mr. Wynn by Alex. Hume and Mr. Howes.

The other offices were refilled by acclamation as follows:

1st Vice President—T. J. Horkins.
2nd Vice President—George Van Volkenburg.
Sec.-Treas.—J. Nelson Stone.

Messrs. West and Bedford were re-appointed auditors.

C. E. Bonnycastle and W. M. Stephens were again selected as delegates to attend the meeting of the Central Fairs Association in Belleville on January 27.

Mr. Waters and Mr. Stone, president and secretary respectively, will represent Campbellford at the convention of the Ontario Fairs' Association.

Balance of $67.50.

The financial report, read by Mr. Stone, showed total receipts of $3,570.74 and $3,503.24 expenses, leaving a balance of $67.50 for the year's work.

Of the receipts $1,280.65 represented admission fees, and $1,093.08 in grants as follows—$300 from Campbellford, $200 from Seymour Township, $170.08 from the Counties Council, and $423 from the Ontario Government.

The details of expenditures included $1,501.80 paid out in prize money, $404.61 for repairs at the fair grounds and $491.04 for special attractions, faces and music.

A special vote of thanks was extended to Mr. Stone for the conciseness of his report and also for the good condition of the treasury accounts and books. A similar expression of appreciation to the retiring president, Mr. Wynne, was adopted on Mr. Hume's motion, seconded by Mr. Horkins.

Mr. Wynn referred to the Ontario Fairs' Association appointment of Mr. Stone as its director in District No. 3, comprising twenty-six fairs, and the distinction thus reflected on the Campbellford Board.

Mr. Stone said he would make his first report at the forthcoming convention in Toronto. He had attended the exhibitions at Odessa, Belleville, Colborne, Roseneath, Warkworth, Frankford and other places, but had found it impossible to make the circuit of the district because most of the fairs were crowded together into a few weeks. As a district director, his railway fare to the convention was paid by the Ontario Association.

Field Crop Competition

Seymour's society will again enter the standing field crop competition conducted as in the past without any of the frills tacked on, as in some other sections recently. The competition is in oats and corn. Is was also decided to engage Department judges again this ygar.

Mr. Waters thanked the members for the honor of the presidency and said he hoped he would receive the heartiest co-operation of the directors, the other members and also the general public.

"Let us make Campbell Fair one of the very best in the eastern section of the province," the new president urged. "We have the town of Campbellford behind us and also the Township of Seymour, and we should be able to put 1927 Fair over as the best since this society started."

Mr. Waters contended that the membership should be much larger than it has been and suggested that steps be undertaken this year to enlist many new members.

Building for Merchants

One of the main topics discussed at the subsequent director's meeting was the erection of a building for exhibits by local merchants and others. Mr. Horkins especially stressed this need and was supported by Mayor Kingston, Mr. Van Volkenburg, Mr. Wynn and others. In fact no person flatly opposed the idea, but Alex. Hume said he was concerned about the raising of the money to meet the cost of such a building.

"I'm not against a new building," said Mr. Hume, but I would like to see where we are going to get the money to pay for it."

Mr. Horkins replied that the merchants had been generous with donations to the Fair, but they naturally expected to share in the facilities this money helped to purchase.

"I would like to have something definite to tell them about what we intend to do when we ask them for grants this year," Mr. Horkins continued." Besides, a building for exhibits of that kind would add a great deal to our Fair and it should not be very expensive."

The discussion followed that broad line, and finally Mr. Hume suggested that the committee appointed to interview the Campbellford Council also consider the question of an exhibits building and report at the next meeting.

Mr. Wynn reviewed the work of last year, especially sketching the improvements to the Fair grounds, which had cost $404.

AMERICANS SEE GRAVE OUTLOOK CHINA DISTRICT

Marines Ordered To Philippines To Be Near Scene of Action.

PROTECT FOREIGNERS.

Evacuation of American Citizens From Chinese Quarters Progressing Rapidly.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 22 (Canadian Press).—Increasing gravity of the spreading anti-foreign movement in China was reflected yesterday in disclosure that United States Minister MacMurray had been stopped by a cablegram in Korea on his way to Washington and ordered back to Peking, and by the announcement that the detachment of United States Marines at Guam had been ordered to the Philippines to be nearer the scene of disorder.

Word also was received through Admiral Williams, commander of the Asiatic fleet, that the evacuation of Americans and other foreigners from Chinese quarters was progeeding rapidly.

The immediate reason given at the White House for Secretary Kellogg's action in ordering MacMurray back to Peking, was the necessity for making every possible provision to protect United States citizens in China should the disorders flame into attacks by mobs that threatened their lives.

President Coolidge feels that the developments in China in the last few weeks make it doubtful that the central government at Peking is able to exercise any authority whatever toward protection of foreigners. With many Chinese political factions contending for power, the Washington government has difficulty in discerning the place of the central government in the present confused situation.

On its part, it was reiterated, the Washington government is carrying out in good faith all provisions of its treaty with China.

The recall of Minister MacMurray from his projected conferences with Secretary Kellogg here, indicates the rapidity with which the anti-foreign demonstrations in China have spread and grown more serious. The first attack directed at American missionaries and other United States Nationalists was at Foo Chow, and official advices yesterday told of the evacuation from that city to Manila on the destroyer Pillsbury of more than sixty United States refugees, mostly women and children.

An equal number has left for Shanghai, Hong King and other coast cities, where foreign war craft are stationed and Americans in interior points around Foo Chow are withdrawing from that city for embarkation. A destroyer has been sent from Shanghai to Foo Chow to take the place of the Pillsbury.

Admiral Williams advised the Navy Department that, through Rear-Admiral Hough, in command of the Yangtse patrol, he had learned that the evacuation of Szechwan was progressing steadily and that foreigners were leaving other interior cities and were sending word back to others to follow.

Admiral Williams is at Shanghai with his flagship, the cruiser Pittsburgh, and the larger units of his forces in Chinese waters. He has available altogether probably thirty warcraft ranging from river gunboats to light cruisers under his command along the Chinese coast or stationed in Chinese rivers. His entire fleet in Asiatic waters consists of more than fifty vessels, but at least twenty of these are said to be still at Manila or elsewhere in the Philippines.

sions which His Majesty's Government is willing to make with the object of placing our relations with China upon an equitable and, it is hoped, a mutually profitable basis. It is the hope of His Majesty's Government that these conversations will lead to friendly settlements of all questions in dispute."

The British Foreign Office on December 25 issued documents fully revealing the policy of conciliation in China. It expressed opposition to further attempts to force upon the Chinese increased foreign control, suggested that the powers declare their readiness to revise treaties affecting China and advocated the immediate levy of the surtaxes drawn up at Washington for the benefit of the Chinese authorities.

Referring to the growth of the Nationalist movement in China, sponsored by the Cantonese Government, the Foreign Office affirmed that "any failure to meet this movement with sympathy and understanding would not respond to the real intentions of the powers toward China."

With regard to the negotiations at Hankow and Peking, mentioned in last night's statement, it is recalled that Miles Lampson, British Ambassador to Peking, stopped at Hankow and had conferences with Foreign Minister Chen before going to Peking. Later Charge d'Affaires O'Malley went to Hankow and resumed the conversations with Chen.

Centrists Enter Into Coalition With Nationalists on Own Provisions.

BERLIN, Jan. 22.— (Canadian Press.)— Supported by the unanimous decision of the Reichstag members of the Centrist party, former Chancellor Marx to-day will inform President Von Hindenburg that he is ready to accept a mandate to form a cabinet to succeed the one headed by him, which met defeat last month.

He will leave no doubt, however, that the Centrists are ready to enter a government in a coalition with the Nationalists only on the provision that the latter agree to certain principles regarding as the number of "political necessities."

These include loyalty to the Weimar republican constitution, the democratization of the Reichswehr, or Republican army, prevention of the Reichswehr's becoming an instrument of political groups, sweeping social reforms to eliminate the

SMUGGLE LIQUOR IN FREIGHT CARS

Were Camouflaged in Loads of Shingles Going Across Border.

CUSTOMS PROBE.

VANCOUVER, B.C., Jan. 22. — Canadian Press. — Camouflaged liquor hidden in car loads of shingles finds it way across the line into the United States from Vancouver.

R. E. Merrick, an officer of the Internal Revenue epartment of the United States, yesterday described to the Royal Commission on Customs a liquor seizure made by him on Dec. 12, 1926, at Black River Junction, Wash. The commission was sitting in Vancouver when this shipment was made. The car in which the liquor was hidden contained shingles consigned according to the bill of lading, by the Westminster Mills Company of Vancouver, to the Eclipse Lumber Company, Monticello.

Mr. Herrick said that h had obtained information that this liquor shipment was coming through and went and searched the car. The liquor was found cached near the car, and the space which it had occupied in the car was empty. Two men were arrested.

He expressed the opinion that the United States revenue stamps on the bottles were forgeries and this statement was supported by another witness.

Liquor also crossed the United States boundary camouflaged as screenings, it developed in the course of yesterday's hearing.

Leonard Regan, prohibition officer of the United States told of having seized a freight car at Auburn, Wash on December 18th, last, supposed to contain screenings. He delved into the screenings and found bottles and cases of Canadian liquors and wines. The liquor on the car totalled more than 200 cases. It was consigned to Ray Munsey, whose real name was Fred Brown.

"I have heard a number of cases," witness replied.

Again this shipment was made from Vancouver at the time that the customs commission was sitting here.

George E. Morris, assistant Inspector of Customs and Excise in the preventive service, stationed at Victoria, informed the commission that there was smuggling of liquor to Vancouver Island. More patrol boats were urgently needed. If there was an increase in the preventive service staff in British Columbia he thought it would be an advantage to have a provincial chief for the service. At present there was no provincial head.

After Posting Bond Holdings Will Again Be Under Receiver.

LOS ANGELES, Calif., Jan. 22. —(United Press.)—The refusal of the internal revenue bureau to allow payment of alimony to Lita Grey Chaplin from Chaplin's personal funds, now under government tax liens, will not delay payment of the award more than three weeks, counsel for Mrs. Chaplin said yesterday.

"If the internal revenue bureau has refused to act, Mr. Chaplin's alimony will be tied up for the time being," Attorney Lindel Young said.

"However, Chaplin must post bond before the end of 20 days, at which time the government may act to take over his property."

After posting the bond of $1,000,000 Chaplin's holdings will again be under direction of the receivership and by court order they will pay the alimony and other awards of $14,400.

CANADA'S PLACE DUE TO FRENCH

Habitants Remained Loyal When Urged To Join Americans, Says Lecturer.

UPHELD EMPIRE.

TORONTO, Jan. 22.— "It is a fact of history, and one not to be forgotten, that if Canada to-day has her place as one of the self-governing Dominions within the Empire instead of being a State or a number of States within the United States of America, that happy fact she owes to her French-Canadian citizens," said Rev. Dr. Johnston of St. Catharines, Vice-Chancellor of the University of Frontier College, in the course of an earnest appeal broadcast over CNRT last night for the recognition by all Canadians of the part which the French citizens of Canada had played in the making of the Dominion.

"Attribute it to self-interest or to what you will, the fact remains that when Canada's population consisted of 70,000 French and French-Canadians, and not more than 5,000 English-speaking, and when every art known to the politician and revolutionary was employed by the revolting American colonies to induce Canada to share in their disloyalty, French Canada, guided by its clergy, stood by the flag, in spite of the fact that France was already lending her aid to the revolution," he asserted.

Dr. Johnston pointed out in the same connection the high tribute which this attitude on the part of a conquered people paid to the generous policy which Britain had adopted toward her new subjects—a policy which has, with a fine consistency, characterized Britain in her relations with subject races.

Further, Dr. Johnston ventured it as his own opinion that should the present relationship of the Dominion to the British Empire ever be threatened, from no part of Canada would readier hands be lifted to maintain Canada's place in the Empire than from the Empire Province of Quebec, to which the Dominion once before owed its maintenance of British connection.

The address was one of a series Dr. Johnston is delivering on the general subject of Canadian unity.

MUSINGS AT A MANSE WINDOW

WHAT'S the great idea in trying to break records for one thing or another? Who started this record-breaking business, anyhow? Why hurry? It seems as if the whole world had gone crazy about breaking records! Run for the train and you're liable to fall and fracture a bone, or lose a limb getting on, or bust a lung—and miss the train. Some days ago a man ran for a street car and now he's lying in a hospital. There was another car just behind, too—he gained about fifteen seconds and it will be six weeks before he is up and around. And the funny part of it was that when they came to talk with him he admitted he 'wasn't in a hurry anyway.' That's where the joke comes in. If most of us are not crazy we are certainly good actors. About all that's required now to put most of us where we belong is just to erect a wall around the mostly highly civilized parts of the earth and call it an institution for those who are afflicted with the record-breaking or speed craze.

WHAT'S YOUR HURRY?

We needn' think we can go sixty miles an hour in a buzz-wagon and keep it up any length of time. Before we know where we are a wheel has come off, or the machine acts as if it wanted to cut down a tree or plough through a stone barn. We finish up in the ditch, and we are fortunate if we come out alive.

Five minutes for lunch!

Someone has suggested that you can't loaf like that and pass the buck on to your gizzard. Your "tummy" has a keen sense of humor, even if you have none, and can take a joke as well as anybody, but don't get the idea that you can rub it in—after a while Friend "Tummy" will refuse to take anything but beef tea and biscuits. A stomach that is overworked soon tires of this sort of comedy. There is such a thing as digging your grave with your teeth. Take your meals a little more leisurely. You'll find it pays in the long-run. Indeed it's about the only way you can have a long run! Hurry your meals and in all probability you will hasten your funeral. And about the only person who will have any reason to rejoice will be the person who owes you something and is glad to escape payment, or the undertaker, because he has an eye to business!

IT DOESN'T PAY

Don't think that you can stay up till the small hours of the morning, helping all you can to make the demand for booze exceed the supply while you burn the midnight oil around a card table without having to pay a pretty stiff price for the pleasure. More than likely your head will feel like a squirrel cage wheel looks, and your efficiency while trying to meet the demands of the day will drop fifteen degrees below nothing at all.

Shame on you, to be always in a hurry! To rush hither and yon, keeping appointments only by the skin of your teeth, and catching trains and street cars only by hairbreadth escapes, is to confess that you are not a fit person to dispose of your twenty-four hours per day. It is to confess that you are a sloven and a gross mismanager of your own time.

SOME ARE DIFFERENT

Some men never hurry—they are never rushed, always calm, self-possessed, poised — they have abundance of time for everything they have to do, and they do five times as much in the same length of time as others do. There's a reason—it's worth learning. If you are willing to go to school again you will soon learn it. You must adopt the pace of nature, her secret is patience. Hurry and scurry usually give birth to worry, and worry can kill you just as surely as smallpox will, and leave less to show for it. Hurry less and you are likely to live longer. Don't let the fever of the modern desire for speed get a hold of you if you can possibly prevent it. Just take time and grow old slowly. Life will be more satisfactory! Let fools and feeble-minded folks fume and fluster all they want; let others who consider themselves wise go after all the record-breaking in the world; but you will be wiser still if you are content to take a step at a time. You'll get there all the same and with less expense.

—Allan Fairbairn.

Meanness At Church

AT CHURCH there is about as much meanness to the square inch in the giving which takes place in the ordinary collections as is to be found anywhere on the earth. People enter the sanctuary, expect God to hear and answer their prayers, bless them with His presence and power, give them love and joy and peace, bestow on them such mercies as only He can give, and all they give to the collection is a nickel. I don't wonder that some services are as void of results as a gatepost is of blossoms.

TELL US A STORY

AFTER the Crimean War there was a great celebration in London, when Queen Victoria, with the Prince Consort by her side, gave out medals to the heroes. Some of the soldiers appeared with empty sleeves, some on crutches; some with bandaged foreheads; but there was the same sweet, royal smile, and the same reward for all. At last there was carried on a litter to the Queen a poor, battered and bruised warrior. Both his arms and both his legs were gone. He was only a common soldier, but in the service of his country he had done his best. At the sight of him the Queen, with tears streaming down her cheeks, went to the litter, pinned a badge upon the poor fellow's breast, kissed his brow, and said: "Well done, good and faithful servant!" If such a message cheered the heart of the soldier on that day, what will it be on the Crowning Day to hear the King of kings and Lord of lords say, "Well done, good and faithful servant; enter thou into the joy of the Lord." May that be your happy portion.

What Think Ye Of Christ?

I AM NOT a dreamer, but I hold this for certain—that the image of Christ shall never be effaced. They have wished to destroy it, but it shall be painted again in the hearts of men by painters abler than myself. The nation which loves Jesus Christ will rejoice thereat, and I, awakening from the dead, and rising from the grave shall thrill with great joy.

—John Huss.

The Old Days.

TREMONT TEMPLE, Boston, is in the midst of a very successful revival. It is being featured as the 50th anniversary of the visit of Moody and Sankey to Boston. Former annual revival attendance records have been broken, the number of converts promises to be large and seem likely to be much increased. Large numbers of people who attended the original Moody-Sankey meetings have visited the present series of services. Messages of good-will have been received from W. R. Moody, Northfield, son of the famous evangelist; George C. Stebbins, Brooklyn, sole surviving member of the first Moody and Sankey party, and from other sons of ministers who co-operated in the 1877 movement. One of the ushers of the original campaign has been a guest as well as several who sang in Mr. Sankey's choir. Homer Hammontree of Chicago has been conductor of music, assisted by his personal pianist, Howard Hermanson, together with Miss Grace Bryant, harpist. Special choirs, visiting soloists, and the musical staff of Tremont Temple have taken part.

Books Wanted.

PUBLISHERS of religious literature report that sales of controversial literature are falling off. The decline began in October and has continued steadily since. Writings of a controversial nature sell to some extent, but not to half the extent of one year ago. It seems that publishers are discouraging authors of such books, and one publisher reports having declined three such manuscripts that sought publication by the first of the year. The fighters are said to show no lack of the fighting spirit, but the public is said to be calling for spiritual awakenings. During the Christmas season, evangelistic books doubled their sales over one year ago, and half a dozen new evangelistic books have appeared with January, and are selling rapidly. Publishers say they expect an increase in the sale of evangelistic books, at least until Easter, for two large evangelistic movements are in progress, both national in scope, and such always increase the demand for books relating to them.

Promoting Loyalty.

IN THE spring of 1926, it was reported that although the Chinese churches may have suffered somewhat temporarily in the matter of smaller attendance of non-Christians at the services, the Anti-Christian movement had decidedly drawn the Christians themselves closer together. A Presbyterian missionary in Hunan, states: "We have not heard of one who has grown cold or turned his back on Christ and His Gospel on account of this opposition in our district." Opposition is by no means the worst thing an individual or a church can experience.

A Pen Picture

FOURTEEN men stand side by side. In front of them a densely-packed crowd. There is no tumult nor shouting—all seem deeply in earnest, very solemn and very anxious. So intent are they that sometimes, while listening to the tones of one voice, they can almost hear the sound of "waters that go softly" near at hand. Sometimes more voices than one are heard, not in opposition the one to the other, but apparently in explanation or agreement with the chief speaker. So intent are they that, although the assembly gathered together this morning when the September sun rose over that hill beside them; yet they are not weary of standing where you see them now, although it is almost noon! What news can it be, or what business that makes the crowd so earnest, so eager and so patiently attentive?

CRITICISM

"NO MAN," says Ruskin, "can be rightly appreciated except by an equal or a superior." Hence the rarity of true criticism. In nine cases out of ten in critical writing, the superior is judged by the inferior; and if to the want of capacity to judge from this inequality of platform, we add the want of love, that is, the want of the desire to make a true judgment, we shall easily understand what floods of foamy and tainted matter must in this writing age be darkly poured forth on the world of readers in the shape of criticism. All are ambitious to have an opinion, but few give themselves any trouble about the source from which, or the materials out of which, they derive it. The wisdom of the wise is not to have many loose opinions to sport, but a few well-weighed judgments to publish when opportune; in other cases to be silent.

What a Pity!

Some men can't sing, and some women too, but they don't know it.
Some folks can't lead and don't know it.
Some men are stingy and don't know it.
Some folks act like fools constantly and don't know it.
Some officials are great bores and don't know it.
Some Christians are very unlike Christ and don't know it.

A Problem

CONFRONTED by the ultimate problems of life, Job is entirely at a loss to find solution of any of them save in God. He is infinitely more conscious of his own need of Him than any of His counsellors can imagine, for with his sense of God has grown up a sense of his own sinfulness also. Those who challenge and taunt him can teach him nothing as to his sinful nature. Nor can they enlighten him as to the problems which it sets up. He has long since come to an end of his own energies, and has learned his powerlessness to transform his own disposition. He knows full well how entirely ineffective are his best efforts at self-cleansing. Who can bring a clean thing out of an unclean-? If any good thing is to come out of his life it can only be by the divine miracle of transformation. God alone can bring a clean thing out of an unclean.

This is at once the glory of the Gospel of Christ and the confusion of its critics. He undertakes to receive men, whatever their moral state, and, by the process of grace of which He alone is Master, to renew them completely. That He accomplishes this undertaking, the changed lives of His people in every age attest. What need, then, is there for any of us to despair, even though the light from Heaven has revealed our innate sinfulness? If we will but yield us to His control this wonder shall be wrought. The clean shall come out of the unclean as a proof of His power. Faith shall be verified to ourselves by an experience of His power, and vindicated before the world in the evidence of a transformed life.

CHAINS THAT BIND

OUR HEAVIEST BURDENS

AN INTERESTING exchange of thought has taken place between an Australian Bishop, Dr. Long, Bishop of Bathurst, and the Bishop of London, Dr. Ingram, on the London Bishop's definition of the six sorrows which chain down and oppress the human race.

In a recent sermon the Bishop of London listed the Sorrows as follows:—

1. Fear of death.
2. Burden of unacknowledged and unconfessed sin.
3. Haunting temptation which goes on year after year.
4. Darkness of doubt.
5. Sense of being enslaved by a creed.
6. An extraordinary, unexplainable melancholy.

Dr. Long tabulates four 'Sorrows of the Human Mind."

1. Sense of being baffled through incapacity to forsake sins abhorred by the individual conscience.
2. Sense of futility; both in everyday occupations and in altruistic effort.
3. Lack of a compelling creed, that might give joy, rest and confidence.
4. Melancholy; partly the resultant of the foregoing, partly reflected from a civilization which appears to have lost its way and mislaid the address.

"Speaking generally," says Dr. Long, "the fear of death is not a brooding sorrow. It is remarkable how large a proportion of people view the fact of death with equanimity.

People Want a Creed.

"Experience makes me go clean contrary to the Bishop of London's fifth sorrow, 'being enslaved by a creed.' The mass of people welcome a sense of being captivated by a creed. They long for something powerful enough to take them right out of themselves.

"They seek their creed in Communism, or Cubism, or Prohibition; or Vegetarianism, or, greatest and hardest of all, Christian.

"But they are certainly passionately desirous of being captivated or enslaved by some compelling creed which would give enduring significance to their personal life drama."

Come, let us live the poetry we sing. —Edwin Markham.

IRRIGATED SANDS

By Rev. William Wood.

A wilderness of burning sands
And sedge of grass patned the eye;
So desolate the east expanse,
It made one stand and sigh!
When, lo! the same hot desert sands
Bore fruit beyond compare;
A paradise of verdure spread
Its beauty everywhere!
The secret of the mighty change
From which the wonder springs
Is in the web of water ways
Vitalizing things!
O sterile heart! reach out for God's
Life-giving streams, and then
Your desert life will bear much fruit
To nurture starving men!

Sentimentality

SENTIMENTALITY is sentiment without sense; or, if you prefer it, without truth, for sense is simply the correspondence of the intellectual and the emotional nature with the truth of things. Nothing can be more abhorrent to a sensible man than the length to which hero worship will go with sentimental people. Their imagination is taken captive by some exhibition of great force or dashing splendour, and they inquire no further. Inside, and narrowly looked at, all that grand show may be hollow or even pernicious. Such persons would worship a dead herring if it were covered with phosphorescent light.

CAN MEN BE REACHED

YOU ask me if men can be reached? And I answer: Yes, they can.

How?

By preaching a positive Gospel.
By giving up negations.
By knowing them and their needs.
By plain and manly denunciation of sin.
By moving among them as a man among men.
By preaching a heaven here as well as hereafter.
By special meetings for them.
By being a living exponent of the Gospel.
By fearless courage in reaching the conscience.
By persistent appeals that have unction in them.

Can a man help imitating that with which he holds reverential converse?

PETERBORO'S BIG FAIR.

An organization that takes in a total revenue of nearly $25,000 a year is getting to be a sizable institution.

Such is the Peterboro Industrial Exhibition which, with its annual meeting over, is now facing the months of preparation that will lead up to, it is hoped, the best fair in Peterboro's history.

The financial statement presented yesterday indicated the great success of the 1926 Exhibition, with its record attendance and correspondingly increased receipts which enabled the Exhibition Board in spite of generous expenditures upon attractions and in prizes, to show an operating surplus for the year of $2,778.45.

How rapidly the Exhibition is growing in size, the fact that over $7,000 was spent last year in attractions alone and that the prize money paid out amounted to $5,522.28, is convincing evidence.

With the members, heartened by last year's triumph, showing even more enthusiasm and interest than ever, and with the Exhibition's reputation firmly established there is every reason to expect that next September will find the Peterboro Industrial climbing to a new high level in all departments.

AN OLD BOYS' REUNION.

Suggestions that Peterboro should have an Old Boys' Reunion during Exhibition week are not likely to be enthusiastically received either by the Exhibition Board or by the citizens generally.

It is by no means clear that the week of the Exhibition is the logical time for an Old Boys' reunion nor even that the present year is a logical year for such an event.

To be successful a reunion of this nature cannot be planned in a few months; at least a year of preparation would seem to be necessary.

And September is too late a date for a re-union in any event.

The old boys and girls whom Peterboro would count upon to come home would be much more likely to accept a mid-summer invitation.

In addition this is the year of the celebration of Canada's diamond Jubilee, an event of outstanding importance which is expected to engage the attention of all Canadian communities during the first part of the summer, and the proper observance of which would interfere with plans for the Old Boys' reunion to some extent at least.

The Examiner has frequently suggested the advisability of a reunion of this nature, and because of that fact would like to see the project launched under conditions that would guarantee a fair chance of success.

THE PRICE OF SUCCESS.

For the tenth year in succession Ald. Roland Denne has been elected president of the Peterboro Industrial Exhibition.

His fellow directors yesterday refused to hear of his retirement from the position, despite his plea that he had earned a rest and it was time for somebody else to carry the burden.

The Exhibition, under his able guidance has achieved such a record of progress and growth that the members of the Board are insistent upon his remaining on duty and his continuing to devote his energy and time to the welfare of the institution as he has during the past nine years.

Both President Denne and the Exhibition Board are to be congratulated upon his election for the tenth year, the former upon the splendid tribute paid him by his associates and the latter upon having made sure of the services of an executive head whose worth has been proven through nine years of fine work as president.

Mr. Denne to a marked degree has been successful in winning the services and firing the enthusiasm of a faithful band of zealous workers, and the combination has made the Peterboro Industrial Exhibition what it is.

FACILITIES FOR SPORT.

Mayor Holloway seems to be a little touchy on the question of what Peterboro, as a city, is doing to provide recreational facilities for its citizens, judging by his criticism of The Examiner at the Kiwanis Club yesterday.

The Mayor apparently thought that because The Examiner said a word of praise for Toronto's generous policy in this respect that local efforts were being belittled.

As a matter of fact no such thought could fairly be read into the article in question, which was published merely as a tribute to what the Queen City is doing to give its citizens healthful recreation.

The matter having, however, been brought into prominence by Mayor Holloway, The Examiner is forced to admit that even in proportion to population Peterboro's contribution in respect to athletic facilities cannot stand comparison with the Queen City's record.

Toronto's municipal facilities for sport, include scores of baseball parks, tennis courts, bowling greens, swimming beaches, skating rinks, football fields, toboggan slides and hockey cushions, the latter equipped with nets, etc.

Compared to that outlay for recreation what have we to offer?

A civic baseball field for the use of which the city exacts a percentage of the gate receipts, a football pitch in the south end, Nicholls Oval, the result of the generosity of a citizen, two swimming beaches, one of which had to be closed because of impure water, four or five rinks that are available for hockey only a few hours a week, and one small toboggan slide with one chute—that about sums it up.

Toronto's reputation as a city that leads the way in its exceptional municipal accomodation for all forms of sport is widespread.

We will have to do much more than we are at present if we want to be in a position to claim that in proportion to population our record is equally as good.

Even in the matter of free rinks which was the particular topic mentioned by the Mayor, Peterboro falls behind so far as accomodation for hockey is concerned inasmuch as we have no free rinks exclusively for hockey, while Toronto provides fifty-eight hockey cushions, furnishing playing facilities for 1,200 organized teams.

Dividing the Toronto number by 30, as His Worship suggests, we should have at least two well equipped, well lighted, good sized municipal hockey rinks to put us on an equal footing in the one department alone.

Peterboro has made a start in furnishing recreational facilities, the skating rinks at present available are a boon to many citizens and The Examiner, which has fought for such things in season and out, is delighted that this accomodation is provided.

But we are not satisfied—even if the Mayor is—that we are doing as much according to our revenues as Toronto is, or as much as we might do.

AN EXCESS OF $50,000,000 IN TAXES.

With eight months of the fiscal year accounted for, Finance Minister Robb finds himself with a revenue betterment of $15,000,000 over the same period in 1925-1926. November alone showed an improvement over the same month last year of $7,600,000. Should this gain be maintained during the remaining four months of the fiscal year (until March 31) the increase in revenue for the twelve months may well reach $40,000,000, something which, considering last year's taxation reductions, would be a notable record.

But that isn't all. The Government has not only been taking in more money; it has been paying less money out. Partly because of Governor-General's warrants (necessary after dissolution of the last Parliament killed the sessional estimates) which made loose expenditure impossible, and partly also, let us hope, because of reasonable economy since, expenditure is much lower than last year. This, added to the fact that instead of having to put up money this year for the National Railways the railways will actually put some money in the treasury may well leave Mr. Robb with a clear surplus of perhaps $50,000,000.

In other words, Mr. Robb will not only have the first undisputed surplus since the war—he will have one of the largest surpluses of which there is record.

Under the circumstances, and seeing that there is every promise of fair prosperity next year (which always means more revenue) Mr. Robb may well consider substantial tax reductions. Nuisance taxes, of course, everybody would like to see go; but it would be more beneficial, we think, and a fine stimulus to industry if the Finance Minister could cut something off the tax on incomes from investmentse, which he heightened last year.—Ottawa Journal.

THE RHODES LECTURER.

The acceptance by Sir Robert Borden of the Rhodes Memorial Lectureship at Oxford has been hailed in Britain with a satisfaction which finds expression in some striking tributes to the qualities and personality of the distinguished Canadian who is to address the students of the ancient University on the subject of the Empire.

Oxford, once known as "the home of lost causes" and one of whose unwritten laws, as the poet wrote, was to "back the weaker side," has lived down her reputation as a purblind leader of thought; and, while retaining her classical traditions, has become a progressive seat of learning conspicuously receptive to modern ideas and forms of instruction that make for advancement. Of this new spirit an excellent illustration is the work that is being accomplished under the Rhodes Trust.

The vision and faith of the great South African statesman who recognized the part which education must play in the building up and maintenance of a mighty empire, and who dedicated a large portion of his wealth to the provision of facilities for the propagation of knowledge and understanding concerning the British commonwealth of nations, have been abundantly justified by the results. These are to be seen in the keenness of competition for the Rhodes scholarships in every college and university, not only throughout the empire, but in the United States as well; in the devotion to the study of Imperial problems of the students, from all parts, honored with the privilege of attending Oxford; and in the thoroughness with which the objects of the founder of the trust are being carried out.

The course of lectures which Sir Robert Borden has been invited to deliver forms part of a curriculum that has already exerted, and will continue to exert, a profound influence upon what has been termed the Imperial outlook. And it is universally recognized that for the task he has undertaken Sir Robert is particularly well equipped. "No man in the Empire," writes an authority on Imperial affairs in a leading London newspaper, "could have been chosen more likely to acquit himself with credit to both Oxford and Canada."

For a Rhodes Memorial lecturer, says the writer, "the one outstanding requirement is the possession of a broad Imperialism," and Sir Robert's long and brilliant political career; his "broad intellectual catholicity, never seriously impaired by partisanship;" his first-hand knowledge of, and direct contact with, Imperial problems; his reputation as a scholar who has applied himself to the study of constitutional development in its relation to the Empire, combined with his gifts as a jurist and his ability to express what he knows, are all pointed to as qualities that fit him, in an exceptional degree, for the service to which he has been called.—Ottawa Journal.

MONTREAL GRAIN AND PRODUCE

MONTREAL, Que., Jan. 22 (Canadian Press)—Owing to the fact that the majority of foreign bids were below working basis, the export trade in Canadian grain on the Montreal market yesterday was quiet.

The domestic market for cash grain was without any new feature to note, the demand from all sources being of a limited character, but the feeling was steady.

The market for spring wheat grades of flour was moderately active and values were firm. The winter wheat situation was inactive but prices were unchanged.

The tone of the market for all lines of millfeed remained firm under a good demand. The trade in standard grades of rolled oats was quiet but prices ruled steady.

The butter market was slightly more active and the undertone was firm. The receipts were 33 packages.

Extreme dullness marked the cheese trade but prices were well maintained. The receipts were 56 boxes.

Only a small volume of business was done in potatoes and the feelin was about steady at the recent decline in prices. Sales of odd cars of Prince Edward Island Green Mountains were made at $1.80 per bag of ninety pounds, and Quebec white stock at $1.40 per bag of ninety pounds in bulk, ex-track.

CHICAGO GRAIN

CHICAGO, Jan. 22. Canadian Press—Pressure to sell wheat increased yesterday, buying demand gave out, and the market finally dropped. Export call for North American wheat proved disappointing and supplies on ocean passage appeared to be growing. Wheat closed unsettled 3-4 net lower; corn and oats 1-8c, 1-4c to 3-8 off, and provisions unchanged to 10c down.

A good deal of the buying of wheat to-day was apparently due in some degree to assertions that European requirements of all grains are larger than have been estimated.

Corn and oats swayed with wheat. Attention though was given to a report of corn crop damage in Argentina by abnormal dryness and heat.

Lard was steadied because of firmness of the cottonseed oil market. On the other hand cash call for meats was less active.

HOW DO YOU SAY IT?

(By C. N. Lurie.)

Common Errors in English and How To Avoid Them.

"YOU SAID IT!"

A correspondent asks:

"Is the expression, 'You said it!' good English? It sounds to me like slang, and yet it sounds also like good, grammatical English."

Who can draw the line between slang and good English? Who can say, "Here good English ends and slang begins"? Webster says that slang is "language or words consisting either of new words or phrases, often of the vagrant or illiterate classes, or of ordinary words or phrases in arbitrary esenses, and having a conventional bu vulgar or inelegant use."

Now, according to this definition of one class of slang words and phrases, "ordinary words or phrases in arbitrary senses, and having a conventional but vulgar or inelegant use," the phrase, "You said it," is certainly slang. Besides, it is overworked; it is used very many times, when one word, such as, "yes," or "certainly," or when a short phrase, such as, "of course," would answer the purpose.

Any person who wishes to be known as a user of good English is well advised to avoid such phrases as "You said it!"

VOICE OF PEOPLE

TO THE MAYOR.

Peterborough,
January 21, 1927

To The Editor,
The Examiner.

Dear Sir,

According to to-day's Examiner Mayor W. T. Holloway, while attending a meeting of the Kiwanis Club took exception to Peterborough being compared with Toronto in the matter of playgrounds and rinks. The report credits the Mayor with saying "If you divide the number of playgrounds and rinks that Toronto has provided by thirty you will find that we are away ahead."

One would think from a statement like that the Mayor knew what he was talking about, but do the facts bear him out?

Toronto's reputation in this regard is justly famous. Where in any other city, irrespective of size, will you find hockey cushions, equipped with nets and electric lights; baseball diamonds fitted out even to the bleachers; football fields and tennis courts galore.

Surely the Mayor cannot have been thinking about the toboggan slide when he spoke.

Is he aware that there are hundreds of Peterboro's citizens that still have to feel the thrill of a real toboggan slide, that is, if they have not been to Toronto, where they can obtain it.

We have one in Peterborough but it is a joke even to the youngsters for whom it was designed. Its chief use apparently is in the summertime when the boys get their thrills by riding down it on bicycles.

In Jackson's Park or Armour Hill we have even better facilities than Toronto has in High Park but what use has our city fathers made of the fact.

Instead of boasting about what Peterborough has done would it not be better if he would devote himself to staging a campaign for better sporting facilities for everybody?

If he is doubtful that the need exists let him ask the average young person and he will be quickly enlightened.

Perhaps it was because he was speaking to the Kiwanis Club whose proposal to instal a wading pool was relegated to the scrap heap by last year's council that he spoke as he did.

Yours truly,
TORONTO BOY.

SPORT FACILITIES IN PETERBORO

Dear Mr. Editor:

I notice that in his address to Kiwanis Club today the Mayor claimed perfection of sport facilities in Peterboro. While he didn't say it in so many words he intimated that by being better than Toronto in this line Peterboro has all that is to be desired.

Some time ago you commented editorially on the religion called Rosicrucianism in which by repeating the mystic word "Om" the fanatic might attain perfection in one particular at least—perfect inanity. Let me suggest that as regards sport for the citizens of Peterboro our city council has indeed reached perfection in this way. Perfect inanity; utter inanimation.

What, after all, has the council done for sport? The school playgrounds are not its care; Nicholls Oval, Jackson Park, Inverlea Park are the city's by right of gift; the playground at Hunter street bridge was outfitted by the organization to which His Worship was speaking; Armour Hill was spurned by the council, which allows a party of self-sacrificing women to do the work and make the purchase. Ah, yes! There is King Edward Park, of course, lying like a waste lot in the south end, without sanitary conveniences of dressing facilities. I had almost forgotten to write that down to the credit of the city fathers—and am not so sure now on which side of the ledger it should really go. And then there is Riverside Park, from which the city council takes a generous slice of gate receipts. The park is magnanimously offered free to others when no paying team desires it. The dressing facilities and sanitary conveniences could not be worse, there being none. And there is the toboggan slide, which perhaps appears so small because it is overshadowed by the famous bridge. A few ill-lighted rinks complete the tale, and should not really count since they are so unsuited and so seldom available for hockey.

I am not asserting, Mr. Editor, that the City Council should have done more. But in the interests of truth in advertising let not our city fathers arise to declare to the world that Peterboro is perfect, and boast of what the council has done when it has done nothing. If there's nothing good to tell, keep quiet.

This does not agree with what His Worship thinks. Evidently his outlook might be a parody of a famous declaration: "My city, right or wrong, still my city." If that report you published tonight ever gets to Toronto we'll have the Toronto council hot-footing it down here to gather ideas.

And then they will laugh.

Yours truly,
TOM SOULE.

REAL ENTHUSIASM PLUS—

The tang of snappy weather often creates a do-or-die spirit that has all the appearance of real enthusiasm.

HEALTH AND DIET ADVICE

Author of "The Fast Way to Health"

QUESTIONS IN REGARD TO HEALTH & DIET WILL BE ANSWERED BY DR. McCOY WHO CAN BE ADDRESSED IN CARE OF THIS PAPER

©1926 BY DR. McCOY HEALTH SERVICE, LOS ANGELES, CAL.

NEGATIVE AND POSITIVE DIETING

The only ones to take up the subject of dieting are those who are suffering from some ailment, or who have loved ones who have been told they have some serious disease. Those who have searched from one method of cure to another, and who have failed to get results from medicine and surgery finally turn to dietetic treatment in hopes of a cure. It seems to me that as I have studied the minds of patients, the first thought that comes to them in this regard is to find some food to bring about a cure, that is some specific article which is needed by the body to effect a cure.

I am more and more convinced that this is not possible of accomplishment in most cases, but that the secret lies in what may be called "Negative Dieting," that is, learning to eliminate those articles of food which have been used regularly and which have interfered with health.

Disease is an un-natural condition which can be said to be simply "impaired health."

Health writers and dietitians are too inclined to lay emphasis upon such diseases as beriberi, pellegra, rickets, etc., and point out that they are caused by an absence of the normal mineral salts in food, and that this absence produces disease. While this is no doubt true, in certain parts of the world, such as in parts of India; it is not true that these diseases exist to any great extent in civilized countries, such as in America or Europe. The fault in America is that 999 out of a 1000 eat too much, and are over-nourished rather than under-nourished. All of the common diseases, such as fevers, headaches, rheumatism, indigestion, etc., are not caused by one particular food, but by using too much of every kind of food, especially those, such as the starch and sugar foods, which contain an abundance of waste material not necessary for use in the body. It is difficult to think of a single common disease which is not caused by over-eating, or by using foods in wrong combination. Of course, it is true, people often neglect to use food of the right quality, but you will usually find that if you study their diet for a week, that they have used a sufficient amount of all those natural elements necessary for the body. It is often true that they do not get the good from the vital foods that they do use, because of a poor mixture with so many other foods, which produces indigestion, and consequently the good foods cannot be assimilated by the body.

In my experience as a dietitian I have never felt the need in any one case of advising a patient to use more food, as long as the food they were eating was of the right quality. My advice in almost every disease is invariably to cut down on the food supply, to eliminate this, or to cut down on that kind of food, and if the patients do this they are sure to get good results. Even in such diseases as pernicious anemia the fast cure will be found to be the most effective. Patients who are anemic can live for two or three weeks, on nothing but orange juice, and the quality of the blood will increase steadily during that time. It is simply because the body is free from its burden of food much food, and can use the small amount of vital nourishment in the orange, and convert it into valuable blood cells, where the body had lost the power to do this when encumbered by too much food.

After you have tried the milk cure, the buttermilk cure, the salisbury diet, the raw food regime, etc., and these cures have failed to bring about the desired results—remember what I have said in this article, and then try the fasting cure in some form, and learn to give up those foods which have been interfering with your health. Don't be so anxious to build up health, as to remove the obstructions which have interfered with health. Disease then disappears as if by magic, and you will find yourself once again a radiant transformer of universal energy.

Don't Tell the Wife

BY WILLIAM B. COURTNEY

SYNOPSIS

Ranny Forbes, star polo player, and his beautiful wife, Joan, are temperamental mismates. Joan wants a divorce. Ranny hesitates, loving her, although secretly knowing she loves Abner Gratman. Lacking proof that Joan is faithless he plans to trap her and Abner while they are all on a week-end cruise on the yacht of Stivner, a billionaire lumber king. Complications multiply. Joan, jealous when Ranny flirts with Clare, a widow, openly encourages Abner's advances. Stivner, loving Clare, resents Ranny's interest. Ranny is trying to arrange a business deal with Stivner. Loyal to her marriage vows up to now, Joan feels Ranny's flirting releases her. But he tires of Clare.

CHAPTER IX.—Continued.

It was not within the fundamental nature of a man so single tracked in his emotions as Ranny Forbes to long tolerate the vampish insipidities of so multiple minded a person as Mrs. Clare Clemoneau. She was too much for him. Dabbling with her at first only in a spirit of counterplot, he had suddenly felt himself dangerously allured by her undeniable physical charms.

Several things had conspired to bring him to his senses, however, his love for Joan, his wife, for instance, which—resolutely subordinate it though he would—always focused back into its natural and rightful place as the paramount theme of his spiritual, moral and physical life.

Then, for the second point, there was his own sense of humor.

Last, and far from least, was the sharp admonitory lecture that had been dinned into his ears and hammered upon his devoted head by faithful Clay Varick, his alert chum, in the interval before dinner.

Clay, in his forthright way, had swept through the chaff and penetrated right to the gist of the situation.

Bitingly, Clay had reviewed the developments. Ranny was making a public ass of himself. He had come on this cruise solely and notably because it offered an excellent chance to entrap the interloper, Abner Gratman, who was stealing the wife of his heart away from him; because it afforded an opportunity to begin a campaign to re-interest his wife and win back her love.

Yet here he was letting himself be made a donkey of by a designing little bundle of sophisticated and trouble-making femininity!

Here he was forgetting the aim and end of the serious business in hand under the spell of baby dumb eyes!

Here he was forsaking the role of a man for that of a monkey!

And what was Stivner thinking,

did Ranny imagine? Stivner, who wanted Clare! Stivner, with whom Ranny earnestly desired to become associated in a business way!

Was thwarting the billionaire lumber king in an affair of the heart, even as he had recently failed him in the matter of the polo wager, a sensible way for Ranny to endeavor to achieve social and business success with Stivner?

Stivner's whole career was a record of having broken the reckless men who tried to stand in his way! And Stivner's heart was even now a seething furnace of jealous fires while the frail blonde flower of his most ardent desires leaned toward another sun.

Thus Clay had raved, and Ranny's head had bowed and his eyes had lowered under the storm. For the proverbial "Dutch Uncle" had nothing on Clay when it came to delivering a hair-raising bawling out, a crackling piece of his mind!

Ranny, who was but a boy at heart, writhed under the lash of Clay's tongue like a lad under parental wood shed chastisement.

It had dusted the nonsense from his pants—his mind, that is—and chased the seductive spell of Clare's whimsical enchantment from his eyes.

Heart, soul and mind he had become the concise and straight fighting Ranny Forbes once more. The strong male seeking to wreak the vengeance of his hands upon the invader of his hearthstone.

Narrow-eyed, Ranny sat through dinner anticipating the moment when he and Clay could set their trap for Abner and Joan, spring it, entangle Abner's slinky steps and finally submit the end to the punishment they had d[illegible] meet and fitting for such as Almost [illegible] outward aspect, Ranny maintained a steady and searching scrutiny of Abner until that worthy lost most of his insolent self-assurance and was driven almost to jumping out of his skin with uneasiness.

Here again Clay intervened, with swift kicks on Ranny's shins under the table, covertly signalling to him to desist lest Abner take warning and abort their plot.

In Mrs. Clare Clemoncau's little blonde cranium, however, as she sensed the sudden collapse of Ranny's interst in her and calculated the reason therefor, there was no thought of surrendering so easily and readily the grip she had so carefully laid upon him.

Smile and lisp still concealed the true trend of her thoughts, but inwardly she was gloating upon the realization that Ranny had publicly committed himself to her interest now to a degree from which he would not well withdraw—without trouble, and lots of it!

CHAPTER X.

On Livingstone Stivner's floating palace the social amenities were as well preserved, the routine as well ordered, as in the most fastidious manshions ashore.

Accordingly after dinner the men marshalled behind Stivner and withdrew to the smoking room for cigar and coffee, while the women retired to the drawing room for cigarettes, coffee and scandalous gossip.

Inasmuch as the men, too, were not averse to an exchange of spicy chit chat, the main difference between the post-dinner gatherings lay in—what they smoked!

Ranny and Clay, bursting with eagerness to absent themselves at the first opportunity and go about the preparation of their man-trap, resented this splitting up as much as Clare resented it.

Clare, in fact, petulantly and peremptorily demanded of Stivner that he recognize the modernist view of sex equality by having both men and women congregate in the smoking room. Stivner, however, stoutly insisted upon the sacred inviolableness of the smoking room as the one and only place on the Speedwell barred to the dainty feet of the ladies.

Stivner's insistence, truth to tell, was not so much in defense of an ideal as it was a strategic and justifiable use of the one effective means at his disposal with which he could maneuver a temporary separation of Clare from Ranny.

The sex division of the party, therefore, was complete and entire but for one factor.

Joan Forbes, pleading a bit of a headache and a consequent indisposition for coffee-cup conversation, excused herself and escaped to the outside deck.

The maneuver was so broad that every pair of eyes in the remainder of that party shot quizzically to Ranny Forbes' face.

Knowing full well his temper and fists, one and all expected an immediate scene, a delightfully scandalous eruption. Nothing short of the pitching overboard of Abner!

Ranny, however, prolonged the spicily expectant agony of the mongers by pretending to take no notice of what had occurred—at cost of what a struggle only Clay and he knew.

With a raging internal tornado held in leash by an iron will behind an external appearance of cool unconcern and innocence, Ranny strolled along with the other men down to the smoking room and joined in the general conversation there.

The instant he had quit the presence of the ladies their tongues wagged in wild tittle-tattle regardless of Clare's presence.

"Phew!" giggled Dowager Teffens. "I have visions of my picture in the paper as a witness to the crime. Dear me, do I hope they spell my name correctly!"

Meanwhile by no untoward word or glance or gesture did Ranny in the slightest manner betray trepidation or apprehension as to the thin ice over which his wife was flauntingly skating. It was a magnificent and unselfish exhibition of public faith in her conduct!

But deep in the grim glance he exchanged with Clay lay the reason wherein he found moral courage in this crisis.

THEATRE AT THE CAPITOL.

COLLEEN IN ROMANCE OF BIG CITY IN NEW FILM DUE AT CAPITOL

Promise of a delightful romance of middle class life in New York is made by the management of the Capitol Theatre, where "It Must Be Love," Colleen Moore's latest First National starring vehicle will be shown beginning next Monday.

"It Must Be Love," adapted from Brooke Hanlon's story, "Delicatessen," is declared to be one of the most human stories of the year, being replete with heart-throbs as well as the well-known Colleen Moore chuckles. This production presents a cross-section of the kind of life we all know, centering in the situation a girl finds herself in when she gets a beau and is ashamed to bring him to her home in back of a delicatessen store.

There are many such cases in our own families, in the families around the corner and on the next block. It is this sense of nearness, this feeling of actuality and every-day humanness which gives Miss Moore the opportunity to draw the most out of her very appealing part as the girl who has to sacrifice living at home for her pride.

Malcolm McGregor plays the role of the sweetheart, who never finds out till the end that his girl has been deceiving him as to her parentage. Jean Hersholt as the father and Bodil Rosing as the mother make a marvelously effective pair in their German characterizations.

Others in the splendid cast, which Alfred E. Green directed, are Arthur Stone, Dorothy Seastrom, Cleve Moore, Mary O'Brien and Ray Hallor. John McCormick presents the picture.

AT THE GRAND.

RONALD COLEMAN HEADS ALL STAR CAST OF "BEAU GESTE" OPERA HOUSE JAN. 28-29th

To a certainty, "Beau Geste," which comes to the Grand Opera House on next Friday and Saturday, is worth the fortune Paramount poured into its filming. It is worth the months spent by Herbert Brenon, and two thousand men among the scorched sand dunes of the Great American Desert. The story of the French Foreign Legion breathes an immortal flame that any director might forfeit his life to obtain. The action, which hinges on the wonderful devotion of three young Englishmen, each of whom decamps from home in order that the blame for the theft of a famous sapphire may fall on him, although he believes one of his brothers to be guilty, is thrilling. By common impulse all enlist in the Foreign Legion. Two of the brothers find themselves at an isolated Sahara Fort, which must meet the attack of Arabs with only 40 defenders. The sheer fearlessness of these wonderful soldiers in their pitiably peace defense adds exciting and intense drama to the story.

Ronald Colman, in the role of "Beau Geste" gives a portrayal which many are sure to place above his wonderful work in "The White Sister," the picture which started him toward the commanding place in the screen world he now holds. There is no more a romantic figure ever flashed across the screen before.

Rivaling Colman are Neil Hamilton and Ralph Forbes, the other two brothers and a magnificent character is brought to life by Noah Beery as "the cruelest man and bravest soldier" in the Legion. Acting honors also belong to the others on the long list of players—to William Powell, Alice Joyce, Mary Brian, Norman Trevor and Victor McLaglan and the rest. Few pictures in the history of the screen have contained so many marvelous characterization opportunities.

To Herbert Brenon, a man whose tremendous energy and fine artistic ability are evident in the delicate shading of each and every scene goes full credit for the great sweep of the whole production and story. "Beau Geste" will be seen at the Grand Opera House on January 28-29th at 8.30, with a popular priced Matinee on Saturday, and will be accompanied by the big "Beau Geste" orchestra and special musical score. All seats are reserved.

MINSTREL SHOW HELD AT LYCEUM

Vic White's "Navy Boys" Give Well Received Performance.

ATTENDANCE SMALL.

Vic White's "Navy Boys" were the attraction at St. Alphonsus' Lyceum last evening, when they presented their minstrel show under the auspices of the Lyceum Society. The performance, which suffered somewhat through lack of patronage, will be repeated this evening, when the boys, who have taken a great deal of trouble with their show, hope for a better attendance. They have a bright company, with the young men and women taking part gowned in white sailor suits and caps, against a background of navy blue and green hangings, with life-belts as high lights in the decoration scheme. The interlocutor, Michael Clancy, and the director, Victor E. White, wore snappy naval officer outfits, and both filled their parts admirably. The end men were especially striking in their blackface make-up, attired in chef's costumes, with white aprons and caps. They had a good line of jokes and quips, and kept the audience in constant good humor. There was also plenty of applause and enthusiastic encores for the solos, which were all of the popular variety, with rousing choruses. The orchestra, providing tuneful music for the opening, was composed of Messrs. W. Steer (piano), G. Collins (violin), P. Koster (saxaphone), N. Starr (banjo), and L. McCormack (drums). E. Spellman acted as stage manager and V. Dennison as electrician. The spotlight, which added much to the general effectiveness of the performance, was operated by Mr. J. Cook.

The end men were Messrs. P. Cullen, E. Spellman, M. Guerin, and J. Krogh, E. Spellman giving a particularly good account of himself in his solo work and comedy patter.

The programme was as follows: Part One—Opening numbers by the Company, 'Sweet Southern Breezes' and "Valencia"; "Barcelona," by Michael Clancy; "In My Gondola," by E. Spellman; "Ting a Ling," by E. McElwain; "Me Too," by E. Spellman; "Katinka," by H. Sidders; 'After I say I'm Sorry," by P. Cullen; "Somebody's Lonely," by Miss L. Hilliard; "Baby Face," by Victor White; 'I Love my Baby,' by J. Krogh; "My Hero," whistled by the Company; "Could I?" by M. Guerin; "Lonesome and Sorry," by H. Panter; "Bye Bye, Blackbird," by the Company.

In the Oleo, the opening was a brief sketch, "The Girl from Montreal," enacted by Miss Josephine Clancy as "Helen," Victor White as "Bert," and E. Spellman as "Jack." This was followed by a bright and heartily-applauded demonstration of the solo Charleston, by P. Cullen, also vocal solos, in "Moonlight and Roses," by M. Guerin, who also sang, by request, "Remember," and "My Cutie's Due at two to two," by E. Spellman. Another sketch (a la the Dumbells' Revue) was entitled 'Revolver,' and was enacted by Miss L. Hilliard as "Dorothy," J. Huggins as "Bob," and E. McElwain as "Harry." The entertainment closed with the company singing in vivacious fashion, "Where'd you get those Eyes?"

The performance will be repeated this evening at the Lyceum.

Members of the chorus included the Misses M. Sullivan, G. Crowe, M. Buck, and Messrs. J. Huggins, H. Huggins and E. Cadigan.

Arranged in a straight line the railways of the earth would reach to the moon and back—477,636 miles.

OUTLINE OF SCIENCE LXXXIV—The Burning Mirrors. by MAX HAHN

ALTHOUGH ARCHIMEDES WAS THE GREATEST INVENTIVE GENIUS OF THE ANCIENT WORLD, THE STORY OF THE BURNING MIRRORS IS DIFFICULT TO BELIEVE. ACCORDING TO THIS STORY SYRACUSE, THE CITY WHERE ARCHIMEDES LIVED, WAS BEING BESIEGED BY THE ROMANS.

THE ROMAN ARMY HAVING FAILED TO END THE SIEGE, THE ATTACKERS WERE PINNING THEIR HOPES ON THE NAVY. AFTER THE SIEGE HAD CONTINUED FOR A LONG TIME, WORD WAS SENT OUT AMONG THE SYRACUSANS THAT ARCHIMEDES HAD A SCHEME WHICH WOULD MAKE TROUBLE FOR THE ENEMY.

©McClure Newspaper Syndicate

ON THE DAY FOR TESTING ARCHIMEDES' PLAN, HIS COUNTRYMEN BEHELD SQUADS OF WORKMEN PLACING HUGE GLASS DEVICES ON THE CITY WALLS. THEY COULD NOT UNDERSTAND HOW THESE WERE TO BE USED AGAINST THE FOES.

AT A SIGNAL FROM ARCHIMEDES ALL OF THE MIRRORS WERE FOCUSSED ON THE ENEMY SHIPS, THE HOT RAYS SETTING FIRE TO THEM ONE BY ONE. THIS STORY MAY BE BASED ON FACT, BUT IT SEEMS MORE LIKELY THAT IT INDICATES INVENTIVE ABILITY AMONG THE ANCIENT HISTORIANS.

Don't Tell the Wife

BY WILLIAM B. COURTNEY

SYNOPSIS

Ranny Forbes, star polo player, and his beautiful wife, Joan, are temperamental mismates. Joan wants a divorce. Ranny hesitates, loving her, although secretly knowing she loves Abner Gratman. Lacking proof that Joan is faithless he plans to trap her and Abner while they are all on a week-end cruise on the yacht of Stivner, a billionaire lumber king. Complications multiply. Joan, jealous when Ranny flirts with Clare, a widow, openly encourages Abner's advances. Stivner, loving Clare, resents Ranny's interest. Ranny is trying to arrange a business deal with Stivner. Loyal to her marriage vows up to now, Joan feels Ranny's flirting releases her. But he tires of Clare.

CHAPTER IX.—Continued.

It was not within the fundamental nature of a man so single tracked in his emotions as Ranny Forbes to long tolerate the vampish insipidities of so multiple minded a person as Mrs. Clare Clemoneau. She was too much for him. Dabbling with her at first only in a spirit of counterplot, he had suddenly felt himself dangerously allured by her undeniable physical charms.

Several things had conspired to bring him to his senses, however, his love for Joan, his wife, for instance, which—resolutely subordinate it though he would—always focused back into its natural and rightful place as the paramount theme of his spiritual, moral and physical life.

Then, for the second point, there was his own sense of humor.

Last, and far from least, was the sharp admonitory lecture that had been dinned into his ears and hammered upon his devoted head by faithful Clay Varick, his alert chum, in the interval before dinner.

Clay, in his forthright way, had swept through the chaff and penetrated right to the gist of the situation.

Bitingly, Clay had reviewed the developments. Ranny was making a public ass of himself. He had come on this cruise solely and notably because it offered an excellent chance to entrap the interloper, Abner Gratman, who was stealing the wife of his heart away from him; because it afforded an opportunity to begin a campaign to re-interest his wife and win back her love.

Yet here he was letting himself be made a donkey of by a designing little bundle of sophisticated and trouble-making femininity!

Here he was forgetting the aim and end of the serious business in hand under the spell of baby dumb eyes!

Here he was forsaking the role of a man for that of a monkey!

And what was Stivner thinking,

did Ranny imagine? Stivner, who wanted Clare! Stivner, with whom Ranny earnestly desired to become associated in a business way!

Was thwarting the billionaire lumber king in an affair of the heart, even as he had recently failed him in the matter of the polo wager, a sensible way for Ranny to endeavor to achieve social and business success with Stivner?

Stivner's whole career was a record of having broken the reckless men who tried to stand in his way! And Stivner's heart was even now a seething furnace of jealous fires while the frail blonde flower of his most ardent desires leaned toward another sun.

Thus Clay had raved, and Ranny's head had bowed and his eyes had lowered under the storm. For the proverbial "Dutch Uncle" had nothing on Clay when it came to delivering a hair-raising bawling out, a crackling piece of his mind!

Ranny, who was but a boy at heart, writhed under the lash of Clay's tongue like a lad under parental wood shed chastisement.

It had dusted the nonsense from his pants—his mind, that is—and chased the seductive spell of Clare's whimsical enchantment from his eyes.

Heart, soul and mind he had become the concise and straight fighting Ranny Forbes once more. The strong male seeking to wreak the vengeance of his hands upon the invader of his hearthstone.

Few pictures in the history of the screen have contained so many marvelous characterization opportunities.

To Herbert Brenon, a man whose tremendous energy and fine artistic ability are evident in the delicate shading of each and every scene goes full credit for the great sweep of the whole production and story. "Beau Geste" will be seen at the Grand Opera House on January 28-29th at 8.30, with a popular priced Matinee on Saturday, and will be accompanied by the big "Beau Geste" orchestra and special musical score. All seats are reserved.

AT THE REGENT

"THE WHEEL," ADAPTED FROM JOHN GOLDEN STAGE SUCCESS, IS TREMENDOUS SCREEN DRAMA.

"The Wheel," which William Fox produced as one of the John Golden Unit of clean American productions, and which opens on Monday at the Regent Theatre, was adapted from the sensational New York stage success by Winchell Smith. It deals with the dramatic struggle of a young wife to save her husband from the deadly toils of the gambling den.

Woven into the warp and woof of the plot is the conflict between the husband and the gambler, who is in love with the wife and is trying to cause her husband's downfall so he may win her.

But the wife complicates matters by herself falling victim to the lure of the Goddess of Chance—and finally the gambler

But that is the climax. It is a picture that grips until the final fade-out; it is teeming with heart interest and lightened by deft comedy touches. Suffice it to say, without revealing the denouement, that the wife and her once reckless young husband win through to happiness.

Heading the all star cast in "The Wheel" are Harrison Ford and Claire Adams, who play the husband and wife. In support are seen such sterling artists of the screen as Mahlon Hamilton, David Torrence, Margaret Livingston, Clara Horton, Erin LaBissoniere and George Harris.

WITH THE BIG "BEAU GESTE" ORCHESTRA

MINSTREL SHOW HELD AT LYCEUM

Vic White's "Navy Boys" Give Well Received Performance.

ATTENDANCE SMALL.

Vic White's "Navy Boys" were the attraction at St. Alphonsus' Lyceum last evening, when they presented their minstrel show under the auspices of the Lyceum Society. The performance, which suffered somewhat through lack of patronage, will be repeated this evening, when the boys, who have taken a great deal of trouble with their show, hope for a better attendance. They have a bright company, with the young men and women taking part gowned in white sailor suits and caps, against a background of navy blue and green hangings, with life-belts as high lights in the decoration scheme. The interlocutor, Michael Clancy, and the director, Victor E. White, wore snappy naval officer outfits, and both filled their parts admirably. The end men were especially striking in their blackface make-up, attired in chef's costumes, with white aprons and caps. They had a good line of jokes and quips, and kept the audience in constant good humor. There was also plenty of applause and enthusiastic encores for the solos, which were all of the popular variety, with rousing choruses. The orchestra, providing tuneful music for the opening, was composed of Messrs. W. Steer (piano), G. Collins (violin), P. Koster (saxaphone), N. Starr (banjo), and L. McCormack (drums). E. Spellman acted as stage manager and V. Dennison as electrician. The spotlight, which added much to the general effectiveness of the performance, was operated by Mr. J. Cook.

The end men were Messrs. P. Cullen, E. Spellman, M. Guerin, and J. Krogh. E. Spellman giving a particularly good account of himself in his solo work and comedy patter.

The programme was as follows: Part One—Opening numbers by the Company, 'Sweet Southern Breezes' and "Valencia"; "Barcelona," by Michael Clancy; "In My Gondola," by E. Spellman; "Ting a Ling," by E. McElwain; "Me Too," by E. Spellman; "Katinka," by H. Sidders; 'After I say I'm Sorry," by P. Cullen; "Somebody's Lonely," by Miss L. Hilliard; "Baby Face," by Victor White; 'I Love my Baby,' by J. Krogh; "My Hero," whistled by the Company; "Could I?" by M. Guerin; "Lonesome and Sorry," by H. Panter; "Bye Bye, Blackbird," by the Company.

In the Oleo, the opening was a brief sketch, "The Girl from Montreal," enacted by Miss Josephine Clancy as "Helen," Victor White as "Bert," and E. Spellman as "Jack." This was followed by a bright and heartily-applauded demonstration of the solo Charleston, by P. Cullen, also vocal solos, in "Moonlight and Roses," by M. Guerin, who also sang, by request, "Remember," and "My Cutie's Due at two to two," by E. Spellman. Another sketch (a la the Dumbells' Revue) was entitled 'Revolver,' and was enacted by Miss L. Hilliard as "Dorothy," J. Huggins as "Bob," and E. McElwain as "Harry." The entertainment closed with the company singing in vivacious fashion, "Where'd you get those Eyes?"

The performance will be repeated this evening at the Lyceum.

Members of the chorus included the Misses M. Sullivan, G. Crowe, M. Buck, and Messrs. J. Huggins, H. Huggins and E. Cadigan.

Arranged in a straight line the railways of the earth would reach to the moon and back—477,636 miles.

ALTHOUGH ARCHIMEDES WAS THE GREATEST INVENTIVE GENIUS OF THE ANCIENT WORLD, THE STORY OF THE BURNING MIRRORS IS DIFFICULT TO BELIEVE. ACCORDING TO THIS STORY SYRACUSE, THE CITY WHERE ARCHIMEDES LIVED, WAS BEING BESIEGED BY THE ROMANS.

THE ROMAN ARMY HAVING FAILED TO END THE SIEGE, THE ATTACKERS WERE PINNING THEIR HOPES ON THE NAVY. AFTER THE SIEGE HAD CONTINUED FOR A LONG TIME, WORD WAS SENT OUT AMONG THE SYRACUSANS THAT ARCHIMEDES HAD A SCHEME WHICH WOULD MAKE TROUBLE FOR THE ENEMY.

© McClure Newspaper Syndicate

ON THE DAY FOR TESTING ARCHIMEDES' PLAN, HIS COUNTRYMEN BEHELD SQUADS OF WORKMEN PLACING HUGE GLASS DEVICES ON THE CITY WALLS. THEY COULD NOT UNDERSTAND HOW THESE WERE TO BE USED AGAINST THE FOES.

AT A SIGNAL FROM ARCHIMEDES ALL OF THE MIRRORS WERE FOCUSSED ON THE ENEMY SHIPS. THE HOT RAYS SETTING FIRE TO THEM ONE BY ONE. THIS STORY MAY BE BASED ON FACT, BUT IT SEEMS MORE LIKELY THAT IT INDICATES INVENTIVE ABILITY AMONG THE ANCIENT HISTORIANS.

Cobb And Speaker May Go To National League Next Year

REPORT COBB AND SPEAKER MAY PLAY AGAIN

New York Moguls Claim Tyrus Will Wear Giant Uniform.

CLUBS INTERESTED.

Reason For Dismissal Will Be Revealed Next Monday.

(By Henry L. Farrell, United Press Staff Correspondent).

NEW YORK, Jan. 22.—Ty Cobb and Tris Speaker, two of baseball's greatest stars, who were relieved of the management of the Detroit and Cleveland clubs for reasons that have not been made clear, will be playing again next season, but in the National League, it was reported yesterday from several good sources.

In the course of next Monday's battle in Chicago between Commissioner Landis and Ban Johnson, president of the American League, the reasons for their dismissal will have to be given, and from the many conflicting statements made by Johnson it seems that the reasons are not serious enough to keep the two stars out of baseball.

Johnson started his latest, and perhaps his last feud with Landis by making a statement that Cobb and Speaker never would be allowed to play in the American League for several reasons that were known only to the American League owners.

Landis then demanded a meeting with the club owners to get the secret information hinted at by Johnson, and Johnson has been making so many conflicting statements that it looks as if he had no case against the two players or that he is holding out details for the meeting.

Smart baseball men were of the opinion that the meetings Monday will finish the career of Johnson, and that Cobb and Speaker will be vindicated, or that if Johnson is spared, the two players he accused will be exonerated.

It is understood that the Giants are interested in the outcome of the case as it concerns Cobb, because he would be a great drawing card in New York.

At least one other club in the National League is interested in Cobb and Speaker.

It might be considered good politics for the American League to notify the two players that they were qualified to seek other jobs in the American League, but it is almost a dead certainty that neither will consider any more American League connections or associations.

BOUT WITH TUNNEY WAS IMPOSTER'S AIM

Got 30 Days and Was Re-Arrested for Selling Narcotics.

(By Universal Service)

READING, Pa., Jan. 22.—While serving thirty days in jail her for impersonating Jack Sharkey, heavyweight fighter of Boston, John Banks of Chester was arrested by a United States marshall charged with selling narcotics. He was held in $1,000 bail.

When Banks, alias John Sloan, was arrested a week ago, he was supposedly making arrangements to open a training camp preparatory to fighting Gene Tunney for the world's championship.

Banks told a convincing story that Paddy Mullins and other prominent fight promoters were coming to Hamburg where he was arrested, to take over a hotel as part of the fight promotion. Communications with New York uncovered the deception and lead to his arrest.

OSHAWA BEATS PORT HOPE 5-0

Big Crowd Sees Old Rivals Battle For Group Leadership.

MANY PENALTIES.

OSHAWA, Jan. 22—Walter Lett's Oshawa Intermediates gained a lap on Peter Brown's Port Hoper's in the race for O.H.A. Group No. 4 honors yesterday evening, when they handed the Easterners their first defeat of the season. The score was 5 to 0.

With the Hopers and Oshawa each having four wins and no losses going into the game last night, hockey enthusiasts were here from as far east as Belleville, and Lindsay from the north, to watch the old rivals struggle to break the deadlock, and every available inch of space in Bradley's Arena was taken when the game got under way. The crowd was given everything that is included in a hockey game, and then some, for the price of admission. Referee Ernie Parkes of Toronto had his hands full and kept the bench in the penalty box warm, sending eight of the Hopers to serve time and two from Oshawa.

Port Hope—Goal, Micks; defence, Crossett and Hutchings; centre, K. Ware; wings, A. Hills and R. Ware; subs., W. Hills and Dawley; sub. goalie, Goodman.

Referee—Ernie Parkes, Toronto.

MARMORA GIVEN FIRST REVERSE

ONE PENALTY.

MARMORA, Jan. 22. — Marmora suffered their first reverse of the season last night, losing at home to Tweed by 5 to 2. The game was played in a fog and the ice was soft. The homesters lacked the services of Auger, whose absence appeared to be felt. Max Geraldi scored twice for Tweed in the first frame and Houston obtained a third. Max Geraldi and A. Geraldi added goals in the second period, with Wood registering for Marmora. McWilliams obtained the prettiest goal of the game in the third period, scoring on the initial rush. Wagar in the Tweed goal shaped well, but Neal at the other end had an off night. The game was watched by a good crowd, and the cheering was the loudest of the season. Leo Barrett of Belleville handled the game well and awarded only one penalty.

KITCHENER GAINS FULL GAME LEAD

Comes From Behind To Beat Preston Riversides 5-3.

KITCHENER, Ont., Jan. 22. — The Twin City Green Shirts made a battling finish here on soft ice last night, scoring four goals in the last period, to come from behind and defeat Preston 5 to 3 in the most important game to date of Group No. 1 of the Senior O.H.A. race. As a result of the victory the Green Shirts are again out in front of the group race with a full game lead over the Riversides, and half of the group games played.

Though the Green Shirts had been the aggressors for the better part of the first two periods they tore in all the harder in the third and early a long shot by Hiller sifted through Schmalz for a counter and that sent the team away battling like fiends. Six minutes later the Green Shirts tied it up when the Riversides had Arnott doing time. With fourteen minutes gone, Karges slid in on a neat solo effort and he and Schmalz, the goalie, were chased for a minute and in that interval Seagram drilled through the winning counter. Three minutes later, when the teams were all squared again in regard to men, Gross went in and made it 5 to 3, settling the game.

THE MOTORCYCLE PARTY

Above are shown George Young, Toronto youth, who conquered the treacherous Catalina gap, when nearly 100 other leading swimmers failed, and his pal "Bill" Hastings, champion high diver of Canada, aboard the motorcycle on which they made the trip to California to compete in the $25,000 event because they lacked the funds to pay railway fares.

BRISTLING BATTLES of BARE FIST DAYS

(MY LIFE STORY)

by Jack McAuliffe

(Copyright, 1927, NEA Service, Inc.)

Chapter Fifteen

I had gone blind in my fight with Harry Gilmore in the 19th round. His left had closed both my eyes. Jack Dempsey in my corner wanted Dr. Ferguson, my Brooklyn friend, to cut my eyes, but he refused.

"He's in fine shape physically and condition will bring him out of it" he said.

But the doctor started massaging my eyes. All through the 20th round I couldnt see a thing and I could tell where Gilmore was only by his breathing. I covered up and blocked a lot of blows by instinct. Gilmore's backers were screaming their triumph and ofering bets of $500 to $100 I wouldn't last another round.

I struggled on and on, reeling around like a draunken man while the angelic strains of the Salvation Army lassies kept pouring out from the room above.

Down below I was being slowly cut to ribbons.

Finally in the 24th round Doc Ferguson managed to message my eyes so I could see through the swollen slits that were left. I saw Gilmore was almost worn out, too, by the excitement and my earlier body punches.

"I win now," I said confidently to Dempsey, and from the 26th round on I battered him unmercifully. In the 27th round Gilmore's backers quit their screaming on money odds and tried to hedge on bets.

Jack Dempsey, my second, at the end of each round would start a vigorous massage of my eyes and the doctor kept giving applications because were were working against time and were afraid my eyes would close again and I had to get Gilmore and get him quick before it was too late.

I went out and started a savage body attack in the 28th round. Gilmore winced with the pain and dropped his arms a bit to cover the belaboring I was giving his "button." We old-timers didn't call the chin the button. The button to us was the spot in the stomach just below the breast bone.

Well, Gilmore lowered his guard a bit and—wham—I brought over a looping right that hit him square on the nose, broke it, and knocked him down and out.

"Police!" someone shouted and in the rush I blundered about the room, getting more blind. I bumped into the walls in my frenzy to avoid a long prison sentence. I could not find the door.

Note—In the next chapter McAuliffe tells of his escape and how he fought two fights in Philly and kept his opponents from knowing his left hand was completely frac-tured.

OUR BOARDING HOUSE — By AHERN

Inside Sporting Dope

By A Wise Cracker

Mister Sporting Editor:

Been so much happened since my last issue of banana oil that I don't know just where to start in.

Mister Geo. Young wins the Spearmint swimming steaks, Mister Wright's seniors gets a stranglehold on 2nd place, our intermediates has win 2 games by the mail route, and Mister Lebarr's colts is section winners, with the Lindsay Midgets nowhere in sight.

The big noise all week, of course, has been how Mister Frank Merriwell George Young has made the world sit up and take notice. Young Mister Young showed all and sundry that 22 miles of cold water meant nothing to a Canadian of Scotch birth when at the end of it was a bag full of gold, although I gotta admit that I for 1 would have to have more Scotch in me than I'll likely to get hold until after May 1st anyway before I could be coaxed to do any of that long distance mermaid stuff. Before the race there was a lotta talk about danger from sharks. Neither Mister Young nor none of the gang met none in the water, but it's a safe bet that the Canadian kid has met plenty of them since. Here's hoping they got about as much chance of getting any of his jack away from him as the rest of the greased fish had to beat him in the race.

By the way, Mac, Rev. Ben. Spence would like it understood that Mister Young was trained by and not on Johnny Walker. And try this 1 on your harmonica, words by Mister Dutch Leonard, music by Mister Swede Risberg, "The Catalina Swim Was Crooked Because Most of the Gang Was Greased."

Our Peterboro seniors has clamped a scissors hold on 2nd place, thanks to them beating Mister Joe Primeau and the rest of the Marlboros here Mon. I just ask the customers if the game wasn't all that I cracked it up to be, and besides seeing the Dukes go down, the pewholders had a big night seeing every play different from Mister Ernie Parkes, the referee. The bell ringer was given a round on about every decision, and it wasn't applause neither. The Petes' cause wasn't helped none by the raspberries presented to Mister Parkes, and the few birds what tossed things at the referee was taking big chances that the man with the bell might call the whole thing off. They ain't never been a hockey game won yet by crowning the referee from the sidelines, no matter hoy cock-eyed his work may look.

Next week the game they've all been looking for is on the cards, when the Varsity Grads will be here. Don't miss this 1, folks. This gang of puck-chasers, under the wing of Mister Connie Smythe, is a real team any way you take them. They got about everything a hockey machine needs, and the way the Petes is talking they're going to need it all next Thurs. The local lads, hot under the collar every time they think about the walloping they got in Toronto, are going out there to make the Grads earn all they get, and it looks like the best argument that's been staged in the local icery in a dog's age. Better look after the pasteboards early, for it's going to be like the Cockshutt banquet—everybody'll want to get in and they ain't going to be room for every 1.

Well, Mac, I guess they ain't nothing more this time,

Sportfully yours,

A. WISE CRACKER.

JUNIORS TAKE SECOND VICTORY

Grove Defeated in Second Game of Lakefield Junior O.H.A. Series.

MANY PENALTIES.

LAKEFIELD, Jan. 22.—Lakefield Juniors again defeated the Grove with same identical score as that of last Friday night in the second game of the local Junior O.H.A. series at Lakefield Rink last night. The largest crowd of the season attended this game and as local interest is running very high, it is expected a good crowd will turn out to see the final game of the round on next Tuesday night, when The Grove will put up a hard battle to try and overcome the four goal lead held by the Juniors.

All through the game, The Grove played better combination than the Juniors, but were outbalanced by the heavier team. In the first, both teams scored, making it a 1—1 tie while in the second Stabler and Wannamaker scored for the Juniors Griffiths for Grove, and Wannamaker for Juniors tallied in the third, holding up 30, and Junkin for Juniors 21.

Both goalies did snappy work in their respective posts, stopping almost sure shots. Moore for Grove holding up 30, and Junkin for Juniors 21.

Line-up:

REPORTS TO CEMETERY BOARD

The following reports were read at the annual meeting of the Little Lake Cemetery Company:

DIRECTORS' REPORT

During the year just closed your Directors gave a great deal of consideration to the revising of the By-laws and a newset of rules and re ulations were passed by the Board. Both of these will be submitted to you to-day for your approval.

The receipts from Operating Accounts, as you will notice from the Financial Report, were $12,974.84, and the payments $13,257.57, showing a loss of $282.73, as compared with $20.93 in 1925.

The receipts from the sale of lots was $5,390.00, which is an increase of $345.00 for the year.

We purchased $6.000 City of Toronto Bonds at 93.93, yielding 4.95%. This brings the total amount of money invested in Bonds and Debentures owned by this Company to $61,534.21, and the amount of interest received from these investments totaled $3,118.19

We had the opportunity, during the year, of buying, on very favourable terms, earth for filling purposes and some 1,500 loads were used and placed on Section O, and Section M, which has been graded and partly seeded at a cost of $1,713.32, which gives us an additional 150 lots which will be available for sale when required. This is one part of the work that has to be done some time in advance of when we expect to use it.

Your Directors would like again to call the attention of the lot holders to the advisability of making provision, during their lifetime for the perpetual care of their lots. The Company received for this purpose, during the year, $1,260.00. The amount now held by the Company, for this purpose, is $18,761.21.

Greenhouse sales amounted to $3,252.18, which shows a very gratifying increase for the year of $249.15.

We have to report with regret the death of one of our co-Directors, Mr. Henry Rush, who died on the 24th November, last. He was elected a Director in 1917, and gave his very best to the work of the Cemetery Company.

In December last, Mr. R. J. Kidd was appointed to take his place.

Mr. T. H. G. Denne, owing to his absence from the City, tendered his resignation to the Directors and his brother, Mr. Roland Denne, was appointed to fill the vacancy. Mr. Denne was a member of the Board for 14 years, during part of which time he filled the office of President of the Company very acceptibly to the Shareholders.

The Financial Statement and also the Superintendent's Report are submitted herewith, and an examination of them will give a complete account of what has been accomplished during the year.

The Officers of the Company have performed their duties during the year in a very satisfactory manner and are, I am sure, entitled to the thanks of the Lot owners for the manner in which they have attended to the work of the Cemetery Company.

All of which is respectively submitted,
W. G. MORROW,
President.

ST. JOHN'S CHOIR ANNUAL MEETING

Reports Show Organization To Be In Splendid Condition.

The annual meeting of St. John's Church Choir was held this week, when very encouraging reports were presented by the different officers. The financial report showed a healthy condition and published the fact that the choir as the outcome of their efforts during the past year had donated a large subscription to the Centenary Fund, which amount they hoped to augment before the termination of the campaign.

Several new members have joined, bringing the choir almost to capacity in each of the different sections.

Mr. Mann, the choirmaster, outlined the work he had in view for the ensuing year, laying particular stress on the coming centenary celebrations. He asked for the co-operation of all concerned in connection with the concert to be held on Tuesday, February 15th, and also for the patronage of all church members on this occasion.

A pleasing feature of the gathering was the presentation of a handsomely bound hymn book to Miss R. Quartermaine, in recognition of her extraordinary attendance at choir rehearsals and church services. Her attendance has been 100 per cent for the past three years.

The following officers were elected
Hon. Pres.—Mr. H. W. Morphet.
President—Mr. W. Gray.
Vice President—Mr. H. Flowers.
Sec.-Treasurer—Miss R. Quartermaine.
Librarian—Mr. A. Hayter.
Choir Mother—Mrs. J. J. Howden.

At the close of the business session, refreshments were served which was followed with a musical entertainment and dancing.

FATEFUL YEARS FOR ALL WOMEN

Much Suffering Can Be Avoided Through the Use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills.

The most fateful years in a woman's life are those between forty-five and fifty. Many women enter this term under depressing conditions; through overwork, worry, or a watery condition of the blood, and they suffer heavily.

Among the commonest symptoms are headaches, palpitations, dizziness, backaches, depression and other well recognized disturbances of the health which show that the blood requires attention. Women stand in need of rich red blood all their lives, but never more so than at middle age, when the nerves are also weak and overwrought. In this condition there is no other medicine can do so much for women as Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, for these pills make rich, red blood, which gives tone to the whole body, thus restoring robust health. Thousands of Canadian women have proved the value of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills in cases of this kind. Among them is Mrs. J. H. Johnston, Lion's Head, Ont., who says: "I am writing to let you know the wonderful good your pills have done me. I was a complete wreck, and would faint if I crossed the room. I was going through the change of life, and was so weak I could not do my work. I went to Toronto, when my folks said nothing but an operation would help me. But I said: 'No, Dr. Williams' Pink Pills helped me in girlhood, and I am going to give them a trial.' I took the pills steadily for a month, when I returned home a well woman, able to do all my work with ease. Friends here say it's a wonder I am alive after what I went through, and I am thankful to say I believe Dr. Williams' Pink Pills saved my life."

Try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for anaemia, rheumatism, neuralgia, nervousness. Take them as a tonic if you are not in the best physical condition and cultivate a resistance that will keep you well and strong. You can get these pills through any medicine dealer or by mail at 50 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

TWO OUTSTANDING TOURS.

It has been truly said that "Travel is a liberal education" and this expression was never so true as it is today. The whole world, so to speak, has been made easy to access by transportation systems, by rail, ocean, automobile and aeroplane. While the advantages of travel are now available to the many instead of the few, the refinements of modern railroad transportation and the exacting requirements of the modern traveller as regards his creature comfort have combined to make the detailed arrangements of an extensive tourist trip rather complex. Every traveller making a vacation trip wishes to derive the utmost benefit in pleasure and education and to spend as little time as possible arranging its many details, the itinerary and train connections, securing sleeping car, steamer, and hotel reservations, etc. He desires also to make the best possible use of the time available by the inclusion of the most important and worth-while attractions and above all, to know how much it will cost.

All this is done for you in the "Personally Conducted All-Expense Tours", which have become so popular with the Canadian public, the best known and most popular being the splendid tours operated via the Canadian National Railways, under the direction of Mr. Martin Kerr, B.A. (4 Reulah Ave., Hamilton, Ont.) and Mr. A. E. Bryson (44 Silverthorn Ave., Toronto, Ont.) of the Kerr-Bryson Tours. Two more such tours are announced for July, 1927,—one from Toronto through the Canadian West to the Pacific Coast, including Wainwright Park, Jasper National Park, the Triangle Tour, Vancouver and Victoria, B.C., returning through the United States via Yellowstone Park, Salt Lake City, Denver, Colorado Springs, Pike's Peak and Chicago. The other from Toronto east to Montreal, Quebec, Ste. Anne de Beaupre, the Saguenay River, the Maritime Provinces, Saint John, N.B., Prince Edward Island, the Bras d'Or Lakes, Halifax, N.S., Land of Evangeline, Annapolis Valley, Boston, Mass., and finally Ottawa, the capital of the Dominion. Descriptive booklets of both these tours will be available very shortly and in the meantime further information may be secured from any Canadian National Railways agent or from the organizers.

If you have not previously been interested in these tours, it is well worth your while to enquire about them; they will solve your vacation problem. 2d-22-29

Uncle Wiggily

To-day's Bedtime Story.

By Howard R. Garis

UNCLE WIGGILY AND DAZIE'S TAIL.

(By Howard R. Garis.)

Dazie Woggiejig was a little girl made of wood, and she was dark blue in color. But she never felt blue. She was the jolliest, most happy little Woggiejig you can imagine until she lost her tail, and then—

But there, I had better tell the story from the beginning so there will be no mistakes.

Dazie lived with her sister and brother Woggiejigs in the Bungleump home which, for the winter, had been moved just across the garden from Uncle Wiggily's hollow stump bungalow. In the same little house, which was named Bungleump, lived Boppy, a little wooden man, and Um, a little wooden lady. They were the daddy and mother of the Woggiejigs.

The Woggiejigs were very queer and jolly. Their bodies were made of two egg-shaped pieces of wood, fastened together with a wooden pin. Another wooden pin made a neck and on this neck the wooden head of a Woggiejig boy or girl could turn all the way around, as the owl bird sometimes seems to make his head turn. Only the owl really can't do it.

Dazie had four wooden legs, but she could use her front pair almost like hands, so she was quite clever. And she also had a little wooden tail, very cute and pretty.

One day just as Uncle Wiggily was starting out from his hollow stump bungalow to go look for an adventure, he heard some one crying under the gooseberry bush. Of course there were no gooseberries on the bush in winter, and no leaves, and it did not take the rabbit gentleman long to look through the bare bush and see dark blue Dazie Woggiejig there.

"What's the matter, Dazie?" asked the bunny uncle.

"Oh, lots is the matter!" sobbed the Woggiejig girl. "A whole house and lot is the matter. I—I've lost my tail | boo hoo!"

"Lost your tail?" asked Uncle Wiggily kindly. "That's too bad. But it isn't quite so sad as Little Bo Peep, for she lost her sheep. I'll help you look for your tail, Dazie. Where did you drop it?"

"I didn't drop it," sobbed Dazie. And Uncle Wiggily, remembering that she was made of wood, was not as surprised at hearing that she had lost her tail as he would have been had Jackie Bow Bow, the dog, said his tail was gone.

"If you didn't drop your tail," asked Uncle Wiggily, "how did you lose it? Tails don't get lost of themselves you know, Dazie."

"I—I know!" sobbed the Woggiejig girl. "But you know we play a scramble game at our Bungleump."

"A scramble game?" asked the rabbit in surprise.

"Yes," went on Dazie. "Sometimes I take Mazie's head and she grabs mine. Or maybe I'll take one of Dumplis legs and he takes one of mine, and maybe I get Wimple's neck. Oh, we get all scrambled up and then Boppy and Um have to unscramble us. We were playing the scramble game this morning and when it came time to go to school, after we were unscrambled, I didn't have any tail. Oh, dear!"

"But who has your tail?" asked Mr. Longears.

"One of my brothers or sisters, I suppose," answered Dazie. "But they are in school."

"Then we'll go to the Hollow Stump School and get your tail back," spoke Uncle Wiggily.

"Oh, no!" cried Dazie. "I'd never dare come out from under this gooseberry bush without my tail. I'd look sillier than the Bob Cat. No, I daren't come out. Oh, what shall I do for a tail?"

Then Uncle Wiggily had a happy thought.

"Here's a short, stubby little lead pencil," he said. "I'll stick that on you for a tail until we can go to school and get your regular one. How's that?"

"Oh, goodie! It's lovely!" laughed Dazie. So Uncle Wiggily made her a lead pencil tail, and he hopped along to school with her. The black end of Dazie's lead pencil tail made marks in the white snow, but who minded that? Nobody, I'm telling you. And when the little Woggiejig girl reached the Hollow Stump School, the Lady Mouse Teacher had Dazie's tail on her desk, ready and waiting. Bumple had found it in his pocket.

So Dazie got her tail back, and she thanked the bunny for lending her the lead pencil, and everything ended happily.

WHAT DID YOU GIVE LAST CHRISTMAS?

Toys for the kiddies—most of them broken by now. "Something useful" for the grown-ups—now worn out or forgotten. Cash to your employees—appreciated but soon spent. Other presents—hurriedly bought and perhaps ill-chosen. Are they remembered now?

Suppose this year you give them each a Bank Book containing an initial deposit, and urge them to add to it regularly. Could anything be more suitable?

HASTINGS HAS OVERCOME MANY SERIOUS OBSTACLES

Has Grown Into Thriving Community After Unpromising Start.

FIRE GREAT TROUBLE.

Formerly the south side of the River Trent was a part of the Township of Percy, and the north side, part of the Township of Asphodel.

In 1847, the place was called Crooks Rapids, and this name was derived from a man named Jonathan Crooks, who secured the lands from the government. This included water-power and surroundings, with the understanding that he was to keep a sawmill and gristmill in operation at least six months of the year, besides other improvements.

Later, Mr. H. Fowlds, Sr., took all the properties over from Crooks and moved from Westwood to Hastings and started to fulfill the agreements of Crooks, which seemed to be uphill work because of fires. A small gristmill was erected near the south end of Mr. P. M. Howard's block, and a sawmill about the rear of what is now Mr. J. F. McCarthy's store. About fifty years ago, on July 12, the gristmill was burned down and shortly afterwards the sawmill met the same fate.

About this time a man named George Brownlee built a foundry where the present power-house stands. One night he was coming from the village of Warkworth in a one-horse wagon, and coming down the hill at Brickley he fell out of the wagon, an accident which broke his neck. After this a Mr. George Bickel took over the foundry which was burned down shortly.

The village was minus a foundry until Mr. W. P. Plant started the one that is at present in operation on the banks of the Trent.

At present there is only one man living who helped in 1858 to build the big sawmill and cotton factory erected by Mr. H. Fowlds, Sr. Both of these buildings were of frame and built in the winter and were destroyed by fire long since.

About this time a wooden dam was built across the river. It was built without a strong foundation and had to be torn out down to low-water mark. When it was rebuilt it was too low for navigation and the workmen had to stay the top with two-inch pins to hold back the water. While working at this, a man by the name of Joseph White fell in and was drowned. In 1870, the water raised very high and took away one span of the bridge.

A small tannery was built by Mr. Isaac Toms, where he tanned bear skins, deer skins, woodchuck skins, and cattle hides. At this early date, five houses were all that were in Hastings and a small store for needed supplies was the only business place.

With the changing of the name from Crooks Rapids to Hastings, Mr. J. S. Fowlds, who was at the time, reeve, petitioned the government and had it incorporated as a village, calling it after General Hastings.

In 1876, Mr. J. S. Fowlds, of Hastings, and Mr. J. W. Ferris, of Campbellford, were directors of the Grand Junction Railroad. They worked together and used their influence to have the new road come through Campbellford and Hastings.

The northern part of Percy and the village of Hastings each gave a bonus of $5,000.00, to be paid in twenty years, which included principal, interest and compound interest, which were to be added together so as to make the first payment the same as the last, so that when the total was paid up each municipality had paid over eleven thousand dollars.

In the pioneer days, the waters boasted of four steamboats. One was the "Prince Albert," which had two engines, and two smokestacks; another, the "British Queen"; a third, the "Otonabee," and another called the "Forester." Mr. H. Fowlds and Sons bought the "Forester" from the Wilkinson Lumber Company. For some years she was used and when getting old a carpenter from Cobourg had it hauled out of the water, taking it apart, and saving what was good.

A larger steamboat was built, called the "Forest City." When the boat was finished, another was purchased, the "British Queen," which was run downstream past Healey Falls. Plans were made for landing in Trenton but about three miles above Campbellford she stuck on the rocks and got no further.

The bridge has been replaced two or three times. Now, the cement dam, large modern lock gates, and wharf are a credit to the place.

Now, we have a good business section, plenty of athletic sports, four churches, two banking establishments, a splendid tanning factory, an iron foundry and sawmill in connection.

On looking over the past, we find the place has had several drawbacks due to heavy fire losses, part of which has not been rebuilt.

TRADE REPORT

WINNIPEG, Jan. 22 (Canadian Press).—The weekly trade report of the Canadian Credit Men's Trust Association Limited reads as follows:

Halifax—The wholesale trade has not yet picked up after the Christmas sales. The dullness, however, is only temporary and it is expected that normal conditions will be restored almost immediately. Retailers in the city report fair sales considering the time of the year. Collections moderate.

St. John—Wholesalers report a satisfactory volume of business. The retail trade during the past week has been fair with a slight improvement in collections.

Montreal—A very active week has been enjoyed by the wholesale grocers. Dry goods sales normal with a slight improvement in gent's furnishings, clothing and ladies' wear. While business in the boots and shoes line has been more or less quiet, conditions are more satisfactory at this period. Hardware is in good demand, shelf goods selling better than usual. The wholesale trade generally was a little more brisk during the past week. City merchants report a very fair amount of trade and conditions throughout the province seem very fair. Wholesale collections have been decidedly good during the past week. Retail collections very fair. The building trade continues exceptionally busy. Unskilled labor is in very fair demand and skilled mechanics are very busy. Very little unemployment is in evidence. Lumber operators are in full swing. A good winter's cut is expected and sufficient snow has fallen to enable economical transportation.

Toronto — Wholesalers report steady demand for seasonable goods with a slight improvement in other lines. Retail trade satisfactory. Collections fair.

Winnipeg—Wholesale grocers report very satisfactory volume of business. Boots and shoes, rubber goods, dry goods, ladies' and gent's ready-to-wear showing steady improvement. An improvement in hardware sales is also reported. A fair volume of retail trade is reported by city merchants. The cold weather prevailing during the past week has to some extent reduced the volume, but there is still a good demand for heavy winter goods. Collections satisfactory.

Regina—The wholesale trade is inclined to be quiet with the exception of wholesale grocers who are doing a very fair volume. Retail trade, both city and country, is fair. The recent cold weather having a tendency to keep customers at home. Wholesalers report collections very slow, but retail merchants state that their accounts have been coming in good. Country retail slow.

Saskatoon—Wholesale grocers report fair volume of business. Dry goods, boots and shoes, hardware and other lines, however, have not recovered from Christmas sales although an immediate improvement is expected. The retail trade in the city during the past week was fair. Country retail trade slow. Wholesale collections and city retail fair. Country retail collections slow.

Calgary—Business fair. January sales have increased the volume in retail trade to some extent. Collections fair to slow.

Wheat Prices Fluctuate Very Little This Morning

CHICAGO, Jan. 22 (Canadian Press)—Unusual steadiness showed itself in the wheat market to-day, early fluctuations being confined to a 1-2 cent range. Reports that wheat stocks in Great Britain are very small and that there is a scarcity of early shipment offers by Argentina were a sustaining factor. Opening at 1-4 cent decline to 1-8 cent advance, wheat held near to initial figures. Corn, oats, and provisions were easy, corn starting unchanged to 1-8 to 1-4 off and sagging a little more.

Opening prices were: Wheat, May 130 1-2, July 130 5-8; Corn, May 81 1-8, July 84 3-8. Oats, May 48 3-4, July 48 1-8.

Brazilian Traction Leads Trading On Toronto Market

TORONTO, Jan. 22 (Canadian Press)—Brazilian Traction furnished the bulk of trading on the Toronto Stock Exchange today. More than 4,000 shares were dealt in and the issue rose 1 7-8 at 112. Canadian Canners, down 1 1-2 to 22 1-2, was one of the few weak stocks on the market. International Nickel attracted some attention, but closed unchanged at 40 1-4. The unlisted market was brisk and higher. Canadian Breweries advanced 1-4 to 30 1-8, Gooderham and Worts was 1 1-2 higher at 45, Hiram Walker was up 5-8 at 32 1-2, Seagram up 1-8 at 16 7-8, and Imperial Oil gained 1-8 at 41 1-8. The new issue of British American Oil dropped 1-4 to 20 3-4.

Irregular Movements On New York Exchange

NEW YORK, Jan. 22 (Canadian Press).—Although irregularities developed in various sections of today's stock market the undertone was firm. There was nothing in the overnight news developments to affect the price movement, but relatively cheap money rates and a revival of railroad merger reports helped to create bullish enthusiasm. Erie Common crossed 42 to the highest level in 10 years, and sharp gains were recorded by Missouri Pacific, Chicago and Alton, Chicago and Great Western, and Kansas City Southern issues. A better inquiry also was noted for the high-priced rail issues, Pere Marquette standing out with a gain of three points.

Baldwin sold down a point in the first hour, rallied three points from the low, and then lost its gain in a fresh selling movement against the industrials in the last few minutes of trading. Remington Typewriter continued its rapid advance by scoring an extreme gain of 4 points. The closing was irregular.

General Trend Upwards On Mine Market To-day

TORONTO, Jan. 22. — (Canadian Press.)—At a week's closing session of the standard mining exchange here, 662,830 shares changed hands in a fairly bullish market, the majority of issues recording gains. Area was up three at 78, Corona up 4 1-2 at 29 1-2, Duprat 1-2 higher at 26 1-2, and Laval Quebec up 2 1-2 at 40. Amulet, on the unlisted market, sold up three at 182. Of the lower issues, Teck Hughes with a decline of twenty cents to 620 was the feature. Argonaut Consolidated dropped one at 47 1-2, Barry Hollinger was down two at 89, and Kirkland Lake declined three at 87.

YOUTH IS KINDER

LONDON, Jan. 22.—Youth today is much kinder, much more civilized, much more thoughtful than the boys and girls of 70 years ago. We have the word of Dr. Cyril Norwood, head master at Harrow for years, that such is true. The added gentleness shown nowadays, however, does not indicate that the young people have lost any of their qualities of manhood or womanhood thereby.

The average daily consumption of water per capita in London is estimated at 36 gallons; while New York uses 125 gallons a day per capita, and Chicago about 200 gallons a day, per capita.

The barn where John Wilkes Booth stabled his horse, and from which he fled after the assassination of President Lincoln, was sold recently by the War Department for $4,950.

UNDERWRITERS HOLD SMOKER

Addresses and Presentation of Certificates Mark Occasion.

CUPS HANDED OVER.

The smoker held by the members of the Peterborough branch of the Life Underwriters' Association in the Empress Hotel last night will live long in the memories of those present as being the most successful event ever held by the local organization.

T. H. Taylor and W. J. Richman, two members of the local branch were presented with their certificates entitling them to the degree of Chartered Life Underwriter, which examination both men passed recently.

W. Boulton, immediate past president, in making the presentation, congratulated the recipients. He also presented to the new president, Neil Tobin, two cups and a totem pole which the local branch had won by reason of having had the greatest increase in membership of any branch in the Dominion of Canada. These cups were won during the terms of J. F. H. Wallace and I. P. McNabb as president and have been retained by the local branch ever since.

H. J. Snelgrove contributed several solos in his usual effective manner.

J. A. McCamus, Supervisor of Field Service of the North American Life Company of Toronto, and John Tully gave two powerful addresses.

Mr. McCamus, who was formerly secretary of the Dominion Life Underwriters' Association, spoke on the benefits that had been accomplished by the Association bringing home to his listeners in a convincing manner the reasons why every life underwriter should belong.

Speaking on "The Empire of Mind," Mr. Tully declared: "It is said that Alexander the Great sighed for more worlds to conquer. He had established a physical empire—an empire of men."

He was followed by Caesar, then Napoleon, and today "we stand as members of the greatest empire the world has ever known. What made it?" asked the speaker. "It was loyalty, industry and the expansion of great minds towards a common cause."

Among the men who made the British Empire are Watt, who harnessed steam; Stephenson, who made possible railway transportation; Franklin, who discovered electricity; Morse, followed by Marconi, who gave us the wireless.

These men, declared the speaker, "had in them a broader foundation of a nobler citizenship than is that of the average man."

At the base of every citizenship there lies certain fundamental principles. They are not in the physical wealth of a nation, but something deep in the foundation of human character—it was the imagination, he said.

It is the imagination, he declared, that holds out to the future, that contributes a picture of the possibilities of anything. All that a man knows comes from experience obtained during his own life or of those who have preceded him. One might be termed environment and the other hereditary.

The speaker dwelt at some length on the relation of the unconscious mind to the conscious stating that experiments had proven that deep in the unconscious mind of every man facts of which he rarely knew anything.

R. T. Faircloth, a guest of the Association, congratulated the local branch on its large membership and expressed the opinion that enthusiasm he had seen had placed it second to none in his estimation.

The thanks of the organization were conveyed to the artists and speakers by I. P. McNabb in his usual eloquent manner.

CRAVE HONORS

PARIS, Jan. 22—The women are planning a new offensive on the French Academy. Society and literary women have begun the discussion in the hope of breaking down the barrier that has prevented their sex for 300 years entering the ranks of the "Immortal forty." Leaders hail the new liberalism as the wedge by which it is aimed to overthrow "prejudice that dates back to the days of Cardinal Richelieu."

In very primitive places of worship was usual to build the steeple on the ground beside the church—not as part of the church itself as in later days. This was done in belief that the pointed steeple would attract the power of evil.

W. M. FOWLDS MET HON. G. S. HENRY

Minister Promises Personal Visit Before Designating Highway.

PROPOSED ROUTE.

HASTINGS, Jan. 22. — Hon. Geo. S. Henry, Minister of Highways, has promised to motor over the two routes betwene Peterboro and Belleville. One route is by way of Marmora and Havelock, and the other through Stirling, Campbellford, Hastings, Norwood and Peterboro, to connect with the Peterboro-Port Hope Highway, and also the Peterboro-Lindsay road, which has been laid down for construction this year.

While in Toronto Tuesday attending the Cockshutt dinner and the annual meeting of the Tourist Association of Ontario, Walter M. Fowlds met Hon. Mr. Henry, and briefly outlined the reasons for the Stirling-Campbellford-Hastings route, which traverses the counties of Hastings, Northumberland and Peterboro, and would also continue through Victoria county to Lindsay.

It is expected that the Minister will visit the district early next summer, and a strong effort will be made to present to him the claims of this section so convincingly that the local route will be designated.

HASTINGS UNITED LEAGUE PROSPERS

Keen Interest Being Taken in Contest Among Members.

HASTINGS, Jan. 22.—A keen interest is now being shown in the work of the Young People's League of the Hastings United church by its members and the members of the church during their present contest and campaign for new members and a better league. The roll was divided into four groups who are all working hard for points which are given for several items such as new members, and the programmes of each weekly meeting.

The group gaining the greatest number of points during the contest which closes the last of March is to be banqueted by the losing group. The winning group gives the programme.

The regular monthly meeting of the Ladies' Aid of the United church was held on Thursday afternoon at the home of Mrs. J. E. Wilcox, when about forty attended. A short programme and business took up considerable time and lunch was served by the hostess.

Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Fairman, of Campbellford, are moving their household effects into the house of Mrs. A. B. German on Bay street. Mrs. German expects to remain in Alberta for some time.

SAINT and SINNER

By ANNE AUSTIN

"I'm ready to help," Faith came into the dining room where Cherry was again seated at her task of addressing the envelopes of the wedding invitations. "Have you done many?"

"About fifty," Cherry answered. "Madame Denise kept asking me to try on things. Say, Faith, do you think folks are going to laugh at me for sending out invitations with the words, 'No presents' in the left-hand corner?"

Before Faith could answer, Mrs. Lane came waddling into the room. "I never heard of such foolishness," she grumbled. "'No presents'! Every big bug in town would have sent something swell—"

"But Muggy, darling, I can see Ralph's viewpoint," Cherry protested. "It isn't as if we were a young couple, just starting out to fix up a home. He's lived in that old mansion of his for thirty years, and it's stocked with all the silver and lamps and gegaws and linens that people usually deluge a bride with. It would really be horribly embarrassing to get a lot of the usual wedding junk and have no place to put it."

"Oh, Faith, Ralph says he simply won't have a best man, and I can't really blame him, the poor darling. But he's glad I want to have Bob as an usher."

Faith bent her blushing face closer over her work, writing in a fine, tall, erect hand, surprisingly delicate and beautiful.

"Joy had a most awful fight today in school," Cherry announced suddenly. "The kids were teasing her about my wedding, and she pitched into a whole bunch of them. Miss Peabody sent her home in disgrace, with a note—"

"I do wish," Mrs. Lane interrupted, "that you'd quit gallivantin' around, Faith, and pay more attention to your home. If you'd been here I'd have marched you right over to that school with Joy, to give that Miss Peabody a piece o' your mind. She's always pickin' on Joy, and I'm gettin' sick and tired of it. And Joy wore the same dress to school three days this week. If you stayed home and tended to your work—"

"I'm sorry, Mother," Faith spoke meekly, but resentment showed hot in her cheeks. "I've only been out of the house three or four times during the day for the last three or four weeks. What happened when Joy came home. She isn't here now."

"I made her take a bath and put on a clean dress—you ought to have seen her!" Cherry laughed. "She was bloody from top to toe—nose bleed, you know—and her tan linen dress was torn from the shoulder to the hem. Then I called up Miss Peabody and laid the law down to her—oh, in a perfectly nice way, but I didn't mince matters, I can tell you. She'd said in the note—it's over there on the sideboard—that unless Joy could behave more like a little lady and less like a hooligan—yes, she used that very word!—that measures would have to be taken, meaning of course that they would expel her from school."

"Well, I simply told her that if she didn't stop persecuting Joy that Mr. Cluny, who's on the school board you know, would take the matter up officially. And I also told her that after Christmas my little sister would be removed to the Misses Dean's private school anyway, but that I hoped she would not make it necessary for Mr. Cluny to take the matter up with the school board before then."

"That's a heavy Ritz line," Faith laughed, "did it work?"

"I'll tell the world! She simply groveled. Said that undoubtedly Joy had exaggerated things, as children will do, but that she would personally see that the other children did not continue to tease her.

"I'm going to show this town that they can't thumb their noses at Mrs. Ralph Cluny! Oh, by the way, Muggy, darling, Ralph's doing the most wonderful thing. Guess!"

"Bought you a sable coat?" Mrs. Lane inquired, "or a trip to Europe for a honeymoon?"

"Oh, those—of course!" Cherry brushed such obvious generosities. "He's having his partner, Mr. Neff, draw up his will for him, and can you imagine it—he's not waiting until we're married to name me as his principal heir—or heiress. He's putting in a clause that says that 'my dearly beloved fiancee, Charity Amanda Lane'—doesn't my name simply slay you?

"Anyway, it says, 'my dearly beloved fiance, Charity Amanda Lane,' is to receive such and such a part of his estate—he won't tell me just how much, but he does say it is most of it, except for some bequests to his grandchildren and a teeny bit to Mrs. Allbright and Alexander Cluny, who have enough of their own anyway, is to come to me, in case he dies before the wedding. Of course, he'll make a new will, one that couldn't be broken by any court in the land, as soon as we are married. Isn't he darling, honestly?"

"What would happen in case you broke it off, didn't marry him." Faith asked.

"Oh," Cherry spoke airily. "I suppose he'd change his will after he was sure it was all off, but don't you worry. I'm going to freeze onto my million. Of course I don't say it would break my heart if he died before November 25—"

"Cherry!" Mrs. Lane was shocked for once at an impudence from her daughter.

"Don't spank, Muggy!" Cherry laughed. "He won't die! No such luck! But at that, he's a nice old duck, isn't he?"

This Lassie Has Her Colds "Rubbed Away"

The mother of this attractive little girl, Mrs. E. E. Emmans, of 215 Seventh Ave., N. E., Portage La Prairie, Man., is one of the many Canadian mothers who are enthusiastic about the vaporizing salve, Vicks VapoRub, for treating children's colds. Mrs. Emmans writes: "My little girl had croup at night pretty badly and Vicks did her a lot of good. I have also used it with very satisfactory results for head and chest colds."

Vicks is just "rubbed on" for sore throat, tonsilitis, bronchitis, croup or deep chest colds. When so applied, Vicks has a double direct action: internally medicated vapors are inhaled while, at the same time, externally, it is absorbed through and stimulates the skin.

MASSACRE ISLE

Q—Where is the Massacre Isle?

A—The Massacre Isle or L'Islet au Massacre is an island in the lower St. Lawrence near the villagesof Bic and Rimouski, so called from the story that 200 Micmac Indians were driven into a cave of the island by the Iroquois who then built a fire at its mouth, suffocating all who remained and tomahawking all who tried to escape.

PRESENTATION MADE.

Mr. and Mrs. J. B. McWilliams Receives Gift From Court Stanley.

The members of the Court Stanley A.O.F. met at the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. B. McWilliams on Wednesday night, and made a very suitable presentation to Mr. and Mrs. McWilliams on their 40th anniversary. The address which was read was as follows:

Dear Brother.—On behalf of Court Stanley A.O.F. we wish to convey to you and Mrs. McWilliams our heartiest congratulations on the 40th anniversary of your wedding. We ask you to accept this little gift as a token of our esteem of you as a member of this court.

Thomas Hendry, George Rickert, George Tremain.

Have you noticed the new evening coiffures? A kind of head-band that fits tightly on the forehead and almost hides the eyebrows—directly derived from African costume? They are broad in front and taper away to the neck. They are made of two bands of lame which hold barretta of pearls.

DRESS

By MARY MARSHALL

The sash of mauve satin gives a new trimming note to this lace evening frock. The piping around the hem is also of mauve satin.

From being practically unheard of fifteen years ago shawls have been revived until a shawl or two is taken for granted as part of every woman's evening wardrobe. If we were capable of adapting the Victorian shawl to the needs of the early twentieth century—then we ought somehow to be able to take unto ourselves the sash as well—for shawls and sashes were two of the most popular accessories for many, many years of the last century.

When a young woman wanted to look the embodiment of innocent loveliness she wore a plain white muslin frock trimmed only with a sash—and the sash not only added the necessary bit of color but accentuated the slenderness of her little waist.

One thing that might make difficult a popular revival of the sash is the uncertain position of the modern waist. The old-time tightly laced waist provided a very convenient groove for the sash—but it would not be so well placed to-day. However, some of the dressmakers have apparently considered the sash as a possible present-day fashion, and here and there among the new frocks you may see one. The long heavy ends and loops of a sash accentuate the straight line and slight contours of a youthful figure.

Sashes were almost always tied so that the bow came directly in the back—but any such arrangement would be out of the picture to-day. So when sashes appear they are tied at the front, a little to one side. A wide silk sash with heavy ends is used as a finishing touch to some of the new bolero frocks. A new navy blue frock and bolero is accompanied by a wide sash of scarlet silk. The sketch shows a lace evening gown trimmed with a sash of mauve silk.

HOROSCOPE

The Stars Incline, but do not Compel.

SUNDAY, JANUARY 23, 1927

Benefic aspects of the planets dominate to-day, according to astrology.

This is a rule of the stars beneficial to the clergy who will find that the year brings many new demands upon them for civic or public service.

Under this sway, visits should be most fortunate, especially if they are made for the purpose of showing interest in the aged or the ill.

Women are not much favored by the stars to-day and they will be wise to avoid romance while this configuration prevails.

There is a menacing sign for those who woo and they will prosper, if they avoid love-making.

Marriages are to be numerous this year and the birth rate will probably increase, but divorces will be so prevalent as to awaken new anxiety regarding the stability of family life, the seers prophesy.

There are signs of supreme promise for all branches of education and expert knowledge will be sought as never before, astrologers predict.

The United States in the next few years is to become the most powerful, and at the same the most envied, country in the world.

Occultists warn that there will come perils from enemies in the air and on the water, east and west.

It is foretold that a power represented by great military strength will centre around Shanghai, Hong Kong and Canton in 1927 with American aid in some manner attached to it.

Russia comes under a sway that makes for agreements with other nations and consequent growth of prosperity.

Sedition affecting Persia, the Caucasus, the Near East and the Middle East is foreshadowed.

Persons whose birthdate it is should keep steady and avoid all forms of dissipation this year, which should be fortunate.

Children born on this day probably will be exceedingly conscientious and reliable. They may, however, be too pleasure-loving for their best interest.

MONDAY, JANUARY 24, 1927

Good and evil planetary influences contend to-day, according to astrology, which finds that adverse stars dominate.

This configuration is read as not favorable to initiative and, although it is the beginning of the week, postponement of important matters is wise.

Aviators should be careful for there is a menacing sign for serial navigation.

Trouble over patents is indicated as likely to retard more than one important invention.

Intuition should not be trusted under this rule, for there may be a tendency toward sudden personal dislikes while Uranus is adverse.

Warning is given by the seers that selfishness will be more and more the besetting sin of the average man and woman.

Discipline that will broaden the mind and permit it to grasp the far-reaching human relations is recommended by those who read the stars.

There is an ill omen which appears to presage increase of intrigue and double-dealing. Success is likely to justify obliquities of many sorts.

This is a planetary government under which women should benefit greatly, for it encourages their highest ambitions.

Love affairs may be of extraordinary interest under this rule, which is supposed to enable both men and women to appear better than they really are.

Engagements to marry, made at this time, may be numerous between persons of great differences in age.

Theatres should profit through revivals of famous dramas more than in new productions, astrologers aver.

Persons whose birthdate it is will probably have unusually good luck in the coming year through dealings with friends, and especially with women.

Children born on this day have the augury of success. They are likely to be much loved and to advance through social connections.

FOOD AND HEALTH.

SUGARS IN THE DIET

By Winnifred Stuart Gibbs, Food Specialist.

With widespread public interest in the matter of the wholesomeness of corn sugar, why not refresh our memories a bit in regard to the different varieties of sugar and what each does for the body.

According to most authorities, the chief determining factor in the digestibility of sugar is its chemical form. "But I don't know any chemistry," wails the housewife. "Not necessary that you should," comes the answer. This matter of the different chemical forms of sugar is one that can be and frequently is, translated into every day terms.

Summed up, here are a few of the conclusions to which scientists have arrived. Let the form of the sugar be what it may, something must be done with it before it can be taken up by the body. The complications of this process vary according to conditions. Some of the changes are taken care of by the action of the digestive juices, but in other cases, sugars are treated outside the body to convert them into a more acceptable form.

When ready to be digested, sugar is what is known as a monosaccarid, that is, either dextrose or levulose. Summed up from a dietetic point of view, sugars are either sucroses or glucoses. As one writer points out, this fact shows clearly the reason why sweet fruits offer such a digestible form of sugar that is, actually ready to be taken up directly into the blood. Honey is another sugar of this type. Cane sugar which undergoes certain process of fermentation in the manufacture of food products is still another.

Then comes what the chemist speaks of as the degree of concentration in the sugar solution. In other words, raw cane sugar or the strong sugar solutions are irritating to the stomach or in certain cases whether sugar is diluted or not makes a difference as to whether it is digestible. Ordinary cane sugar taken in its raw state, sometimes even interferes with the digestion of other foods, whereas, the same quantity incorporated in puddings, cakes, ices and the like is readily taken care of by the system.

Another characteristic quality of sugar is their tendency to cause fermentation. The question of fermentation itself is so complicated as to make it inadvisable to discuss it in such a paper as this. On the other hand, it is in order to remind the sugar eater that if there is acid fermentation, the quantity of sugar should be carefully limited or at least adjusted.

If You Missed a Street Car You Didn't Worry

Once upon a time, people didn't stop and laugh when they saw this one-horse power (or one-mule power) street car coming toward them. All they said was; "Well, there's the street car," or "This is a busy city . . . that's the third car I've seen to-day."

The motorman had an easy life. He didn't have to turn a lot of levers and open automatic doors when he wanted to stop to take on a passenger. He just said "Whoa!" and his street car stopped. When the passenger was on the motorman said "Giddap!" and his car started.

If the car had been greased lately the brakes were needed going down a hill and the whip had to be used sometimes going up a hill, but outside of this there was very little a motorman had to know.

And while the cars ran less frequently than street cars do to-day, missing one wasn't necessarily so bad. You would ask someone, "Has the street car been by here lately?" Perhaps the reply would be, "Passed just a few minutes ago You can catch it if you hurry."

Our Yesterdays

The days roll on, the years roll on,
The suns across the sky;
A dawn is here, a day is gone,
Another day is nigh——
And then we say,
"Where did it go;
Our yesterday,
I'd like to know?"

Our yesterdays, the yesterdays
Of all the yesteryears,
Are with us still a thousand ways,
With all their smiles and tears.
The thoughts to please,
The things to praise,
Are memories
Of other days.

The loving kiss, the friendly smile;
We never shall forget;
We had them but a little while,
And yet we have them yet.
Old joys will last,
Forever ours,
Although they passed
Like Summer flowers.

The days of youth, the days of old;
Are still the days to bless,
For we have gathered all their gold,
Their riches still possess.
Our future ways
Are ways unknown—
Our yesterdays
Are all we own.

We Tilt a Lance For The Good Old Days

"The good old days when I was a boy, the swimming pool, the buckwheat cakes, the chestnuts, the sleigh rides—"

You know how the story goes when good fellows get together, especially if they are boys from the old home town. How they gild that past—how rosy they make those days, how drab the present!

But William Allen White, famous writer and editor, says "Applesauce!"

"The good old middle-aged liar who talks about the good old days of the sixties, seventies, and eighties, should take a reef in his imagination," he says.

"What did the golod old days do for the boys and girls of that time? What are the new days doing now?"

Then Mr. White lists Boy Scouts clubs, town basketball teams, community skating rinks and gymnasiums, all the taken-for-granted things that are done for boys today, contrasted with the old days when they "did the chores" and worked out their own play, somehow!

He's right, too, and yet—

Will today's boy, when he's a grown-up man, look back upon the "dear old days" with that tug at his heart that today's old fellow does when he remembers the old swimmin' hole, and the hay mow and the shack down in the woods—not organized community fun, but of his own creation?

Long Ago!

By Flossie Everson.

Long, long ago in Grandma's Day;
Girls learned to work as well as play;
But now young maidens bright and fair
Think they do well to fix their hair.

In Grandma's time the women wore
Long dresses 'way down to the floor;
We women wear our dresses short
With lace and frills of every sort.

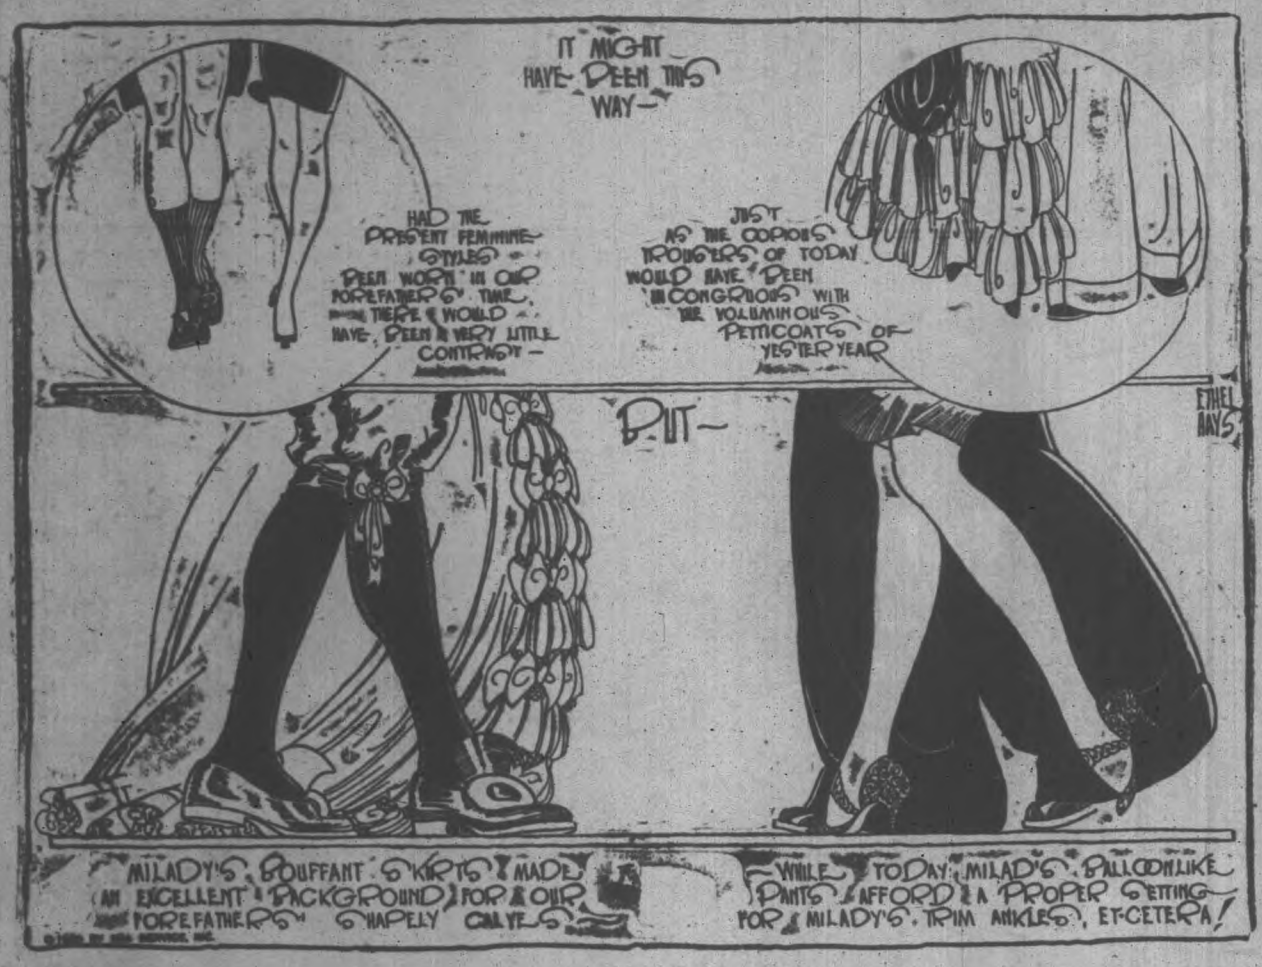
In those old days when ma was young
A little log house was Home Sweet Home.
The candle made her face look bright
As she sat knitting in its light.

In Grandpa's time the farmers glad
To plow their ground some oxen had;
No tractors such as we now own
But better work could not be shown.

The cars go faster, that we know;
But Grandpa's horse was never slow;
It took him where he wished to go
That's all that cars do, don't you know.

In bygone days, when pa was young;
And work by him at night was done
The fireplace kept the cabin warm;
While [illegible] were sheltered from the storm.

Today we have brick houses fine
Electric lights to make things shine;
The radio world news to bring
And gramophone our songs to sing.



And Have They Changed?

By Jeanette

The lady rose from her chair. She was pale with fright. Her heart fluttered. Pressing one hand to her bosom, she tottered over to the corner cupboard, and taking out a small bottle labelled "aromatic spirits of ammonia," she poured a quantity into a glass and drained it to the last drop. Presently the color came back to her cheeks and she resumed her chair and her attitude of watchful waiting. Glancing at the clock, she pressed her lips firmly together. It should never be said that a Macgillicuddy lacked in courage or in persistence in a good cause. She would not give way, although inside her tightly laced bodice, her heart beat strongly. Her husband would be here soon. He had said that he would return from the market town at eleven o'clock and it lacked only a quarter of the hour. Would it happen before he arrived? She did not know.

She listened intently. There was no sound from below stairs where the concealed trap was set. Had she made an error and left some trace that might give warning to the marauder she wished to snare? No, everything had been done with extreme caution.

Getting a volume of Jane Austen from the bookshelf, she read by the fitful glow of an oil lamp, placed at an angle that let the light fall over her left shoulder. She was a well-trained woman. A portion of the precepts of her mother had been the advice "always let the light fall over your left shoulder when reading." Other bits of sound doctrine that had been inculcated within her breast were the careful placing of her feet at all times. The ankles must never be more than two inches apart when in a sitting position, and the back at all times, when walking, must appear to be strengthened by an invisible board. One never placed the arms a-kimbo nor touched the face at any time, in conversation. She was a well-bred girl and a well-bred woman, and the circumstances of the evening which had led to her engaging in this encounter with an unknown foe were out of the ordinary.

A mild breeze came through the window and fluttered her curling ringlets. Carefully piled and placed each within its proper sphere, they made a frame fro her gentle face. A lace fichu was crossed primly on her breast and voluminous leg o'mutton sleeves reared themselves above tiny hands, with lace frills at the wrist. A huge cameo brooch held in place a wide belt that encircled a tightly-laced waist and only the tips of her slippers were visible under flowing skirts. If her wardrobe could have talked, it would retail the fact that she wore no less than four petticoats, that her firm stays compressed to the circle of an elegant twenty inches a waist that was meant to expand a fully twenty-three inches, and that her feet were hurting in a pair of No. Three shoes.

But she was happy, as women of all ages have been happy, when they realize that they are dressed in the height of the fashion. She read on industriously. Miss Jane Austen was describing with minute detail the reactions of a heroine who had just been proposed to. The gentleman in the case had been paying Miss Araminta notable attention over a period of five years in length, but still she never forgot the traditions of true womanhood, and so when he popped the question, she had at once swooned away. They were hunting for her smelling salts when suddenly—it happened.

From below stairs came a loud, sharp noise. The lady jumped to her feet, letting the book fall to the floor. Pressing her hand to her bosom, she listened with bated breath. At last! Her toil had not been in vain. Relaxing into a smile of triumph, she sank into the chair. A bumping noise told her of futile struggles of an enchained foe. Then she stiffened with fright. Suppose it came upstairs and attacked her. She screamed faintly and gathered her little feet under her. Hiding her face in her hands, she moaned loudly.

Her husband bounded into the room. Coming over to her, he gathered her into his arms. "Did you find it?" she gasped, looking at him between her fingers. He nodded gravely. "It won't bother us any more," he said. "Compose yourself, my darling."

—She composed herself. She was a Macgillicuddy and they seldom lack in courage.

And, dear reader, she was a lady of some three quarters of a century back, waiting in her home in the evening for a mouse trap to go off. She had set it herself and feared the consequences. But they were not serious. Her husband took the mouse and carried it out to the dump in the back yard, where it added to the general aroma of the region, because they weren't overly fond of sanitary regulations in those days, and most anything went.

—She is just a type of the female of the species, as we used to have them. Of course, she hasn't anything to do with the picture, but that doesn't matter much. We wrote a story last week about a picture and then they went and changed the picture. If they do that this week, it won't matter a bit.

The Old Trunk In The Attic

There stands, in the attic, an old-fashioned trunk that's filled to the brim with a heap of old junk. The ra man would get a real thrill from the clothes that mom stores away in it. Why? Goodness knows.

It's moth-proof, I guess, for the things still exist, such things that were bidden, and ne'er will be missed. A wee little dress that the baby once wore, the "baby" who, nowadays, is twenty or more.

An old colored blanket that mother once worked. It's only half made. She grew weary, and shirked. She laid it away in a trunk drawer, and then, just figured she'd finish it later. But, when?

A hat with a bird perched high up on the crown. A derby that dad wore, in old days. It's brown. A suit and a dress that to-day, I'm afraid, could only be worn at a queer masquerade.

Yes, antiques a plenty are stored in the trunk. On first thought, the saving idea is bunk. And yet we all do it, for somehow, we care. The answer, of course, is there's sentiment there.

Girls used to drop a stitch. Nowadays they've dropped knitting altogether.

The Peterborough Girls Are Up-To-Date

Pete borough, perhaps more than any other city in the Dominion, has reason to be proud of its location and the many attractions it presents for the visitor within its gates. Chief among its attractions, to the eye of the average man, at least, is the bevy of pretty girls that greet the eye at every turn of the head.

And if he thinks they are not up-to-date, why, he had better take another look. You can see them any afternoon in the week, sauntering—yes, even these days—up and down George street, dressed to kill or at least to attract attention.

From the latest in the line of fur coats to the newest and somewhat startling innovations in the line of goloshes she is there.

And if you think they are not up-to-date as regards facial improvements or marcelles, just take a walk around and count the number of drug stores and barber shops, and if this does not convince you, step inside and gaze upon the occupants.

The manner in which the girls of the city have taken to the various outdoor activities is another indication that they are thoroughly up-to-date. Any night of the week, yes, and on Sundays, too, if you want to see the girls at their best, take a stroll out around Jackson's Park and you will be amply repaid for your trouble. There you will find them, attired in all manner of costumes from blanket suits in weird colors to breeches and windbreakers, colored after the fashion of Joseph's coat.

Armed with skiis and poles they can be seen taking the jumps every bit as daring as the boys and in most cases with a great deal more grace and finish.

They are prominent in every feature of the life of the city, and so accustomed have people become to them and their new ideas—ideas that would have caused a regular uproar a few years ago—that very little notice is taken.

Anyone that says Peterborough's girls are not up to date is just naturally stupid or else he is married to one of the old-fashioned kind and is afraid to say so.

An Incident Of The Fenian Raids — By C. M. C.

The sentry paced to and fro on his lonely watch. The night was very dark. Occasionally a rift came in the black clouds, and the moon shone palely forth for a brief minute and then withdrew again behind her widow's veil. All was silent save the dull thud of Lake Ontario's waves against the shores below, and now and then the weird cry of the owl.

It was time for the midnight meal and the soldier lit his little fire and made ready to heat his coffee. But stop! What was that dark shadow yonder? His heart gave a sudden bound, stopped and then rushed on wildly. Colud it be a spy or the advance guard of the enemy? The moon slipped behind a cloud and all was dark again, save the faint flickering of the fire throwing strange and fitful shadows. The sentry stepped into the shadow of a tree and waited. A sudden screech from the distant owl froze his blood and he grasped his musket more firmly with his trembling hand.

How slowly the clouds moved! Would the moon never shine again? Ah, there it was at last, very dim, very pale. He strained his eyes into the darkness. There it was, a black form, low to the ground, crawling slowly forward. The Canadian watched intently until the moonlight faded, and then under cover of darkness, he made his way swiftly to the main guard. He must act quickly and rouse the sleeping camp to arms.

"Guard turn out—action!" he shouted in stentorian tones.

Immediately all was stir and bustle. The drowsy soldiers stumbled to their feet dazed with sleep. Down the road went the guard, excitement rapidly taking the place of sleepiness. A tuly taking the place of sleepiness. real fight was at hand! Action at last! They had begun to fear this Fenian Raid was a false alarm, but now, at last, they were to have the real thing. Their fighting blood rose at the thought of the conflict.

They could dimly see the dark form beyond the glimmering light of the fire. A forward rush through the blackness and they would take the enemy by surprise. Down they swept as one man! Then the front line stopped and a groan of disgust and disappointment surged through the ranks. They had surprised the enemy; they had surrounded the mysterious dark form only to find it was a monstrous black pig, contentedly finishing the balance of the sentry's midnight meal!

And not even the roast pork which followed could quite console the hardy pioneers for the loss of a real Irish fight.

Varieties From An Aged Contemporary

(THE MADOC MERCURY, 1867)

A clergyman, who was a hard labourer in his glebe, and when so occupied, dressed in a very slovenly manner, was one day engaged in his potato field, when he was surprised by the rapid approach of his patron in an open carriage with some strange ladies, with all of whom he was to dine in the after noon. Unable to escape in time he drew his bonnet over his face, extended his arms, covered with his tattered jacket, and passed himself off unnoticed as a "potato bogle."

One day, when conversing with a friend something was said on the subject of religious persecution, on which Archbishop Whately remarked, "It is no wonder that some English people have a taste for persecuting on account of religion, since it is the first lesson that most are taught in their nurseries."

His friend expressed his incredulity denying that he, at least, had been taught it.

"Are you sure?" replied Dr. Whatley. "What think you of this?

Old Daddy Longlegs won't say his prayers,
Take him by the left leg and throw him downstairs."

"If that is not religious persecution, what is?"

She naively replied that it might come under the head of "domestic affliction." Her wit procured her the desired boon.

THE WEATHER—But for the hearty salutations of Jack Frost, the first thing in the morning, and the sight of sliders and skaters on the ice, it would be difficult to believe it is close upon mid-winter. On the last day of the Old Year, and the first of the New, the sun shone out with most cheering brightness and warmth, making the weather just what one would ask for the holiday season. The ground is still bare of snow, and at present there is no prospect of sleighing.

RING BELLS 100 YEARS

Why Are Excuses Needed? It's Self-Evident!

"Why are excuses needed? It's self evident!" What's self evident? There are several things which might be represented by that little word "It" and it would puzzle Solomon himself to decide which one is meant. He was an expert on women too, so he would have the best chance in the world of answering.

Perhaps it's self-evident that excuses are needed. That is to say there is no reasonable defence for the modern skirt. It's immodest, indecent, useless as a covering from the stares of the male portion of the populace, and equally useless as a shield from all the winds that blow. You know all these things. If you haven't panned the dress on some shapely girl, you've heard somebne else do it. With all these things against it someone has to dig up a few excuses.

Then again it might be that the question and answer mean; "Why make excuses? The benefits are self evident." In other words, no excuses need apply, as there are substantial reasons. Then the modern young lady and her supporters have their innings. It doesn't catch dust; it doesn't drag in the mud; it can be sheltered beneath an umbrella. When a young lady is in a hurry she can step out with long strides, or even, if necessary, run to catch her train or street car. Imagine one of those belles of other days trying to speed up a little. What! Run! My dear, it simply isn't done!

Then there's another good reason for wearing short skirts. The Examiner the other day quoted that sedate journal, the Kingston Whig Standard (it's over ninety years old), as saying: "The girls are right. When stockings cost $3.00 and up, why hide them?" Then, to add force to this reason, an article the other day said that flesh colored stockings have gone out, and have become, quite suddenly, too, decidedly passe. Sand colors are now in vogue, and goodness knows how long they will last or what will come next. Why then, show only a little now and then by accident, when there won't be much chance to look at them before they have gone to the place of departed styles.

"Why are excuses needed? It's self-evident." What's self-evident?—Why is it self-evident? You've heard my guess, so now get busy with yours.

Walking from South Monaghan to Port Hope

In pioneer days in South Monaghan, the settlers away back in the early eighteenth century lived in humble log houses, and for a living they cleared away the forests, and cultivated small plots of land.

In those days there were no flour mills nearer than the town of Port Hope, and the only means the settlers had of obtaining a supply of flour, was by shouldering a part of a bag of wheat, which they had grown and harvested from their cleared land, and walking to Port Hope, a distance of sixteen miles, to get their wheat ground into flour. The road they had to walk upon was not the up to date macadamized highway that we enjoy today, but a winding trail, which had possibly been made by the natives, previous to our forefathers coming to this country. By the time they had made their return trip home again, carrying their sack of flour, they had completed a journey of thirty two miles.

Such stories are almost unbelievable when we consider the up to date methods of obtaining our supplies in this nineteenth century, when, instead of having to walk a distance of thirty two miles to obtain flour, we have the baker deliver the bread already to eat, right at our door. And yet we are told that our forefathers were happy and contented. At the present age we have everything almost too convenient, and it is apt to make us forget how hard our forefathers toiled and slaved to clear this splendid township of the vast acres of timber, and cultivate our land, that today we can enjoy the privilege of living in one of the best farming districts in Canada. To make South Monaghan what it is today, it required these sacrifices, and hardships.

We find in those olden days that Bailieboro had men residing here, who enjoyed to tell a good yarn then, just as well as our present day residents do. A well known settler of the eighteenth century residing here, told the story of an experience he had one day after a road had been built from Bailieboro, to Port Hope. He stated he had secured a sleigh and a team of horses, and as it was in the winter time, he decided to go to Port Hope with a couple of bags of wheat, to get some flour. While in the town he bought a pair of new reins to drive his horses home. It was raining hard when he left town, and continued to pour all the way home. He stated he had only been on the road a short time when he noticed his reins beginning to stretch with the rain soaking them through, and he immediately began to pull up the slack and drop it back over the seat into the sleigh box behind him. He continued this practice all the way from town, and by the time he had reached his own farm he found to his astonishment, that the sleigh box was completely filled with reins.

No proof remains that this story is true, but up to the present day, the older residents who have lived their entire lives in this district, still chuckle over this old yarn.

Vacation With Uncle Josh

By Country Parson

Uncle Josh was a farmer, and when I was a boy, forty years ago, I used to spend a week or two every summer with him. Uncle was tall and slim. He wore a moustache and long grey beard. He had to work hard every day to make ends meet, and yet I believe he enjoyed my annual visit just as much as I did. I remember how he used to cradle the grain and then go along with a wooden rake, gather it into bundles and bind it with his hands, and stook it up. He would be very tired at night and complained often of a lame back.

Sometimes Aunt Jane would go out into the field and rake and bind the grain. I seem to see her now, hurrying across the field holding her black skirt up in front, while the back part resembled a big toad hopping about as she dragged it over the uneven stubble.

One summer while I was there Uncle Josh had the threshers. A large horse power, which drove the grain separator, was loaded on a waggon and driven about by a team of horses. It was six men about two hours to unload it, and stake it to the ground ready for work. More men were at the same time busy securing the cleaner between two stacks of grain.

Early the next morning several neighbors came with their teams and hitched them to long wooden arms which were attached to the power. The teams were arranged in a circle and tied together. They were driven by one man, who most of the time, stood upon a board platform, which had been arranged on the top of the power, and from here he waved a long whip.

Two of the thresher men took turns in feeding the machine. One man was kept busy cutting bands, so the sheaves would not go through the machine whole, and cause trouble. Two men carried the grain in boxes to a little improvised granary near by. Several men were upon the stacks of grain, forking it toward the front of the machine, and several others were busy stacking the straw.

When the whistle blew for dinner Uncle and the hired man hurried down to the creek with the tank for some water, while the rest of the men ate at a long table arranged in the small kitchen just near a hot stove. Whether they worked harder while at dinner than before, I remember how they wiped the sweat from their faces as they came out and sat down to rest awhile beside the barnyard fence.

I went first with a basket of apples from the large orchard and then with a pail of water from the spring. I was about as busy as anyone although I did not sweat so much.

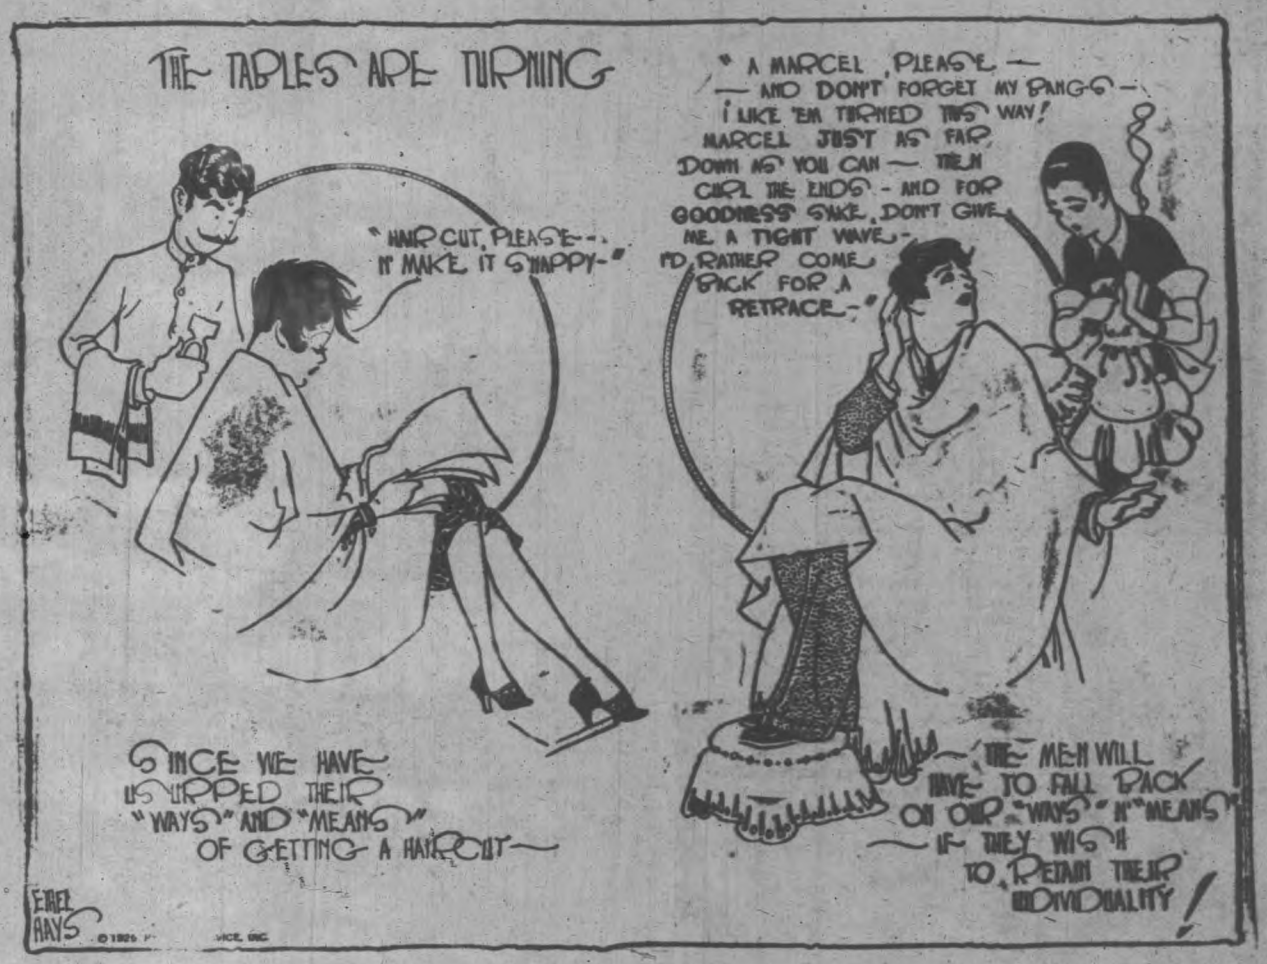
One day Uncle said he would teach me to plough. I said, "I'd like to try." My arms ached, but I believe I would have gotten along very well had it not been that there were so many stumps.

I used to like to go with Uncle to the little white frame church. He wore his full cloth trousers, a red and grey checked flannel shirt. Long topped boots that had been made by Mr. Mills, the shoemaker, but no collar or tie. Uncle and I used to walk for it was only about two miles, but Aunt Jane and the children went in the waggon and Harold, my cousin, drove the big team.

To me those were happy days. Folks were poor and very plain, but I recall how friendly they seemed to be at the little church. There was no organ, but everyone sang as if they meant it.

There are no aching backs from swinging cradles or binding grain today. The self-binder does it all. In the great West there are machines that cut, bind and threash the grain and dump it into a waggon with a box, which is attached. The whole outfit is drawn by a gasoline engine and from the field the grain is hauled straight to the elevator. Almost every threshing outfit has a self-feeder, grain and straw blowers, so that less than half as many men are required as before.

The long beard is a thing of the past. Costly sedans and coaches have replaced the waggon and ox-cart. The tractor, the walking plow. Bobbed hair, the long tresses and fancy colored gowns almost knee length, the black trains and flowing robes.



THEN AND NOW — By Wm. Edgar

Someone has said that the nineteenth century did not really end until it went up in smoke in 1914, when the Kaiser threw the match into the gasoline tank, and that many of the most far-reaching changes had their origin in the days of the Great War, during which the twentieth century really came into being. If we accept this conclusion, our present century is still very young, although it has already manifested characteristics which bring it out in sharp relief against the not very far-off days which closed the nineteenth.

Disraeli, who seems to have experienced a hearty, thorough-going contempt for his own day and generation, once declared that the Anglo-Saxon race in the eighteenth century produced a gentleman and in the nineteenth could do no better than produce a professor. It is a pity we have no Disraeli today to tell us what our era can do, unless of course Mr. Shaw or Mr. Wells step into the breach. The same cynical observer said that in his day men tried to get on, then they got on-er (honor), after that they got on-est (honest). From which we may judge that our Victorian predecessors had their little weaknesses just as we have.

In the Nineties.

The man of the nineties was much more of a philosopher than the man of today; not because he had more need of philosophy, but because he had more time to spare. The man of today is so much of a cog in the industrial machine that feeling and thinking become to him luxuries. In an age of hurry, he cannot pause to survey the past, though the future is ever with him, a fearsome thing. The very sanity of the modern being depends upon continuous action. On the other hand the former lived in a time when a sense of spaciousness and security was dominant. He lived in a time when the ships of the British Navy carried bright yellow funnels and a superstructure that scorned camouflage, and when the soldiers of the American Army in the Cuban War marched into action clad in brilliant uniforms that are now reserved for parades.

Further Back.

To travel a little farther back, we hear old ladies tell us that their grandmother's outfits as debutantes often consisted of two cotton prints for morning wear, a woolen afternoon dress with the addition of a bonnet and pelisse for visiting, and one or two white muslins for evening parties, ribbons and natural flowers of different colors giving variety to the costume. It would be interesting to watch the countenance of Miss 27 if she were told her wardrobe was to be on a similar scale. But the early Victorian miss, who did fancy work, and loved the curate, and whose brightest prospect was the position of a governess, at a salary that would not keep the girl of today in Tre-jur, was a cabined, cribbed and confined personage, whose lot Bernard Shaw describes thus, "Home is the girl's prison and the woman's workhouse." True i. 1886, this is very far from the mark today. In 1886 the girls now and then dropped a stitch. Now they have dropped knitting altogether.

Still earlier were the tinder box days, when the midnight burglar could help himself and make a leisurely get-away, while the good man of the house was striking a light before picking up his stick and coming downstairs to club the intruder. It was not until 1833 that phosphorous matches were introduced. The safety match of the present day did not appear until 1845. It has been estimated that the consumption of matches is now ten per day by each person. To produce ten lights by a tinder box would require twenty minutes. Here is a vast saving of that most precious of all commodities—time.

One Hundred Years Ago.

One hundred years ago the evenings were wasted in the million houses of the poor. After sundown the household lived in the dark. Nowadays the poorest man reads by a better light than did the plutocrat of last century.

One hundred years ago a social intolerance prevailed to an extent almost incredible to those who live in our freer day. People made fetters for themselves. Such was the daintiness of ignorance that a man could not eat, dress, to even think as he pleased. During some parts of the century, public opinion frowned on the man who allowed his beard to grow. Those who braved this opinion were rendered extremely uncomfortable. If a man wore a "wide-awake" felt hat he was suspected of "furrin" notions, and his orthodoxy in religious belief was questioned. One of the first doctors to avail himself of the newly invented bicycle found in time that despite his ability as a physician, his patients refused to be treated by a doctor who rode a horse which had no head and ate no oats. What old-time bigots would think of women riding bicycles and adopting a new masculine type of dress in doing it, would be hard to imagine.

Early immigrants from Europe to this hemisphere occupied four and five months on the journey. Today a wide-awake traveller can circle the globe during that time. The workshops of today, though in many cases still exhibiting lots of room for improvement are palaces compared to what they once were. The labor of many trades is merely exercise now, since exhaustion has been so greatly limited by mechanical contrivances. The mechanic, unlike his medieval predecessor of the trade guilds, had no personal credit for his work. Today, in industrial exhibitions, the name of the artificer is attached to his work, and he is part of the character of the firm which employs him. The workers' power of self-defence has grown—his influence has extended—his rights are enlarged.

The Press is free and articulate with a million voices. The world's greatest literature is within the means of the poorest. Childhood is appreciated at its true value. Comfort and security have entered the homes of the humble. Towns and cities are kept with more attention to sanitation, they are brighter and contain more public buildings which do the human eye good to look upon. Means of recreation are continually being multiplied. Parks are becoming more numerous; given as possessions to the people. The wonders from lands near and far, are to be seen in museums, while paintings and sculpture are made accessible to us all in the state-owned arts galleries in all the larger cities—commonplace privileges of today, but practically unknown to the plain man of this time last century.

Restlessness.

The note of restlessness prevailed in the early years of the nineteenth century. The great cataclysm of the French Revolution had disrupted age-long institutions, had severed connection with the past and had set men into new ways of thinking, conceiving new orders of society and new systems of government. A discontent with things as they were, a desire to pull down and rebuild on a new foundation, a radiant hope that a new day was about to dawn seemed to possess all minds.

New ideas and forces were looked for and a brilliant constellation of literary geniuses, Byron, Shelley, Carlyle, Ruskin, Browning, Tennyson, Jowett, Stanley, Emerson, Whittier, Lowell and Holmes, to mention only the Anglo-Saxon representatives, appeared as the herald stars of a new day.

The same restlessness on an immeasurably larger scale is about in the minds of men today. It is worthy of note that a vast proportion of the literary stars of the present day are prophets of a new order, H. G. Wells, Bernard Shaw, John Galsworthy and Blasco Ibanez, to mention a typical quartette, all struggle onward, not in the same direction, but all leading away from the present scheme of things in their own lands.

The twentieth century is much less individualistic than was its predecessor, collective action and state action often taking the place formerly occupied by individual initiative. This partly explains the fact that today we find policies advocated by ultra-conservatives that would have been adjudged revolutionary by the most advanced radical of the earlier portion of last century.

The nineteenth century outstripped all its predecessors in advances in art, science and industry, but it is already evident that our own age is destined to surpass even the great work of last century when were introduced such conveniences in daily life as the sewing machine, the typewriter, the bicycle, the photograph and the steel pen. Next may be enumerated the conveniences furnished to the dwellers in cities from a central source—water-pipes and sewer connections, gas lighting, electric lights and telephones. Then came the labor saving devices—the improvements in the steam engine, the dynamo, and use of electricity as motive power, the power press, the typesetting machine, the sewing machine in the factory, the steam plough, the reaper and mower, the vast improvements in weaving looms and in spindles, the still greater improvements in smelting iron and turning it into steel, and in making rails and steel ships. Progress in the sciences of physics and chemistry made possible their practical application to the arts of life. Vast improvement took place in the means of locomotion and telegraphy was introduced during the same wonderful century. Progress in medical knowledge brought in its march the use of anaesthetics, of the antiseptic method of the anti-toxins, the disuse of blood-letting, greater care in preventing disease by public cleanliness, especially in the water supply of cities, with consequently greatly lessened mortality. The nineteenth century saw the triumph of the European nations over the Mohammedan and heathen world in Asia, Africa, and Australia, and the vast growth of the English-speaking peoples. It witnessed great advances in democracy—France became again a republic. Great Britain a monarchy only in name, the Dominions self-governing, and Parliamentary institutions were firmly established in Germany, Austria-Hungary, Italy and Japan. It also saw the rise and development of sciences not strictly applicable to the arts of life—such as historical geology, and paleontology, the history of early humanity as read in the monuments of Egypt, Nineveh, Babylon, Nippon and Troy.

The legacies which have been handed on from the past have come into worthy keeping. Like the man with ten talents in the parable, the twentieth century has made the most of what has been received, and the world moves on with astonishing rapidity.

Perhaps our greatest advance, one that we may complacently present for comparison with all the ages that have gone before us, is in the care and tenderness lavished on the sick and suffering. Even the wicked and vicious, the spiritually sick, now experience the benefits of a milder age. The brutal punishments of last century are never now repeated, and the idea of revenge has been eliminated from our penal code in favor of that of rehabilitation. But, indeed, the list of present day advancement continually grows. We have long ceased to be astonished at the new marvels continually being unfolded before our sated gaze. It is good to be alive these days, and on the whole we may apply to our own times what Sydney Smith said in his:—

"For olden times let others prate,
I deem it lucky I was born so late."

MAN WEARS THE VEIL

LONDON, January 22.—In the central Sahara, men of many wandering tribes go veiled, while the women are bare-faced. Among these are the Tuaregs, who show evidences of having enjoyed a higher degree of civilization than they now display. Though Mohammedans, the Tuaregs are monogamists and women occupy a position of independence.

ADS ON CEILINGS

PARIS, January 22.—The lack of adequate newspaper space for advertising purposes is being felt in France. In Paris signs are found in all sorts of places, but the newest sample of ingenuity in advertising is shown in the barber shops where there are brilliantly lettered signs on the ceilings.

Do You Remember

Rural Progress - - By H. E. S.

(Examiner Correspondent)

This is an age of progress. As we look around it is amazing the changes which have taken place, even in recent years.

The progress has been along many lines—education, dress, manner of transit, in our homes and so on; too numerous to mention.

As we look back to pioneer days and think of our ancestors, with their teams of oxen, tilling the land with crude machinery, threshing their harvest with flails, and then think of modern farming, with its up-to-date binders, threshing outfits, and tractors, we can scarcely realize the amount of hard labour which has been eliminated.

Then, there were a number of little red school houses scattered over the country, to which pupils trudged several miles.

Now, up-to-date schools are in every community, with facilities for higher education within access of all.

Then, only a few had more than the rudiments of education. Now, any ambitious boy or girl, even if not endowed with much money, can, by means of night schools, and part-time classes, work at something to earn a living and at the same time get an education which will enable him or her to fill a better position.

A very decided change in dress is seen. Then, the yarn was spun from home-grown wool and stockings and socks knit; wool was carded, spun and woven on looms into material for garments for every member of the family. These were fashioned and made at home; long service and warmth was the aim. Sun bonnets, hoods and home-made bonnets were worn by the women, hats woven from plaited straw by the men.

Now, goods of finest texture are manufactured in our country and also imported, as is silk hose and exquisite millinery. Garments beautifully fashioned are made for men, women and children in up-to-date manufacturing establishments.

Then, long hair neatly arranged—was woman's crowning beauty, now, bobbed hair is the acme of fashion for all ages.

Think of the long tedious trips with oxen to visit distant neighbors, or to purchase supplies, and later by vehicles drawn by horses.

Now, the motor car and bus has brought the advantages of the city within reach of the rural community.

Then, people received mail at long intervals, now mail is delivered daily.

Then, winter, necessarily meant a time of isolation and loneliness. Now, the telephone has done away with this, while the radio brings the best sermons, and concerts, market reports as well as the news of the world to country folk.

Then, the tallow candle, now electricity or, where this is not feasible the gas lamp.

Then, all work done by hand, now, the motor is used in many homes to drive the separator, washing machine, etc.

Then, the homes were rudely fashioned log-cabins; now, fine homes with beautiful furniture, polished floors, equipped with many and varied devices to make the work easy, are found.

Then, trails and corduroy roads, now, fine highways kept in order for transit.

Then, vast stretches of forest, now, there are villages, towns, cities and rural districts with fine homes, surrounded by fields of grain.

Between then and now, stretches a long vista of industry, in science and invention.

Despite these improvements and even luxuries which have come to rural communities, the population continues to decrease, and the trend is ever cityward, particularly among the younger people.

Then, there were from forty to sixty in a country school, now, the average at a rural school is anywhere from three to fifteen.

As we look backwards, forwards and around, who would not prefer to live NOW, than THEN?

When a horse-car ride was an event to talk of?

When A Woman's Dress Was As Follish As a Man's

(By NIMMEN)

One of the most amusing sights on an August day is a man who wilts his collar laughing at women's clothes.

His chuckle is merely an echo from "once upon a time" when women were so foolish they didn't have much more sense than men.

The charming little frock in the accompanying picture was a summer dress—one to be worn about on August afternoons.

Summer weather, however, simply didn't agree with such a billowy outfit. And finding it impossible to change the weather, women slowly began trimming off portions of their costumes.

Today they have the ideal arrangement—a few pieces of light, filmy stuff—cool and refreshing as a glass of lemonade.

The men are the backward creatures. They have spent too much time laughing at the change in women's summer clothing to take much notice of their own.

A man will chuckle at the way his wife dresses. Yet men have been wearing neckties thousands of years without any reasonable excuse.

When this was a pleasant way to spend the evening?

When Sunday was really a day [illegible]?

Old Timers - By W. J. Cottrell

(Examiner Correspondent)

Stories of pioneer days of Canada have a charm for our young folk scarcely less than that of the valiant deeds of British history, taught for the far greater period.

The advancement of Canada from the primitive to the modern has been so rapid and yet so pronounced, whereby even its rural districts today are seen to keep pace with those in the older-established civilized lands, that much of the circumstances of an half-century ago, is hard to conjure up. River drivers and shantymen live most, perhaps, in the spirit of the past, for working conditions with them have seen the least change. Trappers and hunters venture forth at periods into such wilds as remain in much the same manner and with much the same equipment as the Nimrods of pioneer days. It is, however, when the two former classes of individuals are met with, that the past is most delved into and brought out in contrast to the Present. Who listens at such times more readily than the rising generation? Old timers tell us of many things which they have viewed as improvements, but they have other things to say by way of contrast. No such horses as those of the early days, they will seriously tell you. This sounds strange to the young mind, for with a lesser number of equinines in demand, one would expect the quality of horses to have been easier maintained. But grandson is informed with respect to this, that more care was lavished on beasts of burden then, than is the case now. Drivers prided themselves in their occupation then, and few were too tired at the close of a day's work to groom their team as a supplemental to its bodily comfort. Old timers also speak of the footwear of the days of their young manhood. No such footwear now, they maintain. To them it seems that serviceability and durability in the matter of boots and shoes are sacrificed for style and appearance. Present day clothing also comes under their criticism. So, despite other reasons for its withdrawal, the phrase "the good old timer" lives on as far as they are concerned, and they don't mind telling you that if they had their lives to live over again, they would prefer them to be lived along the same old lines, for whatever else they lacked, health and strength was vouchsafed them.

CROWNS AND CROWNING

Or The Way To a Woman's Heart

Many, many, years ago, men went about their courtship in a far different way than they do today, for those were the days of polygamy and polyandry, when a man had more than one wife and a woman more than one husband.

Their idea of winning the lady was "The come or I'll fetch you one," and as long as the girls' parents were willing, the girl had to marry whether she wanted to or not. It has just been in the past few centuries that a man has won his wife-to-be on love and today, since women have obtained equal rights as men they are as free as the north wind in the partner they wish for the remiinder of their days.

In fairy times the elves would weave beautiful crowns made out of grass, flowers, twigs of laurel, oak, olive and parsley and present them to the fairy whom they liked best.

Today, man goes about his courtship in a far more skilful manner. H does not waste his time weaving crowns and the day is past when brutal force can be used, but he has come to know the fair sex better. He has found that the way to a woman's heart in a great many cases is through her mouth. He makes a big ado over her; he brings her candy; he takes her out to eat, and uses her as if she were equal in every respect. He has found this path to lead straight to a woman's heart. If she becomes peeved he sends chocolates to her, and it is not very long until everything is running smoothly again.

But the day of crown and crowning is past with women, they have taught men that they are swift in revenge, their rights are equal to those of men, and all that they demand is the same treatment as men give other men.

LA BARBA WINS TITLE BATTLE

Beats Elky Clark of Scotland, Decisively in Twelve Rounds.

LOSER GAME.

NEW YORK, Jan. 22.—Scotland got no glad news from the States last night. Its tiny pride, Elky Clark, was thoroughly thrashed for twelve rounds by Fidel Labarba in Madison Square Garden.

If Clark is the darling of the old world fighting tykes, then there is no question as to Labarba's supremacy in flyland. He won every one of the twelve rounds and there was no questioning the decision, which was handed down by George Kelly, Tom Flynn, judges, and Patsy Haley, the referee.

Class told and the tiny Scot lacked it woefully in comparison with Labarba. He was floored five times during the international struggle, once for nine in the first round, three times in the third, the last time lying flat on his face to be saved by the bell.

There were only five seconds to go when Labarba dropped the Scot like a Chinese rug. Clark lay inert, dead to the world, and never could have got to his feet had there been time for the full count.

He was lugged to his corner as dead as a section of old fire hose, but Charley Harvey and Charley Doesserick in his corner worked a magical return to the business on hand.

Hardly Believable.

They slapped, cuffed, goaded, threatened and coaxed Clark back to the war in remarkable fashion. They sent the little old world champion out on the dead run and he put up a corking fight for the ensuing round. One could hardly believe one's eyes.

The first knock down in the first round came as a result of a short inside right to the jaw. Clark was lunging in at the time. Labarba whipped the short punch over cleanly on the button. Clark went down, curling up like a withered leaf.

It didn't seem that he'd get up, even now. He took "nine" and then got up, tottering about like a peglegged man. He fought fiendishly until the bell, displaying a world of power and gameness.

He was dropped for the fifth time in the eighth round, taking a count of nine. He was always the aggressor, but forcing was a lost cause here. He simply plunged into sword points, blindly, madly, hopelessly.

Labarba Injures Hand.

Labarba hurt his right hand in the ninth round, else he might have stopped his man for keeps. He said after the bout that he found Clark rough and tough, but lacking in punching power.

Clark refused to give a statement, saying that he had bound himself up to say nothing for publication save certain European papers. He did blurt this:

"I could not fight my fight. I left my false teeth in the dressing-room, and when they saw my substitute mouthpiece they made me remove it. I had nothing to bite on, my jaw was loose, and he spilled me several times. Otherwise I have nothing to say."

There were 15,620 persons present.

CLARK'S WIFE HEARS RESULT

Cries Over Defeat, But Says She Knows He Did His Best.

CALL STILL FIGHT.

GLASGOW, Scotland, Jan. 22 (Canadian Press). — Elky Clark's wife sat up all night to hear about his fight with Fidel Labarba in New York and received the bad news that he had lost soon after daylight. When it came, she called her four children for breakfast and told them with smiling face that Daddy would soon be home again.

But after their tea, oatmeal and cakes—the cakes being ordered in anticipation of Elky's victory—she went to her room and had a good cry. Later she told the neighbors she knew Elky had done his best and that there was still a lot of fight in him. But, if the worst came to the worst, she said, Elky would go back to his job as a rivetter or play the accordion, as he did five years ago before he entered the ring.

IN MEMORIAM.

In loving memory of our dear daughter, Eliza Garrett, who died Jan. 22, 1925:

One year has passed, our hearts still sore,
As time rolls on we miss her more,
Her loving smiles, her cheerful face
No one can fill her vacant place,

Her weary hours and days of pain,
Her troubled night has passed,
Her ever worn patient frame
Has found sweet rest at last.

—Ever Remembered By Parents and Family.

IN MEMORIAM

GARRETT.—In loving memory of Eliza Garrett, who passed away January 23, 1926.

Dear Sister, how we miss you
But you have gone to happy rest,
Where the Angels throng around you
And they'll crown you with the blest.
All your days of pain and sorrow,
All your weary nights are past,
All earth's trial for you are ended,
You are safe in Heaven at last.

MURDER CHARGE AGAINST POLICE

Warrants Issued When Coroner's Jury Blames Officers For Slaying.

CROWD APPROVES.

FLEMINGTON, N. J., Jan. 22. As a result of the killing of Beatrice Meaney, in the famous "Battle of Jutland," last December, twelve members of the New Jersey State police were charged with murder, and a lieutenant, another state policeman and two agents of the Society for the prevention of Cruelty to Animals, were accused as accessories in warrants issued here late yesterday.

A coroner's jury of Hunterdon County reported at Flemington shortly after three o'clock yesterday afternoon, after deliberating an hour and twenty minutes, "the manner and means through which Beatrice Meaney died in the Somerset County Hospital on December 23 last.

"Beatrice Meaney met her death," read Foreman H. B. Green, "in an unwarranted, atrocious and, in our belief, unlawful attack on the home of her brothers, Timothy and James Meaney, by the members of the New Jersey State Police named herein."

"And we further believe," continued the foreman, when the stir of the crowd was quieted, "that Harry Hanaway and Lester Duzenberry, agents for the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals; and Alfred Larsen, state trooper; and Lieut. Daniel E. Rogers, who commanded the troopers at the scene of the attack, are accessories."

Uproar Begins.

As the voice ceased, uproar began. Farmers from all over the county, 500 strong, who had sat silent and stolid through the long sessions of the inquest, which began last Monday, rose and stood on the seats. Boxes and baskets the farm women had brought for the mid-day meal in town were tossed to the ceiling. Stamping, clapping, shouting, they voiced an approval that the court crier could not silence.

The demonstration lasted for five minutes. Then the crowd shuffled out and Prosecutor Marshall Miller had a chance to talk to Coroner William F. Charles.

Sheriff Anderson Y. Kinney obtained warrants last night for the accused men. He expects to serve them to-day.

Prosecutor Miller announced he would ask for recall of the December grand jury as soon as possible, and would seek indictments against the 16 men on the charges contained in the warrants.

AROUND THE CITY.

A lunatic who escaped from Whitby was apprehended by Provincial Constable Norman F. Maker at Curve Lake. He was returned to the institution under the care of a guard who came after him.

ABANDON HOPE FOR 27 SAILORS

Shipping Men Fear That All Perished When Vessel Went Down.

OFF CAPE COD.

BOSTON, Mass., Jan. 22 (Canadian Press). — Hope definitely had been abandoned for the twenty-seven men of the crew of the steamer John Tracy, steel collier, last seen off Cape Cod during the height of the blizzard on January 11.

The finding yesterday of a drifting rowboat and the name plate of the ill-fated vessel removed the last vestige of doubt that all had perished.

Shipping men here inclined to the belief that the Tracy probably had foundered near where its wreckage was picked up on the perilous George Shoal, approximately seventy miles southeast of Highland Light off Cape Cod.

EVERY ORGAN

of the human body is dependent upon the nervous system for its activity. The nerves that supply the stomach carry the "Spark of Life" which enables the stomach to digest food. If it were not for the nerves supplying the heart, that important organ would cease to do its work. If it is true that a complete severing of the nerves leading to these organs will cause them to cease functioning, is it not reasonable that pressure upon these same nerves will limit the activity of the heart and stomach and cause them to function imperfectly.

THE ONLY WAY

to relieve this abnormal condition is to relieve the pressure from nerve fibres that supply these organs. This is accomplished by scientific manipulation of displaced spinal segments which are constricting spinal nerves. When the nerves are freed of pressure they are capable of carrying 100 per cent. of mental impulses to the abnormal tissues. THE RESULT IS HEALTH.

Local Man Severely Injured While Working In C.N.R. Yards

BRAKEMAN SEVERELY INJURED WHEN KNOCKED DOWN BY TRAIN WHILE WORKING IN C.N.R. YARDS

Stanley Houlihan in Critical Condition as Result of Injuries.

LEGS CRUSHED.

Stanley Houlihan, a brakeman in the employ of the Canadian National Railways, is in a critical condition at St. Joseph's Hospital, as a result of severe injuries obtained when he was knocked down by an approaching freight train in the Canadian National Railway's yard, east of Ware street on Saturday afternoon.

One ankle is badly smashed, and his other leg is so frightfully crushed that it is extremely doubtful whether the limb can be saved or not. Latest reports from the hospital to-day indicated that it would be at least two or three days before any decision in this regard could be arrived at.

There were no actual eye-witnesses to the accident, the first inkling that anything was wrong being when Brakeman Bull shouted to stop the train. The injured man, still conscious, crawled from beneath the caboose of the train to the side of the track. First aid was rendered by Harvey Staunton, Houlihan being placed on a cushion taken from the caboose. He was carried to the caboose and brought to the local depot, from where he was rushed to the hospital by a waiting ambulance.

At the time of the accident the yard engine on which he was employed was engaged in switching empties, and it is thought that Houlihan was standing south of the track on which his engine stood, between that and the main line, the clearance at this point being limited, awaiting a signal from the foreman.

At that instant the west bound manifest backed along the track, the caboose, it is thought, knocking Houlihan down, and throwing him underneath the van, dragging him for some distance.

Several theories are advanced as to the cause of the injuries, one of them being that he was able to grab hold of the journal box situated under the caboose, the injuries being caused in the consequent dragging that he endured; another is that the train passed over his legs, but this is scouted, as it would seem almost impossible that this could have happened without both legs being completely severed.

The injured man was employed on No 2 yard engine of which Harvey J. Staunton is the foreman, and J. Hushan is engineer. L. Woolcott and F. Varcoe are conductor and engineer of the manifest respectively.

Mr. Houlihan is about 30 years of age and is married, and has one child. He has been in the employ of the railway for several years, coming here from Lindsay, when he was transferred to the yard engine staff.

At the time of going to press the hospital authorities said that he had not rested well but that the doctors were pleased with his general condition.

Campaign Against Chastity Condemned By Cardinal

NEW YORK, Jan. 24.—(Canadian Press.) —Cardinal Hayes hopes that public opinion will correct "an awful campaign going on against the chastity of young women today." Addressing a meeting of Roman Catholic women, he said the campaign addresses itself through literature, novels, dance floors and recreation centres.

NATIONALISTS SEEK FREEDOM WITHOUT FIGHT

Issue Manifesto Declaring Determination To Lift Foreign Yoke.

MORE TROUBLES.

Mobs Attack Hankow Customs While Inspector Confers With Minister.

(By Canadian Press).

In a manifesto issued to-day the Nationalist Government of China indicates a determination to free China from the "yoke of foreign imperialism" without armed conflict.

Despatches to-day reported further anti-foreign and anti-Christian disturbances and indicated that the situation in Kiukiang is rapidly growing more serious. The situation in the Yangtze River ports is reported as critical.

"No better and no worse" is the summing up of the British Foreign Office. British official circles expect the Nationalist troops will enter Shanghai in about three weeks.

Following are extracts from the declaration: "The leading assumption of all British and other foreign declarations of policy in regard to China is that she is unable to look after her own interests and that, pursuant to the 'spirit of the Washington conference,' the Powers must enter into self-denying ordinances regarding China in order to safeguard her integrity and independence, promote her political development, her rehabilitation, and her finances.

"This is not true of Nationalist China. Today this new China is strong and conscious of its power, its ability through economic means to enforce its will on Chinese soil against any Power.

"The question, then, is not what Britain and other Powers may wish to grant China to meet 'legimiate aspirations in the Chinese nation,' but what Nationalist China may justly grant Great Britain and other Powers.

"This great, impressive fact must be grasped.

"Today, effective protection of foreign life and property does not stand and can no longer stand on foreign bayonets and foreign gunboats, because the arm of the Chinese Nationalist—an economic weapon—is more puissant than any engine of warfare that the foreigners can devise.

"The British in particular must understand that the forces in the present revolutionary situation are handing over the protection of foreign life and property to a government that derives its authority from those in whose hands is centred a power than can paralyze the economic of foreign nationals in China.

"It is, however, the view of the Nationalist Government that the liberation of China from the yoke of foreign imperialism need not necessarily involve any armed conflict between Chinese Nationalism and foreign Powers. For this reason the Nationalist Government prefers to have all onestions outstanding between Nationalist China and the foreign powers settled by negotiation."

Rioting at Hankow.

LONDON, Jan. 24 (Canadian Press).—Renewed mob violence endangering the life of Sir Frances Aglen, Inspector-General of Maritime Customs in China, broke out in Hankow Friday. Despatches received to-day say Chinese crowds attacked the Customs building, where Sir Frances was conferring with Finance Minister Soong of the Cantonese Government. The crowds invaded the corridors and attacked Soong's bodyguards, but were finally dispersed by Cantonese troops. Resumption of business in Hankow to-day by British bankers and merchants shows that the general position in the city is improving.

U. S. WARNED OF ANTI-AMERCAN PARTY POLITICS

Nicaraguan Consul-General Says Liberals Are Anti-Religious, Too.

FAVOR MEXICO.

NEW YORK, N. Y., Jan. 24. —(United Press).—While warships of many countries speed to China, there to exert their influence against anti-foreign uprisings, Dr. Laureano Zelaya, Nicaraguan Consul-General here, wants Secretary of the Navy Wilbur to remember that an anti-foreign anti-religious menace exists right here in the Western Hemisphere.

"The word liberal, as applied to politics in Nicaragua really means anti-foreign, and especially anti-American," he explained. "This party is notably anti-religious in its attitude, and it now has been proved beyond doubt that it is pro-Mexican."

Dr. Zelaya indicates that it might be well for the United States to keep some of its warships at home, to be prepared against a great anti-foreign wave out of Central America in case the Conservative President Diaz of Nicaragua should lose office.

MAN POWER IN GERMANY HIGHER THAN YEAR 1914

Despite Losses, Able-Bodied Exceed Those Before War.

FEWER DEATHS.

Birth Decline Due To Lack of Men of Marriageable Age.

BERLIN, Jan. 24.—Despite her loss of 2,000,000 men in the World War and the reduction of her population by several millions at Versailles, Germany to-day has 1,700,000 more able-bodied men of working age than she had before the war. Moreover, the Reich's death rate—last year 12.2 to 1,000 inhabitants—is lower than it was in 1913. And, while the number of German births has diminished, this evidently is a passing phenomenon, a condition due to the fact that men of marriageable age, which is officially considered to be from 25 to 40, are less numerous, because from this category came the bulk of the war dead.

These statistics are drawn from a speech delivered before the Prussian Diet by Dr. Hirtsiefer, Prussia's Minister of Public Welfare, and from figures published from the last German census, taken in June, 1925. Both tend to demonstrate the country's sound health, although Dr. Hirtsiefer hesitates to admit this and voices alarm over the high wardness of children from 12 to 14 years of age, who, he said, mostly give the physical impression of being from 3 to 5 years younger. It must be remembered, however, that youngsters of these ages were the chief sufferers from undernourishment during the war. The Welfare Minister concedes, moreover, that the infant mortality is less than ever before.

Medical Consulting Stations.

As a stimulus to births to heal this condition attention is called to the recently established public consulting stations, which offer medical advice free to persons contemplating matrimony. This novelty already has proved successful, it is asserted, and ultimately it is hoped to persuade every would-be husband or wife to submit to a medical examination before marriage. In the some connection the Reichstag is now debating and seems certain to pass a measure to compel every German afflicted with certain diseases to undergo treatment at the expense of the State. The treatment would be private and the patents' identity would not be demanded.

The Prussian Government is also encouraging all forms of athletic sport and means to spend considerable sums for this purpose and for medical supervision of the physical training among the nation's youth. The German Republic, it is argued, must undertake this task, which was less imperative under the empire, because then the young men at least received adequate physical culture during their military service.

Hiawatha Hunters Shoot Large Grey Timber Wolf First One Seen Near Rice Lake In Many Years

A timber wolf measuring five feet six inches from tip to tip was the trophy that fell to the rifles of William Anderson and John Sexsmith of Hiawatha when they shot the animal on Rice Lake between Foley's Island and Grasshopper Island.

The wolf was first noticed by a farmer who thought it was a silver grey fox. He informed Anderson and Sexsmith who started in pursuit in a car. They chased the animal for some distance over the ice before finally despatching it.

They brought the pelt to Captain R. W. Carson of Peterborough in order to collect the bounty. When the stomach of the animal was opened it was found to contain a rabbit practically whole.

The animal had been sighted several times further down the lake in the direction of Cobourg and was generally thought to be a silver grey fox by those who had seen it.

The theory is advanced by those who are familiar with the movements of timber wolves that while they usually travel in pairs this one may have come down from the north while in search of a deer, as they have never been seen in this part of the country before.

RUNAWAY HURLS DRIVER TO DEATH

FROM CUTTER.

SMITH'S FALLS, January 24.—A drowning fatality marked by strange circumstances occurred here Saturday morning when James Dalgleish Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. James Dalgleish of this town, lost his life in Slys Rapids in the Rideau River.

Mr. Dalgleish, it appears, was driving in a cutter on a bridge over the rapids when the horse ran away. It is believed he was thrown out, striking the bridge rail and falling into the swift, icy waters of the river.

When the driverless horse and cutter turned into a yard a short distance from town an investigation was started. Dalgleish's body was found in less than two feet of water at noon.

Mrs. Dalgleish is at present in the Public Hospital, where she gave birth to a baby boy one week ago. Mr. Dalgleish is also survived by his parents and a sister. The late James Dalgleish lived on a farm a short distance from town and was very well known and highly esteemed by every one. He was married about eight years ago. In religion he was a Baptist.

YEGGS UNABLE TO BLOW SAFE

Work Two Hours in Windsor Office Without Success.

MAKE ESCAPE.

WINDSOR, Jan. 24.—A trio of armed yeggs early Sunday morning made three unsuccessful attempts to blow the safe at the main factory of the Neal Baking Company, Salter Avenue, after binding and gagging Roy Jones, the watchman. The safe contained approximately $10,000.

Jones, who lives at 109 Salter Avenue, a half block from the factory, says that shortly after midnight he was tapped on the shoulder by a stranger, who inquired if Mr. Thompson, the manager, had been around, as he had an appointment with him. The watchman replied in the negative. When he turned around, he told the police, a long blue gun was poked in his face by the bandit, who ordered him upstairs to where the safe was.

Forced to Make Rounds.

After being compelled to make the rounds of his clocks, accompanied by the gunman, who threw an adding machine cover over his face, the watchman returned to the office to find two other men engaged in covering the safe with horse blankets which they took from bread wagons. Jones was then strapped to the back of a chair, and gagged. In this position he remained until three charges of nitroglycerine had been exploded without result, each of the charges being timed to explode at the same time as street cars rattled past the factory.

Although the top and sides of the safe were bent and battered by the force of the blasts, the door did not yield. After being in the office more than two hours the yeggs gave up the job, leaving without reward. Holes were blown in the plaster of the walls and ceilings of the offices, but Jones suffered no injury.

Watchman Gives Alarm.

Before leaving, one of the yeggs gave Jones a cigaret. Bound to the chair, the watchman rolled over and over until he was able to knock off the telephone receiver with his foot. He then mumbled an alarm into the receiver, which was caught by an operator at the Seneca Exchange, who informed Sergeant Willis Brumpton at Police Headquarters that something was wrong at the Neal Company's offices. The police investigated, and found Jones bound and gagged with adhesive tape.

The police believe the safe-blowers came from the other side of the river, and that they had been looking over the ground for some time. No fingerprints have been found, indicating the job was the work of experts.

Bad timing of the fuses, the police said, was responsible for the non-success of the yeggs.

French Fliers Predict Paris-New York Flight Expected Will Be Made More Than Once This Year

PARIS, Jan. 24—Two of France's most brilliant aviators—Sadi Lecointe and Lieutenant Lasne—predicted that a Paris-New York flight will be achieved more than once this year. Both believe a Frenchman flying an airplane will be first to cross the Atlantic again, while Lasne said that very soon the air journey between the two cities would be as common as the present Paris-London daily air service.

"We have arrived at veritable perfection of motor construction," explained Lecointe. "Motors are now depended upon to run without mishap for many hours. The newest planes carry enough fuel to keep a plane in the air more than thirty hours at a speed of 200 kilometers an hour, making possible the covering of enormous distances in a short space of time.

"In other words, all is ready for the great adventure, and I am sure it will be accomplished more than once this year. I think a Frenchman will be first, for it would be a shame if France, the cradle of aviation, were not to blaze the wonderful trail between Paris and New York. I look for no serious difficulties in regard to direction, for Atlantic shipping can keep aviators constantly informed of any errors in their course, and these can be immediately corrected. An airplane, not a hydroplane, will make the first flight."

ONE GIRL DEAD AND SIX INJURED ENTRAPPED FIRE VICTIMS JUMP FROM FOURTH STOREY INTO NETS

Many Spectacular Escapes Seen in London Blaze on Saturday.

ATTENDING PARTY.

Ambulance, Hospital Bound, Misses Train By Narrow Margin.

LONDON, Ont., Jan. 24.—(Canadian Press.)—Helen Drake, aged 15, is dead, and six others are in Victoria Hospital in a more or less serious condition following a fire which swept the People's Loan and Savings Company building on Saturday night. Leaping for life from windows in the top storey of the building, 428 Richmond street, into life nets held by firemen four storeys below, while the whole building below and behind them was a billowing inferno of flames and smoke, 13 young Londoners had a thrilling escape from a terrible death when they were trapped in the lodge room of the Canadian Order of Foresters by a blaze which had gained great headway in the lower stories of the building before they were aware of their danger. Miss Helen Drake, 15, of 45 High street, succumbed in Victoria Hospital at 5:30 Sunday afternoon from burns.

Six of the other victims who were rushed to Victoria Hospital in the police ambulance are reported to be making satisfactory progress towards recovery from injuries received in their desperate jumps to safety.

Floyd Fluhrer, a German, sustained painful injuries in a fall on the ice while fighting the fire and was also removed to the hospital. He returned to his home to-day and will be fit for duty shortly.

Others of the thirteen young people, who were attending a euchre party and dance at the time the fire broke out, are recovering at their homes from cuts and bruises and the shocks occasioned by their nerve-wracking experience.

Monetary loss from the fire, the origin of which is still in doubt, will be slightly over $60,000, distributed as follows:

Premier Trust Company, owners of the building, $30,000 A. A. Langford and Company, wholesale stationers, loss to stock, $25,000; Lieutenant-Colonel A. A. Campbell, insurance office, $1,000 A. E. Turner & Company, manufacturing jewellers, loss to stock and office fittings, $2,00 Canadian Order of Foresters, loss of lodge room furniture, $1,000; Acadian Club, $2,000.

The rescues from the burning building were probably the most spectacular in the city's history, it being the first time in a decade at least, that the local firemen have brought life nets into play in rescue work. Had they not been available there is little doubt that there would have been heavy loss of life as the onward sweep of the flames would have reached the little group huddled in the upper windows long before it would have been possible to raise a ladder. Even before the arrival of the firemen one of the young women, Miss Florence Jackson, 11 McClary Ave., was seen by terrified spectators, hanging by her hands from a window ledge fifty feet or more from the street level and screaming for help. Realizing her desperate predicament Dr. J. G. Gunn, Queens Avenue, hastily tore off his overcoat, Edgar Fowler, a motorman on the street railway, and others, stretched it beneath the girl. They had no sooner done so than her grip on the window sill failed and she hurtled downwards, striking the coping on lower stories as she fell. Her body also come in contact with a number of wires which served to break her fall somewhat. She landed on the out

Labor M.P. Would Charge For Protection Of Egypt

LONDON, Jan. 24 (Canadian Press)—Writing in the Sunday Observer Col. Josiah Wedgewood, Labor member of parliament, suggests that Britain gets nothing by her protection of Egypt and should transfer the protection of that country to Italy, or, if Egypt wants Great Britain to insure her external peace, she should pay Britain about $3,000,000 annually.

ASKS REMOVAL OF INCOME TAX ON DONATIONS

Deputation Going To Ottawa To Interview Cabinet This Week.

LOCAL MAN GOING.

A. J. Reynolds Will Represent Chamber of Commerce On Delegation.

As the Dominion Government has promised further reductions in taxes during the present session of Parliament, the Federation for Community Service is going to renew its request, which was made in 1924, that contributions made to charitable and educational objects shall be exempted from the Income War Tax Act.

A deputation is visiting the Government at Ottawa on Wednesday of this week to ask for this exemption. A. J. Reynolds, a member of the Chamber of Commerce, has been delegated by that body to appear as one of the deputation and the Chamber of Commerce has passed the following resolution:

"Whereas the work of the educational and charitable institutions of Canada depend to a considerable extent upon voluntary contributions, and

"Whereas no deductions in income tax is permissible in respect of such conditions, and

"Whereas many who otherwise would be willing to contribute are thus deterred from doing so,

"Be it therefore resolved,

"That the Federal Government be requested to amend the Income War Tax Act, 1917, at the present session of Parliament, so that every person or corporation shall be entitled to deduct from his or its income all sums donated to charitable or educational foundations or institutions,

"Provided that such foundations or institutions are duly registered as approved foundations or institutions in accordance with regulations to be made by the Governor-General in Council."

Kiwanis Club is also sending a delegate, as reported on Saturday.

RUNAWAY ENDS SLEIGHING PARTY

Horses Dash West Along Hunter Street and Run Into Pole.

NOBODY HURT.

A party of sleigh drivers had an added thrill to their trip on Saturday night, luckily without injury to any of the occupants of the sleigh.

Filled with a crowd enjoying the ride and singing lustily, the sleigh, which was driven by a member of the party, slewed coming on to Hunter street from Mark street.

The horses stepped lively and the driver apparently lost his head, as he jumped and left the crowd to the tender mercies of the horses.

Realizing that they were without a guiding hand the horses took full advantage of the chance and started a merry gallop across the Hunter street bridge, across George street, until they reached the top of the hill on Hunter west, when the sleigh struck a hydro pole, knocking the box off the runners and depositing the fourteen occupants on the road.

Americans At Ottawa On Good Will Flight

OTTAWA, Jan. 24 (Canadian Press) — Twelve aeroplanes making a "good will" flight from Selfridge Field, Michigan, to Ottawa, arrived here at 12.10 to-day, having made the 400 mile flight in three hours and fifty-five minutes. The planes are making a test of winter flying conditions for the United States army and the information will be passed on to the Canadian government. This is the first time American army planes have made a flight over Canada in formation.

A "great flight" was the comment of Major Lanpscir as newspapermen crowded around him before he was out of the cockpit of his plane. "Conditions were good. We came at about a thousand feet. The last place I remember passing over was Lindsay. We came here in a direct line from there."

SENT EMERGENCY.

American Warship's Guns Cowed Lust-Driven Crowds at Foochow.

MANILA, Jan. 24 (United Press). —First accounts of the flight of American men, women and children from Foochow, China, under the menacing guns of lawless Chinese soldiers, were told yesterday, following the arrival here of 85 refugees from the terrorized city.

C. P. Savighurst, who was among the more than four-score American citizens brought to Manila aboard the United States destroyer Pillsbury, described scenes of lawlessness and rioting that paralleled the anti-foreign demonstrations of the Boxer rebellion.

So surcharged with potential danger has the situation in China become, Savighurst said, that all Americans living in Chinese districts controlled by the Cantonese Government have been ordered by the American legation at Pekin either to leave China immediately or seek protection under the guns of the nearest consulate.

Throughout all China, he said, Americans and foreigners are joining in a widespread hegira from the critical inland districts to the nearest seaport or guarded consulate.

Only in areas where the Cantonese promise strong military protection and appear able to give it will Americans remain, according to Savighurst.

Orders to abandon Foochow came to American residents shortly after bands of undisciplined Chinese soldiery launched a concerted raid on Foochow missions and schools.

Dragged Incubator.

Shouting that Chinese babies had been roasted alive, the soldiers, with hundreds of Chinese joining in, raced through the streets, gathering in mobs before the mission. One group pulled along a section of a chicken incubator—a torturing device they said it was.

Missionaries, cowering in their homes, were threatened with death. The mobs demanded the slaying of all Christians. Missions and homes were wrecked under the trampling feet and weapons of the milling crowd.

Gathering around him the American women and some of the men at the consulate, Earnest Price, the American Consul, sent out an emergency message for the destroyer Pillsbury. The destroyer steamed into the city and while the mobs gathered about, menacingly, the women and children were escorted aboard.

Fearful that the mob would carry out its threat, the naval officer ordered the refugees below, out of danger of bullets. The decks of the destroyer were cleared for action. Guns were levelled at the shores. The gun crews waited beside their batteries and the destroyer moved slowly out into the river. But not a shot came from shore.

OLD MASTERS

Dear Lord, let me recount to Thee
Some of the great things Thou has done
For me, even me
Thy little one.

It was not I that car'd for Thee—
But Thou didst set Thy heart upon Me, even me
Thy little one.

And therefore was it sweet to Thee
To leave Thy majesty and Throne,
And grow like me,
A Little One,

A swaddled baby on the knee
Of a dear mother of thine own,
Quite weak like me
Thy little one.

Bride Gives Wrong Name Couple Wed Second Time

ROCKVILLE, Md., Jan. 24—Because the bridegroom gave his bride the wrong name in taking out the marriage license, Russell J. A. Heffron, aged 21 years old, and Miss Furn A. Polend, 18, were married here twice in one day. He gave the bride's name as Sinclair, her mother's maiden name.

Shortly after the first ceremony, Mr. and Mrs. Heffron returned to the home of the bride. There the mistake was discovered, and with the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Irving E. Polend, the newlyweds came back to Rockville to be married for the second time.

Mr. and Mrs. Heffron are said to have known each other for some time. Nervousness was blamed for the bridegroom's error.

TEN ARE KILLED TRAIN HITS BUS

Cream of Baylor University Athletic Talent Wiped Out By Accident.

FIVE INJURED.

ROUND ROCK, Texas, Jan. 24 (Canadian Press) — The cream of Baylor University's athletic talent was wiped out here Saturday when a fast International-Great Northern railroad train crashed into a motor bus and took the lives of ten and injured five, one of whom is not expected to live.

Coach Ralph R. Wolf and his basket ball players had completed all but 22 miles of their trip from Waco to Austin in the University's bus. The driver apparently did not see the train until it was practically upon the bus crossing the tracks. The big machine was turned, but too late, the locomotive crashing into it amidships and dragging and tossing bodies of the dead down the tracks.

The dead: Jimmie S. Walker, Ivey Foster, W. E. Murray, Sam Dillow, J. Clyde Kelley, Merle H. Dudley, Bob Hailey, Jack Castellow, Bob Hannah, William Winchester.

The injured: Ed. Cooch, Fred A. Cree, Wesley Bradshaw, Joe Potter (driver), J. G. Berry.

CHINESE MOB HELD PARADE

Sets Fire To Asiatic Petroleum Company's Tanks and Buildings.

RAID CHAPELS.

HANKOW, China, Jan. 24 (Canadian Press).—A huge anti-British parade was held a week ago in Siangtan, 239 miles from here, in Hunan Province, it was learned yesterday.

The mob set fire to the Asiatic Petroleum Company's plant where 2,000 tins of oil were stored and the ensuing fire the company's buildings were destroyed.

There has been much anti-Christian agitation in the same part of the province, many chapels have been commandeered and stripped of pictures and furniture while quantities of Bibles have been burned and torn up.

It is common knowledge to Arctic and Antarctic explorers that sea-ice more than a year old is entirely free from salt, although new ice contains the same amount of salt as sea water.

Lyrics Of Life

(By Douglas Malloch.)

IT DID NO HARM

It's kind of old-fashion to talk, I guess,
Of things like conduct, and speech, and dress,
It's kind of old-fashion and out-of-date,
This thinking decent and walking straight
And holding yourself up out of the dirt—
But I never knew anyone yet it hurt.

And going to church and to Sunday school,
I guess it isn't the general rule
It was perhaps in your younger days;
For life has altered in lots of ways;
But never a boy or a girl went wrong
Through a father's pray'r or a mother's song.

Perhaps you're right, and the times are new,
And folks don't do like they used to do,
And things look foolish and out of place,
Like Father's habit of saying grace;
But Dad felt better when food was blessed,
And I guess it didn't much hurt the rest.

A lot of things didn't do the good,
I guess, that we used to think they would,
And things that the young folks won't allow
Wouldn't do much good if we had them now—
But even now, whether town or farm,
I guess they wouldn't do any harm.

CAROL CERTAIN TO BECOME KING IN SHORT TIME

Report Following Conferences Held By Premier Averescu and Bratiano.

OUST EX-PREMIER.

Marie Eliminated as Power in Royal and Political Council.

PARIS, Jan. 24 (Canadian Press) —King Ferdinand of Rumania, it is stated in reports reaching Rumanian circles here, has won his fight for the political and dynastic domination of his own kingdom.

It is now practically certain, it is stated, that his beloved son, Prince Carol, will succeed him on the throne in a few weeks, Ferdinand abdicating in order to proceed to France to wage a battle for his life against the disease which has been undermining his health for years. Meanwhile it is regarded as assured that Carol and his wife, Princess Helen, from whom he has been estranged for more than a year, will be reconciled somewhere in Italy.

All this means, it is said, the removal of former Premier J. C. Bratiano as the invisible dictator of Rumania and the elimination of Queen Marie as a power in the Royal and political councils of the country.

The reports reaching Rumanian circles in Paris say these results were attained at conferences held in Bucharest Saturday and Sunday between Premier Averescu and Bratiano.

Ferdinand—it is well-known in Bucharest — signed the decree announcing Prince Carol's renunciation of the throne against his will, he has been insisting that his son return home and succeed him ever since he came back to his capital from his last trip to France in October.

The formation of a government of National concentration, a pet scheme of Bratiano's, is reported to have been abandoned and a strong political group, the nucleus of which would be the National peasants' party — seventy-eight deputies — mostly young men headed by Prof. Nicolas Jorga, are slated to take charge of Rumanian affairs when Carol assumes the Royal duties. This group is not hostile to the Liberals. On the contrary they are seeking Liberal co-operation, but it is understood that one of Prince Carol's utimatums is that "if Carol returns Bratiano must go."

ROME, Jan. 24 (Canadian Press) —Princess Helen of Rumania, wife of former Crown Prince Carol, arrived in Rome yesterday from Rapallo with her five-year-old son Prince Michael. She will remain forr a few days as the guest of Queen Helena at the Quirinal Palace while former King George of Greece and Princess Elizabeth of Greece (sister of Carol) are guests of Prince Philip of Hesse and his wife Princess Mafalda at the Villa Savoia, the private residence of the Italian sovereigns.

On Wednesday, Princess Helen will return to Rapallo, where she will leave her son for the winter months. She will then return direct to Rumania, it is announced. Nothing is known here regarding the reported intention of Prince Carol to meet her or make any arrangement for his own return to Rumania.

Smoking Detrimental And Also Beneficial

BALTIMORE, Jan. 24. — Associated Press. — Smoking does various things to the reactions of normal man, as shown in experiments conducted by Vivian E. Fisher, former assistant psychologist at Johns Hopkins University.

In Fisher's observations, smokers will find both reasons for giving up the habit and excuses for continuing its use.

Briefly, Mr. Fisher finds that tobacco smoke does the following things:

Increases the pulse rate immediately.

Raises the blood pressure immediately.

Causes decrease in steadiness, as demonstrated by an attempt to hold the hand in a given extended position.

Makes for loss of accuracy.

Produces greater uniformity.

Retards muscular fatigue.

Immediately accelerates any automatic function, physical or mental.

Increases apparent efficiency in work requiring sustained attention over a long period of time.

QUIET REIGNS IN CHINA DISTRICT

Nothing Unusual Has Occurred Over Week End To Cause Anxiety.

CONFER AT HANKOW.

LONDON, Jan. 24. — Canadian Press. — Nothing has developed in the past 24 hours in respect to China apparently to cause worry to the British government or accentuate the anxiety of the people. That the conversations at Hankow are proceeding normally, but that it would not be wise to speculate on the future, was the word from the British foreign office to-night.

The government is being kept well informed by the British Minister, Miles Lampson, but seemingly no definite stage in the Hankow negotiations has yet been reached. In fact the cabinet ministers appeared to be in doubt whether anything except verbal conversations has yet been exchanged. Hankow is evidently regarded as a test case in the belief that it is necessary to discover how far the Cantonese leader is in a position to redeem his promises.

The ministers consider the military preparations as only precautionary in case things go wrong. Press advices from Hankow confirm the the previous announcement that the British banks, merchants and shippers had agreed to re-open for business today and that they would continue to function as long as they felt secure. It is hoped that this would facilitate the negotiations between Charge O'Malley and the Cantonese foreign minister, Eugene Chen.

Aside from the military preparations already announced, four battalions of infantry to be in readiness for embarkation to China and 1,000 marines who will sail to-morrow from Portsmouth, Malta reports that two regiments there are being held for service in China if needed.

At Portsmouth a special church parade of the marines who will soon be China bound was held Sunday and there will be a general inspection today before the marines embark on the Zeeland.

BOY SCOUT NEWS

4TH PETERBOROUGH TROOP.

Last Friday night's meeting of the 4th Peterboro Troop of Boy Scouts proved to be a very interesting one for its members. The interest lay in the making of a so-called monkey bridge, and at first sight one would really believe relation to the Jacks species was needed to get across, but even though it is exciting, it is a safe way to cross a stream or river.

The material used in the making of this bridge consists only of poles and rope, but as rope is not found lying around on the banks of streams, when wanted, a real practical Scout would secure native tying materials, such as the inner bark of the basswood, the inner bark of the slippery elm, the long slender roots of the syruce or various shrubs, including willows and alders. After braiding or twisting these together, he would have tying material strong enough to work with.

The construction of this bridge consists of three ropes stretched across a stream or river and connected every few yards with V-shaped poles, so that one rope forms the footpath, and the other two form the hand-rails.

After this period of pioneering instruction, a number of hearty games were played, such as "Bull in the Ring," "Bear in the Pit," etc., ending with a tug-of-war, the Crow Patrol winning most of the heats.

The competition ended with the Crow Patrol still slightly in the lead.

After the lowering of the Union Jack and the singing of God Save the King, the meeting ended with the Scouts' Silence.

Water power development plans for remote regions are hastened these days by the use of airplanes. Recently a pair of planes in two days made aerial photographs of a large area in Alaska, the mapping of which by previous methods would have required years.

SOFT COAL MEN FACE WAGE WAR

United States Bituminous Operators Want Lower Pay Scale.

SIDES HOSTILE.

(By Gerald P. Overton, United Press Staff Correspondent).

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Jan. 24.—The bituminous coal industry faces another stubborn wage battle between operators and miners.

Although both sides carefully avoided any talk of a strike, there was an air of belligerency in both camps—the United Mine Workers of America on one side, and the bituminous operators on the other.

The impending wage battle is to be centered on the new wage contract to replace the Jacksonville agreement which expires March 31. Already operators of the central competitive field, embracing the bituminous mines of Western Pennsylvania, Ohio, Indiana and Illinois have announced their determination of figthing for a lower wage scale.

Meeting in Toledo last week, the operators adopted a resolution declaring that the scale between the miners and operators of this territory must continuously be in competition with the wages paid in the non-union fields of West Virginia and Kentucky.

Adoption of this policy would amount to a cut of perhaps as much as 20 per cent. from the scale of the Jacksonville agreement, which set $7.50 per day as the basic pay of the union bituminous miners.

Tags Her For Speeding, She Tags Him For Divorce

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 24. —Late in 1925, Edward Hallett disappeared from his home in this city, and Mrs. Frederic Hallett, his wife, and their five year old son figured that he had deserted them. Mrs. Hallett went to work and saved enough for an automobile in which to seek her supposedly errant husband.

A few weeks ago she went skimming along a highway near San Francisco in her car. A traffic policeman flagged her.

It was Hallett. He tore up the tag that designated a speed law violation, but that did not mollify Mrs. Hallett. The next day Hallett was tagged with a divorce summons.

The divorce has been granted in the Superior Court here.

CHINESE GIRLS JOIN AGITATORS

Addressed Mobs of Anti-Foreign Agitators at Canton.

HARASS OFFICERS.

HONG KONG, Jan. 24 (Canadian Press).—Young Chinese girls joined the ranks of the anti-foreign agitators at Canton on Saturday, when they addressed street crowds while small bands of soldiers displaying banners in opposition to foreigners, paraded through the city.

The speeches and parading were outward manifestations of a marked change in demeanor on the part of the Chinese. Soldiers of the Nationalist army visited the customs house and harangued the employees in the examination shed. Gates at the entrance to the customs house were locked and the soldiers then left the shed.

A regiment of Indian soldiers was held in readiness here yesterday for departure for the disturbed northern China area during the afternoon.

ONE GIRL DEAD

stretched overcoat, and to Dr. Gunn's presence of mind she undoubtedly owes her life. She was bleeding profusely from severe gashes on the head. She was carried into Wallace's drug store where examination revealed that her injuries were not as serious as at first supposed.

Many other thrilling rescues were witnessed by a crowd of several hundred which were quickly on the scene. Immediately on the arrival of the fire brigade, Fire Chief Aitken ordered the life nets spread. Entrance to or egress from the building was by this time completely cut off. The only avenue of escape still open was to leap from the top storey windows. A previous effort on the part of Arthur Cole, who was alone in the Acadian Club rooms on the third floor, to throw a carpet to those above in the hope that they might be able to use it as a rope, had failed.

In rapid succession, the girls going first, twelve of the entrapped young people leaped for the nets, while a horror stricken crowd stood rooted to the spot by the tense drama being enacted before their eyes.

Cole, seeing that he could be of no assistance to those on the floor above, leaped from the third storey window and John Duncan managed to get a foothold on the ornamental brick work at one corner of the building and had descended as far as the third storey before being compelled to jump.

As quickly as they landed the victims were conveyed to the waiting ambulance and rushed to Victoria Hospital, while the firemen turned to the task of subduing the flames. While rushing at top speed to the hospital an ambulance conveying the injured escaped by a margin of less than one foot of being struck by an eastbound London and Port Stanley train at the Waterloo street crossing. A delay of less than a second might have resulted in serious injury or death to all in the ambulance.

The fire was brought under control by about midnight by lines of hose which were in use until well on into Sunday morning.

The gathering was marking the formation of a young men's club of the C.O.F.

The fire is believed to have started on the second floor of the building in the press room of the Langford Company. This section of the building was a mass of flames when firemen arirved and the fire had cut through the stairways of the main building, cutting off all escape from upper floors except through windows. Ten minutes before the flames burst through the building there was no indication of fire. The loan company premises suffered from water and smoke but vaults and records are not damaged. Mr. Langford does not agree with the suggestion that the fire started in his plant. He thinks it started on the stairway.

Huge excavating shovels of 300-ton rating, whose buckets can pick up eight or more cubic yards of earth and rock at a bite are now operated by electric power.

The electrification of Swedish state railways is proceeding and it is expected in 1927 to speed up passenger movement. The present time between Stockholm and Gothenburg—8 3-4 hours—is to be materially reduced. Locomotives on this electrified system are equipped with changeable gears so that they can be converted quickly from high-speed passenger machines to lower speed heavy-duty engines for freight service.

CAMPBELLFORD "DADS AND SONS" UNITE AROUND BANQUET TABLE

George Young's Love of Mother Extolled as Fine Example.

SONGS A FEATURE.

M. E. Maybee, M.P., and Dr. Robertson, M.P.P., Present.

CAMPBELLFORD, Jan. 24. — Confidence and companionship between father and son, was the keynote struck by the majority of speakers at Campbellford and Seymour Father and Son Banquet, tendered in the Sunday School of St. John's United Church, Friday night.

Rev. C. D. Daniel, as leader of songs and stunts, kept things moving in his usual very capable manner, and there wasn't a dull moment to the whole proceedings. The opening song was contributed by the boys, led by Mr. Daniel entitled

"Howdy!"

Howdy-do, dear lads, Howdy-do,
Is there anything that we can do for you
We are with you to a man
We'll do anything we can,
Howdy-do, dear lads, Howdy-do.

All joined in singing the following to the tune of "Auld Lang Syne":

We're here for fun right from the start,
Pray drop your dignity;
Just laugh and sing with all your heart,
And show your loyalty.
May other meetings be forgot,
Let this one be the best;
Join in the songs we sing tonight,
Be happy with the rest.

This was followed by the Doxology. Then all proceeded to do justice to the many good things the ladies of the church had prepared.

Seated at the head table were: Mayor G. A. Kingston, Rev. W. Elliott, Reeve (Major) J. M. Bygott, M. E. Maybee, M.P.; Geo. VonVolkenburg, Fred Barnum, Dr. Robertson, M.P.P.; A. Hazell, E. C. Dolman, Roy Barnum, Stewart Carr, Cecil Stephens, Rev. C. D. Daniel, Dr. Haig, Major Belford, ex-M.P.P., R. N. Carr.

Stewart Carr, Representative for East Northumberland in the Sixth Older Boys' Parliament, occupied the chair. In a brief speech he outlined the object of the Father and Son Banquet. He said boys look to older men for leadership, and with a better understanding between sons and fathers he predicted better conditions in the world. He urged Fathers and Sons to know each other better, and gatherings such as this would not be a waste of time.

Song (Tune, There Are Smiles):

By the Boys:
Are Smiles):—
There are dads that make us happy,
There are dads that make us sore
There are dads that make us glad we're living
Bringing sunshine with them through the door.
There are dads we imitate with pleasure
And are proud that we like them maybe;
But the dad I think is "All the Candy,"
Is the dad that they gave to me.

By the dads:
There are sons that make us sorry,
There are sons that make us glad,
There are sons so full of life and mischief
Who are always playing tricks on dad;
There are sons of every disposition
And although we may not all agree,
But the son I think is just a dandy
Is the son that they gave to me.

Roy Barnum, in extending a welcome to the dads, said "The fact that you are here shows you have an interest in Boys' Work and confidence in your son."

Major Bygott, in his reply to Mr. Barnum's welcome, said it was an honor to be associated with boys in any way, especially in sport and the more serious side of life, "Work." The closer the relationship between Father and Son the more jovial will be your life. He urged the boys to have confidence in their fathers.

Song (Tune, K-k-k-katy)

Boys:
D-d-d-daddy, D-d-d-daddy,
You're the only D-d-d-dad that I adore
When the call comes from the woodshed
I'll be going out the p-p-p-parlor door.
Dads:
S-s-s-sonny, S-s-s-sonny,
You're the only b-b-b-boy that I adore
When the time comes to go to the woodshed
I will meet you at the p-p-p-parlor door.

Frend Barnum said he was interested in boys and boys' work; he thought every man should be right at home in any game with the boys.

George Von-Volkenburg said it was his first appearance at a Father and Son gathering and he was very pleased to be present.

Song (Tune, Barney Google)

Stewart Carr, he's the best man in this town;
Stewart Carr, he's the man you can't keep down;
That smile of his gets you, by heck;
Just yell out till it hurts your neck,
Stewart Carr, he's the best man in this town.

Mayor Kingston

Mayor Kingston said he was proud of the chairman of the evening, and proud to be connected with this programme. The larger audience that the Boys Work Movement was spreading, and he believed those present would take a deeper interest in this work. He asked the fathers to think and consider: "What can I do for my boy, or somebody else's boy."

M. E. Maybee, M.P., congratulated Stewart Carr on his election to the Older Boys' Parliament. It was an honor to himself, his parents and to the Town of Campbellford.

To the boys he said, now is the time to lay the foundation for future success, to take advice from seniors and parents, and it was up to parents to set a good example.

Dr. Robertson, M.P.P., extended a welcome to S. Carr to visit the legislative building when the House was in session, and he would give every consideration to the Older Boys' Parliament. He urged the boys to begin young to build their characters.

He said the best part of George Young's victory in the Catalina Island swim was the fact he never forgot his mother.

Mr. Hazell favored the gathering with a solo.

Major Belford

Major Belford, ex-M.P.P., in his humorous vein, brought forth rounds of laughter by his hinted reference to local townsmen, and wound up by saying, "I always liked this town and it was me and Andy High, here, that made it what it is."

He asked Stewart Carr for the recipe he used to win the seat for the Older Boys' Parliament for Campbellford. It might be useful to both himself and Dr. Robertson in the future.

Rev. Mr. Elliott spoke of the relationship between boys and dads, and stressed the one word, "Companionship," to carry out aims and ideas. Cecil Stephens, in speaking of "Our Mothers,' cited the feat of George Young in winning the Catalina Island swim; he was thinking always of his mother, and it was our mothers who made this banquet possible. He believed he was voicing the sentiments of all present when he said their efforts were appreciated.

Song (Tune, Auld Lang Syne.)

Should we forget our thanks to those
Who worked so faithfully?
To make the feast we've just enjoyed
A real festivity.
They like to see us have our fun
They always do their part;
We thank them each and every one
We thank them from our hearts.

Alex. Edmison

Alex. Edmison of Queen's University, Kingston, spoke at length on the fine influence, good clean sport had on forming a boy's character. He cited for examples, Percy Molson of McGill and George Richardson of Queen's. Both were great athletes and true sportsmen, and today in Montreal you see the "Molson" Stadium, and in Kingston nthe "George Richardson" Stadium, in memory of these two athletes, who gave their life for the cause of Freedom.

He cautioned the boys not to rely solely on an athletic reputation to carry them through life, and mentioned the case of Tom Longboat, the great Indian runner. He was given a great reception after winning the Boston marathon, and was offered a university education but declined; now his athletic career is over and Longboat is down and out. Sport is the foundation for a life training, but develop other things so that when your sport days are done you are ready for something else. He urged the boys to develop individuality, to so some one thing and do it well. He advised boys who are inclined to give up easy, to concentrate and eventually they will win.

He said, there are four parts to the solving of every problem in boys' work: "Positive Suggestion," "Co-operation," "Faith" and "Unstinted Praise."

A hearty vote of thanks was extended to the speakers of the evening.

Among those present were:
Messrs. Alfred and Gerald Barnum, Alfred Simpson, Don Kerr, Elmer Petherick, W. H. Ashton, W. Kingston, Fred Linton, Franklin Linton, W. Bibby, L. Jordan, Elmer Jordan, Percy Oddie, Murray Hutcheon, Dave Stillman, Jack Bygott Ed. Dingman and son, Ed. DONATIONS TO CHARITY.

The request which the Toronto Federation for community service—backed by other organizations, including the Kiwanis Club of Peterboro, is to make of the Federal Government on Wednesday—that amounts contributed to educational and charitable objects shall be exempted from the Dominion income tax is one that should be easy to justify.

Several years ago when the suggestion was first presented to the Government the answer was unfavorable, financial conditions making it impossible to grant the exemption.

However the country is in much healthier conditions financially at the present time and with tax reductions foreshadowed by Ottawa rumors the request of the Federation for Community Service should have a sympathetic hearing.

It is the opinion of the Federation that were no income tax levied upon subscriptions for charitable purposes the many organizations of this nature that depend almost entirely upon donations from the public could count upon a much more substantial response.

The request for exemption will be based upon this angle of the situation and the case will doubtlessly be very strongly pressed by Wednesday's deputation, as a reform very decidedly in the public interest.

A SUCCESSFUL YEAR.

The directors and officials of the Peterboro Young Men's Christian Association are to be congratulated upon the successful year's work indicated in the reports presented at the annual meeting.

That the institution was able to show an even break financially on the year's operations should be a source of general satisfaction, even although a deficit from the year before could not be met.

The Y.M.C.A. is, in a real sense of the phrase, of the best type.

Its many activities all contribute to the development of better citizens, physically, morally, mentally.

For many of the boys and young men it is a rallying post that offers clean recreation and opportunities to develop themselves along many lines.

Its influence hs even been for good and it has played a very prominent part in moulding the lives of many of its members so that they have become citizens of the best type

For these reasons it is a matter of much satisfaction that the past year has been marked by success and a record of much good work accomplished in all departments of the institution.

A POOL NEEDED.

The suggestion made at the annual meeting of the Y.M.C.A. that the construction of a large and better equipped swimming pool might be possible, is very welcome.

Such a pool is very bady needed in Peterboro, which is at present almost entirely without swimming facilities during the winter months.

The tank at the Y.M.C.A. is much too small and antiquated to be of any real service, while so far it has not been found feasible financially to operate the Y.W.C.A. pool during the winter.

A modern swimming pool would be of the greatest benefit to Peterboro's young men, making swimming a year-round sport as it should be, and facilitating the teaching of the art to those unable to swim.

The winter months are the logical time for swimming instruction, which can be given with much greater success in a tank than under any other conditions.

A campaign for better swimming facilities, with the impetus given to the sport by the success of George Young, product of the Y.M.C.A. tank, at Catalina, should be a success.

THE LIQUOR LEGISLATION.

Although there has been no official statement about the matter the rumor persists that the new liquor legislation to be introduced at the coming sessions of the Ontario Legislature will include authorization for the standard hotels to sell liquid refreshments to their guests at meals.

If this means merely the sale of such drinks to legitimate guests in the regular dining rooms of the hotels during meal hours there is not likely to be a great deal of opposition to the proposal.

But there are meals—and meals.

If the legislature were to allow hotels to sell meals at all hours in their refreshments parlors—the old bar-rooms—then a sandwich would be a meal and it would be a short step from that point to the property sandwich ordered merely as a sop to the law and eaten by nobody.

There is, however, no profit in crossing bridges before we get to them.

Nobody connected with the Government has admitted that there is to be any sale in hotel at all, and if some concessions along that line are made they will surely be surrounded wih safeguards that will prevent the return of bar-room conditions, masked by a camouflage of ham sandfiches and wedges of more or less indigestible pie.

BACK TO CANADA.

Dispatches from Western Ontario points and Ottawa, during the past few weeks, have been in curious coincidental agreement as to the increasing tide of former Canadian residents in the United States, returning to settle permanently in this country. These, it should be borne in mind, are not tourists or health seekers who have been sight-seeing or living in the Southern States under medical orders. They are people who work, who were lured by stories of amazing prosperity and high wages in the Republic, and who have come to the conclusion that their chances for steady employment and adequate remuneration are as good, if not better, in Canada.

It is evident that the developments in the mining and forest areas, in hydro power and other resources, the improvement in many lines of manufacturing, and the confidence of Canadian, British and American capital in still greater things for the Dominion, have had an influence on the movement. It has been accelerated by unemployment on a large scale in a few United States cities which depend upon one or two huge industries, and are consequently hard hit by even a short period of depression. There are other contributory causes. These do not greatly matter in view of the opinion of many economists that the next few years is to see expansion in Canada that has not had a parallel in several decades.

W. J. Egan, Deputy Minister of Immigration, Ottawa, in a late review of the back-to-Canada movement, gave the figures from January to October, 1926, the latest month available, as totalling 55,718. Of these 47,954 were native-born Canadians. The rest were British subjects who had lived here, or naturalized Canadians. It is expected that the figures for November and December last year will show little, if any, signs of a check to the tide, and that the next few months will indicate that the aggregate number of returned Canadians will be greater in 1927 than in the preceding year.

At the same time immigration, as distinct from this return movement, is also on the up grade, and most Canadians know that it is a much more carefully selected influx than it used to be. The first 10 months of 1926 showed a total arrival of 122,848 immigrants, of whom 45,073 were British, 18,575 from the United States, and 59,200 from other lands. Canada has room both for the new settlers and the return of her own who have wandered awhile in other fields.—Brantford Expositor.

THE ANGRY MAYOR OF WINNIPEG

R. H. Webb, who is Mayor of Winnipeg, has arisen in his mighty wrath to call down curses on the newspapers and their reporters. Mayor Webb was supposed to have referred to the farmers of Western Canada as "sewer diggers." Now, the digging of sewers is a necessary and honorable occupation, but the wheat barons chose to be highly offended at the characterization, and His Worship hastened to assure them that it was all a mistake on the part of the reporters. Then he went on to deliver what the despatches call "a stinging broadside" against the press, which he held responsible "for most of the misunderstanding that existed in the country today."

> "The Government of Canada," he said, "should pass legislation compelling all newspapers to have reporters on their staff who will report right. They should be compelled to report verbatim and not be given a free hand to construct their reports in such a manner that the public might read into the account any conclusion it saw fit."

It is the immemorial practice of tenpenny politicians to blame the reporter for all their indiscretions. A heedless expression thrown out in the heat of debate may bear quite a different aspect when seen in cold type in the morning paper, and may not represent the speaker's real beliefs or intentions. It seems an easy way out of the difficulty to deny the statement and to claim he was misreported. The reporter grins and, as a rule, lets the matter pass. He is accustomed to that sort of thing.

There are extremely few reporters who are not actuated by a desire to "report right," in the language of Mayor Webb. They are trained to grasp the central idea (if any) of an address and to present it in words which will convey the speaker's meaning. Cases are not unknown where they have even improved on the speaker's words, because of all our public arts and occupations that of public speaking is practised the most inefficiently.

Then the newspapers, says Mayor Webb, "should be compelled to report verbatim.' A truly delightful prospect! He means, of course, that Parliament should compel the newspapers to report verbatim the Mayor of Winnipeg. His suggestion is too preposterous to warrant discussion. But aside from that Mayor Webb possibly does not realize that a verbatim report—a word by word report of everything said—would make the average public speaker look utterly ridculous. Not one speaker in a score would emerge triumphant from such a test. The man who stumbles and hesitates, who pursues the elusive idea through flowery hedges and thorny lanes, who all but drowns thought in oceans of words, is fortunate if the reporter interprets him in intelligent coherence. The last thing in the world desired by this large class of speakers is verbatim reportig. The speaker whose ideas are quite clear in his own mind and whose thoughts flow in orderly sequence seldom has to complain of the reports.

And, anyway, a verbatim report of almost anybody's speech at almost any kind of meeting would pretty nearly fill a whole newspaper.

Public men have marvellously short memories. When Ralph Webb was proposed—in the newspapers—as a likely candidate for the mayoralty of Winnipeg a couple of years ago what would have happened to his ambitions had the press refused to give any publicity to his candidature or his campaign? What would be the status today of his pet project, the Hudson Bay Railway, if the press of Canada had given no space to the propaganda circulated so zealously by him and his associates during recent years?—Ottawa Journal.

EDITORIAL NOTES AND COMMENT.

And now George Young is said to be contemplating a plunge into the matrimonial seas, where many a good swimmer has gone down.

It is rumored that the sale of liquor with meals will be authorised under the new act. Does that mean the advent of the rubber sandwich?

If there are any doubts as to the statesmen-like qualities of Premier Ferguson they are not to be found in his home riding.

Judging by the Toronto Star's success as an election prophet any one mentioned by it as a likely Conserative leader may be counted out of the running without delay.

Speaking of titles, Hon. Vincent Massey seems to have grabbed a notable handle to his name.

MONTREAL GRAIN AND PRODUCE

MONTREAL, Jan. 24 (Canadian Press). — Extreme dullness marked the export trade in Canadian grain on the Montreal market Saturday, the demand being of a limited character. The local market for grain was also quiet and prices were unchanged.

The volume of business transacted in Spring wheat grades of flour was small but the undertone was firm. The trade in Winter wheat flour was also slow, but prices ruled steady.

The millifeed market continued active and firm. The demand for standard grades of rolled oats was quiet, but values were unchanged.

Considerable business was transacted in fresh and storage eggs and prices were well maintained. The receipts were 1,786 cases.

A fair amount of business was done in butter and the undertone was firm. The receipts were 75 packages.

The cheese market was extremely quiet, but prices were unchanged. The receipts were 30 boxes.

CHICAGO GRAIN

CHICAGO, Jan. 24 (Canadian Press). — Wheat proved responsive Saturday to talk about possible market effect of disturbances in China should Russia become more involved. Likelihood that the United States visible supply will show a material decrease today counted also as a strengthening influence. Closing quotations for wheat were firm, 1-8 to 1-4c, 3-8c net higher; with corn unchanged to 1-4c up; oats at 1-2c to 1-4c advance, and provisions varying from 7c decline to 12 to 15c gain.

Corn and oats reflected unfavorable weather conditions for the movements of corn. Interest was likewise shown in news that the Senate Agricultural Committee as well as the House Committee has endorsed the Minary-Haugen Bill.

SUGAR MARKET

NEW YORK, Jan. 24 (Canadian Press).—The raw sugar market was unchanged Saturday at $5.02 for Cuban duty paid, with no sales reported.

Raw sugar futures closed at net losses of 1 to 2 points for active positions. Total transactions aggregated only 4,700 tons. January closed $3.16; March $3.21; May $3.31; July 3.42; September $3.49; December $3.29.

The refined sugar market was unchanged to five points lower, list quotations ranging from $6.20 to $6.25 for fine granulated.

STERLING EXCHANGE

Sterling demand $4.85 1-2.
Sterling cables $4.86 1-8.

"SIMPLIFIED SPELLING"

A question that is frequently asked of teachers of English is the following:

"Do you believe that 'simplified spelling' is making any headway?"

An answer was given in a recent article in the New York Evening Post, which said:

"If people ask about spelling reform, Professor William Tilly of Columbia University says he does not expect to see it accomplished, and that a later generation, more generally acquainted with linguistic facts, will be more fit to handle the problem. Teachers were especially urged, in a lecture delivered by Professor Tilly, to let children ask, not 'What does the spelling mean?' but 'What did the spelling mean?' That is, what sounds did the letters reepresent four or five hundred years ago?"

DR. FRANK CRANE'S DAILY EDITORIAL.

THE FOURTEEN ERRORS OF LIFE

(By Dr. Frank Crane.)

A London judge has listed what he considers the Fourteen Great Mistakes of Life, as follows:

1. It's a mistake to attempt to set your own standard of right and wrong and expect everybody to conform to them.
2. It's a mistake to try to measure the enjoyment of others by your own.
3. It's a mistake to expect uniformity of opinion in this world.
4. It's a mistake to look for judgment and experience in youth.
5. It's a mistake to endeavor to mould all dispositions alike.
6. It's a mistake not to yield in unimportant trifles.
7. It's a mistake to look for perfection in our own actions.
8. It's a mistake to worry ourselves and others about what can not be remedied.
9. It's a mistake not to alleviate, if we can, all that needs alleviation.
10. It's a mistake not to make allowances for the weaknesses of others.
11. It's a mistake to consider anything impossible which we ourselves can not perform.

It's amistake to believe only what the finite mind can grasp.

13. It's a mistake to live as if the moment, the time, the day were so important that it would live forever.
14. It's a mistake to estimate people by some outside quality, for it is that within which makes the man.

Lists have been made by all sorts of eminent men, including Washington and Franklin, for the conduct of life, and they are all more or less useful for the ordinary man.

The art of life is steering the middle way, avoiding errors on both sides, and it is interesting to have these reefs pointed out upon which many a human bark has been shipwrecked.

It may repay us all to examine this list of the London judge and see wherein we have been mistaken in the past and to avoid mistakes in the future.

There is nothing positive about the list. They are all things not to do, and not things to do. But the avoidance of these mistakes may save as much embarrassment.

Life is a perilous path at best and to make the journey safely from the cradle to the grave involves much circumspection, and perhaps this list may be of help.

HEALTH and DIET ADVICE

WHITE PLAGUE DECREASING

Tuberculosis, which used to be rated as the greatest disease man-killer, is gradually giving way to science, and deaths each year are becoming less from this once vicious disease.

Figures just published for 1924, by the United States Public Health Service, show that during that year tuberculosis only took a toll of 89,742 deaths, or at the rate of 90.6 per 100,000. This shows a great victory over previous years. This also shows that the people are taking advantage of the health advice being given by diffrent health authorities, and teachers all over the world; who are training the people into a better health consciousness, and teaching them how to prevent and cure these simple diseases which come from bad habits, and errors of living.

During this same period in 1924, pneumonia has passed tuberculosis as a death-giving disease. During the year, 97,403 deaths were reported from this cause, or at the ratio of 98.4 per 100,000.

During the same time the total deaths from heart disease was 176,671, or a ratio of 178.4 per 100,000 population.

What is the meaning of the decrease in tuberculosis, and the increase in pneumonia and heart disease during the same period? The reason seems quite clear. Pneumonia and heart failure are acute diseases, and as I have so often stated, people are unwilling to take advice about how to live in a healthful manner, so that they cannot contract acute diseases, therefore, such diseases as pneumonia and heart disease takes them unawares, and they are unable to resist these sudden attacks. Whereas, with tuberculosis, the onset of the disease is very gradual, and one has time to observe its steady approach, and before it is too late use measures for bringing about a normal state of health. Fear of tuberculosis has been so instilled in the minds of the people, that at the first approaching signs of this disease, such as the persistent cough, night sweats, increasing weakness, etc., the sufferer is frightened into taking better care of himself.

With heart disease the prominent citizen apparently in the best of health is found dead in his chair, after eating a hearty meal.

The one who is the most liable to attacks of pneumonia is the florid, full-fed individual who never suspects that he is subject to such a fatal disease.

Too much eating, hours of over-work, and various other dissipations develop a state of enervation, and pneumonia carries off the healthy-looking victim within a few hours or days, before he is able to regain his strength.

With heart failure, a sudedn attack of gas pressure from eating too large a meal, will bring on a sudden death with apparently the strongest person in the prime of life.

I predict that it will be a long time before the people's "Health-consciousness" will be sufficiently aroused, that they will take up the study of health in a serious manner, and learn how to live in such a way, that these acute diseases will not longer hold any terror for them.

CAPITOL THEATRE

NOW PLAYING

Adapted by Julian Josephson from the Saturday Evening Post story, "Delicatessen," by Brooke Hanlon.

SYNOPSIS

Ranny, Forbes, star polo player, and his beautiful wife, Joan, are temperamental mismates. Joan wants a divorce. Ranny hesitates, loving her, although secretly knowing she loves Abner Gratman. Lacking proof that Joan is faithless he plans to trap her and Abner while they are all on a week-end cruise on the yacht of Stivner, a billionaire lumber king, whom Ranny cultivates for business reasons. Complications multiply. Clare, a widow, vamps Ranny. Stivner, loving Clare, resents Ranny's interest. Loyal to her marriage vows up to now, Joan feels Ranny's flirting releases her. But he, tiring of Clare is ready to spring his trap.

CHAPTER X.—Continued.

The smoking room of the Speedwell, though essentially masculine in tone, was no less beautiful than any other part of that most magnificent of yachts.

In an open fireplace at one end of the room real logs burned. The mantel was wrought out of the oak rib of antique sailing ship, and upon it rested a meticulously pieced model, hand carved by Captain Marty, of the clipper his father used to command in the China trade during Maine's maritime heyday.

The walls of the room were richly panelled in walnut, with tiny sconce lamps in the form of ship's lanterns set on each pilaster. The ceiling was deeply beamed, also in walnut. The whole interior was highly polished to a mirror-like finish that reflected the dancing log flames through the miniature fog diffused from the cigars of the smokers, who were half buried in the comfortable furniture, which was sumptuously upholstered in warm-toned leather.

Out stepped Mrs. Clare Clemoneau.

By and large it was an ideal place to lounge, in fair weather as well as foul.

Ranny and Clay, however, were not in the mood for lounging. They had work to do—grim work.

As soon as they could do so without attracting undue attention they slipped out of the smoking room.

The Speedwell was so arranged that most of the living rooms and the owner's apartment were one deck below the bridge superstructure—half a deck down, to be exact, from the lounge and main promenade—while the guest staterooms ranged along the forward three-quarter of the deck below. Aft of these were the crew quarters, and in the hold, still lower, were the engine room, the bunkers and the other necessary though unlovely portions of a great sea-going private yacht.

Ranny and Clay were thus able to make their way down to the Forbes' suite without venturing upon the deck, where they might have encountered Abner and Joan. They did not want to see that precious cad and his misguided consort—just yet!

After assuring themselves that Joan and Abner were not in the suite, nor spooning upon the private sundeck, Clay locked the sitting room door to the passageway while Ranny hastily fetched from his cabin a small package.

This the plotters untied, their expressions an odd mixture of crusading severity and skylarking. Opened, it revealed a bicycle bell attached to a length of electric lamp cord, some miscellaneous non-insulated wires and springs and a small biscuit box.

Like field generals planning a battle, Clay and Ranny surveyed the suite. Specifically, it consisted of a sitting room, off which opened two separate staterooms and the private sundeck. These, added to the main door opening to the corridor and the two doors opening into closets, made six apertures in the wall space besides the double window. The wall scheme, however, was so cunningly devised that there seemed to be only three doors—those to the closets and the hall. The other openings were really inset panels, which slid miraculously open at the lightest touch and fitted prettily into the deporative aspect of the room.

This, indeed, was charming, with furniture of beechwood, Louis XVI. in atmosphere, walls in putty grey and the curtains and upholstery of rose-crimson silk. The private staterooms were alike in character, but different in tone, Ranny's in tan and rose English chintz, Joan's with apricot and sea-green taffeta drapes. In each cabin was a single berth, high set over a bank of drawers, and a built-in dresser and mirror, and each had a compact though luxurious bathroom.

"Now," decided Ranny, "the two closets are the key. With escape cut off to either the sundeck or through the corridor, he'll have to hide. He won't dare go into Joan's room nor into mine. There are no beds to crawl under! He'll have to duck into one of the closets. We can't wire both, so I'll lock one and take the key. That'll limit him to the one we shall trap."

Then, while Clay stood guard at the corridor door to listen for footsteps, Ranny worked at top speed to set the "rat trap," as he called it more grimly than facetiously. The bicycle bell and its improvised attachments, prepared before he left home, he concealed on a high shelf, fastening it by a small adjustable spring to the door and running the wire out under the carpet to a baseboard plug.

At length he finished and explained with a grin to Clay, who had watched the proceedings with interest.

"I'll leave the door a bit ajar. When Abner dodges into the closet his instinct will be to close the door after him, of course. Then—the bell will ring incessantly! Fini l'amour!"

The two arch plotters stood in the center of the room, relishing the prospect.

"Now," said Clay, "there's only one thing we haven't thought of."

"What's that?"

"Well, after all, this is Stivner's yacht. He's entitled to know what we're up to, for he could thwart our plan to punish Abner if he's so minded. Besides, taking him into your confidence will serve to ingratiate you into his friendship and make up what you've lost in his estimation by your damphoolery with that blonde."

Ranny agreed, and presently Stivner was seated in the Forbes' suite listening with amazement to the unvarnished tale. It was a pathetic confession, coming clean-breasted from a two-fisted fighting man. In Ranny's straightforward manliness Stivner, who knew how hard the telling was, found much to renew his admiration. There remained but one suspicion:

"For an abused husband, you've been rather—er-r, flirtatious!" Ranny's frankness never faltered. "Only as a means to an end. Mrs. Clemoneau means nothing to me, I swear!"

"Forbes, I believe in you and I'm going to help you. Any man who steals another's wife—or woman—deserves to be punished. What's your plan for punishing Gratman?"

After Ranny explained, Stivner found himself sharing the conspirators' glee. "That's rich! Only—we'll have to take Captain Marty into the scheme because it invades his sphere of authority."

Stivner summoned the captain.

The matter was reviewed for the doughty seadog's benefit. Then Ranny explained:

"As a fitting humiliation, I propose to isolate Gratman in a dory to be towed behind the yacht until we get back to port on Monday, shutting him off meanwhile like the moral leper he is from the other guests and from all food except these crackers!"

"You needn't have brought that box of crackers," Captain Marty rumbled. "We've plenty of hardtack!"

"Yes, but not this special kind!"

"What's that?"

"DOG BISCUITS!"

CHAPTER XI.

The nocturnal quietude of the sleeping yacht, an hour after midnight, was rudely disturbed by a man's angry yells and the persistent ringing of a bell.

Aroused guests, scantily clad, crowded after Stivner to the Forbes' suite. There they found a strange tableau:

Clay and the captain framed in the sundeck door; Joan, white faced and trembling, in the center of the room staring affrightedly at the closed closet, within which a bell clanged madly, Ranny, the perfect picture of a cheated husband, glowering over her.

"What does this mean?" demanded Stivner as per his rehearsed part.

"It means that a home wrecker has been caught!" thundered Ranny. He strode dramatically to the closet. "Come out, you—you—"

He threw open the closet door.

Out there stepped a smiling, lisping vision of blonde delectability in shell pink pajamas—Mrs. Clare Clemoneau!

SHORT STORY

FATE IN THE WAY
By Duford Jenne.

The lights of Marion's car shooting up the road picked up the glint of metal at the distant curve, and the next moment she saw that she was approaching what was evidently a wrecked car. Coming nearer, she pulled her heavy roadster to a stop. Then her headlights brought into sharp relief the figure of a man crumbled just beyond the twisted frame.

She slipped from her car and to hi side. He was unconscious, and the blood-stains on his face proved that he had reason to be. Climbing down to the brook that followed the road, she brought cold water and bathed his face. The even, rather handsome face gave no sign of life, and she began to be frightened; then he moaned slightly, turned, and opened his eyes.

"Oh, I remember—the world turned over twice," he muttered.

"This is a bad curve, and the road is icy this time of year," she said. "How do you feel now?" she asked, hopefully.

"I—" She felt him relax again into unconsciousness.

"There's just one thing to do," she thought to herself; "that is to take him back home—and that's the last place where I want to go!"

Between them and the little wayside railroad station to which she had been speeding there were twenty miles of country, and at the station there would be no possibility of medical aid, while her father was a physician spending the precious end of his vacation at his country home.

She revived the unconscious man, and, using her sturdy self as a crutch, she managed to get him to her car and into it.

"I am sorry—to make you so much trouble," he said faintly.

"Never you mind," she said gently, wondering just what he would think if he knew that he had interrupted an elopement, that even now her lover was waiting at the wayside station for her, that the western express would soon be due——

"Why, he's slipped away again," she thought to herself, glancing at him, and, slipping an arm around him and under his head she sent the car humming homeward.

The house was as dark as when she had left. She blew her horn, smiling a bit as she realized the dramatic quality of the moment. The door opened as the house because a light, and her father came out.

"What? You? Why—what does this mean? And who—an injured man? What does this mean, Marion?" he ejaculated.

"Explanations later, Dad," she said. "Right, Mischief." He started to lift the hurt man from the car. "Great Scott! It's Norman Bradley—my old friend Bradley's son. He had written that he might be out to see us!"

She aided her father, whose swift skill soon made their patient comfortable; and as she glanced at him, she made up her mind that she might have done worse than rescue him. But her thoughts were with the lover who had waited her coming in vain.

The next day brought her two unhappy times. In the morning she was called to the telephone, and over the 'phone came her lover's voice, bitter with accusation.

"But, Beals, I couldn't do otherwise," she urged.

His swift, prolonged reply left her cheeks flushed and her will on fire. As she hung up the receiver, her father came near.

"Marion, is that scamp calling you?" he demanded. "And it is perfectly plain that you were planning to join him last night. Now——"

"Dad, let's not argue it! I was. I have tried—tried to forget him, but I love him," she added, weary and unhappy.

He looked at her in silence, then said. "Remember—I forbid you to marry him. You are all that is left that is dear to me," he said simply as she fled.

It was several days later that Norman, walking with her through the autumn-tinted grounds, said suddenly, "Marion, you and your father forgot I was lying in the library when you had your brief conversation about your—e—delayed elopement. It was over before I could warn you I was there. I am really sorry—if you love this chap—that I was fate in the way, I would offer to help you, but I want you myself."

She tingled to the tips of her fingers as his gray, handsome eyes with the tender light in them, so different from the shifting, restless light in Beals' eyes, bent to hers.

"Oh, you do!" she replied "But suppose I love another—and suppose I have made up my mind to join him just as soon as you depart, and father and I can have the scandal to ourselves!"

He stopped suddenly, and pity rose in her heart as she saw his face pale. "Marion, if you love him so much, I will help you join him, but you don't know—that moment when I looked up, saw your face over mine, heard your voice—was the beginning." He said no more, his face gray with pain.

She slipped her hand under his arm, and said gently. "Is it as bad as that? Then, let me tell you a secret; over the 'phone that morning Beals was so bitter, angry and harsh that something in me died then and there—what I know now was some sort of girlish fascination he had for me. And perhaps—perhaps you can take me away with you if you try hard, for—for when I held your head in my—No! not here—yet—but—one of these days!"

Uncle Wiggily

To-day's Bedtime Story.

By Howard R. Garis

UNCLE WIGGILY'S RED CAKES

"Are you going to do anything special today, my dear?" asked Mrs. Longears of her rabbit gentleman husband one morning as he was about to hop away from the hollow stump bungalow.

"Nothing special," he answered. "I am going to look for an adventure, but I shall be pleased to have you come along and perhaps we may find two adventures—one for each of us."

"Oh, no! I didn't mean that!" said Mrs. Longears with a laugh. "But I wish you would stop at the bakery on your way home and bring some white cakes."

"White cakes?" asked Uncle Wiggily. "For New Years," went on his wife. "That's Saturday, you know. On New Year's Day we shall have many callers who will wish us happiness for the year that is just beginning. I want to give them some little treat, and I think white cakes would be nice."

"So do I," said Uncle Wiggily. "I'll bring some."

Whistling a jolly tune, and wondering what sort of adventure he would have, the bunny gentleman hopped over the fields and through the woods, looking for adventures.

Now if he had only known it an adventure, just then, was getting ready to come to him. It was an adventure in the shape of the sly Weasel, who, though not a very large animal, can often catch a rabbit much bigger than himself.

"There goes Uncle Wiggily," said the Weasel in a whisper, as, from a little hill, he saw the bunny gentleman hopping along. "I'll get him!" said the Weasel.

Well might the Weasel say that, for he noticed that Uncle Wiggily was turning into a path that would bring the rabbit right past the place where the sly chap was hiding.

"When he gets here I'll jump out, grab him by the throat and then I'll have him," said the Weasel, whose name was Pop Goes. You have often heard him sung about, I dare say, like this:

"The Monkey chased the Cobbler's wife, all around the steeple. That's the way the money goes—Pop Goes the Weasel!"

Of course steeple and Weasel don't make a good rhyme, but I didn't make up the song so you can't blame me. No, I don't know why the Monkey chased the Cobbler's wife, either.

Well, anyhow, Uncle Wiggily was coming along the path that would bring him right past where Pop Goes the Weasel, was hiding, when, all of a sudden, the bunny thought of what his wife had asked him to get.

"White cakes!" he exclaimed. "Here's the bakery. I'll get them."

But when he asked the bakery cat about white cakes, the bakery cat said:

"Red cakes I can give you, or blue cakes, but I am all out of white cakes. Better try the red, they're just as good."

"I will," said Uncle Wiggily, so he bought a bag of bright red cakes, which the baker cat put in the rabbit gentleman's pocket.

"If your paws get cold," mewed the bakery cat with a smile, "just put your paws in the pocket where the red cakes are and you'll get warm."

"How come?" asked Uncle Wiggily.

"The cakes are red, like fire," said the bakery cat.

"Ha! Ha!" laughed Uncle Wiggily, little thinking how soon those red cakes were to do him a favor. Along the bunny hopped until, all of a sudden, he came to the place where the Weasel was hiding. Out jumped Pop Goes, stretching his long, thin neck and aiming for Uncle Wiggily's throat.

"What do you want?" gasped the rabbit gentleman.

"You'll soon find out," snarled the Weasel.

Just then he was so close to Mr. Longears, the bad chap was, that he could look into the pocket that held the red cakes. Bright and glowing red they were, like the embers of the fireplace. The Weasel looked at them, stopped short and cried:

"A trick! A trick. You have a lot of red hot coals in your pocket! A trick! You are going to try to burn me! But you shan't! I'm going to run away!"

"Run away as fast as you like!" cried Uncle Wiggily. "I won't stop you!" And the bad chap ran, muttering to himself:

"It's mighty lucky I saw those red hot coals in Uncle Wiggily's coat pocket before I jumped on him! I might have burned myself severely! I wonder how he knew I was coming and had the coals ready for me? I wonder?" And later, when the Fox told the Weasel he had run away from red cakes, oh, that bad chap was so angry as never was! But if the feather duster will let the huckleberry pie sleep in the rag doll's bed I'll tell you about Uncle Wiggily's blue cakes.

SECOND OF SERIES OF CHURCH NIGHTS

Successful Entertainment Given at Millbrook United Church.

MILLBROOK, Jan. 24.—The second in the series of "Church Nights," of which the initial one was held in the United Church last week, was successfully carried out on Wednesday evening, under the direction of the west centre group.

Councillor P. Stinson was chairman, the section represented included Centre street, part of Anne street, and King street west from the Dominion corner, to Mr. James McMillan's residence, taking in the street facing the church. Messrs. W. E. Ball, H. W. Johnston, and the pastor welcomed the people as they arrived, and the attendance was most gratifying, especially as the state of the roads, following the all day rain, prevented many from the country from being present. Piano selections by Ernest and Mary Burnham were played while the people were gathering, and after the words of welcome by the chairman, the programme included:

Cornet Solo, by Ernest Burnham, Miss Ella Elson, accompanist;

Solo, "Moon Bird," by Mrs. G. W. Sayles, Miss S. Hetherington, accompanist;

Encore, "Sun Bird,"

Reading, "Minding Our Own Affairs," by Mr. A. A. Birchard;

Solo, "Ireland, I Love Thee," by Mr. H. W. Johnston. Mrs. Johnston, accompanist.

To break up any formality a "clothes pin" contest was interjected at this point, everyone taking part and heartily enjoying the fun; the side captained by Mr. Howard had its pins passed and in the bag first; homemade candy and apples were passed, and the social side of the gathering, which is an important feature of the "Church Night" as planned by the official board, was pleasantly developed.

A talk by the pastor on "Meeting the Problem in the Rural Church by a True, Christian Fellowship," was followed by a duet, "There's a Star in the Cloud," by Mr. and Mrs. H. W. Johnston. The gathering was informally dismissed.

The Fallis Line group is responsible for the "Church Night" on Wednesday evening next week, and the east end section of the village for the following Wednesday. It is aimed to have a section in the country alternate with one in the village until the whole eight, into which the families connected with the church have been divided, have each contributed one evening's entertainment, emphasizing especially the social side of the gatherings, during the winter.

Mrs. Walter Gillott, who has been remaining with her sister-in-law, Dr. E. Gillott for some months past, left on Saturday for a visit with her son, Mr. Wilford Gillott, Oshawa. Miss E. Trambeth, of Port Britain, is staying with Dr. Eva Gillott during Mrs. Gillott's absence.

Miss M. E. Needham is visiting friends in Toronto, going to the city on Friday.

The name of Emery Smith, of Cavan, is listed seventh among the ten boys who were winners of the George Urban, Jr., prize at the Canadian National Exhibition last fall; the list has just been published, and the awards announced. Mr. Urban is a resident of Buffalo, and because of a keen personal interest in the C.N.E., donated a special prize of $100 for the encouragement of the boys' competition in judging live stock, grain, and roots, under the Department of Agriculture. Each of the ten standing highest received $10, providing he had not previously attended the C.N.E. Of 429 boys competing it was found that 48 had never previously attended the Exhibition, and of these 48, ten from all over the province were winners of the Urban Special; R. S. Duncan, Director of the Ontario Agricultural Representatives' Branch, recently mailing the $10.00 bill to the successful contestants.

THEATRE
AT THE REGENT

LURE OF GAMBLING IS THEME OF STRONG PLAY, "THE WHEEL," TAKEN FROM STAGE TRIUMPH.

Fox Picture is Based on Golden Success With Margaret Livingstone, Claire Adams, Harrison Ford and Mahlon Hamilton in Strong Cast.

Based on John Golden's outstanding stage success, "The Wheel," by Winchell Smith, the William Fox picture of the same name, which opens to-day at the Regent Theatre, forms one of the most absorbing photoplays ever produced.

The motion picture version is a veritable whirlwind of dynamic action and perplexing dramatic incidents from the opening flash until the final adjustment of its amazing problems.

Cast in the principal roles are players widely known for their cinema technique. Harrison Ford, Claire Adams, Mahlon Hamilton and Margaret Livingston form the front rank of the brilliant array of celebrities which includes Clara Horton, David Torrence, Georgie Harris and a host of others.

"The Wheel" deals with a most widely discussed theme—gambling and its attendant evils. The ways of the professional gambler are vividly exposed. Through the heart of the surging action trickles a sweet love story which ultimately survives and comes to a smooth denouement when Cupid sends the death dart to the Goddess of Chance.

Victor Schertzinger, maker of many interesting and engrossing film plays, directed "The Wheel." The celebrated director has visited many of the gambling temples of the globe. He has added to the truly extraordinary story prepared by Edfrid Bingham the first-hand knowledge of the world famous gambling resorts—thereby imbuing the scenes of the photoplay with an undercurrent of realism of a genuine thrilling nature. He has been aided in this by the clever titles written by Montague Glass, author of the Potash and Perlmutter stories.

Mrs. Fred Talling gave an excellent paper on missions, which gave the members many new thoughts and advice in aiding the society.

Preliminary plans were made for Easter programme, and will be considered more largely at the next meeting.

The meeting then closed with singing hymn 328, followed by the benediction by Mrs. (Rev.) Lovelace.

The Fenella ladies then served a dainty lunch and a social half-hour followed.

Mr. E. Brisbin gave many of the ladies from Roseneath a treat by taking a sleigh-load to the W.M.S. at Fenella, also Rev. J. N. Lovelace kindly offered the use of his car and took several ladies, so that the W.M.S. was well represented from this branch.

Forbes is out, but Jones can handle the call

WHEN Robinson calls the Henderson Co. by Long Distance he always asks for Mr. Forbes. That makes it a Person-to-Person call. Forbes is often out. Sometimes it takes quite a while before the operator can get him on the wire.

There are three other employees in the Henderson office, thoroughly posted on the details of the business, who could give Robinson the information he wants. One of them could always be reached by a Station-to-Station call, costing about twenty per cent less than a Person-to-Person call.

It is worth considering, before you make a Long Distance call, if Station-to-Station service will not give you what you want.

SAINT and SINNER

By ANNE AUSTIN

It was on Saturday, November 13, that Madame Denise put the finishing touches on the last frock in Cherry's truly marvelous wardrobe, took one last prideful look at the most enchanting trousseau she had ever designed, once more adjusted the deep, mechanical waves of her hennaed hair before the old pier glass, gathered up the paraphernalia of her trade—or her art, as she called it—and with dim, shabby little old Mrs. Hogan following meekly, took her departure—and a check for fifteen hundred dollars, signed by Ralph Cluny, Cherry's aged fiance.

"She stayed two weeks longer than we had bargained for," Cherry explained to Faith. "The original price was a thousand, but Ralph said I was to keep her just as long as I liked, and really, darling, you've got to admit that I've accumulated the most marvelous trousseau any girl ever had."

While Faith, tired from her strenuous day of Saturday baking and cleaning, was setting the table for supper, she heard Cherry's high, happy voice at the telephone.

"Absolutely gorgeous. I'm dying for you to see everything. Selma's coming over, Fran, and bring her bridesmaid dress, and I want you to come and bring yours. Faith's is ready, too—yeah, a perfect dream! I almost got jealous the way Madame Denise simply slaved over it, as if Faith's dress was more important than my wedding dress. No, don't let Bill come. This is going to be a chicken party. Maybe, we'll all dress up in some of my delirious new pajamas. Oh, my dear! You'll be surprised!—Oh, naughty! He won't either! He's too old!—He is sweet, isn't he? All right, eight o'clock, sure. Bye!"

She waltzed into the dining room and flung her arms about Faith, in an ecstasy of vanity and anticipation. "We'll all dress up, and give Dad and Muggy and Joy and Junior the kick of their lives! Oh, Faith! I'm sinfully prond of my trousseau! Don't you think we ought to have a policeman to guard the house nights? Ralph's really afraid someone will try to steal it, since that long write-up in the paper, with sketches and prices hinted at and everything."

Faith only smiled, and went on to the kitchen, closely followed by the excited glowing girl.

Junior catapulted himself violently through the kitchen door, shedding a sheepskin coat as he did so.

"Hello," he grinned. "Oh, boy! Eats! Say, Faith, you said I could bring Fay Allen over some time, and I've asked her for this evening. You said at breakfast you'd be home this evening. Be nice to her, sis—"

Cherry beat with small, clenched fists on his broad chest. "Just when I've got Frances Warren and Selma Pruitt coming over to see my trousseau and try on their bridesmaid dresses. You can just simply phone her and tell her it's not convenient today, that's all, Long Lane! Fay Allen!"

"Long" thrust his sleek dark head down and forward so that his face almost touched hers. Round spots of color glowed on the tan of his high cheek bones. "Not on your life!" he snarled at her. "You ain't the only chicken on the roost, even if you are makin' a fool o' yourself, marrying that old monkey-gland! Fay's comin,' see, and you can like it or lump it, I don't care! And you're goin' to be decent to her, see, or I'll—I'll tell where I saw you last night. Get me? I guess you do, all right, all right!"

"Squealer!" Cherry flung over her shoulder as she ran into the dining room. "Oh, dad! Your best girl, Selma Pruitt, is coming over tonight! Shave off your funny old whiskers and dress up, won't you, honey? I'm going to show Frances and Selma my trousseau, and all of us are going to put on the dresses we're going to wear in the wedding. Fay Allen is coming over tonight, too. Won't that be nice?"

"When do we put the feed bags on, Faith?" "Long" drew a chair scrapingly to the table and began to tap out a jazz tune with his fork and plate. "Hurray! Weinnies and sauerkraut! Attagirl! 'At's the kangaroo's camisole!'"

"Well," Mr. Lane, going to the table, "ain't your Ma comin' to supper?"

"She'll be in in a minute," Faith said. "What are you looking so pleased about, Dad? You look like the cat that swallowed the canary."

"New job o' work," Mr. Lane acknowledged with a gruffness that did not hide his pleasure. "Oh, hello, Martha. Feelin' better today, honey?"

"I been nearly dead with a sick headache all day," Mrs. Lane advanced slowly into the room, her shadowed eyes mournful under a camphor-soaked bandage that encircled her brow. "What's all that about a new job? Got a barn to build, I guess," she concluded bitterly.

"Barn, your aunt!" Jim Lane surprised them all by chuckling with more wholehearted pleasure than he had shown since the announcement of Cherry's engagement. "Lincoln Pruitt's give me the contract to build a big ten-car garage for him, back of his wholesale grocery. Concrete floor, two stories, upper floor for mechanics, and an elevator to take cars up for overhaulin.' Guess you might call a twenty thousand dollar garage a barn."

During the rejoicing that followed, no one heard Faith's softly uttered, "Dear George!"

I will never be without it in the house again."

FOOD AND HEALTH.

FOOD AND PRODUCTION

When the advocates of machinery line up to discuss modern methods with those who decry mechanical devices, we are apt to hear at least some mention of the word, "production." Machinery we are told makes it possible to increase products.

There is a parallel here to be drawn between the manufacturing plant and the health manufacturing plant, i.e., the human body. Certainly the worker in the manufacturing plant must think of production. Oftentimes his wages depend on the extent of his contribution to the production of the plant as a whole. The health manufacturing plant, if we may push the figure, is in one sense just as dependent on increased production as is the factory.

The factory produces ships, or shoes or sealing wax; the body produces, in first, vigorous physical force, then, if all goes well, the spiritual force that is so largely fostered by the physical.

So, if we seek a new way of expressing truths about our dependence on diet, why not think of our food as something which directly helps us increase our production in our job of living.

Every one of us has the wish not only to do his literal, so-called bread and butter job well, but also his larger job of living as efficiently as he can. It is not natural for a human being to dwell continuously on the heights. It is only occasionally that we catch glimpses of that which is afar off. But we are daily conscious of the need for study and for the acquisition of a realizing sense of values. To correct all of these somewhat abstract ideas with our daily three meals is to invest these three meals with true values. It is to make it douby leasy for us to bake and brew and eat sensibly.

Coming down a little nearer to earth, food helps the body to produce muscular power and nervous energy. Both the muscular power and the nervous energy are very useful indeed in helping us get through the grind of the daily routine. So we need not think of the production of our bodily factories as exclusively spiritual. We may bring the idea down to the ground that underlies the most prosaic task with which we are confronted. That there is a keen and worth-while joy in the accomplishment of even a small task, few will deny. Food, therefore, may be said to help human production all along the line.

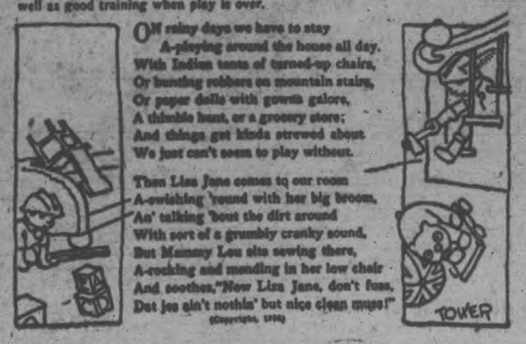
Clean Muss

By SHIRLEY RODMAN WILLIAMS

THERE is no surer way to curb play for the children than for a grown-up to fuss about the mess. It dulls the keen edge of their pleasure, but more than that, the children become so conscious of always incurring displeasure that their creative instincts and free run of imagination are hampered in development. Later they learn to take their pleasure away from the scenes of scolding and so break important contacts with the home. Personally, I prefer a little commotion and mess to not knowing where and what the children are playing. To be healthy and normal, children must run and shout and play, and grown-ups who find themselves irritated might better remove themselves from the scenes of play than shadow the fun. So let the children play, and teach them to "straighten up" afterward, then you will have given them their legitimate right in the home as well as good training when play is over.



On rainy days we have to stay
A-playing around the house all day.
With Indian tents of turned-up chairs,
Or hunting robbers on mountain stairs,
Or paper dolls with gowns galore,
A thimble hunt, or a grocery store;
And things get kinda strewed about
We just can't seem to play without.

Then Lize Jane comes to our room
A-switching 'round with her big broom,
An' talking 'bout the dirt around
With sort of a grumbly cranky sound,
But Mammy Lou sits sewing there,
A-rocking and mending in her low chair
And soothes, "Now Lize Jane, don't fuss.
Dat jes ain't nothin' but nice clean muss!"

DRESS

By MARY MARSHALL

This new evening bandeau of strass takes the form of a tiara. It is worn well down on the forehead over the bobbed hair or to hide the ends of bobbed hair that are growing.

The Pope recently proved himself to be a clever selector of wedding presents. When his niece, Maria Ratti, was married to Persichetti Ugolini, he presented the bridegroom with four bookcases each containing twenty-five books, and to the young woman he gave beside the wedding gown, a diamond tiara. Seldom has a pope set a fashion, but the fashion for giving books for wedding presents is one that might wisely be copied—and already there has been noticed a decided revival of interest in tiaras of diamonds and less precious stones.

Perhaps after all it wasn't the Pope who started the revival of tiaras, Queen Marie of Roumania may have had more to do with it. On many occasions in this country her majesty wore this queenly ornament and showed that it could be worn to very good advantage over bobbed hair. It is no longer worn high on the head as tiaras used to be but low on the forehead after the manner of a bandeau. At her wedding the Pope's niece also wore her bandeau in this position.

Jewelers in this country have already had many demands for tiaras—usually of a less expensive sort—and they feel that the time is ripe for a revival of interest in these ornaments. Tiaras and other similar head decorations have been worn by well-dressed women this winter at the opera and other formal evening occasions. Usually they are not made of diamonds—not even of rhinestones—but of a sort of strass that is called "French brilliants."

There are many varieties of these brilliant evening head decorations—slender strands of brilliants to encircle the head and coronets and tiaras. So far from being unsuited to the bobbed head, these queenly ornaments are most suitable and solve the problem of keeping short locks or growing locks under perfect control.

HOROSCOPE

The Stars Incline, but do not Compel.

TUESDAY, JANUARY 25, 1927.

According to astrology, benefic aspects dominate this day, which should be favorable for all sorts of business transactions.

There is a sign of promise for new discoveries of oil and other fuel deposits, while chemistry will find new forms in which to use them.

Commerce continues under a direction of the stars which indicates amazing development for the United States.

Bankers and financiers will benefit from world conditions which are to be startling in their far-reaching significance, the seers prophesy.

Under this rule judges and lawyers should find their profession exceedingly lucrative, for there will be an unusual amount of litigation this year.

New fashions are to set certain factories going in the spring, when there will be large profits in certain lines of wearing apparel, it is forecast.

Business enterprise is to reach amazing development not hitherto dreamed of even by Americans, if the stars are rightly read.

This is not an auspicious day for entering into any sort of business contract and leases may prove exceedingly unlucky.

Writers are to have numerous temptations to publish foolish tales and the sway appears to presage extraordinary amounts of trash in the coming year.

Many radical changes in the production of motion pictures again are prognosticated and there will be international problems as a result of American enterprise.

Children are to become objects of more and more scientific attention, and they are to be treated as important assets of the nation, the seers prophesy.

In the future there will be no handicaps to illegitimate children, for it will be recognized that all have equal rights, astrologers foretell.

Persons whose birthdate it is have a happy outlook for the year. Success will attend efforts to improve conditions.

Children born on this day probably will be unusually charming in nature, and inclined to cultivation of speech and manners. They should find it easy to gain all that they desire in life.

Draped on the side of the waist and finished in a large graceful bow, an evening gown of gold lamb is embroidered with red roses. A dash of deep Liberty blue hangs in soft folds from the bow. The model is from Louis Mathieu, Paris.

For two piece sport costumes, there are a great many knitted jumpers of two shades, white and geranium for instance, Flemish blue and white or two tones of gray, ranging from pearl grey and slate.

How to Play BRIDGE

ARTICLE No. 12

A bid that is sound in itself, that is, that may contain sufficient strength to make the number of tricks in the suit indicated, may be very unsound in other respects. It may be of such a character as to deceive partner or to enable the opponents to block further bidding by making a shut-out bid. For that reason, before you make a bid, try to figure out what conclusion your partner will draw from it, and then what action he or your opponents may take. If your bid conveys the information to your partner that it should and leaves you in a position to go ahead with the bidding, irrespective of the opponents' bidding, your bid is sound, but not otherwise. Too many players make a bid without a thought of its influence on their partner or of what they will or should do if their opponents overbid. Try to think of your first bid as the beginning of the story and make it only when you are sure you know what to do later. All sound bidding should be part of a harmonious whole, the first link of a chain of bids, and not a disconnected effort.

The following hands are illustrative of the point just emphasized: "Think of what your partner or opponents may do, before making a bid. If you are prepared to meet any action they may take, your bid is sound; otherwise, not. Be sure that the bid you decide upon is one that you are prepared to back up later.

Problem No. 15

Hearts — 6
Clubs — 9, 5, 3, 2	Y
Diamonds — A, K, 4	A	B
Spades — K, Q, J, 7, 5	Z

No score, first game. Z dealt and bid one spade. What should A bid?

Answer to Problem No. 14

	Hearts — A, 10 Clubs — A, Q, 8, 7 Diamonds — none Spades — none
Hearts — none Clubs — none Diamonds — A, Q, J, 10, 9, 8 Spades — none	Y A B Z	Hearts — K, 9 Clubs — J, 10, 9, 5 Diamonds — none Spades — none
	Hearts — Q, J, 3 Clubs — K, 3 Diamonds — none Spades — 5

Spades are trumps and Z is in the lead. How can he so play the hand that Y-Z can win all of the tricks against any defense? This little problem is a fine example of forcing discards. B is forced to discard either the winning heart or one of his clubs. Z should lead the queen of hearts and win the trick with the ace in Y's hand. He should now lead the seven of clubs from Y's hand, winning the trick with the king in his own hand. He should now lead the five of spades from his hand and discard the ten of hearts from Y's hand. B is now forced to discard. If he discards the king of hearts, Z's hearts are good. If he discards a club, Y's clubs are good. In either event, Y-Z will win all the tricks.

Problem No. 16

Hearts — Q, 4, 3
Clubs — K, 3	Y
Diamonds — 10, 8, 7, 5, 4	A	B
Spades — A, J, 5	Z

Score, Y-Z, 18; A-B, 0, rubber game. Z dealt and bid one diamond. A doubled and Y bid two diamonds. What should B bid? An analysis of these hands will be given in the next article.

The hand in the preceding article illustrating the value of looking ahead before making a bid, is as follows:

Answer to Problem No. 13

Hearts — Q, 6
Clubs — K, 4, 3
Diamonds — A, K, 10, 7, 2
Spades — K, Q, 4

Y
A	D
Z

No score, rubber game. Z dealt, bid one no-trump and A passed. What should Y bid and why? Y should look ahead and figure that the only possible bid B can make that would hurt the no-trump bid is one of two hearts. If that is the case, shouldn't he endeavor to prevent that bid, if possible? The way to do this is by a bid of two no-trump. If B should then bid three hearts, Y should double. The bid of two no-trump does prevent a heart bid and enables Y-Z to make game and rubber. If Y passes, B will bid two hearts and game is no longer possible as A-B have six card tricks, tied. This is an excellent example of figuring out what your opponents may do and then making a bid that will block them. Such bidding is sound, not only because the hand justifies the bid but because it also looks ahead and foresees what should be done from then on.

SENATORS TAKE ONE GOAL LEAD VER WORLD CHAMPION MAROONS

Youthful Player For Ottawa Sinks Tally For Complete Washout.

HEAVY PENALTIES.

Game Sets New Record as a Rough and Tumble Affair.

OTTAWA, Ont., Jan. 24 (Canadian Press) — The "goose hangs high" in the Capital for "King" Frank Clancy, debonnair youth of twenty summers whose name has many times sounded throughout hockey's hall of fame. That name now resounds louder than ever for it was the "King" who rifled a shot into the cage of the world champion Montreal Maroons and brought a one goal to nothing victory to Ottawa's Senators in a National Hockey League tussle here Saturday night which for its rough and tumble tactics, probably set a record for all time As is usual when the titleholders and the present league leaders clash play is bound to be strenuous but the latest exhibition surpassed all others in that fistic combat flared out twice and as a result the record total for one game of six match penalties were doled out.

Three men from each club were the defaulting ones and they now rest suspended for one game.

The "bad blood" between the players was apparent from the opening whistle and it was only midsession in the first period when Hec Kilrea, brawny Senator sub, opened fire on the head of Montreal's veteran defence man, Reg. Noble, and a battle of fists supplanted the hockey fray. Apparently culminating from a series of stiff body checks, Kilrea and his adversary exchanged many punches before the referees and a half dozen policemen succeeded in quelling the disturbance. Players poured onto the ice from the reserve benches and all of them with the exception of the goal tenders were in mid-ice swinging fists and hockey sticks. The only other serious outbreak at this stage saw Billy Phillips tumble Captain George Boucher of the Ottawas onto the ice and then flail him about the head with his hockey budgeon. The four above mentioned players were sent to the dressing rooms tagged with match fouls and the game continued between the four man teams.

It was twenty minutes before substitutes were allowed back to fill places of the defaulters but the abbreviated sides nevertheless furnished hockey that held the crowd in nerve wracking suspense.

The other match penalties were doled out to Frank Finnegan and the Maroon center star, Nels Stewart, for fist fighting in the last frame.

But despite the unsavory roughing as a hockey contest the game was far from marred. The season's largest house of some 7,000 fans who filled every seat in the auditorium were in an almost continual turmoil as the two evenly matched teams hammered away with everything they had. The opposing forward lines sent charge after charge down the ice but the heavy checking on both sides resulted in few goal shots being sent from the dangerous close in zone. And for fifty some minutes of the play the goalies refused to be tricked by the shots rifled at them from far out.

Just a few seconds short of twelve minutes had ticked off in the final period with the teams in a scoreless deadlock when Clancy captured the puck near the Senator citadel. He roared away in his usual style along the left boards, tumbled Maroon checkers to the ice in the rush, hurdled the sticks of others and from a few feet out, a shot that literally smoked flew between Clint Benedict's degs and the triumph was won. The visitors pressed hard in the closing minutes but their perpetual fire on the Ottawa cage was turned aside.

On the night's play the league leaders deserved the victory for after the opening period which was evenly fought, the locals were the more aggressive and kept the Maroon net in continual danger.

The line-up:

Montreal—Benedict, goal; Munroe Noble, defence; Stewart, Broadbent, wings; subs, Dinsmore, Dutton, Oatman, Carson, Phillips and Donnely.

Ottawa: Connell, goal; Clancy, Boucher, defence; Nighbor, centre; Denneny, H. Smith, wings; subs: Adams, Kilrea, Finnegan, Gorman, A. Smith and Halliday.

Summary:

First period: no score.

FRANCE LOSES TO SCOTLAND

Replacements in Rugby Line-up Not Strong Enough For Scots.

VETERANS OUSTED.

EDINBURGH, Jan. 24 (Canadian Press)—In spite of having completely re-cast their three-quarter line and ousted the veterans, Jaurreguay and Hesson, in addition to finding replacements for Baillette and Vellat on the left wing, France's international rugby fifteen received a much more severe handling from Scotland at Murray field Park here yesterday than they did on New Year's day at the Stade Colombes when Ireland defeated them. Scotland's count against the Gauls was 23 points to 6, a result which immediately sent the Calendonians into first place in the International standings.

A crowd of 35000 thronged the new grounds of the Scottish Union at Murrayfield, and witnessed a game that was fast and clever. In the first half the Scots swamped their French rivals in every department, but a tightening up of the French fifteen in the second period found a different complexion put on the game. The damage had been done in the opening half, however, and try as the might the French were unable to regain any of their lost ground. Weather conditions were poor, the sky being overcast, while the ground was hard in spite of its heavy protection of straw overnight.

France — Fullback, Piqualal (Tarbes); three-quarters, Ravillon, Graciet, Graule and Houlet; halfbacks, Du Manoir (Racing Club) and Bader (Primeveres); forwards, Cassayet (Nardonne), Douscurt (Alby), Piquiral (Lyon), Rinere (Quillan), Gonnet (Racing Club), Etcheberry (Vienne), Prevost (Albt) and Hutin (C.A.S.C.).

Scotland—D. Drysdale, (Heriot's F.P.'s); three-quarters, Ian Smith (Edin. University), G.P.S. McPherson (Edin. Academicals), J. C. Dykes and W. M. Simmers (both Glasgow Acads.); halves, H. Waddell and J. D. Nelson (both Glasgow Acads.); forwards, J. Allan (Melrose), J. M. Bannerman, I.C.H. Ireland (both Glasgow High School), B. S. Davies (Hawick), J. Graham (Kelso), J. R. Paterson (Birkenhead Park), J. W. Scott (Stewart's F.P.'s) and A. C. Gillies (Watsonians).

Scotland started on a scoring rampage within five minutes from the kick-off when Nelson broke away from a scrum and slinging the leather out to his club-mate, enabled Nelson to dash over for a try. Gillies took the kick and brought out the additional points. The Scots initiated many assaults on the French defences, but the Gauls tackled well and there were times when France became dangerous. Scotland's rearment, however, were equal to the menace and grassed their men keenly. The Calendonians pressed and the ball found touch near the French twenty-five. The line-out saw the leather heaved back to Ian Smith, and the 'Varsity flyer raced over for Scotland's second try. Once more Gillies added the major points with a magnificent kick.

Ten points ahead, Scotland devoted themselves to further increasing their lead and time and again their forwards swept down the field in great dribbling rushes. It was from one of these attacks that the Calendonians third try came when MacPherson picked up and dodged through the entire French three-quarter line, and passing the ball to Wardell gave the latter the opportunity to notch up his second try, this time under the cross-bar. Drysdale took the goal-kick and was successful.

Driven to desperation by these reverses the French gathered themselves for a great assault and drove downfield in a forward rush. It was successful in that Hutin romped over to break the spell, but Gonnet's attempt at goal went wide. Just before the interval the Scots wiped out this mark when Ian Smith again obtained possession and touched down, with Gillies once more securing full points.

The second half saw a vast improvement in the Frenchmen's play, and they steadied up quite a bit. The had more of the game than previously and their forwards gradually wore down the Scotsmen. France obtained command of the ball both in the scrubs and in the loose an several attempts were made by the visitors to score. Du Manoir took a drop at goal, but his kick went wide. Mis-handling on the part of France enabled Scotland to get a foothold in the visiting twenty-five and while there it was France's misfortune to be penalized. Drysdale took a penalty kick and secured three points with an excellent goal.

Following this the French forwards broke away and Piquiral rounded off the movement by scoring. Gonnet again failed to convert. Play continued keen until the last second of the whistle, but no further scoring took place and the game ended:

Scotland—5 goals (1 penalty) 23 points; France, 2 tries, 6 points.

The International standing now is:

	P.	W.	D.	L.	F.	A.	Pts.
Scotland	1	1	0	0	23	6	2
Ireland	1	1	0	0	8	3	2
England	1	1	0	0	11	9	2
Wales	1	0	0	1	0	11	0

BRISTLING BATTLES of BARE FIST DAYS

(MY LIFE STORY)

By Jack McAuliffe

Chapter Sixteen

(Copyright, 1927, NEA Service, Inc.)

After my fight with Gilmore, in which I was almost blinded and left behind in the room at the cry of "police," I escaped by bumping into the walls until I found the door and diving down a back stairway. That move saved me from the customary imprisonment of ten years for fighting.

Then I went back to Philadelphia and signed to defend my title against all comers for a week. The price I was paid was $250.

Can you imagine any world's champion today getting $250 to defend his title against all comers three nights a week?

Philly was a great fight town in those day, and it still is. My first opponent was Walter Campbell, a son-in-law of Arthur Chambers. He had a lot of English backing.

In the second round of our fight I cracked my left hand below the second joint of the thumb on his skull. The pain almost drove me crazy but I fought out the stipulated four rounds, and was given a draw.

There I was, a champion with a busted mitt and a contract that called for me to meet all comers for a week or no $250. I had to fight and keep on fighting—that was all there was to it.

Billy Frazier (whom I stopped once) challenged me for Wednesday night. Ryan, the promoter, was a regular guy and he said he might be able to fix the fight so Frazier would be easy on me. I refused and insisted I could lick him with one hand.

Dr. Stone, one of the greatest bone setters of all time, told me to freeze my hand in ice. I kept it in an ice pack for 48 hours and thought it was frozen off me. We kept the fracture a secret and when I stepped into the ring Frazier did not know a thing about it and I guess he never did find out.

I bluffed Frazier out of that fight. I feinted continually with my left and Frazier, remembering the terrific body punching he got in our first fight, was watching nothing but my right hand and he stepped back every time I used it. If he made the slightest attempt to do some leading of his own he could have won handily.

My third fight that week was with Jimmy Mitchell. I tried to bluff him, too, but it didn't work. He came at me hammer and tongs. I backed up into a corner, braced by foot against one of the posts (the rings had six posts then) and let him have a left hand with everything I had.

The most excruciating pain followed and then it seemed as if my whole arm was paralyzed. There I was helpless, practically out and one of the hardest punchers in the division, grinning and sailing in savagely.

* * *

Note.—In the next chapter McAuliffe tells how he weathered the fight and reveals the inside story of his famous fight with Jem Carney, the British champion, the highlight of this series.

GRADS FIGHT HARD TO DEFEAT T.C.C.

TORONTO, Jan. 24. — Varsity Grads maintained their undefeated record and scored their fifth consecutive victory when they defeated Toronto Canoe Club, 3 to 2, at Arena Gardens on Saturday. It was a wide open game, with little or no checking on either side, and the players were given every opportunity to display their skating and stick-handling ability. The result was one of the most enjoyable exhibitions of the winter pastime shown at the Gardens this winter. There were only four penalties, and they were bunched near the close of the second period, the teams playing four-men-a-side while the offenders were absent.

Surprise For Grads.

The Red Ringers gave the powerful Alumni team an interesting argument the entire sixty minutes, and had there been any "let down" on the part of the group leaders they would have met defeat. But Red Porter and Ross Taylor, with Dr. Joe Sullivan in goal, proved the stumbling block to the hopes of the Canoe Club. "Little Joe" never was better, some of his saves being sensational.

And Eddie Baker, in the Toronto cage, was just as good, stamping himself as one of the finest goaltenders in the O.HA. senior series. Like Porter and Taylor, the Canoe Club defence pair, Art Smith and Joe Wright, were close to unbeatable defensively, but were not quite so brilliant on the attack as their rivals. The Grads found Joe Wright a hard man to pass, though the big fellow played clean hockey.

RETAIN GRASP ON LEADERSHIP

Newcastle United Defeats Bolton Wanderers By One Goal Lead.

COLD WEATHER.

LONDON, Jan. 24 (Canadian Press Cable)—Newcastle United further strengthened their grasp on the leadership of the First Division of the English Soccer League Saturday when in a closely fought game they obtained the advantage over Bolton Wanderers by the narrow margin of one goal to nothing. The engagement was played under conditions that were totally unsuited to football, conditions that prevailed all over the country, frost and snow contributing to the general unpleasantness over the week-end.

At Birmingham where the local team were defeated three goals to one by the league champions, Huddersfield Town, a section of the crowd diverted themselves by snowballing one of the linesmen, and continued this strenuous "sport" until the referee intervened.

Two first string games were postponed, the encounter at West Bromwich with Cardiff City having to be called off due to bad weather, and one at Bury where Sunderland were to be the guests likewise going unplayed.

Burnley handled Aston Villa badly, when out of the nine goals scored, Burnley secured six. Three of the nine games were drawn, two visiting teams won, and four home teams obtained honors. Three games were played in the London district, with two of them resulting in draws. Sheffield United held Arsenal at Highbury and Blackburn Rovers duplicated this feat at White Hart Lane, but West Ham secured their full quota of points at Upton Park when they defeated Everton by the odd goal in three. Buchan's goal for Arsenal Saturday marked the 249th of his career.

Hodgson of Liverpool produced the hat-trick when he shot home all of Liverpool's counters against Derby County, who responded with a couple.

CAN THE PETES STOP RUSH OF FLYING GRADS?

Group Leaders Will Be Here For Game on Thursday Night.

SEASON'S FEATURE.

Clash Between Old Rivals Promises To Be Great Battle.

A capacity crowd is certain for Thursday night when the group leaders, the fast travelling Varsity Grads, will battle with the Petes at Brock Street Rink in a game that should be crammed full of exciting features.

The Varsity team is a smooth hockey machine, big, fast and clever, equipped with individual smartness and a remarkable degree of teamwork. They have a fine goaler in Joe Sullivan, one of the best defences in hockey in "Red" Porter and Ross Taylor and a regular forward line without a weak spot in Lorne Hudson, Hughey Plaxton and Dave Trottier.

Against this array of talent the Petes will have to be at the very top of their form to hold the exstudents. Eddie Wright's boys realize that fact and they are keyed up to play the game of their lives against the invaders, knowing a win will practically ensure them a place in the play-off series.

The referee question is likely to give the O.H.A. some trouble as the teams seem unable to agree on the question.

WOOD STARS FOR BLUES

Scores Three Goals For Victory Over Whites at Deloro.

CLOSE CONTEST.

MARMORA, Jan. 24.—Another good game of hockey was witnessed at the Deloro rink on Thursday evening between the Blues and the Whites. At the end of the first period the Whites led by a goal scored by Jerome.

In the second period, C. Wood, who was in fine form for the Blues, brought his team level with a clinking shot, and added a second not long after. In the final period, the same player beat Murray for the third time, giving the Blues the victory in a finely-contested game by a 3—1 score.

The teams:

Blues.—Goal, J. McCroden; right defence, F. Craig; left defence, V. Jack; centre, C. Wood; right wing, W. Kerr; left wing, W. Skinner; subs F. Gray and G. Mantle.

Whites:—Goal, R. Murray; right defence, N. Smith; left defence, N. Doyle; centre, A. Brown; right wing, C. Quinn; left wing, J. Jerome; subs. C. Clemens and C. Matthews.

Referee—H. A. McNally.

CANADIENS SCORE FOUR GOALS IN FIRST PERIOD FOR SHUTOUT

St. Pats Unable To Cope With Lead Scored in Opening.

GOALIES GOOD.

Irish Hold Slight Edge Over Frenchmen Throughout Second Period.

MONTREAL, Que., January 24. — C.P.—Canadiens swept through the Toronto St. Patricks with a whirlwind attack in the first period of their National hockey league sectional tussle at the Forum Saturday night, scored four goals in the opening 13 minutes of play and called it a night. St. Pats, tossed and buffetted by the fury of the storm which swept over them at the start of the journey, steadied down in the last two periods and battled the hurricane, but the Irishmen could make no headway and were forced to concede defeat, 4-0.

Canadiens opened up the game to take an early lead. Morenz tallied the first goal on a sizzling drive, but it was the threat of Herb Gardiner on his flank which caused the Irish defence to go wide and gave Morenz his chance. Less than four minutes later Cooper banged home the puck after a shot by Mantha From the face off Cooper scored again on a rebound from Hart's bombardment. Art Gagne concluded the scoring for the game when he sent in a vicious drive. Roach was busy shrieking for some one to watch Gardiner on the left side and Gagne's drive went through the Toronto goalie's pads.

The second session produced the big thrills of the game with both sides battling evenly and the two goals under constant fire, with the Irish having a slight edge. There was a tendency to fire works in the middle period. Corbeau drew the wrath of players and fans when he floundered on top of Hainsworth in a scramble around the Canadien goal. Hainsworth's arm was bruised in the melee, but he resumed his position in the net. Pete Lepine held the spotlight halfway through the period with dazzling play and then more trouble threatened when Brydge whacked Joliat's stick out of his hands and Joliat was ready to fight back. Brydge was benched and Corbeau spoke his mind to Dr. Eddie O'Leary, the referee chasing Corbeau. St. Pats finished the period two short but hung on.

The third period was even. Morenz Joliat and Cooper gave Roach close calls, while Borgeault, Corbett, Denheny and Carson had atrocious luck on shots at Hainsworth .Leduc was showing a willingness to fight with all and sundry and was chased for picking on Bill Carson. The game ended without the minor plays developing into any thing serious.

ARRESTERS BEAT UTILITIES TEAM

C.G.E. Department Boys on Long End of 8-3 Score.

The Lighting Arrester Department of the C. G. E. beat the Utilities on Friday night to the tune of 8-3. The game was fast and full of thrills.

East in goal for the winners was hard to beat, while Spargo for the losers handled twice as many stops, and also made some brilliant saves. On the forward line for the winners Creighton, Calladine and Jay played nice hockey as also did Griffin and Loban on the defence.

For the Firemen Worsencroft and Seabrook where good but could not penetrate the stout defence of the Arresters. As the linemen still think they can beat this team another game is promised for the future.

The line-up was as follows:

Lightning Arresters: Goal, George East; defence, H. Griffin and Calladine; right wings, C. Jay; left wing, Joe Loban; centre, R. Creighton.

NAVIN ACTING FOR JOHNSON

Famous Ban On Vacation For Health—May Not Return.

STILL PRESIDENT.

CHICAGO, Jan. 24 (Canadian Press).—Frank Navin, Detroit, today is acting president of the American League. Byron Ban Johnson, who founded the circuit in 1900 and has been president ever since, has been voted a "temporary vacation" because of his health. His physician said Ban never again may be able to assume the duties of president of the League. So far as title goes, Johnson remains president of the League, drawing his $40,000 a year salary. His contract does not expire until 1935, and his last public utterance yesterday was that he would fight to hold his office "until hell freezes over."

WATCH THE KIDNEYS

Fatigue and that tired feeling is the result of poison in the blood. When the kidneys fail to remove this poison from the system it leads to backache, rheumatic pains and sometimes to that fatal ailment known as Bright's disease. When this condition exists, don't delay, go to your druggist and get a box of Dr. Banta's Kidney and Rheumatic Pills and they will quickly correct the cause of your trouble.

Mr. Arthur Pinch of Smith Township states that Dr. Banta's Kidney and Rheumatic Pills give him more speedy relief than any other preparation that he had tried.

"OUR LADY OF THE SNOWS"

Quebec is justly proud of her glorious winters and never has taken exception to Kipling's much-discussed poem. Her snow-crested citadel sparkles in the winter sun. Sleigh bells jingle in the very spirit of winter carnival.

Everywhere in this ancient city are splendid facilities for the full enjoyment of winter sports. Tobogganing on Dufferin Terrace; ski-ing down the Glacis or over nearby hill and dale; sleigh drives; skating—and in the evenings, the delights of a warm fireside and warm-hearted hospitality.

Make winter take on a new meaning. Visit "Old Quebec." Canadian National offers convenient and luxurious train service that makes the trip itself one of the most enjoyable features of the holiday.

WIT AND HUMOUR EXPLAINED IN BRIGHT ADDRESS

Rotarian Alex. Mowat Gives Rotary Club Some Amusing Examples.

FARMERS' DAY.

Professor Dean Is To Be the Speaker at Get-Together Sessions.

Describing wit as intellectual and humor as emotional, Rotarian Alex. Mowat gave his fellow members of the Peterboro Rotary Club a delightful half hour's entertainment at the weekly luncheon to-day, as he discussed the difference between wit and humor, and illustrated his remarks with a wealth of well-told stories.

Rotarian Mowat, called upon at the last moment to officiate as speaker for the day, scored his usual success in the role and his bright address was punctuated by frequent outbursts of laughter. The speaker said he did not agree with those who described wit as one form of humor; he regarded wit as intellectual and humor as emotional. Humor, he pointed out, consisted of incongruities in situations, emotions, morals, etc., and he gave a number of examples of each of these incongruities that caused much merriment among his hearers.

At to-day's meeting Past President. H. Seels was instructed to endeavor to secure a 100 per cent. meeting, and he appealed to his fellow-members to make this possible by a full attendance on Febraury 14th, as a Valentine for President C. H. Rogers, whose splendid work on behalf of Rotary during the year had merited such a tribute.

Rotarian George A. Gillespie is in charge of Farmers' day, which is to be held next Monday, announced that the speaker for the occasion would be Professor Dean of the Ontario Agricultural College, and that some 60 or 70 farmers of the district would be the guests of Rotary.

Man 29 and Woman 24 At Ideal Marriage Age

NEW YORK, Jan. 24 (United Press).—The ideal marriage ages are 29 for the man and 24 for the woman, a report in The Journal of Social Hygiene said, in discussing an investigation of 1,000 cases in the Philadelphia Court of Domestic relations. Earlier than that the parties are likely to be inexperienced in the problems of making a home, and people who wait beyond these ages probably have permanent character traits making them unsuited for marriage, the report said.

Woman Tries Suicide When Husband Fails To Come To Help Her Celebrate Her Birthday At Little Party

ROSLYN, N. Y., Jan. 24.—(United News.)—After the last of the 36 candles had sputtered out on her birthday while she sat alone waiting for the one guest for her party, Mrs. Ethel Piehl decided to commit suicide. Neighbors learned the story when they found her unconscious on the floor Sunday, but saved from complete asphyxiation by a draft from under the kitchen door.

Mrs. Piehl had expected her husband, a prosperous Philadelphia and Washington hotel owner, home to celebrate her birthday with her. She scoured the house, decorated the table with flowers, prepared his favorite dishes, and baked the birthday cake.

With the dinner cooled and the candles burned out, Mrs. Piehl waited with increasing apprehension. At midnight she went tearfully to bed, without having touched the food or the birthday cake, to arise early on Sunday morning and try to smother her disappointment with gas fumes.

Mining Market Weak; Trading Volume Less

TORONTO, Jan. 24. — (Canadian Press.(— Uniform depression settled over the standard mining exchange to-day, together with a further decrease in the volume of trading, which this morning was just over the half million share mark. Quebec stocks and the regular list all lost to some extent, mostly under two points, while Nipissing's firmness was an outstanding feature. Nipissing climbed 30 cents at 9.45. Laval Quebec eased two at 38 and Duprat eased 1-2 at 26. Corona joined the weak portion of the list with a loss of 1 1-2 at 27. Area softened 6 at 72 and its companion, Amulet 10 cents at 1.72. Teck Hughes lost 20c. at 6.10.

Wheat Swings Upward On Gains At Liverpool

CHICAGO, Jan. 24. — (Canadian Press.)—With Liverpool quotations showing an unexpected jump, wheat took an early swing upward to-day. Decreasing stocks in Great Britain were the strengthening factor, together with unfavorable weather for domestic winter wheat southwest. Opening half to 1 1-8 higher, wheat here scored further gains. Corn, oats and provisions also were firmer. corn starting at 1-4 to 3-4 cent rise and holding near to initial figures.

Opening prices were: Wheat, May, 140 7-8, July 131 5-8; corn, May, 81 7-8, July, 85 1-8; oats, May, 49 1-8, July 48 1-2.

Industrial Shares Drop Under Selling Pressure

NEW YORK, Jan. 24 (Canadian Press).—Reactionary price tendencies predominated in today's stock market. Publication of a relatively poor report by the Hudson Motor Car Co. provided another excuse for selling pressure against the motors and standard industrials, several of which sold down one to thee points below Saturday's final quotations. A few, such as United States Cast Iron Pipe, South Porto Rico Sugar, and Century Ribbon, broke five points.

Wheeling and Lake Erie issues were again the centre of interest, the Common soaring over eight points to a new record high at 56 3-4, or about 25 points above last week's low, before realizing sales checked the advance. Western Maryland Common, Pittsburg and West Virginia, Pennsylvania, and the three Erie issues also sold at their highest prices in years. Producers and Refiners Common and Preferred were bid up several points each on enormous turnover. Baldwin, Colorado Fuel, Cluett Peabody, and Radio Corporation, all up 3 1-2 to 6 1-2 points, also attracted considerable attention by moving against the general trend. There was little business news over the week-end to influence the price movement.

Toronto Exchange Active: Most Stocks Make Gains

TORONTO, Jan. 24 (Canadian Press)—International Nickel, Brazilian and British Columbia Fishing were the leader in the active market which developed after a firm opening on the Toronto Stock Exchange this morning. Brazilian, after touching a high of 113, receedd to 111 5-8, a net loss of three-eighths. The rest of the list generally was firm. British Columbia Fishing gave an impressive exhibition of strength, climbing 4 1-8 points to close at 80 1-8 at noon, after touching 81 1-2 during the session. Shredded Wheat firmed 3-8 at 36 1-2 and Massey Harris was a half point higher at 70. Nipissing in heavy trading advanced 25 cents at 9.45. Imperial Oil was one of the strongest spots in the whole list gaining another point at 42 1-8. Gooderham and Worts softened a point at 35.

ST. PETER'S CATHEDRAL

Commencing a series of sermons on the Decalogue, His Lordship, Bishop O'Brien, speaking on the First Commandment at St. Peter's Cathedral yesterday, spoke of the positive nature of the Commandment, in its adjuration to worship of God, and of the negative nature of the Commandment, when it forbids the worship of other gods or images.

"The worship of God," said His Lordship, "was a natural instinct to the first man and woman, Adam and Eve, who, even after their expulsion from the Garden of Eden, knelt down to pray to God. But, in the years between that time and the giving of the commandments to Moses, their observance had lapsed and remembrance of this fundamental duty had become obliterated from the mind of man.

"The chasm between the finite being and the Infinite is a mighty one and cannot be bridged. Man realizes this, and so falls down in worship of God. That man is a poor creature who, even in earthly ways, will not give honor where honor is due, and so he offers adoration to God, with Whom nothing and none is comparable.

"We adore God by internal and external means, by faith, hope and charity, by prayer and sacrifice. By means of acts of faith, we bolster up our flagging faith, and by means of hope we testify our belief in the Divine mercy. The love of God is unlike the sentimentality of worldly love, and is offered to Him for His own sake. Worldly honors fade and are left behind at the door of eternity, but the love of God is spiritual wealth that may be accumulated in life and will last forever. We now see the love of God dimly and in a dark manner, but we will realize its perfection in eternity."

Prayer and sacrifice are external means by which we follow out the precepts of the first Commandment.

SEPARATION SUIT IS TRANSFERRED

Browning's Case Taken From Carmel To White Plains Court.

CARMEL, N.Y., Jan. 24 (Canadian Press). — Edward R. Browning's separation suit against his wife, Frances "Peaches" Heenan, which opened here to-day, was adjourned to White Plains 35 minutes later by a ruling of Supreme Court Justice Seegar.

White Plains will be the scene tomorrow morning of the preparatory legal steps which very likely, it was indicated to-day, will carry the separation suit testimony into chamber sessions with the press and public excluded.

Counsel for both sides have agreed to a motion by Henry Epstein, counsel for Mrs. Browning, to exclude the press and public on the grounds that the testimony to be offered by the 16-year-old girl wife would not stand the light of publicity, but Supreme Court Justice Seegar has reserved decision because "it has not seemed to me that either of the parties have acted in the past as though they had any desire for secrecy." Testimony considered "harmless" by counsel for Mrs. Browning and her husband was introduced by two of Browning's employees before adjournment.

Peterborough Hockey Club Important Announcement

Make Provision For Admission Of Boys and Girls Under 12 For 25c., Including Tax.

It has been drawn to the attention of the management of the Peterborough Hockey Club that no provision was made for the admission of children under twelve other than by the purchase of a 55 cents admission ticket, which included tax.

When this was brought to their attention they considered the matter, and from now on for the balance of the season, children under twelve will be admitted on a general admission ticket to the East side for 25c, which is 23c, plus 2c tax.

The boys and girls of to-day are the fans and hockey players of a few years hence, and the club is glad that the matter has been brought to their attention, so that it could be remedied by them before the season is out.

As a consequence, therefore, children under 12 will be able to purchase an admission ticket at the East door for 25c, which will include all expenses.

Distilleries Gave Thousands Of Dollars To B. C. Press

SAYS THAT LIQUOR DONATIONS FOUND WAY INTO THE COFFERS OF NEWSPAPERS IN VANCOUVER

Evidence Given By Director, Consolidated Exporters at Customy Enquiry.

NO PURPOSE FOR IT.

Would Not Greatly Exceed $100,000 Over Period Four Years.

VANCOUVER, B. C., Jan. 25. — "Donations" amountin, to many thousands of dollars were made by the Consolidated Exporters of British Columbia, to the Vancouver newspapers, according to Russell Whitelaw, director of the Consolidated Exporters, who gave evidence before the Royal Commission on Customs yesterday morning. Over a period of two years, he said, his company had contributed $17,000 to the Vancouver World, which had been absorbed by other newspapers in March, 1924.

"Why did you give this donation of $17,000?" asked Hon. N. W. Rowell, K.C., Commission counsel.

"No purpose at all; they asked for it," replied Mr. Whitelaw. He stated that other papers in Vancouver which had received money from the Consolidated were the Province, and the Sun.

"Who was running the World at the time you made these payments?" asked Mr. Rowell

"Mr. Campbell," replied the witness.

Mr. Whitelaw explained that as an exporting corporation, his company did not advertise in British Columbia newspapers; the newspapers, however, got out special editions every year in which there was a certain amount of advertising for the Consolidated Exporters. In return for this the donations were given to the newspapers.

Mr. Whitelaw said that in addition

"Playthings of Vice" Go Into Town Bonfire

NEW ORLEANS, Jan. 25.—Magnolia, Mississippi, was 'purified by fire.'

Into a community bonfire 1,500 citizens consigned all cards, dice, questionable literature, salacious pictures and other 'playthings of vice.'

The bonfire was precipitated by revival services conducted by Howard S. Williams, layman-evangelist, who formerly published a Hattiesburg newspaper.

CHANCE OF WAR WITH CANTONESE SEEN AT LONDON

May Be Precipitated By Mob Riots at Shanghai.

FEAR MOB VIOLENCE.

Former Premier Macdonald Declares Trouble Would Doom Baldwin Govt.

LONDON, Jan. 25.—Will Great Britain be forced into a war with the Cantonese? This was the disturbing qustion being discussed by the newspapers yesterday, following news that the Cantonese forces were advancing towards Shanghai. The fact that the government has eight battalions standing by under orders to be prepared for service in China is likewise contributing to the belief that is being expressed in some quarters that Great Britain will before long be compelled to adopt more drastic measures to cope with the Chinese problem.

The despatch of warships and troops to China, together with other warlike preparations, is causing some alarm, despite government assurance, and the uneasiness is being intensified by newspapers like the Daily News emphasizing the fact that if the Cantonese reach Shanghai and fighting ensues, actual war will be inevitable.

Mob Violence.

On the other hand, government officials declare that the only danger would be from mob violence, to which the British never submit, and they reiterate determination to protect British lives and property. They scout the idea of war because of their willingness to negotiate a peaceful settlement, and they do not think the Cantonese would be so foolish as to challenge Britain in the face of this willingness.

Meanwhile a feeling of general nervousness is spreading throughout the country and among politicians, as it is feared that the government has not make public all the facts, and that the parade of force is in support of the British diplomatists in China.

Doom Government.

The Conservatives appear reluctant to express opinions on the situation, but it is apparent that nobody wants any trouble in China. Former Premier Macdonald declares that the government will not last six months if it gets into trouble with the Cantonese, which is regarded as a sane prediction.

Altar a Fashion Show To Appease the Gods

DENVER, Jan. 25 (A.P.).—In an effort to appease "the gods of ill will," Mrs. J. J. Brown, widow of a wealthy Colorado mining man, has displayed her costly wardrobe on the altar of the Liberal Church of Denver as requested by Bishop Frank Rice.

Mrs. Brown explained that she lost her jewels in the Titanic disaster, was robbed of a $10,000 diamond recently in Paris and that clothing was destroyed in a fire at Palm Beach, Fla., in 1923. This, she declared, indicated she had incurred the wrath of the deity presiding over the fortunes of mankind.

She accordingly sent three trunks and numerous suit cases to the church Sunday containing rare lace, sables, jewelery and other finery. While Bishop Rice preached on a text drawn from "Sartor Resartus," the congregation was permitted to view each article. A squad of private detectives was on guard.

FIRE DESTROYS BARN AND CROP

Electric Wiring May Have Caused Bad Blaze Near Manila.

FIVE HORSES LOST.

LINDSAY, Jan. 25 (Special to The Examiner).—A disastrous fire occurred in the Township of Brock, close to the village of Manila, Victoria County, shortly after the midnight hour this morning when the fine barn of Fred Woods, together with the season's crops, the implements, and five horses were totally consumed. Twenty-four head of cattle, fifteen hogs, and one horse were saved.

The cause of the fire is a mystery. There was an electric lighting plant in the barn, and it is thought the fire may have been the result of defective wiring. Mr. Woods lost his house and contents by fire a little over a year ago. There was insurance on the barn and contents, but it will not nearly cover the loss.

LAURIER PALACE HAD NO LICENSE

Inspector Says Tickets Were Still Issued in Spite of Non-Payment.

OTHER EVIDENCE.

MONTREAL, Jan. 25. Canadian Press. — The License Department at the city hall continued to furnish the Laurier Palace with the Amusement tickets last year, although no license had been asked for up to December, it was stated by an officer of the department testifying at the preliminary inquiry into the man slaughter charge laid against Ameen Lawand, Michael Arie and Camille Bazzy in connection with the fire panic on January 9th, when 78 children lost their lives.

Evidence showed that in the nine months preceding the disaster 22,020 tickets had been issued and sold for the use of the children. Two or three spectators who had bee in the audience when the fire broke out told of their experiences. These included a nine year old girl who got in without paying, walking up stairs and finding no one there to stop her.

The License Inspector explained the system whereby the inspectors confined themselves to reporting what license fees should be paid, and did nothing further unless department officials told them that license fees had not been paid. He knew unofficially of the theatre having no license.

The inspector of police for the district declared he knew that the theatre was operating without a license, but he did not consider it his duty to take action against them for that. He thought it was the duty of the License Department.

CHANG LEADING LARGE FORCES AGAINST CANTON

Northern Leader Has Many Men To Oppose Nationalist Armies.

NO JAPANESE HELP.

No Soldiers To Aid Defence of Shanghai—Guards Make History.

With a plentiful supply of troops, Marshal Chang Tsolin, Commander of the Northern Chinese army is reported to be continuing his fight to halt the northward progress of the Nationalist army of the South whose rallying cry is "China for the Chinese."

Reports of the Northerner's success in Chekiang Province are conflicting. A defeat of Chang's troops eighty-five miles southwest of Hang Chow is reported in one despatch while another says the Cantonese are being driven southwest along the Tsientang River. A decisive engagement between the two armies is expected shortly by the correspondent of the London Daily Express.

Precautionary moves of a military nature continue for the defence of Britishers in Shanghai in case, the Nationalists should display force in carrying out their programme which includes the abolition of foreign concessions in Chinese cities uniting of China under one goverment cessation of extra territorial right of foreigners including trial by their own courts and abolition of "foreign imperialism."

No further anti-foreign or anti-Chrisian agitation is reported today. Several missionaries including those of the United Church of Canada in Szechwan Province continue to leave their inland posts and seek safety in port cities.

TOKIO, Jan. 25 (United Press).—Japan today notified the British, Belgian, and French Ambassadors that Japanese Marines or troops would not be landed at Shanghai. The Charge d'Affairs representing Soviet Russia also was notified.

Australian Labor Protests

A meeting of seaman at Melbourne adopted a resolution declining to man ships carrying soldiers, foodstuffs, or munitions for troops acting against China.

U. S. NOT PREPARING.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 25.—(Canadian Press.) — Great Britain's preparations for the defense of her interests in China apparently will not be followed, for the present at least, by any extensive concentration of United States' forces in the Orient. President Coolidge sees a wide difference between the British problem in China and that of the United States' government since Great Britain has concessions there while the United States' government has not. Meantime the Washington government will use forces it has available in Chinese waters to afford protection to its nationals to the best of its ability.

Charges Of Blasphemous Libel Sustained By Magistrate Who Commits E. V. Sterry For Trial After Hearing To-day

TORONTO, Jan. 25 (Canadian Press).—Ernest V. Sterry, Charged with blasphemous libel, was committed for trial by Magistrate Browne in Police Court today. His bond of $1,000 was renewed until the trial.

Magistrate Browne declared he believed the statements published in the paper of which Sterry was editor and publisher, "are blasphmous, inasmuch as it is a most indecent and offensive attack on Christianity and the Scripures, couched in the most scurrilous and in opprobious language. I find i was the defendant's intention to asperse and villify Almighty God in composing and publishing these scandalous, impious, blasphemous and profane libels of God."

The preliminary hearing was comparatively brief, consisting principally of argument by the Crown in support of the charge that Sterry's writings with reference to the Deity were "scurrilous and profane" to the point of constituting blasphemous libel.

Sterry's counsel, after the Crown Attorney had concluded his lengthy and detailed case, said: "I do feel that there is a tremendous issue at stake and it is my duty as counsel for the accused to have this matter threshed out before a higher court. It is, I believe, the first case of the kind in Canada, and the question is as to what our modern impression of the law is regarding 'blasphemous libel.' He submitted that no reasonable man could look upon what had been written as being blasphemous.

BONNIN HANGED FOR MURDERING BANK EMPLOYEE

Pays Penalty For Killing in Connection With Robbery.

AT WINNIPEG.

Claimed at Trial That He Was Crazed By Drugs at Time.

WINNIPEG, Jan. 25 (Canadian Press)—Wilford Bonnin, 24-year-old bank bandit, drug addict, and internationally known criminal was hanged today for the slaying of Maurice Garvie, a bank clerk, who was shot to death during a hold-up of the Logan Avenue Branch of the Royal Bank on May 28, 1926.

The robbery and murder was one of the most sensational in the annals of local police. Bonnin drove to the bank in a taxi, demanded that all the employees "stick 'em up," and when Garvie was slow in obeying the command the bandit shot and instantly killed him. He then escaped with several thousand dollars. Within two hours he was located at a rooming house and when police approached, Bonnin opened fire, wounding two detectives and the proprietor of the house. Attempting to escape, he was seriously wounded.

Bonnin lived for some time at Fort William and had a lengthy Ontario criminal record. He declared at the trial that he was crazed by drugs on the day of the murder.

"I commend my soul to God, and die perfectly happy, with ill will to no one," were Bonnin's last words as he stood on the scaffold while Hangman Ellis adjusted the black cap. He was dead at 7.35 a.m., eleven seconds after he had mounted to the gallows.

After writing farewell letters to his mother and other relatives, Bonnin spent the night in prayer with his spiritual advisers. Two masses were celebrated in the death cell, and at 4.30 o'clock the condemned man received Holy Communion. In a letter to his mother he asked forgiveness for the sorrow he had brought his family, and asked her to pray for him.

CHIEF ON FORCE FOR 30 YEARS

First Served in London in 1897—Here 21 Years This Summer.

CHIEF SEVEN YEARS.

Chief of Police Samuel Newhall today celebrates his 30th anniversary as a police officer. He has been a member of the local force since June, 1906.

Joining the world famous Metropolitan Police in London, England, on January 25, 1897, he served there for five years, then transferring to the Liverpool police force.

During the time he was with the Metropolitan Police he was engaged with "C" squadron, or the Royal squadron, the members of which were always detailed for the big events that happened such as the visits of Kings and Queens, or else for duty in connection with events in which royalty were the participants.

Leaving Liverpool during 1904, he left for Cuba where he served on the police force of that country until June, 1906, when he came to Peterborough, where he has resided ever since.

Many changes have taken place in the local force since that time. When he joined the force consisted of Chief Roszel, R. Adams and Charles McGinty, all now deceased, and John Meharry.

Upon the death of Chief Roszel in 1910, Daniel Thompson came from Woodstock to take command of the local force. It was then reorganized, the strength being raised to nine men, and a few years later was still further increased until the total strength consisted of fifteen men.

Chief Constable Daniel Thompson resigned and left for Windsor in 1920, the present Chief then being apnointed.

During 1921 the strength of the force was reduced, making the strength thirteen all ranks, at which figure it still remains.

Glancing over the rogues' gallery, a collection of pictures of every criminal that has passed through the hands of the Chief, and which are kept on file in his office, brings to mind in a vivid manner the number of people that have come within the long arm of the law.

Here, one will find gazing at him, crooks who during the past number of years have been convicted of every conceivable crime under the calendar. The details registered on the back of the pictures indicate that they have hailed from every corner of the North American Continent.

Among the collection, numbering some hundreds, are the pictures of Blanchard, who was apprehended here by the Chief, being wanted in Philadelphia for murder, and was afterwards electrocuted for the crime. This man he identified from a picture that had been sent broadcast throughout the States and Canada in the hope that his arrest would follow. Professional pickpockets, burglars, forgers, safe breakers, most of them with international reputations, are found in profusion, indicating it would seem, that Peterborough in the old days at least was the hiding place for many of the criminals of the larger cities.

RUSSIAN GOVERNMENT SEEKING NEW AGREEMENT WITH JAPAN CONCERNING TRADE RELATIONS

Semi-Official Economic Negotiations Now in Progress at Moscow.

AVOWALS REFLECTED.

Exchange Views With Regard Japanese Manchurian Railroad Programme.

MOSCOW, Jan. 25 — The steady growth of Russo-Japanese rapprochement during the past few months is an important and favorable offset to the Soviet's anxiety about Western relations, the unsatisfactory course of which the note of protest on the Franco-Rumanian treaty, published Friday, is not the least startling manifestion.

Behind such political phenomena as the recnt public avowals of goodwill by the Japanese Premier and Foreign Minister there is beinn conducted in Moscow a series of economic negotiations of a semi-official character whose importance in view of Japan's present position, cannot be exaggerated. No one knows better than the Russians to what degree Japan has found herself isolated as a result of the Washington Arms Conference and the increasing influence of the British policy in great white dominions.

The evacuation of Vladivostok on the Siberian coast and Northern Sakhalin is the first proof in Russian eyes of the Japanese anxiety and it is realized here that the wisest course would be to attempt to tranquillize the island empire on the score of foodstuffs and raw materials, which Siberia is able to produce in immense quantities if aided in the initial stages of developmeat.

Changed Attitude in China

Important coal and oil concessions therefore, were given to Japan in Northern Sakhalin. Thus encouraged, the Japanese began to raise the question of the timber concession and a still more needed fishery convention which should include a fishing concession.

For a time these negotiations were delayed by the fact that Japan was the real paymaster and sponsor of the Manchurian war lord, Chang Tso-lin, who was fighting the Soviet's protege, General Feng Yu-hsiang, and continually quarrelling with the Soviet about the jointly owned Chinese Eastern Railroad.

During recent months, however, two factors contributed to alter the Japanese attitude toward Chang. The first was the remarkable success of the Canton Kuomintang Nationalists, whose ties with the Soviet are a matter of general knowledge, and the second was the suggestion—if not prompted at least well received by Moscow—that Russia's friendship in Siberia and Northern Manchuria is more valuable to Japan than Chang's

To support this view, one sees the inclination of Japan to open pourparlers with Canton and, so your correspondent is informed, a certain readiness to believe that the Soviet slogan of "Asia for Asiatics" is not quite so Red and revolutionary as the other Great Powers consider it.

Furthermore, a Siberian timber concession covering 2,250,000 acres of lumber, with an output of 45,000,600 cubic feet in six years, has just been granted to the Rorio Rumio Kumai group. A fisheries convention treaty will begin formally to be discussed next month or early in March.

Looking Toward Rail Agreement

Meanwhile there is being carried on an exchange of views with regard to the Japanese Manchurian Railroad programme which raises a number of points of conflict with Soviet railroad rights or plans.

Of these ,the gravest concerns the

HAD INSPECTED THEATRE JUST BEFORE PANIC

Evidence Given By Constable at Resumption of Montreal Hearing.

PROBING COMPLAINT.

Cashier Denies Ever Been Forbidden To Sell Tickets To Minors.

MONTREAL, Quebec, Jan. 25. — Canadian Press. — Fifteen minutes before the fire and panic in the Laurier Palace theatre that brought death to 78 children on January 9th, he had gone to the theatre to investigate a citizen's complaint that the aisles were being crowed during the Sunday performances, was the evidence given by Constable George Hebert yesterday at the resumption of the preliminary hearing of Ameen Lawand, Camil Dazzo and Michael Arie, charged with manslaughter in connection with the disaster.

The constable told the court he entered the theatre downstairs, stayed for about five minutes, found no blocking of the aisles, and left. Fifteen minutes later he was again at the theatre this time working feverishly to release children from the shrinking pile on the stairway.

Annette Bordua, cashier at the theatre on the day of the disaster, repeated at the morning session her testimony before the coroner's court to the effect that she had never been forbidden by the management to sell tickets to unaccompanied minors.

At the interview at Lawand's home on the Wednesday following the fire she had been instructed "to tell the truth." She received no other advice at the two-hour visit at her employer's home, she said, but admitted that Arie said: "Did I not forbid you to sell tickets to children under 16 not accompanied by older persons?" Her answer to this was, she told the court, that she did not remember I ever doing so.

Several witnesses again swore that a man barred the door at the foot of the fatal stairway leading to safety but none of them were able to identify him.

There was once more a reiteration of the graphic accounts of witnesses

Church Advertising Pays Clergymen Are Informed

BERDENTOWN, N.J., Jan. 25.—(United Press.)— Newspaper advertising is a good investment for churches, Walter Irving Clarke, of Philadelphia, publicity director for the Presbyterian church in the United States, told the mid-winter meeting of the Presbytery of Monmouth here to-day.

He suggested that pastors substitute human interest ads for the perfunctory announcements of sermon topics.

"They should be stimulating enough to inspire readers to desire to attend church."

MASSEY SAYS CANADA NEEDS U.S. LEGATION

Tells Toronto Canadian Club It Won't Be a Luxury.

MANY FUNCTIONS.

Says It Will Strengthen Empire, Rather Than Weaken It.

TORONTO, Jan. 24 (Canadian Press).—That the "Canadian Legation" shortly to be established by the Hon. Vincent Massey in Washington is for Canada "a necessity, not a luxury," was the point emphasized by Mr. Massey to-day in an address before the Canadian Club. The newly appointed Envoy Extraordinary and Minister Plentipotentiary for Canada to the United States outlined the conditions and precedents that brought about the establishment of this office and his own ideals and aspirations in relation to the work of this important office. He pointed out that the "Legation" had been hitherto an unfamiliar word in the diplomacies of Canada. The functions of such an office were essentially the same as those of an embassy.

"It is nevertheless a striking innovation," he declared, "for the first time Canada is about to enter into full diplomatic relations with another nation."

Mr. Massey discussed the statement that the entry of the Dominions into diplomacy will impair the diplomatic unity of the Empire, and therefore may threaten Imperial unity itself. He declared that the new machinery being set up would not weaken this tie but would have a contrary effect.

In short, he said the functions of the new office would be "promotion of trade, settlement of international questions, and other matters of public importance." There also will be duties connected with business individuals.

OLD MASTERS

O wild West Wind, thou breath of Autumn's being,
Thou, from whose unseen presence the leaves dead
Are driven, like ghosts from an enchanter fleeing,
Yellow, and black, and pale, and hectic red.
Pestilence-stricken multitudes! O thou
Who chariotest to their dark wintry beds
The winged seeds, where they lie cold and low,
Each like a corpse within its grave, until
Thine azure sister of the Spring shall blow.
Her clarion o'er the dreaming earth, and fill
(Driving sweet buds like flocks to feed in air)
With living hues and odors plain and hill:
Wild spirit, which are moving everywhere:
Destroyer and Preserver: Hear, Oh hear!

Make me thy lyre, ev'n as the forest is:
What if my leaves are falling like its own!
The tumult of thy mighty harmonies
Will take from both a deep autumnal tone,
Sweet though in sadness. Be thou,
Spirit fierce,
My spirit! be thou me, impetuous one!
Drive my dead thoughts over the universe,
Like wither'd leaves, to quicken a new birth:
And, by the incantation of this verse,
Scatter, as from an unextinguished hearth
Ashes and sparks, my words among mankind!
Be through my lips to unawaken'd earth
The trumpet of a prophecy! O Wind,
If Winter comes, can Spring be far behind?

Irish Play Is Egged In Cleveland Theatre

CLEVELAND, Jan. 25—Irate patrons of the Play House, exclusive centre of Cleveland modernist drama, showered stage with eggs last night during the presentation of Dean O'Casey's Irish satire, "Juno and the Paycock."

Six men, arrested by a riot squad, gave their names as Marcus O'Donnell, Patrick Patten, John Campbell, James O'Donnal, Daniel Sheehan and James McCrone. They told Sergt. James Price that they heard the play "insults decent Irish folk." They were charged with disturbance.

LEAGUE MEETING.

Regular Gathering Held On Thursday at Petherick's Corners.

PETHERICK'S CORNERS, Jan. 25.—A most enjoyable time was spent at the regular League meeting on Thursday evening, when Miss Gladys Simpson, leader of the social and recreational department, took charge of the programme, with Miss Nellie Bennett as leader for the evening. Over fifty were in attendance, with the Whites again in the lead. After a short song service, Fred Barnum gave the devotional reading, and Gladys Simpson the topic, "Canadian Editions and Journalists." The next part of the programme consisted of a number of short speeches by different members on subjects drawn from a pile on the desk. These were as follows: "Should gasoline, soft drinks, candies, etc., be sold on Sunday" — Aylmer Petherick; "Should our League take any interest in hockey, baseball and other sports?"—Gladys McKenzie; "Should Sabbath School be kept open all the year and why?" —George Brunton; "If we do not care for the preacher or the leader of an organization is that any reason why we should not attend meetings"—Freda Petherick; "Is Sunday visiting a help to the Sunday service?"—Ted Owens; "Why do we come to League?"—Stewart Nelson; "Are week night meetings a help to the community?" — Nellie Bennett.

These topics were discussed both by those mentioned and other members of the League, and many interesting points were brought out.

The last item was a spelling match, two sides of ten each being chosen by Earl Fairman and Lindsay Anderson. Words were taken from Matthew, 10th and 11th chapters. When six were left on each side a change was made to another part of the Scripture and the sides were more speedily dissolved. Mrs. Fred. Barnum and Mrs. Kent Lawrence were the last on the floor, and as both belong to the White side, no further contest was necessary. The evening proved a most happy and profitable, and it is hoped that more of the same kind will be held in the future.

CAROL NOT GOING HOME JUST YET

Heir to Rumanian Throne Staying in France for While.

ATTENDED LECTURE

PARIS, Jan. 25. — (Canadian Press).—Prince Carol of Roumania is not going home "just yet," he informed the press yesterday, at the same time declining to discuss one way or the other reports in Roumanian circles here that King Ferdinand will abdicate shortly in his favor.

The "bad boy of the Balkans," who had led newspaper correspondents a merry chase since he slipped off to the Riviera incognito just before Christmas, was discovered sitting in the front row of the Turgot Amphitheatre of the Sorbonne University yesterday listening intently to a conference on "monarchial institutions in the Balkans."

The lecturer was none other than Professor Nicolas Jorga of the University of Bucharest, leader of the Roumanian people's national party, Carol's one time tutor and the man whom the Prince has selected as his Premier in the event of his assumption to the throne of his father, King Ferdinand, now ill.

The former Crown Prince conversed readily with a correspondent after the lecture, talking for fifteen minutes on every topic from football to literature, but drawing the line at all Balkan and European politics.

The correspondent was waiting for Professor Jorga in a little office in the rear of the Amphitheatre at the conclusion of the conference and had hardly presented letters from mutual friends in Bucharest when a tall, slim, athletic young man, the picture of health, entered the room.

"Why, how are you?" Carol exclaimed, extending his hand to the correspondent just as Professor Jorga was preparing to introduce the latter. "You've finally cornered me," he continued, "but you must admit I gave you quite a chase."

Carol confirmed the fact that he had just returned from the Riviera. He said that he left his home in Neuilly for the Riviera on December 23 and only returned last Thursday.

"Are you returning to Roumania?"

"My dear boy, who wants to go back to Roumania in this sort of weather? I hear they had such a snowstorm down there that the trains are all stalled in the stations" Carol replied whimsically. Then assuming a more serious tone, he added, "No, I am not going back to Roumania—just yet."

"Does this mean that you intend to return some time?"

"My dear boy," Carol responded, "leave politics alone, or I'll run away."

"Are you going to Italy to meet the Princess Helen?"

This question was based on the recent trip of Carol's wife, Princess Helen, to Italian Riveira with their young son Michael, resulting in talk of a possible reconciliation.

"Italy is a very nice country at this season," Carol answered enigmatically. "Lots of people are going to Italy at present."

Barber Who Drank 86 Cups Of Coffee In Six Hours Is Now Acclaimed Champion Java Drinker Of World

WINNIPEG, Man., Jan. 25.—Harry Smet, a 47-year-old Belgian, barber by trade, and known as "Harry the Barber," yesterday claimed the world's coffee-drinking championship. He downed 86 cups, or three and one-half gallons and two cups, on Sunday in six hours, exceeding the record of Gus Comstock, of Fergus Falls, Minn., by one cup, and was only four cups under the unofficial mark set by Frank Trachinowicz, of Ray, N/D. Trachinowicz's record of 90 cups is declared to be "unofficial," because he failed to keep a log.

Harry is sure of one thing—he is the champion java drinker of Canada without dispute. After exceeding Comstock's record, he called it a day by "finishing off" with a pint bottle of beer, and issuing a challenge to "the world."

KEEPS A TRYST BEYOND GRAVE

Another Young Intellectual Student Takes His Own Life.

SEND WORD BACK.

MADISON, Wis., Jan. 25 (United Press)—The veil never yet known to have been parted by man has been drawn yesterday over the reckless attempt of W. Cassels Noe, Wisconsin university student, to find out what lies beyond the grave and to keep a ghostly tryst with a friend who died three weeks ago.

Noe, who was 20, sent a bullet into his brain Sunday, and left a note promising a fraternity brother to communicate with him after death.

His effort to explore the mystery of death was another of the recent suicides of young intellectuals in various parts of the country who have become disgusted with life.

It was linked by friends of Noe with the suicide on January 4 of Joseph W. Moore, University of Illinois student, who said he was "too tired to live." Noe's friends said they thought Noe and Moore had dined together the day before Moore killed himself, and that Moore told Noe his spirit would return if he died.

REACH ACCORD WITH GERMANY

Allied Control Problem Concerning Potential War Materials Practically Settled.

TRUST BERLIN.

BERLIN, Jan. 25 (Canadian Press).—Virtual agreement has been reached between the experts of the inter-allied military control commission and the German Government regarding further allied control of the German exportation of potential war materials.

This question, together with that of the maintenance of the eastern frontier fortress of Germany, has constituted the final stumbling block to accept the understanding between the allied powers and Germany.

The experts' agreement has been approved by the Cabinet, but must still be approved by the ambassadors' conference at Paris. It takes the form of an addenda to the existing federal law controlling the export of war materials and provides in general that all finished manufactured articles which might be used for war purposes shall be considered on Germany's word of honor designed for peace use.

HANGMAN ELLIS VISITS WINNIPEG

Wilford Bonnin, Bank Robber, Pays Supreme Penalty This Morning.

WINNIPEG, Man., Jan. 25. — Canadian Press. — Arthur Ellis, Canada's official hangman, made his second official visit to Winnipeg within a year yesterday. He is here this time to carry out the capital sentence of the law imposed on Wilford Bonnin, slayer and bank robber, who was executed early this morning.

Bonnin reduced to a cripple by the bullets of the law, was carried to the gallows.

In an interview here to-day, Mr. Ellis announced his intention of retiring in the spring.

"I intend to publish my memoirs, in fact the greater part of my experiences have already been written, and arrangements made for publication of the volume," the hangman confided.

Mr. Ellis has sprung the trap on more than 400 persons condemned to die.

to the special editions there was a certain amount of small space advertising done at other times.

The information was given to the Commission when Mr. Rowell was engaged in probing the $900,000 unvouchered expenditure total of the Consolidated Exporters.

For Campaign Funds.

A part of this amount was for campaign funds, said Mr. Whitelaw, but in answer to E. R. Anderson, counsel for the Consolidated Exporters, he said that he did not think these campaign fund contributions over a period of four years would greatly exceed $100,000. This covered contributions to Liberal and Conservative parties, both provincial and federal.

Special Editions.

"Did you make donations for other than special editions?" asked Mr. Rowell.

"Two or three," said the witness.

"What size were your donations to special editions?"

"Oh, from $1000 to $2500," said the witness.

"To all newspapers?"

"No," stated the witness.

"And you were never promised favors in return for them?"

"No."

Mr. Whitelaw insisted that his company had never paid any money to officials, either federal or provincial.

WEDDING BELLS.

TENSION EASIER AT WASHINGTON

Following Reports That No Damage Done in Shanghai Riots.

NO DAMAGE.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 25 (Canadian Press). — Arrival of United States Minister MacMurray in Peking Sunday was reported to the State Department yesterday by the Legation, but he has as yet despatched no official advices about the situation in China. He left the Chinese capital January 18 for conferences in Washington, only to be halted by cablegram in Korea and directed to return to his post.

Tension appeared a little relaxed in official circles by advices that the rioting in Shanghai had not been followed by any violent reaction there or among the foreign communities at other points. It is hoped that while the Shanghai riot is undoubtedly symptomatic of the touch-and-go state of unrest created by Chinese Nationalist agitators in and about many of the foreign settlements in China, it will be merely a local disorder curbed by the international police without resort to firearms and not the starting point of a general wave of anti-foreign violence in Shanghai.

No material changes in the situation at Hankow, Shanghai or elsewhere were disclosed in yesterday's official advices except that Consul-General Lockhart reported the British business houses at Hankow had been re-opened.

A delayed message from Mr. Lockhart said he had ordered an investigation of recent attacks on United States citizens, but did not cite the particular incidents. It also related to the governing council of presumably Cantonese authorities had ordered the military and political chiefs at Fukien to afford protection to foreign missions and residents in that area.

ASKS CATTLE MEN TO A CONFERENCE

Hon. W. R. Motherwell To Hold Livestock Parley at Regina.

OTTAWA, Jan. 25.—A conference of all parties interested in the live-stock industry has been called for February 18 in Regina by Hon. W. R. Motherwell, Minister of Agriculture. The conference, it is hoped, will find a common ground on which a firm co-operative structure can be erected. The idea is to do away with petty irritations and existing opposition of various interests in order to have the handling of cattle from the producer to the consumer managed in a way that will extend Canada's markets and secure the maximum returns for the producer.

There has been friction in Calgary and, to a lesser extent, at other points in the West; and there is also a general desire to improve marketing conditions wherever possible. Mr. Motherwell explained that he plans to make the conference at Regina all embracing. It will be attended by representatives of the co-operatives of the three prairie provinces, the live stock exchanges, the pools and the three agricultural departments of the prairie provinces' governments.

Will Amend Act.

Over the week-end Mr. Motherwell sent invitations to the Ministers of Agriculture on the prairies, Messrs. Prefontaine, Hamilton and Hoadley. The federal department of agriculture will also be represented. While the conference will have no power of final decision, Mr. Motherwell stated that it would undoubtedly result in the introduction of an amendment of the Live Stock Act. The idea of inviting representatives of the three prairie provinces to attend is that they all passed concurring legislation to bring the present act into force, and the Minister felt that they should sit in at any discussion of amendments to the act.

After the conference any other interests will be consulted before action is taken, particularly the live stock exchanges in Montreal and Toronto.

White for both sport frocks and evening gowns is emphasized in the wardrobe of Yvonne Printempts, designed by Jeanne Lanvine Gold and silver decorate the evening models.

FRANK STINSON GIVES ADDRESS

Speaks at Annual Meeting of American Waterways League.

AT NEW YORK

NEW YORK, January 25. Canadian Press. — Frank G. Stinson, of the Trent Waterway Development Association, Peterboro, Ont., was one of the speakers at the annual meeting of the Waterway League of America, here yesterday.

The league comprises yachting and cruising orrganizations which have interested themselves in the development and improvement of marine highways.

PLENTY OF COKE IN WESTERN PROVINCES

Can Be Used For Industrial Purposes, Report of C. C. Ross.

CALGARY, Alt., Jan. 25. Canadian Press. — That there is plenty of coking coal in Alberta and British Columbia for industrial purposes, was the statement made by G. C. Ross, Dominion Supervising Engineer, Calgary, in reply to the assertion of Hon. T. A. Crerar in a speech at Montreal that there would be difficulty in industrial development in western Canada, largely because there is no coking coal or iron between Cape Breton and British Columbia.

Mr. Ross stated that all the big mines in the Crow's Nest pass, which lies both in Alberta and British Columbia, could produce coking coal, and that a coal company at Coleman, Alta., was actually producing coke.

In addition to the Sheep Creek and Highwood River districts had plenty of coking coal available. Development.

As for iron, Mr. Ross did not know of any big deposits in Alberta or British Columbia.

HAD INSPECTED THEATRE

District Chief Doolan, first fire chief on the scene, who played a prominent part in the direction of the rescue work, told the court the loss of life might have been considerably reduced if windows in the rear of the balcony had been opened early to let out the smoke. One of the first things he had done on arrival, he said, was to make various provisions for the ventilation of the smoke filled theatre.

Rosario Hardeau, the man who asked for his money back, while the panic was at its height, also played part in the rescue work when he learned that the fire was more serious than he at first thought.

He said that when the fire was discovered, a man whom he thought to be the accused, Arie, had appeared on the stage, and, attempting to calm the audience, shouted that there was no danger and appealed to them to keep their seats.

FATAL ACCIDENTS AMONG HUNTERS

Saskatchewan M.L.A. Urges That Stringent Measures Should Be Taken.

REGINA, Jan. 25 (Canadian Press).—Declaring that fatal shooting accidents were occurring in the Northern big game country, and had increased enormously during last season, W. C. Buckley, Conservative, Tisdale, urged in the Legislature yesterday that stringent measures should be taken to bring about a change. If nothing were done, he said, he feared they would have one man with a grudge against another coming back from hunting and reporting that he had mistaken the man for a moose and killed him.

BRITAIN SENDING ARMED FORCE TO TROUBLED CHINA

Dispatch Force of 12,000 Men To Shanghai Under Gen. Duncan.

PROTECT INTERESTS.

London Becoming Uneasy Over Unexpected Size of Expeditionary Force.

LONDON, Jan. 25 (Canadian Press).—All doubts as to the magnitude of the British preparations to deal with possible events in China were cleared last night when the War Office announced the composition of the "Shanghai defence force."

This force will defend the British concession in Shanghai and will be commanded by Major-General John Duncan, now here in command of a division who will sail for China forthwith. General Duncan saw service in the World War at Gallipoli and Eastern Europe. His new forces will consist of about 12,000 men—the Thirteenth and Fourteenth British Infantry Brigades, and the Twentieth Indian Infantry Brigade, with artillery, armored cars and other equipment. Two battalions of the British forces are at present at Malta, the remainder are in Great Britain.

Including the 1,000 marines previously ordered to China and the naval ratings of the cruisers despatched to the Far East and the effectives on the spot, it is estimated that about 16,000 men will be available for the defence of British interests. The marines were to have sailed from Portsmouth yesterday, but their ship was delayed by the fog. They will probably get away to-day.

The British infantry units include a battalion of the Coldstream Guards regiment, which is rarely ordered abroad in normal times. The Government has chartered the steamers Kinfans Castle, Kildonan Castle, Minnesota, Megantic and Herminius as transports, and the whole force will sail at the earliest possible moment.

The Government does not require Parliamentary sanction for these military measures, since nothing in the nature of general mobilization is involved. Nevertheless, uneasiness is developing in the country at the expected size of the expeditionary force.

The Government has protected itself thus far by acquainting the opposition leaders, Ramsay MeDonald and Lloyd George, with all steps taken, as Parliament does not assemble before February 8. At the same time demands are beginning to be heard that Parliament should be summoned forthwith, so that the country may be enabled to judge of the justification for the defence measures by question and answer in the House of Commons.

The Liberal press seems to fear that Sir Austen Chamberlain, the Foreign Secretary, is being goaded into needless display of force by the forward party in the Cabinet. Liberal suspicions are increased by the Government's reticence and the daily reiteration by Government spokesmen of negative assurances, which tell nothing of the actual course of the negotiations or events.

In this connection attention is riveted on a statement made by Marshal Chang Tso-Lin, northern military leader, in a special interview, declaring war on "the sinister forces of Bolshevism," and adding: "All we hope for now and earnestly require is the moral encouragement and support of Great Britain and other powers."

Liberals who are not satisfied with the Government policy are asking if Great Britain is giving this moral support. On the other hand a great majority of the newspapers and the larger body of public opinion fully approve of the Government's precautionary policy.

At the Foreign Office late last night it was learned that no confirmation had been received of the reported defeat of Gen. Sun Chuanfang, Governor of Chekiang, by Cantonese troops, within 100 miles of Shanghai, nor of any order by the British authorities for the evacuation of British missionaries in that section. It was explained that the missionaries would use their own discretion.

RUSSIAN GOVERNMENT

crossing of the Chinese Eastern by a branch line from the Japanese South Manchurian line at Taonan Foo, to Tsitsita, 25 versts north of the Chinese Eastern. This line is being built under Chang's auspices, but with Japanese money, and the Japanese are anxious to extend it north to Blagavieshtchensk, on the Amur River.

It is unlikely that the Russo-Japanese railroad problems will be settled in the near future, but the day it is announced that the Soviet has agreed to Taonan Foo-Blagovieshtchensk road, the world may take it for granted that the former rivals for the control of the Asiatic hinterland have reached a plane of solid friendship.

Lyrics Of Life

(By Douglas Malloch.)

LIFE'S PLAY

Life's play is on, the overture is through;
And here we are, and there our work to do.
The footlights glare; in all the crowded place
We vainly look to find a friendly face.
The music stops, the waiting throng is still;
Well, one must play, must play it well or ill.
With all our dreaming, dreaming days are gone;
The hour has struck to act—life's play is on.

Youth's prologue ends; the larger drama now
A man must play; must play, but play it how?
Then from the wings an ancient actor speaks:
"He wisely plays a part who wisely seeks
A part to play—who chooses, first of all,
A part that fits him, be it great or small.
Life's play is on; and, now, to meet the test,
First find your part, then play the part your best."

Successful Year Reported at Annual Meeting of Association.

OFFICERS ELECTED.

NORHAM, Jan. 25.—At the annual meeting of the Percy Agricultural Society, held in the Community Hall, Warkworth, on Thursday afternoon, William A. Kelly, who has been 1st vice-president for two years, was chosen president by acclamation. Harry Aylesworth was appointed 1st vice-president, Joseph Greenly, 2nd vice-president and John L. Phillips, secretary and treasurer, at a salary of $90 a year. Harry Walker and Dr. H. S. Allen were appointed auditors. The financial statement showed a balance on hand of $263.88, against a deficit a year ago of $7.28.

George Poole, who had been president for the past two years and under whose leadership the society has made good progress, was nominated by C. Hiram Curtis, and seconded by Benjamin Buchanan, but refused to accept the position, stating that he believed the officers down the line should have the opportunity of advancement. He then moved and it was seconded by George Hutchison that William A. Kelly be president. There being no other nominations, James A. Armstrong, who had been requested to conduct the election of officers declared Mr. Kelly elected. In accepting the office Mr. Kelly stated that he knew it was a big responsibility. Warkworth fair was one of the best in the Province, and with the help of the directors could be kept so.

On motion of Harry Aylesworth and A. B. Armstrong, W. Herbert Nelson was nominated for 1st vice-president, but Mr. Nelson asked to be relieved of the work, stating that he had many other township duties. On motion of W. Herbert Nelson and Benjamin Buchanan, Harry Aylesworth was elected to the office of 1st vice-president. On motion of W. Herbert Nelson and George Poole, Joseph Greenly was appointed 2nd vice-president.

Considerable discussion took place over the matter of a board of directors, finally, on motionof John Leonard and A. B. Armstrong, Harry Aylesworth, C. H. Curtis, and W. A. Kelly were appointed a committee to retire and bring in a recommendation. This they did and submitted the following list of names: George Poole, C. H. Sherwin, Benjamin Buchanan, John Leonard, Elmer Oliver, Wilbur S. Nelson, James A. Armstrong, A. B. Armstrong, John L. Phillips, William Herminston, W. Herbert Nelson, Henry Waters, George Hutchison, Murney McCann, Mrs. James A. Armstrong, Mrs. Lulu Richards, and Mrs. (Rev.) W. W. Jones. John Leonard and George Hutchison refused to accept the position, and the name of C. H. Curtis was added to the former list.

On motion of Benjamin Buchanan and A. B. Armstrong, a vote of thanks was tendered George Poole for the very efficient and capable way in which he had performed the duties of president for the past two years.

On motion of W. Herbert Nelson and Benjamin Buchanan, George Hutchison, who had been a director for nearly forty years, was placed on the list of honorary directors.

On motion of Harry Aylesworth and W. Herbert Nelson, the president, W. A. Kelly was appointed to attend the convention of Ontario Association of Fairs and Exhibitions to be held in the King Edward Hotel, Toronto, on February 2nd and 3rd.

C. H. Curtis was appointed to attend the central convention of Fairs and Exhibitions, to be held in Belleville. Mr. Curtis is 2nd vice-president of that association.

The treasurer was authorized to send $2.00, the affiliation fee, to J. E. Pert, treasurer of the Ontario Association of Fairs and Exhibitions.

It was decided that the society would choose its own judges for 1927.

It was also decided to enter the Combined Standing Field Crop and Seed Grain Competition. In this competition grain is judged in the field and afterwards in the bin. For grain, seven prizes are awarded, rang ing from $75.00 to $10.00.

In the above competition Mr. Poole, who had recently attended a meeting in Belleville, stated that four counties in the Belleville area were already in, and last spring purchased a Clifford cleaner, which was sent out under charge of one man who received $3.50 a day. In the one year the mill paid the man's wages and the purchase price of $225.00. Grain cleaned and graded could be sold through the Association. The mill would clean from 30 to 40 bushels an hour. The price charged for cleaning was determined by the condition of the grain.

Brief speeches were given by Harry Aylesworth, who, last year, had charge of the beef cattle, Henry Waters, who had been assigned the hexvy horses, and Benjamin Buchanan, who was in charge of fruits and honey. All declared that satisfaction had been expressed by those exhibiting, with one exception. Some misunderstanding had arisen in respect to a mare and foal exhibited by Stuart Atkinson, and it was decided on motion of Henry Waters and W. Herbert Nelson that Mr. Atkinson be paid the $5.00 special prize, and that an apology be tendered him for the injustice done.

The first Thursday and Friday in October were recommended as suitable dates upon which to hold the 1927 fair. The matter was left with G. H. Curtis for final settlement.

Mrs. Kelly explained that the Athletic Club had refused to operate the skating rink, and it had been taken up by the Agricultural Association. Mr. George Wiggins had been employed and was carrying the work on satisfactorily.

HEROIC SCOUTS.

No stronger recommendation of the value of Boy Scout training could be brought forward that the fact that five Ontario Scouts have been recommended to the Dominion headquarters for awards for their bravery in saving lives during the past year.

In four cases these gallant lads successfully went to the assistance of other boys who were drowning; in the fifth a fourteen-year-old Windsor Scout applied a first aid tourniquet to the foot of a man who had cut an artery and who would have bled to death had it not been for the presence of mind and expert knowledge of the youngster.

The Scout movement brings out the best in the boy; the training he receives along many lines is of the utmost value, and as the list of those recommended for honors shows the average Scout is ready to act when the emergency arises.

Those who criticize Scout training as militaristic in its tendency must have only a very faint idea of the aims and objects of the Scout organization.

THE OLD ORDER CHANGES.

The announcement that the Canadian National Railways have made application to discontinue service over the Millbrook-Omemee branch is not surprising, in view of the general knowledge that for some time this line has been operated at a loss.

The abandonment of the Millbrook-Bethany-Omemee branch will cause old-time residents of the district to recall the early days of railroading in this section of Ontario, for this line was part of the original Port Hope-Lindsay line, and until the present branch from Peterboro to Omemee—long known as "The Missing Link"—was built the only way Peterboro people could reach Lindsay by railway was via Millbrook, Bethany and Omemee, over the route now to be scrapped.

The completition of the C.P.R. in the Bethany section and the more and more general use of the automobile have made the maintenance of service over the branch unprofitable, and soon the spectacle of a train more or less leisurely puffing its way from Millbrook to Bethany and Omemee will be no more.

It is a sign of the times—this cancelling of a service that has been carried on since the middle of the last century.

COLLECTING REVENUES.

It was the boast of the Ferguson Government during the recent campaign that it had succeeded during its term of office in bringing about a much more complete collection of revenues than its predecessors.

Evidently the administration is not satisfied with that record, the announcement of a re-arrangement of the Provincial Treasurer's Department and the formation of a new Revenue-Collection Department indicating that the Government hopes to make an even better showing.

Under the new arrangement the collection of revenue and the control of expenditure will be separately carried on, the former under a new official to be known as the Controller of Revenue, and the latter under the direction of the Financial Controller.

The new branch of the Treasury, it is claimed, will justify its creation and the promotion of officials it has brought about by making possible the full collection of taxes, fees, licenses, etc.

Under the Drury administration, it is charged that the Province lost heavily through a falling down in revenue collection; the machinery now in charge of this branch of the Treasury should be able to see to it that it will be impossible to level any such charge at the present Government.

MAY CLEAR THE AIR.

Thousands of Canadian radio fans will hope that the reports from Washington that a solution has been reached in the matter of radio supervision are not too optimistic.

A tentative arrangement has been reached between the Senate and House by which an independent commission of five members is to be appointed by the President to issue broadcasting licenses and to pass on controversial questions, with the Secretary of Commerce in general charge of radio administration.

This is a matter of great importance to listeners-in on both sides of the border, who have been most grieviously annoyed in recent months by the air pirates who have been appropriating wave lengths as they saw fit and causing such a jam in the ether at times that radio enthusiasts have had the greatest difficulty in tuning in the stations to which they wished to listen.

With no control over the situation the opportunity has been seized by a number of new stations to send out programmes on wave lengths already assigned to broadcasters or so close to them as to occasion general confusion.

The proposed commission, it is to be hoped, will be able to put a stop to such practices and to place radio broadcasting on an orderly basis.

HOME BREWING.

It is announced that during 1926 more than 9,000 Hamiltonians secured permits to brew malt beverages in their homes. There are approximately 27,000 homes in Hamilton, so it would seem that one family in three makes its own beer. Some one may say that this is an exaggerated estimate and call attention to the fact that the district surrounding Hamilton is embraced in the figure given by the Internal Revenue Department, but not all amateur brewers in this city have taken the trouble to secure permits. The probability is that there are more non-licensed brewers in Hamilton than there are licensed brau-meisters in the districts immediately outside of the city. The question naturally arises: "What effect will the inauguration of a policy of Government control of liquor have on the home-brewing industry?" Enforcement officers are quoted as expressing the opinion that when permits to buy full-strength beer are available there will be a marked falling-off in applications for renewals of home-brewing permits. But will there? Just as every radio owner boasts that he has the best set in town, so does every amateur brewer pride himself on the excellence of his product. It costs but a few cents a bottle to make one's beer at home, and with this price the Government liquor stores will not be able to compete. Premier Ferguson gave considerable thought to this matter of home-brew beer, it will be recalled. At one time during the campaign he announced that he proposed to discontinue the issuing of home-brewing permits, but this utterance was recognized as a tactical error and the Prime Minister quickly explained that what he meant was that permits would not be given to any one who had been convicted of making beer for sale. Home-brewing is a development of the experiment Ontario made with prohibition and its roots are now too deeply imbedded to be eradicated overnight.—Hamilton Spectator.

PROPORTIONAL REP. IS NOT A SUCCESS.

The proportional representation system of voting is sometimes advocated for our Federal and Provincial elections. Most people do not understand the idea, and many of its most ardent backers have only a smattering of its ramifications. It is doubtful if anyone can explain it thoroughly.

The whole basis of the scheme is that the elected representative should have a majority of the votes cast. That is, if more than two men are running for office, the successful candidate must not have only a plurality, but a majority of the votes polled.

For instance, if three men are contesting an election, the electors do not merely put a cross opposite the name of the man whom they wish returned. They are also supposed to name their second choice. The ballots are marked 1 and 2, according to the voter's preference. Ballots marked with an X are considered as spoiled. If a citizen wishes to "plump" for his candidate he must mark "1" opposite the name of his favorite. Marking the name with an "X" automatically throws out the ballot.

When the ballots are counted if the leading man has not a clear majority of the votes cast, the ballots of the low man are taken. The second choices of these are counted and credited to whomever they may indicate. That would mean that if sufficient of these second choices were given to the man who had stood second in the original count, he would be declared elected over the man who had led the poll on the first choices only.

The same general principle applies when more than one man is to be elected and there is a long list of aspirants, as for instance in an aldermanic race. This involves numerous counts of the ballots cast.

The whole system of proportional representation is too complicated for practical purposes. Its advocates say it is the only fair way to elect. Experience would tend to prove the reverse to be true.

Out in Saskatoon at the recent civic elections there were three men contesting the mayoralty. On the first count the top man had a clear lead of 102 votes over the second candidate. He had not a majority. When the low man's ballots were taken and the second choices counted, the man who had been second was declared elected by a majority of 11 over the leader of the first count.

Recount proceedings showed that many people had "plumped" for the leader in the first count. But they had marked their ballots with an "X." These were considered spoiled and not counted. There was no doubt for whom the people wished to vote, but the "X" automatically spoiled the ballot. Had these been counted backers of the leader claim he would have been elected on the first count. He would have had a majority.

In the recount the judge declared the original leader elected. Now the second man, who was declared elected on the second choices, is appealing against the judge's decision. It will be weeks before the case is threshed out in the courts.

In the meantime Saskatoon has decided to abolish the proportional representation system of electing its municipal officials. Bitter experience has proven the scheme to be an absolute failure. Other elections under the system have proved equally as tempestuous in their deciding.

People who back the scheme are always strong in theoretical arguments. But they always fall down when they are asked to point to one city where the proportional representation idea has worked with success. And, worst of all, there is no person in the world who really understands the system.—St. Catharines Standard.

MONTREAL GRAIN AND PRODUCE

MONTREAL, Que., Jan. 25 (Canadian Press)—There was an improved demand from United Kingdom and continental buyers for Manitoba spring wheat on the Montreal market over the week-end, and as the prices bid in many instances were in line with exporters views, a larger volume of business was done for February shipment.

The trade in grain on the domestic market was quiet but the feeling was steady.

The spring wheat flour market was moderately active and firm. The demand for winter wheat flour was of a limited charcter but the undertone was steady.

Prices for all lines of millfeed Were well maintained under a good demand. The market for standard grades of rolled oats was inactive but prices were unchanged.

The demand for fresh and storage eggs was confined to small lots and prices ruled firm. The receipts were 367 cases.

The market for potatoes was without any new feature to note, prices being steady under a quiet demand. Car lots of Prince Edward Island Green Mountains were quoted at $1.80 per bag of ninety pounds, and Quebec white stock at $1.40 per bag of ninety pounds, in bulk, ex-track.

A moderate amount of business was done in butter at unchanged prices. The receipts were 59 packages.

A little business was transacted with English importers in cheese yesterday, but the local trade was quiet but firm. The receipts were 124 boxes.

CHICAGO GRAIN

CHICAGO, Jan. 25 (Canadian Press) — Assertions that the Canadians government crop report due this afternoon will show reduced figures on yield tended to lift wheat prices yesterday. Falling-off in the United States visible supply total was also a strengthening factor. Wheat closed firm, 1-4c to 1-8c higher; corn 1-4 to 1-2c down; oats unchanged to 1-4c off, and provisions unchanged to 15 to 17c up.

Corn prices gave away after announcement that the corn visible supply had increased 1,096,000 bushels for the week, and is 38,151,000 bushels compared with 26,431,000 bushels last year. Oats followed corn.

VOICE OF PEOPLE

Letters to be printed in the Voice of the People column must be received at The Examiner office on the day before it is desired to have them published.

To the Editor,
Examiner, Peterboro.

Sir:

Your editorial of a recent date wherein you advocate sending to Ottawa of a deputation to request the Government to complete the western end of the T.V.C. should be well received, and action taken by every municipality from the Georgian Bay to the Bay of Quinte.

It is true that the Canal is now operating over nearly its whole length, between the points above mentioned, but it will be extensively used by tourists when it is completed in the Severn River portion and it is to urge on the Government the immediate building of locks in this section that will be the business of the deputation. It is true the necessity for this was pointed in a resolution from the "Trent Waterways Development Association", passed at a meeting in Peterboro in 1924. This resolution read as follows: "That in view of the very large expenditure already made on the canal improvements and in view of the fact that the whole work is largely unproductive of results by reason of its incompleteness and in view of the further fact that the final link of the work on the Severn River will cost only a small portion of the total outlay, this Association would memoralize the Government and the Department of Railways and Canals and urgently request that the balance of the work be carried through at the earliest possible date."

Since this resolution was forwarded in 1924 a very large and altogether unnecessary expenditure, said to be over $150,000, has been incurred in building a new lock at Young's Point where the original canal and lock built in 1869 and 1870 at a cost of $31,192.72 has been all that was necessary for navigation since that time, or dusing the past 56 years, and for a few thousand dollars could have been made to provide all requirements of the canal for another 50 years or over. There was no public demand for this new lock at Young's Point, and the expenditure at this time, except for political expediency, is entirely uncalled for. Since the early years of this canal construction many deputations have met the governments at Ottawa and usually satisfactory results have followed, and The Examiner is doing good work in advocating for a deputation at this time. It should be thoroughly representative, from every municipality on the canal. Thanking you for space.

Yours truly,
J F. LILLICRAP.

A Thought For To-day

PRICELESS TREASURES

Since life is best measured by comparison, memories are essential to judgement.

To reckon with the present and to anticipate the future, it is necessary to use recollections of the past as a gage.

Memories, delightful and distressing, gay and sad, serve as counselors and consolers and to inspire and entertain as they grow in magnitude and variety.

Some leaves of memory may seem to rustle mournfully like the last withered leaves of a forest driven by a wintry blast but cheerfully colorful memories will be intermingled like gay illustrations in a book of romance and adventure and some sweet memories always will remain as perpetually green and fragrant as fur pines and evergreens.

We do not live fully, beautifully, or usefully without memories.

DON'T EXAGGERATE TO YOUR CHILD

Children are all thrilled by fairy stories, and I see no harm in telling these tales to them, but one must not make the mistake in trying to convince the child that these myths are true. Children enjoy stories just as much when they know they are fairy stories, and could not really happen. If you start trying to convince your child that the Santa Claus myth is true, he will probably grow up doubting you about every other story you tell him. As he is growing up, if you really believe spinach is good for him, then eat some of it yourself, and set him a good example. First of all, really believe what you tell him, and be willing to practice what you preach.

Many a clove eater, with his cellar full of liquor, will spend hours telling his son about the evils of drinking, and the truth is that he really does not believe that alcohol is so injurious or he would not use it himself, but exaggerates to his son and tells him a lie he has often heard or read about.

Many a man, with his pockets full of stogies, will discourse at length with his son or daughter upon the bad effects of courting Lady Nicotine. When the truth is that he has smoked practically all his life, and has never felt any bad effects from it. Why, then, should he misrepresent the actual truths to his children?

The interests of children are the interest of every man, and if liquor, candy, and cigarettes are bad for the child they are also bad for the adult. Be careful when you speak to your child, that you are telling the truth, and remember that children have more need of models than of critics.

Do not be afraid of spoiling your child by making him too happy, since happiness is the atmosphere in which all good effects grow, and no harm can come from it, if he is buoyant with joy every moment of his waking hours.

If the habit of happiness is cultivated during childhood, it will stay with them all during their lives.

However, a sure way to make your child miserable is to satisfy all his demands. Selfishness will increase by too much gratification, and the impossibility of satisfying every one of his wishes, will oblige you to stop short at least after he has become headstrong.

Children dislike the idea of being idle, and it is your duty as a parent to direct them, in their study and play every hour of the day. Do this by positive direction, rather than negative. If you wish your child to play in his own yard, do not give him the bad suggestion that he must not play in the yard next door. Make his own yard attractive to him, and teach him by positive suggestion what you want him to do. Children have a very poor understanding of the word not, but a good conception of such words as do this, and do that.

Do not threaten them with some terrible punishment, if they disobey you. If punishment seems necessary or desirable be sure and promise them the kind of punishment that you can execute without injuring them. The training of your children is a profession, and no lies or exaggeration should be necessary in telling the truths about life.

QUESTION: Catherine C. writes: I enjoy reading your articles on the subjects of diet and health and find them very helpful. Would you kindly answer the following questions:

1. What do you advise as a substitute for bread or potatoes?
2. Which is the most injurious evil—tea or coffee?
3. Is it necessary for good health to sleep with head to North?
4. Is there any remedy for swollen joints not caused by rheumatism, to all appearances?

ANSWER: 1. Fresh, non-starchy vegetables are the best substitute.

2. Tea, most probably. If either tea or coffee are taken without cream or sugar, they act as a stimulant but are not beneficial.

3. Makes no particular difference, but if possible for you to do so, arrange your bed in that way. People cannot usually observe this rule.

4. Swollen joints usually indicate rheumatism and it would be well to watch your diet. Hot fomentations might relieve; also bathing afflicted parts in hot epsom salts water.

QUESTION: Mrs. Agnes F. writes: I have a very acid condition of the stomach and intestines. Am eating most vegetables. Can't eat fruits as I have bladder trouble. Would you recommend a fast and for how long? How do I break a fast?

ANSWER: I would recommend an orange juice fast for about ten days. Take one-half glassful orange juice with same (or more) amount of water; alternate with milk of Magnesia (one-half teaspoonful to glass of water) every two hours. Follow your fast with a low proteid breakfast and dinner; have a raw salad vegetable lunch. For breakfast use the following morning meal: One coddled egg, five stewed prunes and two or four slices of Melba Toast. Always take two warm enemas and two shower baths daily when fasting.

DR. FRANK CRANE'S DAILY EDITORIAL.

"MOM" AND "POP"
By Dr. Frank Crane.

A correspondent wants something done about "pop" and "mom."

He writes: "A dignity and sacredness seem to attend the very words 'mother' and 'father' coming from the lips of the child taught to use them, and are unfelt and unknown where inane expressions such as 'pop' and 'mom' are used."

Some sort of a law or organization or crusade ought to be started, he thinks, and I ought to start it.

But I won't. I gently but firmly decline.

I read the newspaper story of the girl swimmer who conquered the wind and rain and shifting currents of the English Channel.

It is a story of pluck and determination triumphant, but it is more than that.

It is the story of the influence of a girl's admiration and love for her mother.

On the side of the boat which accompanied her she had the words written, "Think of Mother," and when she had triumphed she said to reporters, "She really did it."

When her trainer advised her to give up the attempt as a storm broke and the waves rose near the English coast, she is quoted in one cablegram as saying:

"No, no, I am doing this for mom."

That sort of knocked the props out of a crusade against the word "mom."

It was, there, anything but an inane expression.

Few examples of greater respect and affection have been seen in recent years.

So I don't warm up greatly to the proffered role of being forth faring Coeur de Lion in this new crusade.

For, after all, the important thing about a word is its connotation.

The name is never so important as what is signified by it.

"Mom" with a connotation of affection wins hands down over "Mother" with an accompaniment of cold estrangement.

The attitude is always significant rather than the expression.

Don't Tell the Wife

BY WILLIAM B. COURTNEY

SYNOPSIS

Ranny Forbes, star polo player, and his beautiful wife, Joan, are temperamental mismates. Joan wants a divorce. Ranny hesitates, loving her, although secretly knowing she loves Abner Gratman. Lacking proof that Joan is faithless he plans to trap her and Abner while they are all on a week-end cruise on the yacht of Stivner, a billionaire lumber king, whom Ranny cultivates for business reasons. Clare, a widow, vamps Ranny. Stivner, loving Clare, is jealous of Ranny. Ranny, enlisting Stivner's aid, springs his trap—but it is a boomerang, for instead of catching Abner, it reveals Clare in Ranny's room, before the whole crowd.

CHAPTER XI.—Continued.

When upon Ranny's astounded brain there burned the picture of Clare stepping out of that carefully prepared closet trap, instead of Abner, the prey he had expected, he staggered back aghast and a gurggling, hoarse cry—half gasp, half sob!—escaped his lips.

Joan, too, screamed aloud—then choked her voice off by pressing to her lips hands so tense that the knuckles gleamed white.

Clay's dumfounded bewilderment was on a par with Ranny's; and as for Stivner and Captain Marty, a mildly swung feather would have bowled both off their legs.

The guests in general, clucking and nudging and staring like so many barnyard hens delighted by a windfall of kernels, felt that this was an eminently satisfactory and exciting grist to their appetite for scandal which had been so keenly whetted by the previous signs and portents.

Clare remained the one cool, calm oasis of reason in that hot desert of emotions.

Ranny's dramatic opening of the door had automatically shut off the bell. This was fortunate; for if that bell had continued its insistent jangling it would have tortured a whole crowd's frayed nerves into a madness, turned that room into a psychological Saturnalia.

"Don't you know?"

As it was, the distracted Ranny had all he could do to keep his twitching hands from furiously clawing the insipid smile off Clare's face.

The compromising aspects of her predicament, the immodest circumstances of her attire, the obvious rage that was swiftly replacing pure amazement in Ranny's face, disturbed Clare not at all. She smirked at Ranny, then with careless and studied defiance met the gleaming eyes of the crowd—gave them back glare for stare, and with interest.

Three full minutes passed before Ranny found his voice—three soundless eternities in which he lived and died a thousand deaths at a thousand torture stakes.

Three minutes in which the only sounds were a shuffling of feet, and the only movements were an involuntary stepping forward from the sundeck door of Clay and the captain, an edging closer of Stivner and the gaping mongers at his heels, and a brazen shrugging of Clare's dimpled shoulders under Ranny's open mouth as she turned the full battery of her baby stare and perpetually "misunderstood" eyes upon him.

Three minutes in which the only eloquence was that silently engraved upon the faces of the principals—watchfulness on Clay's, incredulity giving way to fierce thankfulness on Joan's, quick suspicion deepening into ordinate rage on Stivner's.

And on Ranny's bronzed and classic features, little short of an itching impulse to commit homicide!

"What," he gulped at length at Clare, "are you doing here, Mrs. Clemoneau? How did YOU get in there?"

If the fate of the whole world, instead of a mere handful of humans and a perfectly good yachting cruise, had depended on her answer, Clare could not have dwelt with more relish upon the leisure and the nature of her drawled reply:

"Don't YOU know?" She smiled archly into Ranny's baffled eyes, then nodded ingratiatingly around the eager circle of witnesses and shrugged, as though it were the most natural thing in the world for her to be where she was. "Why, for goodness sake, what's all the excitement, anyhow?"

Joan, who had regained control of her nerves after the first shock, lost them again now, but for a different reason, and started forward with a little scream as if to rend Clare into bits:

"You immoral little wretch! How do you dare to be so lewd and bold?"

"Steady, Mrs. Forbes!"

It was Livingstone Stivner's voice, crackling now in this cabin of the rolling yacht as potently, as deadly cold and ruthless, as it ever had across directors' tables or among the great redwoods of his bitterest lumber fights. He ranged himself, bristling, in front of Joan and between Clare and Ranny.

"Leave this to me!"

Ranny's own rage against the meddlesome, blundering Clare suddenly oozed out as he read in Stivner's accusing face and raging mien a total switch of sympathy, a devastating loss of faith.

Startled, Ranny hastily scanned the circle of watchers. It was the same all around. In every pair of eyes he encountered hostil suspicion—amusement in some, and not a little contempt, but always accusation.

It suddenly dawned upon Ranny that he was in a very, very deuce of a jam! Far from being the injured aggressor, by some erratic and unexplained twist of a malignant fate he found himself on the defensive.

Stivner was speaking; in frigid, incisive tones.

"Forbes, I'll admit I don't quite know all the ins and outs of your little game yet. No doubt there are certain little underhand tricks of polo that can be carried into your social activities. This much I do know; that you've publicly humiliated and disgraced your wife, made a jackass of yourself, a shameless exhibition of this—woman and abused my hospitality, and every canon of gentlemanly taste—"

"Oh, I say now, hold your horses, old man, and give me a chance to explain—"

"There can be no other explanation to the finding of a half-clad woman in your room except—"

"Careful, sir!" shouted Ranny, in a resurgence of his own fighting blood. "You know as much about this as I do. You know that I just came in here a moment before you and that my wife was here. If you want any explanation, ask her!"

Ranny indicated Clare with a savage jerk of his thumb.

"Don't let him put you off," cried Joan, capitalizing the unexpectedly favorable tide to her own fortunes. "Make them BOTH explain!"

But Stivner was heedless of logic, indifferent to explanations. He was hitting out freely, recklessly, like a wounded bull, letting the implications fall where they may. And indeed he was wounded—to the heart, with the dull, aching futility of a strong, rich man who can get everything and anything in the world, except the one woman he desires.

"There's no explanation possible here," he snarled, "except that you're a cad."

"I wouldn't let any man call me that!" cried Ranny, beside himself with the black injustice of Stivner's words.

He lashed a savage blow at the lumber king's chin.

Captain Marty calmly interposed his steely Maine bulk just in time to abort the first blow in what promised to be a first-class shindy. It was against the captain's principles to ever stop a just fight; but more so, to ever permit an unnecessary one.

Of course, a two hundred and fifty dollar a month skipper had to be somewhat tactful in interfering between ten million a year society scrappers. So he soothed gently:

"Don't act like boys, gentlemen. It stands to reason there's some misunderstanding here, and we ought to get at the bottom of it."

Ranny and Stivner were more concerned with getting at the top of each other.

Clay lent his moral and physical support to Captain Marty in keeping peace, holding Ranny, while Marty stood before Stivner.

"Don't be a fool, Livingstone!" scolded Clare.

"Shut up!" said Stivner.

"Are all of your guests here, sir," asked Captain Marty suggestively. "Isn't one man missing?"

Some of the choler began to drain out of Stivner's face; his eyes grew a little more reasonable as he looked around. To be sure now, it was funny that of all on the boat, Abner was the only one missing. He nodded to Captain Marty:

"Yes, Mr. Gratman!"

Just then there was a commotion in the corridor, the guests opened a lane, and Abner himself appeared—in a dressing gown, drowsy, for all the world a man just awakened from a sound sleep.

"Where's the fire!" he yawned lightly.

HEAT AND COLD DON'T AFFECT MODERN CLOCKS

Timepieces Fitted With Apparatus To Counteract Temperature Changes.

VARIOUS SYSTEMS.

Watches Have Split Balance Wheels—Clock Pendulums Complicated.

Temperature changes are often blamed for the breaking of main springs in watches, but this is seldom the case unless the main spring is wound up tight, and the watch is not running, say Peterborough jewellers. Then a sudden change to colder temperature will make the metal in the spring contract and it will break.

In the making of watches and clocks, effects of a change in temperature on the time keeping have been well looked after. In the first watches and clocks that were made the effect of temperature was not considered and it was found that in cold weather the watch gained time and in real hot weather it lost.

In watches this defect was overcome by the broken balance wheel which is made of two metals riveted closely together. One of these metals has a greater co-efficient of expansion than the other and thus the semi-circle is maintained and there is plenty of room for expansion as the ends of each half of the balance wheel do not touch.

There are different ways in overcoming this defect in the pendulum of clocks. In cold weather the pendulum string used to contract and the clock would run faster and in hot weather the string would expand and the clock would run slower. To overcome this a means had to be found whereby the length of the pendulum would remain the same. In some pendulums they are made of a series of rods with different co-efficients of expansion and with different lengths. Some of these rods are attached to a bar across the top of the pendulum and when they expand it is downwards. Other rods are atttached to the bar across the bottom of the pendulum and when they expand it is upwards. Thus the two sets of rods maintain an equal balance.

Other pendulums have liquids in the bobs which expand and contract with the heat and cold respectively. The rod of the pendulum does the same but the centre of gravity is always maintained the same.

THEATRE

AT THE CAPITOL.

COLLEEN MOORE IN "IT MUST BE LOVE"

A light, entertaining picture is the feature at the Capitol Theatre for the first half of this week, in "It Must Be Love," with Colleen Moore, the glorified flapper, in the stellar role. The little lady who made such a hit in "Irene' and other pictures has the part of Fernie Schmidt in this production, a damsel haunted by the sights and smells of a delicatessen shop and pledged by her parents to a lover who is a creator of "the world's best bologna" and an eater of marvellous powers. One can always hear the scruch of the celery and get a whiff of the limburger as Peter Halitovsky ("Russian for halitosis,' as Fernie's boy friend put it) consumes quantities of delicatessen supplies. He is a real sticker, however, and when Fernie and her chums attend the Saturday night dance at the neighborhood dancing palace, he accompanies them, returning later to report on Fernie's actions to her father. Enraged at her liking for anyone but the doughty Peter, Schmidt, Senior, orders her from the house. There is a touch of real artistry in the tears shed by the little lady at this juncture. She is one of the best "weepers" in the movies, if this performance is any guarantee along that line. So Fernie departs and contrives later to get a job in the same department store which shelters Jack Dugan, the gentleman who has intrigued her fancy. She has various misadventures in the carrying out of her duties, and later, returns once more to the old home, to find Peter awaiting her. Just how Jack and she solve the difficulty and convert the stern parent Schmidt to their plans is an interesting ending of the story, with Fernie settling down later to a life of delicatessen smells and products.

There is another entertaining episode in "Bill Grimm's Progress" and the usual run of excellent short reels.—Jeanette.

AT THE GRAND.

"BEAU GESTE" AN AMAZING ADVENTURE ROMANCE AT THE GRAND OPERA HOUSE FRIDAY AND SATURDAY.

"Beau Geste" and the "Blue Water"; "Beau Geste", so named because of his remarkable physical beauty, mental brilliance and general distinction. "Beau Geste's" adventures have been made into the wonder picture of the year by Paramount and which will find its opening before the Peterboro theatregoers at the Grand Opera House on next Friday.

To the thousands who have read Major P. C. Wren's white-hot romance in book form, and those whom the title has attracted during the tremendous successful engagements of the production throughout Eastern Canada will agree with the enthusiasts that "Beau Geste" as a motion picture, is as fascinating and interesting as "Beau Geste" as a novel

The adventure of Digby, John and Beau are enthralling Particularly so the manoeuvres of "Beau" He is incurably romantic, and if he suddenly and quitotically does some romantic thing, he does it thoroughly and completely—and he sticks to it until it is done. But the plot of the story? Well, it is near the end of a every interesting dinner party that the biggest and finest sapphire in the world, valued at three-quarters of a million francs, is stolen from Lady Brandon, who is the lovely aunt of the three Gestes. While the stone is being admired and handled, it suddenly and mysteriously disappears. "Beau Geste", the favorite nephew of Lady Brandon, takes the blame upon himself, thinking that either his brother John or Digby has succumbed to its alure. "Beau' disappears in order to cast suspicion upon himself. Follows an exciting chase to the Nigerian Frontier and back, plot upon plot, mystery upon mystery, and faith upon faith—with no solution offered until the beautiful—the magnificent —gesture at the end.

Supporting Ronald Colman in the title role are Alice Joyce, Mary Brian, Neil Hamilton, Ralph Forbes, Noah Beery, Norman Trevor, William Powell, Victor McLaglan and thousands of others.

"Beau Geste" will be seen at the Grand Opera House commencing Jan 28th and 29th and will be accompanied by the big "Beau Geste" orchestra and special musical score. All seats are reserved.

AT THE REGENT

ROMANCE, THRILLS AND ACTION ABOUND IN "THE WHEEL."

Action, thrills and romance are promised in large and dramatic proportions when "The Wheel," the William Fox production, comes to the Regent Theatre, to-day, for a three days' run. This picture, directed by Victor Schertzinger, was adapted from the famous John Golden stage play by Winchell Smith. Montague Glass wrote the titles.

Beautiful Claire Adams will be seen opposite Mr. Ford. Margaret Livingston and Mahlon Hamilton have important featured roles. A most capable supporting cast has been gathered to present the story. Among the notables are David Torrence, Clara Horton, Julia Swayne Gordon and George Harris.

OUTLINE OF SCIENCE — LXXXVI—How Science Aided a King. — by MAX HAHN

WHEN THE GOLDSMITH DELIVERED TO THE KING OF SYRACUSE HIS NEW CROWN THE KING BECAME SUSPICIOUS. HE SUSPECTED THAT HE HAD NOT USED ALL OF THE GOLD HE HAD GIVEN HIM. BUT HE COULDN'T PROVE THAT HE HAD BEEN TRICKED BECAUSE THE CROWN WEIGHED EXACTLY THE SAME AS THE GOLD NUGGETS.

© McClure Newspaper Syndicate

KNOWING THAT ARCHIMEDES WAS HONEST THE KING ORDERED HIM TO SEE WHETHER HE HAD BEEN CHEATED. THIS SEEMED AN ALMOST IMPOSSIBLE TASK. ANCIENT SCIENCE COULD OFFER NO AID. AS ARCHIMEDES STEPPED INTO A POOL ONE DAY, HOWEVER, HE PERCEIVED THE SOLUTION.

ARCHIMEDES' ATTENTION HAD BECOME FOCUSSED ON THE WATER HIS BODY DISPLACED IN THE POOL. ALTHOUGH SCANTILY CLAD HE DASHED THROUGH THE STREETS TO HIS HOME, WHERE EXPERIMENTS SHOWED HIM THAT THE WEIGHT OF A SOLID CAN BE LEARNED BY COMPARISON WITH AN EQUAL BULK OF WATER.

THE TESTS JUSTIFIED THE KING'S SUSPICIONS. INSTEAD OF DISPLACING JUST THE AMOUNT OF WATER WHICH A LUMP OF GOLD OF THE SAME WEIGHT WOULD DISPLACE THE CROWN ALTERED THE WATER LEVEL. THIS SHOWED THAT SOME OTHER METAL HAD BEEN USED WITH THE GOLD AND RESULTED IN THE GOLDSMITH'S ARREST.

Scotia's Poet, Burns

Master of Satire : Great Love Lyrics

(By S. L.)

AS YEARS roll on the Burns' Anniversary again comes to the fore, with the celebration of the birth of Robert Burns, 166 years ago, on the 25th of January, 1759, Scotia's darling poet. Let me take you amongst his works as "A Master of Satire." The passionate, burning love that was inspired in Burns by his country rendered him all the more tyrannous toward those who by their action, besmirched her purity.

The entire fury of his vitriolic vocabulary was poured upon them, they were pierced by the venom of his irony, and the lash of his fierce invective scourged them with unbridled force.

As a master of that most difficult literary form, Satire, Burns takes his place amongst the world's masters, and is numbered amongst the three greatest who have employed this form in English.

His satire has not the keen, incisive rapier-stroke of Swift, the volcanic force and abundance of Dryden, but in its fiery intensity stands above all others, including his acknowledged master, Pope, who best can no more be compared with Burns' best than the plays of George Bernard Shaw with those of Shakespeare.

Burns' masterpiece in this sort is undoubtedly "Holy Willie's Prayer." Get your Burns' works from the shelf, and enjoy this marvellous piece of script. His trenchant attack has for all time personified the smug, sanctimonious, snivelling, self-satisfied hypocrisy of the "Unco Guid" in William Fisher, and has damned him to immortality.

The whole tribe of "Holy Willies" is here drawn in the naked ugliness of its selfish pomposity and cringing vileness.

First, we see them—not "as ithers see them;"

"Yet, I am here, a chosen sample,
To show thy grace is grace and ample,
I'm here a pillar in thy temple,
Strong as a rock,
A guide, a buckler and example
To a' thy flock."

A wonderful picture of the upright man—drawn by himself—but the poet has a truer picture to paint, and "His Holiness" becomes a contemptible, sneaking, back-biting, self-seeking parasite:

"Lord, in the day of vengeance try him,
Lord, visit them wha did employ him
And pass not in thy mercy by 'em
Nor hear their prayer:
But for thy people's sake destroy 'em,
And dinna spare
But, Lord, remember me and mine,
Wi' mercies ten, coral and divine.
That I for gear and grace may shine,
Excelled by nane,
And a' the Glory shall be thine;
Amen! Amen!"

Then let us take Burns from another aspect—Burns the Lover—He is seen at his best in his love lyrics—poems and songs of passion, which have seldom, if ever, been surpassed in any language, and which will never be forgotten as long as English is spoken.

An astonishing number of the most beautiful tender and vivacious songs, chiefly written to the old Scottish airs, were composed by the poet. The absolute, straight-forward simplicity of his style appeals to everyone who is capable of sympathy or love.

Simple, unaffected, tender-hearted Burns! He has left us his whole life-story in song, his ideals, his aspirations, his loves—even his mistakes and failures, for he was human like all of us, and never concealed his shortcomings.

If the love muse of Rabbie Burns had not the gauzy wings of Keats' fancy, or the polished genius of Byron's romanticism, at least it was daringly true, and at all times completely appropriate to the theme.

Whether his lay was sad and mournful as in "Mary Morrison," or "Thou Lingering Star" or whether he climbed to joyous heights as in "Green Grow the Rashes," he was true and faithful to life, and experienced. There was no artificiality about his measures; his ready pen portrayed life as he found it.

It is this style of perfect plainness, rendering actual experiences, whether physical or mental, with absolute fidelity, which has most of all endeared Burns to the masses, and made him a medium of poetical quotations aptly suited to every phase of human thought or endeavour.

Burns, in his love poems, is at times gentle, gallant and idealistic, as in his splendid song, "Afton Water," or he may be sad or wistful, disillusioned, as in "Ye Banks and Braes," "And Ye Fond Kiss." His songs compass the entire gamut of human emotions.

In "My Love Is Like a Red, Red Rose," perhaps, we see him at the summit of his lyrical genius, telling the story of impassioned love as surely it had never been told before.

One cannot think without regret of such a song, embodying as it does, such passionate protestations of undying faith and attachment, in regard to human love, which is, alas! too often but a transient glimpse of sunshine seen through clouds—a chimerical ideal never attained in life.

Burns' songs are legion, and the fame of them is not confined to his own countrymen, indeed, the finest criticism of his words was written by a Frenchman!

Among the best known songs of Burns, one need only mention, in addition to those already noted, "O' a' the Ants," "The Lea Rig," and "The Lass O' Ballochmyle."

Perhaps, when the next anniversary comes, I will endeavour to give a synopsis of opinions of "Great Men" of every nationality, on the Ploughman Lad.

"Oh, wad some po'er the giftie gie us,
Tae see oorsels as ithers see us."

BURNS' LETTER REALIZES 250 POUNDS

An extremely interesting, but undated letter of one page quarto, from Burns to Henry Erskine, Dean of Faculty, Edinburgh, Scotland, was sold at the Anderson Galleries, New York recently for 1,250 dollars (250 pounds). It was written in one of the poet's more serious moods, in which he says:—"I suspect my political tenets, such as they are, may be rather heretical in the opinion of my best friends. I have a few principles in religion and politicks which I believe I would not easily part with: but for all the etiquette of, by whom, in what manner, etc., I would not have a dissocial word about it with any one of God's creatures, particularly an honoured patron or a respected friend."

A copy of the Kilmarnock edition of Burns' "Poems, chiefly in the Scottish Dialect" (1786) in fairly good condition, bound in old calf, realized $1450 at Sotheby's saleroom in London.

A RARE BURNS

The first American edition of Burns, which was published in Philadelphia in 1788, rarely comes on the market, but a fine copy, bound in full blue crushed morocco, has just been sold for $140. This is the first occasion they have handled this rare edition, which few booksellers have had the privilege of passing through their hands.

POET'S LOVE OF THE FARM

Two Burns' manuscripts were sold at Sotheby's saleroom in London the other day. From the late Mr. Thomas Allan, of Lauriston Castle, Midlothian, came the MS. of Burns' "Sketch of an Epistle to R. Graham, Esqr., of Fintry," on four folio pages, written on both sides of the paper, which sold for $1075. This is the second epistle to R. Graham relating to the Dumfries election. It begins:—

"Fintry, my stay in worldly strife,
Friend o' my muse, friend of my life,
Are ye as idle as I am?"

The same property also included a letter from the poet, dated Mauchline, 3rd March, 1788, "To Patrick Miller, at his lodgings, Edinr," relating to his negotiations for taking a lease of the Ellisland Farm. In the letter, which realized $490, Burns writes:—"I am fondest of a farming life, and that generosity and benevolence, so very unlike the world, but so very like yourself, make the ardently wish to be your tenant." He then goes on to discuss the state of the land, rent, and conditions of tenancy, etc.

In a recent sale in New York, an autograph letter of Robert Burns, dated "Dumfries, April 22, 1791," brought 2160 dollars, or roughly 490 pounds. The letter, addressed to Charles Sharpe of Hoddam, Dumfriesshire, is signed "Jolinie Faa," and is mentioned in the "Dictionary of National Biography" in the sketch of Sharpe, the artist. Another letter from Burns to William Creech, publisher, dated "Mauchline, March 31, 1788—sold for 290 dollars (58 pounds). In this letter Burns refers to his farm at Mauchline, mentions Mr. John Sommerville ("a particular friend of mine") and states that he needs "that sum your kindness procured me for my copyright."

GAS MADE WOMAN'S STOMACH FEEL HOLLOW

"I had gas on the stomach and would wake up with a hollow feeling as if I had not eaten for days. Since taking Adlerika my appetite is good and nothing disagrees with me."—Mrs. Mary Noble.

Adlerika is a compound of the best saline intestinal cleanser with glycerine, buckthorn, cascara and other gas-expelling and detergent elements. It is excellent for Intestinal Stasis a disease due to modern ways of living and which is often the true cause of sour stomach, gas bloating, nervous dyspepsia and restless sleep.

Unlike most medicines, Adlerika acts upon BOTH upper and lower bowel, giving the intestines a REAL cleansing and bringing out old poisonous matter you never thought was in your system. Even if bowels move daily, you will be surprised how much more old matter Adlerika brings out which may have been causing all your trouble. In slight disorders, like occasional constipation, GAS bloating, indigestion or sick headache, ONE spoon ful always brings relief.

Doctors Praise Adlerika.

Dr. H. L. Shoub, New York: "Adlerika, in addition to its intestinal cleansing, checks the growth of intestinal bacteria."

Dr. A. C. Curl: "I prescribe Adlerika with highly satisfactory results."

Dr. J. Weaver: "In my 50 years' practice, I have found nothing to excel Adlerika."

J. E. Puckett: "After using Adlerika, I feel better than for 20 years. Awful impurities were eliminated from my system."

Dr. F. M. P. (name withheld by request): "I use Adlerika in all bowel cases. Some require only one dose."

No matter what you have tried for your stomach and bowels, Adlerika will surprise you. At leading druggists.

Scout News and Notices

THIRD PETERBORO TROOP "VIMY"

Of what use is signalling to Boy Scouts? Why is it included in the Scout Tests?

To answer these questions it is necessary to explain what signalling is. Signalling is a means of communication between parties who are unable to talk to one another. Primitive man used drum signals, smoke signals, hand and staff signals. Nowadays men use the deaf and dumb alphabet, flags, semaphore, heliograph, telegraph, wireless, etc.

Scouts start with hand, staff, and whistle signals. One long blast of the whistle mean "Freeze" or Look out for the next Signal. Then as they progress in the work, they take up flag signals, for which they must know the Semaphore or Morse Code. Semaphore is the easier to learn, but Morse can be used in so many ways, that it is the better one to learn. Good Scouts learn both.

To be able to stand on a hill and carry on a conversation with flags with someone a mile or so away takes keen eyes. A scout must have good eyesight, so Boy Scouts are trained in many ways to develop their powers of observation, and signalling is one of the best of ways. Signalling requires a good memory and quick, accurate thinking. The muscles of the arms and chest are wonderfully developed through signalling. It is good exercise and it is fun.

Then the romance of signalling appeals to all boys—to talk with someone half a mile away with flags, to flash a messge across the sky, to thump a hollow tree, sending Morse signals echoing through the woods, all appeal to a boy's imagination. He is encouraged to think out many different ways of sending Morse, such as twitching the corner of the mouth, or moving a finger, etc.

Friday night was snigalling night with the Third, Morse signalling being studied mostly. Practically all the Troop know about half the alphabet and in a couple of weeks should know all the letters and figures.

A.S.M. sent a short message to the Scouts at the end of the Instruction Period which was well received. One point was given for each correct word and two points for each correct Scout signature on the sheet.

A couple of knot tying games were played. It is surprising how quickly Scouts forget their knots.

Another period of instruction was allowed, some Patrols taking Semaphore signalling, and others different work.

At the Council Circle, the Chickadees gave a good programme of riddles and jokes, varied with a song by the whole Troop. The hockey team was organized, with the following tentative line-up:

Goal, J. Glayton; defense, B. Ross, A. Cocks, G. Barns; forwards, P. Elliston, J. Gray, B. Inch, D. Fraser, D. McHoull, A. Taylor, A. Inch. A practice will be held this week, day and hour to be announced later.

After an exciting night, the competition stands as follows: Hounds 136½, Chickadees 134½, Hawks 130¾, Wolves 126.

NEW WAYS WITH OLD POTATOES

Russian Stuffed Potatoes—Cook large evenly formed potatoes with their skins on. Peel and scoop out the inside, leaving the outside shell in the form of a cup. Now put three tablespoons of butter in a frying pan, add one finely chopped onion, fry to a light golden color, add the insides of the potatoes that have been mashed and a little salt and pepper. Pack this into the potato cups, sprinkle over each some buttered fine bread crumbs. Set them in a buttered baking dish and brake for a quarter of an hour more.

CHANNEL SWIMMERS.

Not all the channels lie
Within the ocean blue,
And not all those who try
Are cheered for what they do.

The monotone and grind
That life on most confers,
Gives us a need to find,
The way to win our spurs.

As deadly is the irk
As floating seas of Kelp,
Yet few are they who shirk
Who live to love and help.

Against the ebbing tide,
With darkness settling fast,
The soul is sorely tried
In waters, cold and vast.

The shining, distant shore
We struggle to attain,
That those we care for more,
May never know the strain.

But mindful of the call,
To finish that begun—
We strive and spend our all
In sticking till we've won.

PRESENTATIONS MADE AT TWEED

W. D. Davis Receives Gifts From Many of His Friends.

TWEED, Jan. 25.—At an informal gathering of a few of his friends at the home of Dr. Bowlby, Mr. W. D. Davis, who recently disposed of his business and is leaving town, was presented with a club bag and a number of toilet requisites.

Dr. Mather explained the object of the gathering and paid a high tribute to Mr. Davis as a citizen. There were only two faults he could find with him—he is bald-headed and a bachelor. The former is incurable but he saw no reason why a change of environment could not effect a cure in the latter case.

Reeve Rollins made the presentation and had many complimentary things to say regarding Mr. Davis' standing in the community where he had resided so long.

Mr. Davis made a brief but fitting reply, and expressed his regrets at leaving Tweed, where he had so many warm friends.

Following the presentation, those in attendance were the guests of Dr. Bowlby at a luncheon in Clark's restaurant where a very pleasant hour was spent.

On Saturday evening Mr. Davis was presented by the members of the Fire Brigade with a fountain pen Masonic button. Mr. Davis has been a member of the brigade since 1895 and for twenty-five years has been a faithful secretary-treasurer of the organization, where his services were very highly appreciated.

A few days previous a number of Mr. Davis' railway friends presented him with a masonic ring.

UNDERSEA MOUNTAIN.

LONDON, Jan. 25.—A tall peak out in mid-Atlantic, Mount Laura Ethel, would tower high among the lofty ranges of the Rockies, but its summit falls fathoms short of sunlight, according to scientists here. Another buried marvel is the Congo Canyan, bigger than the Grand Canyn of Arizona, but submerged far under the surface of the Atlantic.

CERTIFICATES PRESENTED.

Nine Scholars of Bethany United Sunday School Win Diplomas.

BETHANY, Jan. 25.—A very fine service was held on Sunday afternoon in connection with the regular Sunday School session of the United Sunday School, it being the occasion of the presentation of certificates to those who had attended 49 Sunday school session during the past year, sickness not being counted.

Nine young people qualified for the certificates and after a short talk from the superintendent, Mr. A. H. Monk, the young people Edward Welch, Henry Casement, Leonard Walsh, Vincent Jackson, Margaret Jackson, Harold Jackson, Lorraine Jackson, Karl Monk, and Pauline Thorndyke were called to the platform and were presented with Robert Raikes diplomas. Rev. A. Poulter, who was present, spoke for a few minutes commending the scholars on their faithful attendance and the teachers making the lesson period attractive enough for the continuous attendance throughout the year trusting that something of more infinite value had been personally received by each young person than the mere certificate would indicate.

THE HALL STORE

ANNUAL SUPPER HELD BY U.F.O.

S. C. McKee of Co-operative Company Addresses Centreville Meeting.

ON U.F.O. ACTIVITIES

BAILIEBORO, Jan. 25.—The annual oyster supper under the auspices of the Cavan and South Monaghan United Farmers' shipping board, was held on Thursday evening in the Centreville Sunday School hall.

The supper commenced at 7 o'clock and a bountiful supper of oysters and other edibles was served until eight o'clock. The Stewart and Moncrief Orchestra providing music during the supper.

At the conclusion of the supper, the gathering retired to the U.F.O. hall, where a good programme was enjoyed, S. C. McKee of the Live Stock Commission Department of Toronto being the chief speaker of the evening.

The President of the Shipping Board, R. F. Wood, acted as chairman, while the programme was as follows:

Duet by Messrs. Clare Winslow and Tom McCammus, entitled "I'm Gonna Let the Bumble Bee Be"; encore, "My Gal Sal." The chairman then made a splendid address. Duet by Messrs. McCammus and Winslow, "Some One is Losin' Susan"; encore "The Bowery."

Mr. McKee then addressed the meeting, apologizing to the audience for not being able to have secured a lady speaker for the occasion, as has been the custom in the past. The speaker stated that lady platform speakers were very scarce, and what lady speakers they had at present were unable to be present on this occasion.

The speaker likened the efforts of the U.F.O. organization unto those of Canada's marathon swimming champion, George Young. This young man has had a beacon light ahead of him ever since he has been a child. He has been guided and encouraged by the beacon light, until at the age of seventeen years, he becomes the champion swimmer of the world. So has the United Farmers' organization had a beacon light ahead, and its ideals have been to establish a better market for Canada's products, hence better prices.

The speaker reviewed the history of the organization, and stated that twenty or thirty years ago, it was considered unnecessary to have knowledge of agriculture to become a successful farmer. In those days the man who could not become a professional man was considered good enough for the farm. But today Canada required men with sound ability to manage and run the business and agriculture of the rural districts.

"We have had the three classes of people to put up with in our organization," he said. "First, those who have been willing to devote their time and energy towards the advancement of the organization; second, those who have taken everything they could get out of it without putting anything in; and third, those who joined for curiosity sake, and who wished to do the clubs all the harm they could by carrying out tales to their enemies. However, we have followed the beacon light and have succeeded. These members who are working against the interests of the organization find they cannot destroy it, and now it is likened unto a well pruned orchard, ready to produce its fruits.

"We have men and good men in the Ottawa and Toronto Legislatures, who would never have been there had it not been for the United Farmers, and as well the organization has improved the commercial side.

"Twenty or thirty years ago, eggs sold to our local stores at nine cents a dozen, and butter at eleven cents a pound. We as farmers took our eggs to the local stores, and there they put them into tubs and pans. They remained there until the man came with a wagon and took them away. They were probably carried all the way to Toronto in a wagon. Try and imagine the condition the eggs would be in when the consumer came to purchase them. We can quite easily see where there would be fewer eggs used. But today our eggs are quickly disposed of and placed in the cold storage plants where they are kept in excellent condition until they are bought by the consumer. By having a means of keeping our eggs in a good condition we also get the foreign trade and this makes our egg prices much better.

"The Co-operative organization also has its own creamery, and it has one of the greatest outputs of butter of any creamery in Canada. There is always a ready market for the butter, and the producers not only get a high price for their cream, but every six months are paid dividends as well, and these dividends rightly belong to the producer. If you have shipped your cream to us, we have made you money.

The speaker also stressed the point of the advancement in the prices and quality of poultry. Owing to the export trade, also during the past three months we have been shipping your alsike seed to Germany where they make the best dyes in the world. This has advanced greatly the prices of alsike. The United Farmers are now doing their best and hope within the near future to have a wheat pool established in Ontario, whereby the farmers will be getting a much greater price for their wheat.

"In the live stock department, business has increased to such an extent that we now employ nine salesmen, compared with three in 1920. We find that there is an opening for a market for our live stock in the United States, as their consumption is greater than their production, and yesterday we sent our first load of hogs to Buffalo, so if we gain the export trade we will certainly get a better price for what we have left.

"Last year the amount of business transacted in the Toronto stock yards amounted to thirty-three million, seven hundred and fourteen thousand dollars. Our own branch's share amounted to eleven million, six hundren and sixty-five thousand, eleven hundred dollars. Therefore, we have a high percentage of the business. Fifty-nine per cent of the hogs sold on the open market are sold through the Co-operative Company. The coal strike in the Old Land has greatly affected our prices on hogs, as the laboring class, who are the consumers of our bacon, on account of the strike could not afford to buy Canadian bacon, but now that things are once again getting back to normal we can look for a very successful year in 1927.

"Our export market of cattle to England is also making our cattle markets much better. Cattle markets during the past two weeks have been higher than they have for a long time."

Mr. McKee explained the necessity of grading hogs. It was found necessary to do something to improve the quality of bacon in order to compete against other countries for the British trade. This system has worked out so successfully that today Canada's bacon takes third place on the British market, with a possibility of taking second place away from Ireland.

He also encouraged the farmers to stay by the sheep industry, and also the calf industry, as they were both likely to remain very profitable.

In concluding his address, Mr. McKee urged the farmers to stick to their company, and they would greatly profit by so doing.

A duet by Messrs. McCammus and Winslow, "Captain John McPherson," and the report of W. G. Waterman, delegate to the annual convention in Toronto, brought the programme to a close.

The remainder of the evening was pleasantly spent in dancing, Stewart's Orchestra furnishing the music.

WOMEN'S AUXILIARY CHOOSES OFFICERS

Christ Church Branch, Omemee, Holds Annual Meeting—Omemee News.

The annual meeting of the Women's Auxiliary of Christ Church, was held at the Rectory on Thursday afternoon with fifteen members present. The reports of the secretary, treasurer and Dorcas secretary were received. The following officers were elected for 1927:

Hon. President, Mrs. N. P. Clarke.
President, Mrs. Weir.
Vice-President, Miss Cornwall.
Rec. Secretary, Mrs. R. J. Adams.
Secretary, Miss E. Johnston.
Treasurer, Miss R. Robinson.
Dorcas Secretary, Miss E. Curry.
Dorcas Committee, Mrs. Bent, Mrs. Clement.

At the conclusion of the meeting Mrs. Weir served refreshments.

The regular meeting of the A.Y.P.A. was held in the basement of the church on Monday night with twenty-five members present. After the business of the evening had been completed, the missionary committee took charge of the programme and presented a most interesting set of slides, showing our work in the north-west, among the Indians and Eskimo; also a set on the work among the Japanese and Chinese on the west coast.

Next Monday is to be community evening, when the A.Y.P.A. will be "at home" to the young people of the Presbyterian and United Churches.

The ladies of Trinity United Church met on Thursday afternoon in the Sunday school room for their regular business meeting. There was only a small attendance.

After the devotional exercises conducted by the president, assisted by Mrs. F. G. Sandy, reports were given by the secretary and treasurer.

Correspondence was read by the Secretary which included letters of appreciation for fruit or flowers at Christmas-time from Mesdames McBain, Doube, Elliott, Rutherford, Widdis, Nugent, and Miss Ruby Feir for kindnesses shown during their recent bereavement.

A communication was received from Rev. A. C. Hie, of Bobcaygeon, business manager of the Bay of Quinte Summer School, enclosing a small rental for cutlery loaned to the school last summer.

The sum of 30 was voted to be paid Mr. Cyril Elliott for erecting the shed and the balance to be paid when the building is completed.

A resolution was passed donating $25.00 to the Women's Missionary to be in the hands of a newly appointed treasurer, Mrs. Lamb, and same to be used, if necessary, for the purchase of material for the bazar.

Two new members were added to the roll. The meeting closed with singing, followed by the Benediction, pronounced by the president, Mrs. W. Henderson.

Miss Annie Clemett was pleasantly surprised on Thursday evening, when in honor of her approaching marriage, about twenty-four of her lady friends were entertained at the home of Mrs. Lamb. The hostesses for the evening were Mrs. Jamieson, Mrs. C. Ivory, Miss E. Robinson and Mrs. Lamb. After two interesting contests had been held and the prizes had been awarded to the winners, Mrs. E. Jamieson and Miss G. M. Meredith, a scrap book designed expressly for Miss Clemett, depicting scenes of future days, was presented her and later passed around the gathering for each to inscribe her favorite recipe.

Following the lunch, a few measures of Lohengrin's Wedding March: "Here Comes the Pride," were played by Mrs. C. R. Corneil and on behalf of those present, Miss Jessie Lamb presented Miss Clemett with a beautiful Kenwood blanket and a dozen Adam pattern, engraved tea spoons. Her pleasure was evident, and was expressed in a neat reply, after which all joined heartily in singing, "For She's a Jolly Good Fellow," and "Auld Lang Syne."

Mr. E. H. Dunfee, of Williamsport, Penna., is spending a short holiday with his sister, Mrs. E. H. Mitchell.

Master Russel and Arthur Marshall have returned home, after a couple of months spent with their grand-parents, near Bewdley.

Mr. T. C. Ivory has disposed of his carding mill at Cavanville to Mr. Scott, a farmer, residing in Smith Township.

At a recent meeting of the Omemee Hockey Association, Mr. B. H. Mitchell was appointed president, Dr. McPhee manager, and Roy Faulkner, secretary-treasurer.

HORTICULTURAL SOCIETY MEETING

NORWOOD, Jan. 25. — The annual meeting of the Norwood Horticultural Society was held in the Council Chamber on Friday evening, when plans were made for beautifying the grounds in front of the Carnegie Library, also for the holding of a flower show this fall and offering suitable prizes for the best exhibit. The society may also hold a flower show in the spring and summer for the blooms at these periods.

The bonus which it is proposed to give members this year will consist of a hardy shrub, a tuberous begonia, and a dahlia. A get-a-member campaign is planned and an endeavor will be made to increase the present membership of one hundred to two hundred before the year is out.

A feature of the meeting was a very excellent report of the Provincial Horticultural Convention held in Toronto. This was given by Mrs. R. G. Lawlor.

The election of officers resulted as follows:

President—John E. Roxburgh.
Vice-Presidents — Mrs. P. M. Grover and D. B. Cutcliffe.
Secretary - Treasurer — P. M. Grover.
Directors—Mrs. E. P. Cuffe, Mrs. William Cuthbertson, Mrs. F. Pearce, Mrs. E. C. Squire, Miss B. E. Pearce, Messrs. R. G. Lawlor, Rev. T. J. O'Conor-Fenton, Dr. N. F. Sutton, W. H. Lucker, John F. Elliott.

The report of the treasurer showed the finances of the society to be in a healthy condition, the bank balance being $69.

Was Nearly Crazy With Boils All Over His Body

Mr. S. L. Burke, Barronsfield, N.S. writes:—"For some time I was nearly crazy with boils all over my body. I tried everything I could think of to get rid of them, but to no avail, for as soon as one was healed up another would appear to take its place. I was advised to take and after I had used two bottles the boils had all disappeared and I have not been troubled with them since."

MILLIONS OF MICE STILL SURVIVING

Campaign at Buena Vista, Cal., Has Not Yet Succeeded.

BAKERSFIELD, Calif., Jan. 25.—(Canadian Press).—Between 30,000,000 and 50,000,000 mice still remain in the Buena Vista lowlands, despite the millions which have migrated into the Midway Sunset Oil Fields and met death in a six weeks' campaign of trench and poison warfare, according to estimates by horticultural and biological officials, who say the count shows as low as 400 to the acres and as high as 4,000.

FOR SOUTHERN WEAR

Fine wool crepe is used for the pleated skirts now combined with thin wool sweaters, for outdoor southern sports.

PARIS PLASTRONS

V-shaped flat plastrons of self-material extend from shoulder to waist of many Paris frocks.

LEATHER COATS

This winter has brought out a crop of stunning new leather sport coats, tailored for slim, severe lines, and collared with the more durable furs.

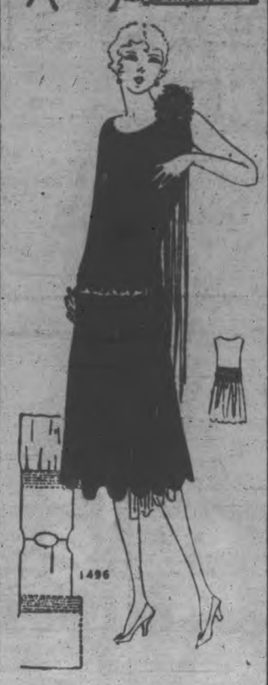
Evening Examiner "IDEAL Fashions"

by Jean Bell Hamilton



Shirring is Modish This Season

This charming frock would be very effective if fashioned of crepe satin or velvet. The two-piece skirt is shirred to the bodice in an attractive manner, thereby achieving a soft self-trimming. Tulle is fastened at the left side of the round neck and falls gracefully to the hem. Long sleeves may be added and would make this a very smart afternoon frock. NO. 1496 is for misses and small women and is in sizes 16, 18 and 20 years. Size 18 (36 bust) requires 3¼ yards 39-inch material, or 2⅛ yards 54-inch, and ⅝ yard 36-inch lining; ⅛ yard tulle. Price 20 cents the pattern.

Home sewing brings nice clothes within the reach of all, and to follow the mode is delightful when it can be done so easily and economically by following the styles pictured in our new Fashion Book. A chart accompanying each pattern shows the material as it appears when cut out. Every detail is explained so that the inexperienced sewer can make without difficulty an attractive dress. Price of the book 10 cents the copy.

FOOD AND HEALTH

A DAILY FOOD SHEET

By Winifred Stuart Gibbs
Food Specialist.

Have you perhaps read so much along the lines of dietetics that you are quite confused? Do the words, calories and vitamins, dance in zigzag fashion before your eyes without carrying to your brain any very clear idea? Do you aspire to feeding your family as well as possible without becoming a slave to figures and tabulations?

As for the confusion, there is no reason for being ashamed of that. Here is one suggestion that may help certain housewives to crystalize their information.

While you are training yourself to the proper use of your diet information, why not have a daily food sheet? Not a laboriously worked out dietary, but a simply expressed and practical working sheet.

Such a food sheet in its simplest form contains nothing but suggestions for checking up on the day's diet. Each housewife will wish to arrange her own sheet; but here is one method of arranging essential facts so as to make them equally valuable and quickly available.

These figures are approximate, but the average person should have daily the equivalent of four glasses of milk, either as a beverage or as part of cooked dishes. The equivalent of six slices of white or whole wheat bread; one egg; one potato; a scant cup of cereal; three pats of butter and from four to five tablespoons of sugar.

So much for general diet needs.

To insure iron, body-building material, and phosphorous for body cells, have one of the following each day. Lean beef, or lamb, or chicken, or fish; cheese; milk; eggs.

To insure sufficient vitamins, other than that contained in butter fat which has already been taken care of, choose at least two from the following list: Fresh or canned tomatoes, raw or buttered cabbage, spinach, onions, oranges, turnip, string, lima or white beans, bananas, fresh or canned berries, melon, cauliflower, carrots, cucumbers, celery, grapes, peaches, pineapple, squash, figs, prunes, dates or raisins.

Of course, the above does not begin to tell the whole story of proper diet. That is not my purpose in this particular paper. My purpose is to suggest a shortcut to that heavenly feeling of confidence that comes only when we know we have given our precious families enough to eat!

SAINT and SINNER

By ANNE AUSTIN

Faith, cutting thin slices of her newly baked peanut butter bread and prune nut bread, for the inevitable "refreshments" to be served later, smiled a little wistfully as the shrill clatter and clamor of girlish voices penetrated to the kitchen. She ached to join them, to laugh loudly, to shrill her own comments, say daryng, clever things that would make them laugh. But she knew, sadly, that when she did join them there would be first a constrained lull, then a renewal of the clatter, a tightening of the circle of intimacy outside which she would stand, hurt.

"But Bob loves me," she whispered to herself. "Bob didn't choose one of those bright, laughing, pretty little things. He chose me. My darling Bob!"

"Gimme a stuffed olive, Faith, 'fore you cut 'em all up for the sandwiches," Joy pressed close against the kitchen table, her sharp gray eyes watching with greedy interest.

"After that big supper you ate?" Faith answered automatically. "Here, you can have one of the nicest sandwiches I've made."

And because she was so happy in her secret knowledge of Bob's love, she bent and kissed the tip of Joy's little freckled snub nose.

"I think you're prettier'n anybody in the world," Joy told her suddenly, looking up at Faith with something like awe in her sharp eyes, as if she were seeing her sister for the first time. "You're all shiny in your eyes, like you knowed a secret you ain't gonna tell—three little niggers in a peanut shell!" she chanted.

"Not prettier than Cherry?" Faith laughed with a deep note of joyousness.

"Yeah, heaps prettier than Cherry," Joy nodded solemnly, as she crunched her irregular, pointed little teeth into the thin, dainty sandwich. "Cherry's like a Christmas tree—you know—glittery an sparkly—and show-offy—But you—you're exackly like one of our Perry pictures we bought at school for fifteen cents."

Joy blushed richly at the enormity of her own self-revelation, but Faith, wise in the ways of children, took it casually, so as not to embarrass or frighten her suddenly articulate little sister.

"That's the nicest thing anyone ever said to me, honey. Now you can lick the bowl, if you'll wash up for me. I've got to go put on my bridesmaid dress. We're all going to dress up, just as we'll be on the night of Cherry's wedding, you know, and if you'll hurry and finish up in here, you can see us But then you must go right off to bed."

As she had expected, the joyous, excited clamor in Cherry's bedroom died down when she appeared at the door. But they did not ignore her.

"We've just been going into positive spasms over Cherry's trousseau," Selma Pruitt said. "She has so many gorgeous things that Frances and I are trying to split it three ways and get married, too. All we lack are the men!" And the three rocked with laughter.

"Let's dress!" Cherry cried, when the tumult had subsided.

"My dress is in my room," Faith made herself heard over the hubbub of voices. "I'll dress and be out in a jiffy."

Selma and Frances were tugging at strings about gigantic suit-boxes, which contained their bridesmaid dresses. "Make it snappy, old dear!" Selma called out shrilly.

Faith's fine body had been reduced five pounds by the strenuousness, the worry and excitement of the past two months, and it was a figure almost slender enough to be called willowy that was soon encased in the gold-colored taffeta. The soft rich taffeta was exactly the color of the California poppy—a rich, pure, golden yellow. In contrast was the deep cape-like bertha of silver lace, embroidered with seed pearls. The full skirt was exaggerately bouffant with concealed hoops, making her waist look even more slender than it was. The taffeta skirt was cut short half way between knee and ankle, a wide band of the silver lace finishing it off, and bringing its length almost to the tips of her brocaded gold slippers. Through the meshes of the silver lace came the shimmer of gold silk stockings.

Over the warm ivory of her face and arms Faith dusted an almost unnecessary film of pearl-tinted powder, then deepened the bow of her generous mouth with her new dark-red lipstick. Over her sleek hair, parted in the middle, brought low over the ears and looped in a rich, dark coil on the nape of her neck, she fitted the large-brimmed, drooping hat of silver lace, its crown encircled with large, golden California poppies.

Self, consciously, because she had never, in all her life as a household drudge, expected to wear such magnificance, she tip-toed softly to Cherry's door, and peeped in upon the others. And in the radiance of Cherry's beauty, dressed in her wedding gown, Faith entirely forgot herself.

The Snow

By SHIRLEY RODMAN WILLIAMS

THERE is a northern town where the great white snow lies so deep in midwinter that no one makes any pretense of shoveling the walks. Everyone walks in the road. It's so informal and such fun! Who could meet another walking in the road without smiling and saying, "How d' you do?" A street car track, which forms the finest kind of a promenade, makes a single loop around the town. When it's fresh air time for the babies, out they come from the comfortable homes, all fat in woolly suits or bundled in bright sleighs, to journey "around the loop." Bright eyes peep from cuddly furs at an entrancing world where friendly mothers laugh and walk together, and brilliant white snow hangs heavy on great green pines.

DRESS

By MARY MARSHALL

Belt, tie and pocket of red leather give the note of color to this severely simple frock of gray tweed.

Leather and tweed are strong allies in present-day fashions. There are dressmakers who feel that leather is more appropriate for collars and cuffs and other trimming on a tweed coat than any sort of fur. And there are tweed coats lined with fur that are collared and cuffed with leather. It is a simple enough matter nowadays for the dressmaker or tailor to make use of leather for it is as soft as velvet, though at the same time strong. Once it usually happened that leather that felt soft was soft all through and therefore undesirable for the coat or frock that was to receive hard wear. But this is no longer the case. Then, too, leather may be had in a wide variety of colors. Bright and dull red leather is used much with gray tweed both for frocks and coats. Green leather is also used with gray, while brown leather is used against beige and tan shades.

The dressmakers sometimes speak of "kid, leather and suede," though leather is sometimes applied to all three skins. When the distinction is made the heavier sort is leather, kid is the softer, finer sort and suede is the sort with a slightly rough, velvety surface. The difference is that it is used rough side out.

Leather coats of various colors have been very much worn abroad this winter. A well-known American woman in Paris wears a shiny black leather coat lined with gray wool, when she is seen walking in the parks. For walking, simple little tweed frocks are sometimes chosen, trimmed with leather and worn with short leather coats of the same color. An overplaid green skirt and jumper, trimmed with green kid, is worn with a green kid jacket lined with black wooly material.

Leather hats are to be had but most women prefer those of soft kid to match the leather accessories. Leather buttonholes are again very much liked in Paris. Camelias of red kid are worn in the buttonhole of the navy blue or black suit. There are little bouquets cleverly made of a variety of colored leathers and worn to decorate the fur collars or scarf. One advantage of these leather flowers is that they are not harmed in the least by dampness.

HOROSCOPE

The Stars Incline, but do not Compel.

WEDNESDAY, JANUARY 26, 1927

Although the planetary influences today are not especially important, according to astrology, benefic aspects dominate.

There is a good sign for speculation in lands and real estate will be exceedingly profitable in many parts of the country.

The seers warn that while there is still unoccupied government land, effort to own a part of it should be made, for the next half century is to make such holdings impossible to obtain.

New discoveries of the Earth's elements are to endow odd and arid stretches of territory with real values, it is prognosticated.

This is not an auspicious day for seeking any sort of employment and it is well to await better planetary conditions, it is warned.

One of the signs of the times is to be increased arrogance on the part of those who have gained power and while there will be no dictator in America's government many will arise in various lines of trade, the seers foretell.

This is read as a most favorable sway for big business, and it is lucky for beginning important projects.

Governors of states are subject to beneficial direction of the stars, which encourage a keen sense of responsibility.

The seers warn that increased death rates from street accidents may be expected this year which will mark such a slaughter as to awaken the public mind to efforts to protect life.

One of the reactionary tendencies of the year in Europe will be various movements to restore monarchies and to place on thrones the heirs that have been relegated to private life, astrologers predict.

Bad manners among the younger generation will be recognized this year as a manifestation of real significance, presaging lack of respect for law and order.

Stricter modes of life are to be brought about by better standards of amusement, and by improved ideas of individual responsibility, if the signs are rightly interpreted.

Persons whose birthdate it is should maintain poise and patience all through the year which holds much good for them.

Children born on this day probably will be extremely artistic and mercurial in nature. Musical talents may be developed successfully.

LAKEFIELD FAIR BOARD MEETING

Directors Report Splendid Success at Last Year's Exhibition.

OFFICERS SLECTED.

LAKEFIELD, Jan. 25.—The annual meeting of the Lakefield Agricultural Society was held on Thursday afternoon, January 20th. The attendance was small but a large amount of business was attended to. The president, Albert Darling, was in the chair, and in his address referred to the fact that financially, the society was almost 100 ahead of last year, which was at least a step forward. It had been a matter of good business to put the race track into proper shape as had been done last year. The speaker has served on the Board of Directors about fifteen years and during that time, and in the past year as president has done his utmost for the good of the Society and always found the directors behind him. Mr. Darling closed by referring to the valuable services of Robert Webster who has done so much to make the fair successful.

A vote of thanks was tendered Mr. Webster for his assistance at the fair, and in the hall on motion of Messrs. G. A. Graham and Howard Beavis.

Mr. Webster replied in a graceful little speech, assuring the Society of the pleasure he had taken in being present at the deliberations of the annual meeting, and also in assisting in maintaining order at the Fall Fair.

The secretary, J. E. Galvin, read the report of the auditors, Messrs. Alex. Graham and J. R. Hull for the year.

During the past year 86 worth of membership tickets had been sold which was almost, if not quite, a record number. The total receipts at the Fair amounted to 454, including the gate, the grandstand and the concerts; the expense for prizes for the Fair and Field Crop Competition amounted to 667.95. The prizes for the races amounted to 150, and for the school fair to 33.77. The total receipts for the year were 1436.71, and the expenditure 1307.18, leaving a balance on hand of 129.53. It was decided on motion of Messrs. G. A. Graham and Howard Beavis to employ Departmental judges as has been done in the past.

It was suggested that a change in the judges of grain and seeds would be advisable, as it had not been satisfactory. Stephen Harrison suggested that a special judge for sheep and swine be arranged for to allow for earlier judging in these classes. Regarding the Field Crop Competition of last year, the secretary reported that it had been successful, and he had been told unofficially, that some of the best corn in the province was produced in this part of the country.

It was decided to pay the fee of 2, to the Ontario Fall Fairs' Association, as usual.

G. A. Graham urged that an effort be put forth to get the New Ontario exhibit here, as it can be procured free of charge from the Department, and would be a decided asset to the fair, being extremely interesting. Other places get it and why not Lakefield?

Albert Darling was congratulated in his achievement of selling 45 worth of membership tickets last year.

J. E. Galin was appointed Chairman for the election of officers.

The following officers were elected:
President, Albert Darling;
1st vice-president, Wallace Anderson;
2nd vice-president, H. J. Abbott;
Board of Directors: Messrs. G. A. Graham, T. Braden, Howard Beavis, Henry D. Coones, Robert Duff, Stephen Harrison, J. Blakeley, Bruce Garbutt, Alex. Graham, J. R. Hull, J. W. Ridpath, A. E. Higgins, William Tedford, Henry Beavis, C. S. Tanner, Stanley Higgins, T. Garvey and Miss B. Graham
Auditors, Messrs. Stanley Darling and A. H. Clarke.

The president said he was glad to see so many old faces on the Board of Directors, and hoped for the same pleasant relations as last year.

Wallace Anderson, vice-president, said he was grateful for the honor conferred on him and hoped for a successful year. He was glad to see a lady on the Board, as he often thought it would be a good thing.

Mr. Abbott, 2nd vice-president, thanked the meeting for the honor of being chosen to the office and feels that if all put their shoulders to the wheel that success will follow.

G. A. Graham expressed his gratification at the presence of a lady on the Fair Board.

W. Tedford assured the meeting of his support in any way possible.

T. Braden said he hoped the same men will name the fair day, as last year as "for two years we have been favored with good weather, which goes far toward making a successful fair."

Stephen Harrison will do all he can for the fair and feels that co-operation will bring success as it should. The farmers should all be interested, and there is no better class of people than the farmers.

A. E. Higgins, who makes his first appearance on the Fair Board this year, assured the meeting of his pleasure in working with the farming community, and will do all in his power to aid the society, and will assist in any way he is asked to.

Mr. Coones was pleased at last year's success, and feels "there is no reason why we should not do at least as well this year, if we have good weather."

Alex. Graham assured his fellow members of the great pleasure it is to be asked to serve with such a group of gentlemen and feels that there is no reason why the fair should not prosper.

Mr. Hull thanked the meeting for his appointment on the Board, and will do his utmost to promote the society.

The lady member, Miss Graham, thanked the meeting for her appointment which was at once an honor and a surprise, and assured them of her heartiest co-operation.

The secretary, Mr. Galvin, felt he had reason for being satisfied with the year, although, while the receipts were larger than usual, the expenditure has also increased. "We hear," said Mr. Galvin, "that the day of the small fair is about over and the automobile is blamed, as people do not keep horses for exhibition purposes to such a large extent as formerly. There are larger entries of light horses at the large fairs, for instance at Peterborough Fair, where they have a larger country to draw from than we have. The small fair, apparently, has to succumb to the large fair although the agricultural benefits are greater at the small fair, which has greater educational value, and it is for this that the Government gives grants.

"At Peterborough Fair, at the general entrance, it takes a great stretch of our imagination to think it is an agricultural exhibition; it is more like a circus, Agriculture is not given first place. It is more than seventy years ago since the first fair was held here, and great progress has been made since and, perhaps, it is too much to expect that as much progress will be made in the next seventy years."

G. A. Graham said that at Peterborough's six-day fair, those who made entries had to remain all week, and in competing with those who make it their business to travel about from fair to fair, the local exhibitor had no chance. "The object of the fall fair is educational, and we must stand together and stay with the small fair," he added. The meeting adjourned, and was immediately followed by a director's meeting, at which Messrs. R. Duff, A. E. Higgins, J. Blakeley, T. Braden and B. Garbutt were appointed a property committee. After a lengthy discussion it was decided not to send a delegate to the Fall Fair's convention.

Uncle Wiggily

To-day's Bedtime Story.

By Howard R. Garis

(Copyright, McClure Syndicate.)

UNCLE WIGGILY AND WUMPLE'S HEAD

"Hello, my little Wogglejig boy—or maybe you're a girl," said Uncle Wiggily with a laugh one morning as he hopped out of his hollow stump bungalow, and saw, just under the edge of a pie tree the hind legs and tail of one of the little wooden creatures who lived in the Bungleump across the garden.

I beg your pardon, you don't know what a pie tree is? Why, it's a tree on which, in summer apples grow, and the pies are made of apples so, naturally, an apple tree is a pie tree. That's easy. Only, of course, there were no apples on the tree now, for it was winter.

"Hello, there, little Wogglejig boy—or girl!" called Uncle Wiggily again to the wooden creature half hidden in the tangle of dried weeds at the foot of the pie tree. "What's the matter?"

But no answer came and the rabbit gentleman began to think something was wrong. He looked at the color of the hind legs and tail, which was about all he could see, and he said:

"They are yellow. Now let me think. Mazie Wogglejig is light blue, and her sister Dazie, who lost her tail—she is dark blue in color. Since this is yellow it can be neither of them. Ah! I remember! Wumple is yellow, and that must be Wumple hiding there. Hello, Wumple!" called the bunny gentleman. Then the Wogglejig boy backed out of the weeds, but he never said a word, and no wonder—for he had no head!

"Why, the idea! What happened? What's the matter?" asked Uncle Wiggily. "You've lost your head, haven't you?"

Wumple kicked with his hind legs and he kicked with his front legs and he wagged his tail, but still he never spoke.

"Of course!" exclaimed Uncle Wiggily. "I know—it isn't your fault, Wumple, that your head's gone. I suppose you were playing the scramble game in the Bungleump with your brothers and sisters and you didn't get your head back when Bobby and Um unscrambled you merry little mixers! Was that what happened?"

Not having a head with which to answer, Wumple wagged his tail from side to side. That was the same as saying "No!"

"No!" said Uncle Wiggily. You lost your head in another way. Has some one got it and won't they give it back? Is that it?"

Wumple wagged his tail up and down, which was the same as saying "yes."

by shaking his head up and down.

"Dear me! This is too bad!" sighed Uncle Wiggily. "Poor Wumple's head is gone, but he can't tell me where so I can help him look for it. I might find out, by asking a lot of questions, such as naming the different places where his head might be, and he could say 'yes' or 'no' with his tail. But that would take a long time. I wonder what I can do."

Then Uncle Wiggily saw a round acorn on the ground and with his pencil he made eyes, a nose and a mouth on the acorn. Then with his knife the bunny made a hole through the acorn and he stuck it on Wumple's wooden neck peg, which was still on his body.

"Now you have a head that will do until we can find yours," said the bunny. "Try and see if you can talk to me with that new acorn head I have made for you, Wumple, my boy!"

It was a new head, and rather strange, but Wumple found he could talk, though only in a whisper for the acorn head was not as large as his regular wooden one. And, whispering, Wumple said:

"My head dropped off when I was going to school, and rolled down that hill somewhere, in a hole I guess. I felt around trying to find my loose head, but as my eyes were in my head I couldn't see. So I thought I would stay under the pie tree until some one came along tohelp me."

"And I'll help you," offered Uncle Wiggily. "Come along, we'll look for your head." And a little later the bunny with his pink, twinkling nose and Wumple with his acorn head, found the little Wogglejig boy's regular wooden head in a clump of dried grass.

"There you are!" cried Uncle Wiggily as he put on Wumple's head for him, and took off the acorn. And Wumple was himself again. For it doesn't harm Wogglejigs in the least to take off their legs, tails or heads since they can easily be put on again.

"Be more careful of your head next time, Wumple!" warned the bunny as the little yellow chap skipped along to school.

"I will, thank you," Wumple answered. And he was. And if the knitting needle will crochet a cap to fit the head of a pin, I'll tell you about Uncle Wiggily and Bumple's leg.

SHORT STORY

TWO IN A GARDEN

(By Dorothy Douglas.)

John Scott, novelist, and a mere garden acquaintance with the girl next door—an over-the-face impersonal chat occasionally about flowers, shrubs, grubs, etc. When their separate garden operations brought them near enough the dividing line to make conversation a neighborly courtesy they exchanged ideas. Neither showed the slightest tendency to let a natural situation develop, though as a matter of fact each cherished a strong desire to know the other much better.

It was therefore with a sense of sudden loss that Scott watched his fair neighbor and her Aunt leaving apparently for a long journey—judging by the amount of luggage, steamer tagged, which burdened the station taxi. He felt sorry for her garden too; with no attention it would be unable to battle against the heat and would present a sad aspect when its owner returned.

He was relieved, a few days later, to see a comfortable-looking couple coming to the house—apparently it had been let furnished. That might insure some care being given the garden.

It didn't, however, and Scott watched with sickening feelings the rapid deterioration of the loved garden on which its fair owner had expended so much care. He used to see her, up early in the mornings, tending, and nourishing the flowers so dearly bought or coming home after business hours laden with some wear and impoverished plants. Scott supposed she had to buy at bargain prices but it was nothing less than a miracle the way they responded to good care and nourishment.

He fretted and fretted, as, day by day, the girl's garden suffered and drooped. No water, no mulching, no trimming and not even the profusion of blooms picked.

Scott took the matter in his own hands and knocked at the door of his neighbor's house.

"Madam," asked Scott, "would you object if I take a few mornings caring for this garden? I have much spare time and know the young lady who left would appreciate it. She's tremendously keen on her garden."

The tenant of the house was only too pleased, because, as she said, "We are city folks and don't know a thing about gardening."

So Scott set to work that evening with hose and hoe and clippers and enjoyed his neighborly task immensely. He enjoyed it even more when he realized suddenly that there was a charming daughter in the family and that she was standing close beside him offering him her frail assistance.

"I'm not much of a gardener," she said shyly, "but would just love to help if you would show me how." Her eyes were so pleasing and so blue that Scott was certain he would.

"You might start by cutting some sweet peas—and taking off all the withered ones," he told her and she turned obediently. He watched her tear at the vines until he couldn't stand it and swiftly handed her his blunt little scissors. "Better to cut them gently," he said, "then it doesn't destroy the buds that are arriving." He was rewarded with a soft smile.

And when she learned he was a novelist she bought one of his books and gobbled as much as she could of it while munching her crisp salad next day at lunch.

Before many weeks were passed Scott was beginning to forget the owner of the house and garden and to look forward with joy to Ethel Wade's return from the office and their evenings together. He wondered if he were fickle or whether the other interest had been merely that of two garden lovers.

Helen Fairfax and her Aunt returned on the same day that her tenants went back to the city. She was enraptured with the beauty of her garden and her eyes glowed happily.

"Yes," said Ethel, "I have worked terribly hard taking care of it all by myself. She looked at Helen swiftly, then added, "I asked to borrow a hoe from that man next door but he was so boorish about it that I wouldn't take it."

Helen glanced back in amazement. "Oh, he didn't look like that type of man. I won't borrow from him, then." Which of course was exactly what Ethel wanted.

But next morning early when the sun was just over the house tops, Helen slipped out into her garden and was touching all her plants with loving fingers, pressing her face into the big roses, when she was startled to hear the voice of Scott welcoming her home.

She smiled gaily and returned his greeting. "I am glad to get back to my flowers," she told him, "and that young girl says she has worked like a slave so it would be nice for me to come back to Wasn't it kind of her?"

Scott couldn't quite believe his ears but certainly no one could doubt the truth in the lovely eyes looking with such curious directness into his own.

"Very," he said. His fingers found a bit of paper on which the address of Ethel was written and he calmly lit his pipe with it.

"I could hardly stand it to leave my garden, but I couldn't afford to turn down the very flattering offer my employer made me to go abroad with him as his secretary. But, Oh, how glad I am to be home."

"You're not half so glad as I am," said Scott himself and after that early morning meeting things developed rather swiftly for them. It was kind neighbors however who put Helen straight as to who took care of her garden.

SALVATION ARMY

(Contributed.)

The services held in the Temple on Sunday were each unique in character. In the Holiness Meeting in the morning, Adjutant F. Ham conducted the dedication service of the infant child of Band Secretary and Mrs. S. J. Richardson. This service, it was explained by the Adjutant, is a covenant service, when the parents of the child give back the child to God, and enter into solemn vows to train and protect the child so that in the future the child may become useful in the service of God. With the parents of the child and their daughter, Ardyth, standing under the flag of the Salvation Army, held by the grandfathers of the baby, Brothers J. Richardson and R. C. Braumd, and the congregation standing, the Adjutant returned thanks to God for the young life given and prayed "that God's richest blessings be bestowed on him, his parents, and the Salvation Army."

The "family gathering" in the afternoon was featured by the commissioning of the Senior and Junior Bands, when each bandsman was given his commission as a Salvation Army bandsman by the Adjutant. The bandmaster, F. W. Robinson, was reappointed, while Bandsman A. Austin was appointed his deputy. This position was relinquished by Bandsman J. Smith, who, for over 35 years has had a commission as a bandsman and for a considerable portion of which he has held either the bandmastership or the deputy's position. Bandsman W. Boorman was given the Band Sergeant commission pro tem. When it is realized that the 48 commissions, including six who are on the band reserve, each of whom have over 25 years bandsmanship behind them, represent an approximate total of 840 years Salvation Army bandsmanship, a service that is entirely voluntary there is every cause to congratulate the corps on the record of the Peterborough Temple Band. To Band Leader J. Halcrow, of the Boys' Band, considerable credit must be given as to have 24 budding musicians under his care, besides a learners' class, requires a deal of patience and perseverance.

It was only fitting that participating in this service was one of the bandsmen who has answered the call of S.A. officership and is visiting the city on furlough, and he told us of the hardship of his duties in Chapleau, Ontario, where the Salvation Army forces number exactly two; that is, the Captain and Lieutenant W. Yurgensen. Some of his experiences were very amusing, while in more serious vein he told us of the work of taking the Gospel inte the various lumber camps in the northern limits. One interesting item was the fact that he had started a troop of Life Saving Scouts, and with his boys had been able to spend a few days in camp during the summer. When one hears that visiting lumber camps the week before last entailed a snow shoe hike of 44 miles, one cannot help feel that the calling of these young officers is surely of God, and that His grace is at all times with them.

In the evening service, Lieut. Yergensen, taking the 1st verse of Romans 5, "Therefore being justified by faith we have peace with God, through our Lord Jesus Christ" said that here was Paul's own statement following the argument as to his faith. Here, as all through the letters to the Romans, emphasis is given to the fact that Christ died for all—for justification by faith it is necessary that there should be forgiveness of sins. When forgiven, people have no longer the sense of sin, and to obtain justification there must be repentance.

"Would to God that the sinner here would pray that wonderful prayer of David, as recorded in Psalm 51:" he said: "You must also have faith, for He is not only able to save you, but willing to forgive freely. By the sacrifice of God through Jesus Christ we have justification. It was all for you that he was nailed to the cross, not crucified as the two thieves with His hands tied, but with His arms extended wide and from that, fuller significance is given to the word 'whosoever.' Justification is very necessary. The Bible says, 'Unless a man be born again he cannot enter the Kingdom of Heaven.' You must realize you are as nothing and come with the simplicity of a little child. No one here desires to be condemned but that will be your reward if you do not accept forgiveness.

"The results of this justification are many. One is quoted in the verse we read at the beginning of the service—the peace of God. Also we are to be 'heirs of God.' Did He not say, 'I go to prepare a place for you, that where I am there ye may be also.' Not only is the happiness of His peace for the life to come, but it is for the present, and future. Let Him give you that peace—and give you life eternal, 'Peace I give unto you, not as of the world.' If you are willing to confess your sins He will forgive you—and you will receive the joy that passes all understanding. This is what you are all seeking—satisfaction. It is only to be found at the foot of the Cross."

It was a pleasure during the evening service to hear again the words of Mrs. Adj. Ham, who has been indisposed for a while.

USE OLD HORN.

HONOLULU, Jan. 25. — A slender coaching horn brought to the islands 40 years ago from England, and presented to Hawaii's last king, was used to sound calls in a recent flagstaff dedication at the Oahu Golf and Country Club. The horn was used years ago on one of the famous coaches in which the gentry rode out from London.

OFFICERS RESIGN S. A. COMMISSION DUE TO ORDER

Brigadier Wallace Bunton, Formerly Here, Gives Up His Rank.

REMAINS A MASON

Object to Infringement of Private Rights—Forbidden to Join Lodges.

"I have done what is the official view of the Army, and recognizing as I do that the officers who have entered into such associations as I have referred to have done so in good faith or in ignorance, I am constrained to believe that they will now dissociate themselves without delay.

"As for the future, the Army's view upon this matter will be made known to all who wish to become officers, and acceptance of these views will be necessary before candidates can be received for training; and further, from this time, it will be contrary to orders for any officers to join such a society."

These concluding paragraphs in a pamphlet entitled "Salvation Army Officers and Secret Societies," by the Chief of Staff, with a general order by Commissioner Charles Sowton, from Territorial Headquarters, Toronto, that "all officers shall observe the guidance and instruction set forth in this pamphlet," have put the ban on secret societies, particularly the Masonic and Orange Orders.

Following this command of Commissioner Sowton, a number of members of the Masonic Order have dropped out to retain their standing in the Salvation Army, while Ensign Thomas Robertson, a member of Ulster Masonic Lodge, Toronto, and Brigadier Wallace Bunton, of Windsor, a 32nd degree Scottish Rite Mason, have declined to allow this interference with what they regard as an infringement on their private rights, and have resigned their commissions in the Salvation Army.

Many Societies Affected.

The order applies not only to the Masonic Order and the Orange Order, but also to the Knights of Pythias, Oddfellows, Foresters, Elks, Eastern Star, Daughters of the Empire, Sons of England, Sons of Scotland, St. Patrick's Society, St. George's Society, St. Andrew's Society and a number of others who have from time to time been generous friends of the Salvation Army.

The Telegram made a persistent effort to see Commissioner Maxwell, the head of the Salvation Army in this territory, but he sent word that a conference of importance engaged him and that he had nothing to add to the pamphlet. Brigadier Taylor, who, speaking for the commissioner, declined to take any responsibility, offered the opinion that the matter was one that affected the Army only, and was not one that the newspapers should discuss. It was, he said, a private one between the Army and its officers.

Not Even "Good-bye."

Ensign Thomas Robertson, who since the first of the year has been on the accounting staff of the Toronto Transportation Commission, speaking of his resignation from the Salvation Army, said: "When I left, no one even shook hands with me. Although I made the request to say 'good-bye' to the commissioner, he didn't send for me. My father is a brigadier now retired, in the Salvation Army, London, England, and both he and my mother were captains when they were married. I was born in the Salvation Army, and 20 years of the 36 years of my life were spent in active Army work. In 1910 I received my first commission in London, England, and in 1919 came to Toronto. Personally, I believe in the work of the Salvation Army," he said, "but I disagree absolutely with its form of government, a government which is autocratic enough to be called diabolical. The decision that officers shall not be members of secret orders is an attempt to interfere with the personal liberty of their people, and is being done to rob them of a sense of independence. Those who know the Army best will agree with me that from the time a man or a woman enters its training college a system of serfdom or servility commences.

Loses Independence.

"This is continued until a man loses everything in the nature of personality or independence. Some men have retained their personality and found themselves to be kicking against the pricks and consequently have never got anywhere. Others have climbed to considerable heights in Army circles, but because they have expressed an opinion the least bit removed from that of the tin gods who govern, they have been put on the 'freezer' until such time as they are prepared to obey unconditionally. In view of the fact that the pamphlet issued recently does not contain one solitary concrete or logical reason why their officers should not be identified with secret orders, it does not say why real men join such societies, namely, to help their fellowmen.

Develops Servility.

"I am constrained to believe that their only reason for wanting officers to sever their connection with secret orders is to rob them of everything that may lead to their feeling any independence of the Salvation Army, and a further attempt to develop that servility which characterizes all their policies. In my opinion many of the statements made in the pamphlet are open insults against members of secret orders."

Mr. Robertson stated that many officers do not care to antagonize those in authority by the slightest opposition to their expressed will, such as Brigadier Booth. If Masonic Lodges and Orange Lodges are not fit places for Salvation Army Officers, why does the Army accept their money and co-operation to further the ends of Army institutions? he asks. The Army, he says, must be lacking in the elements of appreciation. "I believe in the Bible and the command to love your enemies, but that doesn't mean financing them to do you all the injury they can," he added.

The pamphlet says: "To suggest that the aims, or the signs and grips of any Order whatever, outweigh in appeal the work and worth of our movement, is, by inference, to depreciate that work almost to the point of insult. With all boldness I assert that the Army does not want money which can only be secured that way."

Breathes of Unbelief.

For any S.A. officer to contend that "membership in a certain secret society provides them with a greater sense of material security," is characterized as something that "breathes of the nature of reservation and unbelief, and is utterly contrary to the confidence and abandon upon which the Army was built." The Commissioner then points out what a real snap officers have in the provision that is made for them under certain conditions.

"The most ardent admirer of any of these Orders," he says, "would not attempt to argue that their functions are conducive to the search after God and to the development of holiness of heart and life, and that love for souls which should be our paramount thought in choosing all our friendships. Desire for anything else is a corrupt desire."

COLDS THAT DEVELOP INTO PNEUMONIA

Persistent coughs and colds lead to serious trouble. You can stop them now with Creomulsion, an emulsified creosote that is pleasant to take. Creomulsion is a new medical discovery with two-fold action, it soothes and heals the inflamed membranes and inhibits germ growth.

Of all known drugs creosote is recognized by high medical authorities as one of the greatest healing agencies for persistent coughs and colds, and other forms of throat troubles. Creomulsion contains, in addition to creosote, other healing elements which soothe and heal the infected membranes and stop the irritation and inflammation, while the creosote goes on to the stomach, is absorbed into the blood, attacks the seat of the trouble and checks the growth of the germs.

Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of persistent coughs and colds, bronchial asthma, bronchitis and other forms of respiratory diseases, and is excellent for building up the system after colds or flu. Money refunded if any cough or cold is not relieved after taking according to directions. Ask your druggist. Creomulsion Co., Limited, Toronto.

OLD BACK LINE TO BE TORN UP

C. N. Railways Apply For Permission To Abandon Bethany Section.

BEING RUN AT LOSS.

LINDSAY, Jan. 25.—The Canadian National Railways made application a few days ago for abandonment of the Bethany section of the system, running between the village of Omemee and the village of Millbrook. This line, it is understood, has been operated of late at a loss to the system, and it is understood that the rails will be torn up during the coming year. Very little money has been expended on the line towards its upkeep and maintenance, as business fell off when the C.P.R. grain line was constructed. The latter line parallels the C.N.R. in the Bethany district.

What is known as the Bethany line, is but a section of the old Midland railway. This line was first chartered in 1846 with permission to build from Port Hope to Lindsay. These original plans were never carried out and little work of any kind was done until after 1853, when a renewal of the charter was secured.

The first train over the Bethany line came into Lindsay in 1857. The head of steel had reached Reaboro by December, 1856. When the line was finally constructed to Lindsay, the service consisted of one mixed train, which left each morning for Port Hope and returned to Lindsay at night after a leisurely day along the road. An earlier branch line was built by Messrs. Tate and Fowler from Millbrook to Peterboro. This was opened on May 31st, 1858. The Midland railway was bonused by the town of Peterboro to the extent of $100,000.

Residents of Peterboro wishing to go to Lindsay were obliged to take the Midland line to Millbrook and the Bethany line to the Scugog town. It was a long tedious trip. The present Omemee-Peterboro line, popularly known as the "Missing Link", was begun in February 1882. The construction of this line also marked the foundation of Peterboro's Italian colony. A large number of Italian laborers (the first to be seen in the district) were employed as navvies. In July of 1853 a small battle, involving stillettos and revolvers, took place at Sherin's Cut, two miles east of Omemee, between some Italians who had struck over an illegal reduction of wages and some Irish Canadian, who had kept on working. Many were wounded, but none killed. It was thought at one time that it would be necessary to call out a company of the 57th Battalion to quell the disturbance. The first train over the "missing link" from Peterboro to Lindsay was run on Nov. 23, 1883, five days after standard time had been first adopted by the railways of Canada.

MRS. YOUNG GOES TO CALIFORNIA

Mother of Swimmer Will Leave on Friday to Join Him.

TORONTO, Jan. 25. — Mrs. Young, mother of the 17-year-old Toronto swimmer who has sprung into fame through his dramatic victory at Catalina, is to leave on Friday for California in order to joint him, it was reported yesterday. For the past few days George has been urging his mother to undertake this journey and has at last received the reassuring message that his hopes are about to be fulfilled. In response to this message he yesterday telegraphed his mother suggesting that her sister accompany her on the journey, and it is understood that this plan will be carried out. Mrs. Young also received yesterday a message from the minister of the First Presbyterian Church of Los Angeles, assuring her that her son was receiving every care and attention. He adds, however: "I think the better part of wisdom is for you to come at once, for this is the most important opportunity for George and you to profit by the enthusiasm of the American public, because of the human interest phase in George's determination to win for you alone. Canada should be willing to wait the return in triumph of her new-found hero."

By tapping the Nipa palm, which grows in the Philippines, white sugar can be obtained at a cost said to be less than that of producing cane sugar.

Housework often causes backache

"PAIN WAS LIKE A KNIFE STAB"

Once helpless from lame back, now does all her own work

Made practically helpless by a strained back, an active young housewife tried everything she could think of, and at last found quick and complete relief from a simple, old-fashioned remedy.

"The pain in my back was like a knife stab," she writes, "and it left me helpless. Sloan's Liniment was given to me to ease the pain, and I am now able to do all my own work."

Sloan's gets results because it doesn't just deaden the pain. It stirs up the body's own forces to get rid of the cause.

Just pat it on lightly without rubbing, and at once you feel a warm, comforting glow, as the healing blood is sent coursing through the sick tissues—stiff, contracted muscles relax, the pain stops, and soon normal conditions are restored.

A Rustic Bungalow of Modern Conveniences

(By E. Fitz Munn, Architect.)

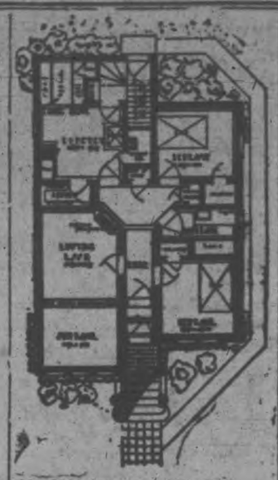
Here is a charming rustic bungalow of rather unusual design, which can not but appeal to the small family with a moderate sum to spend, but desirous of having a distinctive home embodying all modern accessories of plan.

It is built on a 50-foot lot facing south, which, of course, are the ideal conditions, but the plan could easily be adapted to suit other sites.

The rustic feeling is emphasized by the thatched effect of the shingle roof, the diamond-leaded glass, casement windows which seem to rise from the foliage and blossom in the window boxes, and the half timber work in the gables, all of which are features of English country cottages.

Wood shingles in shades of brown were used for the roof, which, with grey stucco walls, and dark green woodwork, form a charming color combination.

A distinctive effect is secured by the use of a low stone retaining wall in which a pleasing hooded doorway, through which one would pass up brick steps to the vestibule is formed, which, as a result of keeping the basement ceiling well above grade, in addition to the rather high lot, is considerably above the sidewalk.



But let us not dwell exclusively on the delightful exterior of this home, for the plan also is worthy of attention and study.

It is hard to think of a single accessory which is omitted from the plan for a dining alcove with china cupboard, entrance porch and vestibule, coat and linen closets, pantry, and grade entrance, recess bath with shower, and numerous other features are included in their most appropriate and convenient positions. The living-room, which has a corner electric fireplace, is bright and cosy, and gives access to the sunroom through a wide opening having folding glass doors.

The arrangement of the service quarters also leaves nothing to be desired. Two particularly commendable features are the refrigerator recess placed just outside the kitchen, convenient to the rear entrance, and the large closet directly off the kitchen for brooms and other cleaning paraphernalia.

Both bedrooms are bright, good size rooms with closets of sufficient depth to be treated as wardrobe closets, and provided with hanging poles.

Hot air heating, tiled bathroom, and maple floors are included for an approximate cost of $4,500.

Readers desiring further information regarding the plans and specifications of this house should communicate with the architect direct. Address: Mr. E. Fitz Munn, Winnipeg, Man. Copyright, 1927, MacLean Building Reports, Limited.

Question: Who pays fire and workmen's liability insurance on a house while it is being built.

Liability insurance is carried by the contractor. If you, as the owner, are building the house yourself, you will have to carry this insurance. Fire insurance is carried either by the general contractor or by the owner, depending on the arrangement that is made between them. Ordinarily, the owner maintains insurance on the actual structure of the house. You can make an arrangement with your insurance man whereby the face of the policy will be increased from time to time as the contractor proceeds with the building.

HOW TO TRIM THE WINDOWS

Measuring is the first step in curtain or drapery making, and too much care can not be taken with it. Allowances must be made for hems at top and bottom and for the heading which is often used at the top.

Making Simple Curtains

Plain curtains of net, lace, scrim, or a soft silk are usually hung to the sill with the rod placed as closely as possible to the window. Fullness must depend on the weight of the fabric—the sheerer the material, the more of it is needed. The casement window, which swings inward, may have the material shirred on two rods at the top and bottom of the casement itself, or it may be merely hung from the top and finished at the bottom with fringe or triple folds of the fabric. In the case of outward swinging casement windows, the curtain should be placed upon the frame of the window above the casement. The tops of all these curtains should be made in very much the same way, with a triple three-inch fold at the top, to provide extra length in case the curtain should shrink. Stitch the fold at the bottom and again about an inch from the top, thus making a heading and a casing through which to run the rod. The bottom may be finished in the same way or with fringe—a method which is very popular as it gives an attractive finish and also the necessary weighting to make the curtain hang trimly.

Overdraperies must be carefully cut so that the motifs in the pattern will come at exactly the same point in each and every hanging. This can not be too strongly emphasized. A few inches sacrificed on each hanging is really economy as the result of unmatched ones is appalling. Some of the material may have to be cut from the sides also, as bunching or crowding of the hangings will ruin an otherwise excellent effect. For the width of the average window the draperies should be thirty-six inches across or a little less.

Finishing Draperies.

For the unlined drapery, the narrow white edge found on a great many materials is often merely caught back, giving a firm edge and finished look to the hanging; otherwise, an inch or an inch-and-a-half hem is used on the inner edge with a narrower one for the outer. A two-and-a half inch hem at the bottom is satisfactory. Unlined draperies without valance, are finished with a four inch heading. Twice the depth of the heading should be used; with the raw edges turned up to the full depth, in order to give the necessary body. If this heading is not wanted, a narrower hem may be used and the draperies hung on painted rings on a painted pole.

Lining draperies is largely a matter of taste. Many experts feel that the additional wearing qualities assured more than make up for the added expense and labor of lining. Materials most commonly used for lining are unbleached muslin or sateen. The hems of the outer drapery should be turned and the lining cut to within a half-inch of the edge, which leaves about a half-inch to turn in. Then hem the lining carefully around three sides of the curtain, leaving the bottom of both materials free, so there will be no pulling or sagging. Then tack up the lower edges carefully, sewing a weight in each corner.

Informal rooms call for window treatments in which valances are plain or very simply plaited; rooms of some formality and dignity can adopt the shaped valance to better advantage.

VESTRY MEETING ST. JOHN'S CHURCH

Reports of Wardens and Others Show Very Successful Year.

The annual Vestry meeting of St. John's Church was held last evening in the Parish House at 8 o'clock, the vicar, Rev. R. C. Blagrave, presiding. After the minutes of last year's meeting, as well as two special meetings, were read by G. A. Smith, vestry clerk, the Wardens' report was presented by E. S. Martin on behalf of himself and Major S. T. Medd, vicar's warden. The report was very satisfactory, showing all current requirements met and a small balance on hand. To extra parochial objects the Wardens paid $1,694.60 during the year, which together with the work of the W.A. branches, amounted to nearly $2,300.00 for purposes outside the parish.

The centenary fund showed revenues to date of $5,435.36, with about $2,500.00 subscribed and still to come in. All expenses in connection with the Parish House extension have been paid, but it was necessary to give a note to the bank to be met by the subscriptions coming in. Also a mortgage of $9,000.00 was put upon the building. An effort will be made shortly to secure more subscriptions to meet the note in the bank and to commence to liquidate the mortgage.

Reports were presented from the various organizations of the church, all of which are making advances and showing increased enthusiasm. The report for the Sunday School given by Harold Lang, the secretary, and E. Sorby, superintendent, showed very marked progress in increase of members and financial returns. The efforts of the C.W.A. and the W.A. branches were particularly commendable, also the choir. The Brotherhood of St. Andrew, the A.Y.P.A., and the Boys' Clubs are doing steady work. The Women's Friendly Bible Class is particularly active, and its contributions to the centenary fund last year drew special commendation. Mr. Turner reported for the envelope canvass, which showed a large increase in the envelope revenues.

The importance of this year as centenary celebration year was stressed by the Vicar, who reported on preparations made so far. He thanked the workers of the various organizations of the church for their efforts and activities during 1926. Votes of thanks were passed to the retiring wardens, Major S. T. Medd and E. S. Martin, also to the choir and caretaker and the various societies. Total receipts for the year from voluntary givings and the proceeds of societies amounted to $15,407.27.

Vicar's Warden—Col. A. Stevenson.

People's Warden—W. J. Kent.

FOR INFLAMED BREATHING TUBES

Try Dr. Blosser's Medical Cigarettes in the Next Attack.

If you have catarrh you are in danger of losing your hearing. The first symptoms of catarrhal deafness are roaring or buzzing sensations and a stopped-up feeling in the ears. A neglected cold, or an uncured cold, leads to catarrh, and as everybody knows, catarrh affects the eyes, ears, nose, throat, lungs and frequently undermines the general health.

The secret of the successful medication of these hidden parts was discovered by Dr. Blosser in his medical parctice. Tis remedy is applied by smoking a certain combination of medical herbs (containing no tobacco) in a pipe or cigarette. Dr. Blosser's Remedy produces a dense smoke vapor which is inhaled or forced into the Eustachian tubes leading to the middle ear. It penetrates to parts impossible to reach with balms, salves, sprays, douches, pills, tablets, liquids and so-called "constitutional treatments." This Remedy is absolutely harmless and is being used successfully by adults and children.

You can get from any drug store a convenient pocket size package of Dr. Blosser's Cigarettes and prove for yourself their pleasant beneficial effects.

His latest would-be victim is Edmund Mueller, from whom he "bought" the model patent of a new machine which automatically solves the most complicated mathematical problems. The swindler paid Mueller with a forged check on a non-existent bank. Mueller discovered the forgery while the train was pulling out of the Vienna station, but the swindler escaped.

TORONTO, Jan. 25.—(Canadian Press.)— John Walker, swimming instructor who developed George Young, will accompany Mrs. Young, mother of the swimmer, on her journey to California. Miss Isabella Young will also be a member of the party which will leave on Friday. Mrs. Young believes physicians will give her permission to travel by the end of the week. BANISHMENT FOR SLAPPING PREMIER Swiss Court Deports Hungarian For Quarrel in League Lobby.

GENEVA, Jan. 25.—Evan De Justh, secretary of the Hungarian Republican party, was found guilty to-day of an assault on the Hungarian Premier, Count Bethlen. The charge grew out of a scene in the lobby of the League of Nations Palace last year when De Justh slapped the Premier in the face. The court sentenced the secretary to twenty-four days' imprisonment, already served, 500 francs fine, and banishment from Switzerland for ten years.

Heart Palpitation Dizzy, Sinking Spells

Mrs. M. A. Gagnon, Donatville, Alta., writes:—"Some time ago I was very nervous, could not sleep at night, often had dizzy, sinking spells and palpitation of the heart, and was so run down I could not do my housework, but just leave everything and sit down.

I spent a lot of money using medicine from the doctor, but it did not do me any good.

At last a friend told me to use MILBURN'S HEART NERVE PILLS and after using a couple of boxes I was not the same woman. I began to feel so much better, and after a few more boxes I was in perfect health. I always recommend them to all those I know who are suffering from heart trouble."

HEALED HIS RUPTURE.

I was badly ruptured while lifting a trunk several years ago. Doctors said my only hope of recovery was an operation. Trusses did me no good. Finally I got hold of something that quickly and completely healed my rupture. Years have passed and the rupture has never returned, although I am doing hard work as a carpenter. There was no operation, no lost time, no trouble. I have nothing to sell, but will give full information about how you may have a complete recovery without operation. If you write to me, Eugene M. Pullen, Carpenter, 599 N Marcellus Avenue, Manasquan, N.J. Better cut out this notice and show it to any others who are ruptured—you may save a life or at least stop the misery of rupture and the worry and danger of an operation.

It was the annual installation of officers and the D.D.G.M., George Lacheur of Peterboro, and his degree team were on hand for the occasion. The installation was of an open character and al arge number of ladies and friends of the members were present. The officers installed for the ensuing year were:

Junior Past Grand—Bro. George Wilder.
Noble Grand—William Mills.
Vice Grand—Alex Walker.
Recording Secretary—Ed. Youngman, P.G.
Financial Secretary—Robert Gray, P.G.
Treasurer—Robert Halloran, P.G.
Warden—John Payne.
Conductor—James Richardson.
R.S.N.G.—John McRoberts, P.G.
L.S.N.G.—Wilbert Gainor, P.G.
R.S.V.G.—Sam Webb.
L.S.V.G.—Fred Graham.
R.S.S.—Bert Richardson.
L.S.S.—Dave McMullen.
Outer Guard—James Masters
Inner Guard—William Foster.
Chaplain—W. H. Hooper, P.G.

After this Bro. Lacheur acted as chairman and a concert was given comprised of speeches by the D.D. G.M. and the Rev. A. J. Terrill, songs by Bro. W McKinley of Peterboro, sleight of hand tricks by Bro. Joe Dean, also of Peterboro, and a reading by Bro. E. Youngman. Bro. Spoffard, a member of the local lodge who has been away for over twenty-five years, was present for the installation. The programme was followed by an oyster supper served in good style by the ladies and members of the local lodge. This concluded one of the red letter nights in the history of I.O.O.F. 296. Those making the trip from Peterboro were: D.D.G.M., George Lacheur; D.D.G.M., R. J. Martin; D. D.G. Mar., Bro. A. R. Williams; D.D.G. Fin. Sec., E. Bartlett; D.D.G. Treas., George Low; D.D.G. Rec. Sec., George Hillier; D.D.G. I. G., S. Rowe; also Mrs. G. Lacheur, Mrs. R. J. Martin, Mrs. George Hillier, Mr. J. Dean, Mr. William McKinley.

A large crowd of friends and neighbors gathered at the home of Mr. and Mrs. William Voysey, Drum Corners, on Thursday evening last. It was in the nature of a reception for the newly-wedded couple, Mr. and Mrs. Lorne McGill. The bride was better known as Marjorie Voysey, and was well liked by her associates. The groom is the youngest son of Mr. and Mrs. J. J. McGill of Drum Corners. The earlier part of the evening was spent in cards and dancing, after which a bountiful lunch was served by the hostess. A large table of gifts showed the respect the young people held in the community. Mr. Hall called the gathering to order at supper time and asked that Mr. John Payne be chairman, as he considered that he know the young couple better than anyone else. The chairman stated that he had the pleasure of being manager of the girls' softball team for the past year, and that Marjorie was one of the best players in his team, as she was a good first baseman and was popular with the fans, as she was a southpaw. He then congratulated them on joining the matrimonial ranks. The groom thanked the friends for their kindnesses, and hoped they would enjoy themselves. Short speeches were made by Mr. Hall and Mr. Voysey, after which every one carried on with the light fantastic till 2 a.m.

What may probably turn out to be a serious accident occurred early Friday morning, when, on leaving Mr. Voysey's dance, Mr. Will Scott had the misfortune of being thrown violently out of his cutter against a post. He struck his face and head against the post, but held on to the horse. At first it was thought not to be serious, but after he went home he became unconscious at 5 a.m. A physician was called, and it was supposed that he had concussion of the brain, and it is thought that his nose is broken. He remained unconscious for 24 hours, when he came to and spoke. The accident is regretted very much by his large number of friends, and it is to be hoped that he will soon recover.

The Young People's League met in the basement of the United Church on Tuesday evening, under the leadership of the citizenship vice-president, Mr. J. Payne. The Scripture reading, Isaiah ii., 1-4, was read by Miss Mildred Delahaye, and prayer followed by the pastor, Rev. A. J. Terrill. The main item on the programme was a debate, entitled "Resolved that country life is preferable to city life." The affirmative was upheld by Mr. L. Hannan (leader), Misses Iva Shaw and Ruth Richardson, and the negative by Mr. J. Payne (leader), Misses Grace McMahon and Olive Jessop. The judges were Rev. A. J. Terrill, Mr. E. Bowins and Mr. George Beggs, and awarded the decision to the negative by one point. It was decided to have lunch and have a programme and charge 50c at the next regular meeting. A committee was appointed to choose characters for a play, and Mr. Terrill was chosen manager of the same. The proceeds are to go towards the building fund of the church.

Rub It On At Bed Time

For Deep Chest Colds

All colds should be treated with vapors, for vapors alone can carry the medication DIRECTLY to the air passages and lungs.

Vicks is a "vapor" treatment in salve form. For deep chest colds you first apply hot wet towels over throat and chest to open the pores, then massage briskly with Vicks for 3 minutes, spread on thickly and cover with a flannel cloth.

Vicks not only penetrates like a poultice or plaster, but the ingredients, vaporized by the body heat, are inhaled all night long.

This double action usually checks the most stubborn cold overnight.

a police officer he was severely injured on two occasions when he was attacked by burglars and once had a narrow escape in Peterborough when he was shot at by the men who robbed the Buckhorn Post Office some years ago.

He holds three medals, one presented by Queen Victoria personally, on the occasion of her diamond jubilee and another the decoration of the Royal Humane Society which he received for rescuing a man from drowning.

When interviewed by The Examiner this morning he declared "the time had gone so quickly during his period of service that he could hardly realize that over a quarter of a century had passed since he first donned the uniform. "Time must fly more quickly for me than it does for the ordinary individual," he said.

His coming to Peterborough in 1906 was not his first visit to the city. Previous to joining the London police force he had lived here for a number of years when he was a boy, as a result, he said in a jesting manner, "knowing most people and knowing them better than they think I do."

General Trend Downward On Wall Street To-day

NEW YORK, Jan. 25—Opposing speculative forces continued to struggle for control of the price movements in to-day's stock market, but the line of least resistance was again downward.

Among the stocks which were prominent in the sporadic rallies that took place throughout the session were Bangor and Aroostook, Columbia Carbon, Hudson Motors, Mack Trucks, Philadelphia and Reading Coal and Iron, Pressed Steel Car, Radio Corporation, and Timken Roller Bearing.

The sharp break of Chesapeake and Ohio was based on reports that the revised Van Sweringen's merger plan, which is understood to make that road the chief unit, will involve the issuance of new stock in order to provide for an exchange with stocks of other constituent roads. Pere Marquette sold two points below last night's final quotation, as did Reading, New York Central, Great Northern preferred and several others.

Europe's Needs Greater So Wheat Price Goes Up

CHICAGO, Jan. 25 (Canadian Press). — Enlarged estimates of European import requirements lead to higher prices to-day for wheat. Argentine shippers again raised their asking quotations. Starting at a ⅜ to 3-4 cent upturn, Chicago wheat held near to the initial range. Corn, oats, and provisions were steady, corn offering at 1-8 cent off to 3-8 cent gain and later showing little variation.

Opening prices were: Wheat, May 140 3-4; July 131 7-8; corn, May 81, July 84½; oats, May 48 7-8, July 48⅝.

Mining Trade Heavier Downward Trend Continues

TORONTO, Jan. 25 (Canadian Press)—Trading increased in volume on the Standard Mining Exchange to-day and the downward trend of prices continued. Losses were numerous but not large, Nipissing's loss of 40 cents at 9.05 being the most important change throughout the list. Laval Quebec eased 1 1-2 at 36 1-2, Kirkland Hunton 2 1-2 at 27, Duprat three at 23, Argonaut two at 45, and Teck Hughes 15 at 6.00. Amulet declined another 11 cents at 1.60 and Grover Daley, weak like al lthe other Quebec stocks, lost 1 1-4 at 24 1-4.

Heavy Trading Confined To Two Toronto Issues

TORONTO, Jan. 25. — Canadian Press. — With trading heavy in British Columbia Fishing and Hiram Walker, the remainder of the list was dull on the Toronto stock exchange this morning. There was no definite price trend and few price changes of any significance. British Columbia Fishing sagged at one time to 84, but recovered to 86 1-2 at the noon close, a net gain of a point and a half. American Sales Book advanced 1 1-4 at 70 1-4 and Gooderham and Worts firmed a half at 46. Hiram Walker

TWEED WINS IN OVERTIME

Comes From Behind To Defeat Madoc in League Game.

FINAL SCORE 4-3.

TWEED, Jan 25. — Special. — One of the most sensational games of hockey of the Trent Valley League was played here last night, when Tweed beat Madoc 4-3.

It was an ideal night and a good crowd was in attendance.

The first period opened rather slow but Madoc boys got away at a good rate for a few minutes. Both goalies were kept busy. Madoc worked hard and put a lovely shot past Wagar. This put the crowd on edge. Madoc, before many minutes, scored again, but the Tweed boys began to work hard and in a few minutes Bert Houston made a nice rush, broke through the Madoc defence, and scored.

The second period opened with plenty of excitement and good combination play on both sides. Walbridge, the high school boy, was as busy as he could be and many shots were sent at Wagar, too. Madoc scored again, and this left the score 3 to 1 for Madoc.

The third period caused more excitement but the boys were playing good combination and stick handling well. Max Geraldi, the speedy right wing player, had the misfortune to get hurt and the team was weakened considerably, but nevertheless after a minute's rest he was able to score a beautiful shot. With only a few minutes to go in the first ten minutes of overtime George Geraldi broke through and scored a close shot on Wallbridge, making the score 4 to 3 in favor of Tweed. W. Jackson refereed the game, and did good work.

TRINITY WINS JUVENILE GAME

All Saints Lose in Hard Checking Church League Match.

SCORE 5-3.

Trinity Juveniles defeated All Saints in their Church League clash last night by a score of 5 to 3. Both teams played a fast game, with many individual rushes and much close checking, but combination was poor.

The game, which was played on the Collegiate Rink, was in two 25-minute periods. In the first both teams exchanged rushes without result till near the end of the session, when McCulloch, stick-handling his way to All Saints' goal, passed to Magee, who scored. This play was repeated a few moments later, with the same pair officiating. Battle scored for All Saints in a scrimmage in front of the Trinity net.

In the second the play was mostly in All Saints' area, Clark and McCulloch both scored at the beginning of the period for Trinity. All Saints' came through with two more markers in the last two minutes of play. Hall, although not quite up to his usual form, did some fine stick-handling on the Saints' lineup.

Kearns, Trinity goalie, played a good game, and Watkins, in the net for Chris Jay's boys, made some fine saves.

McCulloch was the fastest man on the ice. He had two assists and one goal to his credit.

There were several minor penalties and one major, the latter to Ferguson for using the wrong end of his stick. Johnny Ward did the bell-ringing, handling the play in a capable manner. The teams:

Trinity—Goal, Kearns; defence, Doxie and Ferguson; centre, McCulloch; right wing, Clark; left wing, Magee; sub., Guppy.

Other scores were:

Junior—St. James 4, George Street 2; St. John's 5, St. Paul's 2.

Juvenile—Trinity 5, All Saints' 3.

Midget—St. John's 5, St. Paul's 1; Murray Street 5, George Street 2.

Competent to judge

There is no better way for you to learn the true value of commodities in general use than to read the advertisements day by day—regardless of whether or not you have any immediate intention of buying.

Those young housekeepers whose first experiences in marketing began in war-time have a fixed idea of high prices. Those of an older generation have an equally strong conviction that prices should be lower.

With the shifting changes of a rapidly moving world both prices and values are bound to fluctuate. A financier studies these trends with scrupulous care in published financial reports compiled by experts.

An intelligent housewife may similarly make herself a competent judge of values by studying each day's advertisements of the things she needs—just as the broker studies his stock list.

Then as she comes to buy she may do so with full confidence in her knowledge.

To stand the test of advertising, merchandise must be good

Counsel for Accused Players Insist Upon Quick Vindication.

BID FOR SERVICES

CHICAGO, Jan. 26 (Canadian Press).—Ty Cobb and Tris Speaker, former managers of the Detroit and Cleveland clubs, under charges of "fixing" a game in 1919, for the sake of a betting pool, may be vindicated and re-instated in organized baseball within two or three days.

Their attorneys conferred yesterday with Commissioner Landis, and Cob's counsel insisted upon a quick vindication. Cobb said he was under the impression that the commissioner's decision would be handed down yesterday, but learned later that it was to be postponed.

Speaker left yesterday with his lawyer for Cleveland, with the knowledge that three American League clubs are ready to bid for his services as soon as his record is cleared.

Detroit, Washington and New York clubs are said to be eager to sign him.

While Cobb has received one offer from Baltimore, and expects others from major league clubs, the Georgia Peach is planning a trip to Europe instead of his twenty-fourth season of major league baseball.

HOCKEY TEAMS BEGIN LAST LAP

Ottawa and Rangers Have Good Leads in Last Half.

PLAY GOOD FORM

NEW YORK, Jan. 25 (Associated Press). — The National Hockey League is past the half-way mark in the season's long schedule. Of the 220 games booked, 114 have been played.

The Ottawa Senators continue to show their early season form by steadily increasing their lead in the International section of the league, and now hold an 11-point margin over Canadiens of Montreal, in second place. Out of 22 games, the Senators have lost but three and tied two.

Meanwhile Canadiens and the New York Americans are continuing their nip and tuck battle for second place with the "Flying Frenchmen" at present holding a two-point margin. The Montreal Maroons, winners of the world championship last spring, continue to flounder about the second division. Toronto St. Patricks have proven inconsistent, defensive weaknesses accounting for the majority of their losses.

In the American division of the league the New York Rangers are gradually sprinting away from the rest of the pack. Although much of the first half was taken up with a battle for first place between Chicago and the Rangers, with Boston just trailing, the New Yorkers now hold a six-point lead. Boston is in second place, a full game ahead of Chicago. The Pittsburgh Pirates have finally clambered out of the cellar. Recent play of the Detroit Cougars has been inconsistent.

Feature games this week include an international contest at Montreal Thursday between the Rangers and Canadiens and a game at Madison Square Garden Sunday in which the Canadiens and Americans will renew their fight for second place in the international section standing. Ottawa Senators, crippled by the loss of three stars suspended for fighting against Montreal Saturday night, meet the Americans in New York to-night.

CURLERS GO TO COBOURG

Defend Campbellford District Tankard Cup Won Last Year.

SAME RINKS

CAMPBELLFORD, Jan. 25.—Local curlers leave to-day for Cobourg to defend the district tankard cup won last year.

One rink, Joseph Poulton, lead, Marshall West second, H. G. Denike vice and R. H. Cole skip will be the same as last year, and this rink was largely responsible for bringing home the silverware. The other rink will compose J. P. Archer lead, James Gay second, W. S. Wiggins vice, and F. C. Bonnycastle skip.

WEAKENED GRADS BEAT MARLBOROS

Delahey Scores Only Goal of Game in Middle of First Period.

TORONTO, Jan. 25. — Without Hugh Plaxton, Red Porter, Lou Hudson and Joe Sullivan in the line-up, Varsity Grads defeated Marlboros, 1-0 in the senior O.H.A. game at University of Toronto Arena last night. Charlie Delahey, standing unchecked in front of the Duke's cage took a pass off Dave Trotter's stick from the corner and whipped in the only goal of the game, nine minutes after play got under way in the first period. Sensational goal tending by Joe Stark and Stuffy Mueller prevented any further scoring, though both teams had some wide open chance to bulge the twine only to be beat by the man guarding the net. It was the Grads' sixth consecutive victory.

Three times Dave Trottier outguessed the Marlboro defence to get in close, but in turn was outguessed by Stark, who got in the way of the shot, on one occasion rushing out of his goal and blocking Trottier before the Varsity star could shoot. At the other end Joe Primeau repeatedly weaved his way in only to have the Grads' defence wind their sticks around him just as he was preparing to get the puck away. The Grads effectively covered up in front of their net and gave Mueller much better support than that accorded Stark, even though Hedges and Crompton gave the best display of defensive hockey they have shown this season. Mueller did not have as many difficult shots to handle as did Stark so well was he protected by his defence and by Trottier's deadly hook check.

BRISTLING BATTLES OF FARE FIST DAYS

(MY LIFE STORY)

by Jack McAuliffe

CHAPTER SEVENTEEN.

(Copyright 1927, NEA Service, Inc.)

I was reeling around the ring in Philly with a paralzed left arm hanging by my side facing Jimmy Mitchell, a dangerous puncher, and I thought my first defeat was staring me in the face.

Then the old bean began to work.

I started talking to Mitchell. "Just because my left is shot," I says, trying to muster up a grin and give him a confident look, "don't forget I got a right here that's good enough to smack your whiskers off."

He blinked kinda surprised because fighters seldom talked a lot to each other then. Me'd rake me with a sizzling left and I'd act real solicitous and say, "Aw, gee, Jimmy, you don't mean to tell me that's all the punch you've got."

Well, what with talking to him and him listening I managed to engage his attention enough to pile up enough points to get a draw. I was never closer to an ignominious beating in all my life. I'll never forget that fight.

Then came my famous fight with Jem Carney, champion of England, that lasted SEVENTY - FOUR ROUNDS!

Carney came to America and posted a side bet of $5,000 that I met with the aid of friends. Jimmy Ormonde of Boston arranged the details. The fight was held under Marquis of Queensbury rules to a finish, using kid gloves.

I was injured in the leg shortly before the fight and had to postpone it a month and in the meantime could not do any road work and got hog fat. I had to boil out to get down to 133 pounds and the boiling softened my skin and hands.

Jack Dempsey saw my condition and wanted me and begged me to forfeit.

Our rig was pitched in front of the Atlantic Hotel at Revere Beach and the fight was started. I remember Carney brought a big gang with him headed by Al Smith, the leading sportsman of the day. Frank Stevenson was the referee.

Dempsey and I talked things over before the fight and we agreed that I had to get Carney inside of ten rounds or I'd be beaten I was so weak. I started out with a rush, throwing punches all over, but Carney wisely backed away. I smeared him and smeared him but he refused to stay down. The tenth round came and I began to fail rapidly. Suddenly that terrible feeling came into my heart that I was headed for destruction, that I was slowly getting weaker and weaker and I knew I couldn't win.

It's an awful sensation. All my friends eyed me after the round with commiseration. Little did I know then the fight was going to go 74 rounds!

NOTE—In the next chapter McAuliffe continues his description of the fight for international supremacy.

Each of the dogs participating in the Eastern International Dog-Sled Derby at Quebec has a small white circle, the size of a half-dollar, painted on its forehead. This is required by the committee in charge to make sure that only dogs that have been regularly entered can take part in the famous race.

TUNNEY AGREES WITH DEMPSEY

Says He Should Not Be Required To Go Through Elimination.

CHICAGO, Jan. 25.—Gene Tunney, heavyweight champion, partly agreed today with his conquered rival, Jack Dempsey, that Jack should not be required to go through an elimination series for another chance at the title.

"I like Tex Rickard's elimination plan," Tunney said, in a brief stopover en route east to Poughkeepsie, N.Y., "but I don't think Dempsey ought to be included in it, except that the others eliminate themselves for the right to fight Dempsey. Then I will meet the winner of that match.

"But Dempsey can have his return match direct if the tournament does not develop a satisfactory challenger."

Tunney, who completed his vaudeville tour at Minneapolis, wore a plaster over his eye covering a wound opened by an opponent's head in his stage exhibition. He joined Billy Gibson, his manager, and Tim Mara, New York sportsman, here, and said that all his difference with them had been satisfactorily arranged.

ARNE BORG IS BEST TANKER

Holds All International Standards from 300 Yards to Mile.

OUSTS WEISMULLER

NEW YORK, Jan. 25.—Arne Borg of Sweden is the greatest swimmer of all time. This fact strikes one forcibly in reviewing the records of 1926. Johnny Weismuller, American prodigy, no longer is king of the natatorial world.

Borg holds all international standards from 300 yards to one mile. Weismuller, it is true, still holds the 100 and 200-yard marks but the Swedish tanker has undisputed mastery of the majority of distances in the international field. Some of his flashiest time has been in the 300 yards, which he splashed in 3:15, and the 500 yards in 5:31.

BABE RUTH IS NOT WORRYING

Says Does Not Expect to Appear in Court Personally.

IN MOVIES

LONG BEACH, Calif., Jan. 25.—Babe Ruth said yesterday he did not expect to appear in court personally at San Diego, to answer charges of violating the state child labor law.

Seemingly more interested in his future motion picture and in the 1927 baseball season, than in impending hearing, Ruth said he expected to continue his vaudeville tour without thought of the San Diego charges, which allege he violated the law by obtaining children from the audience to appear in his act. He was arrested Saturday night, but was later released.

Mother Goose IN SPORTS

Jack met Gene in Philly town,
Beneath the murky skies.
He promptly took his title down,
And closed up both his eyes.
And when Jack saw his crown was gone;
With all his might and main
He then resumed his training
Just to win it back again.

LOS ANGELES, Jan. 25.—Jack Dempsey is confident that he will be the first fighter to meet Champion Gene Tunney. The former titleholder says he has been assured of that fact. Dempsey has more than an outside chance to reverse the verdict.

MARMORA WINS GAME IN TWEED

Losers Kept From Scoring Until Last Period of High School Game.

FINAL SCORE 6-2.

TWEED, January 25. (Special.) — The fluctuating fortunes of hockey were in evidence last night at Marmora when the high school team obtained their first win in the Intercollegiate series by vanquishing the Tweed high school by 6 to 2.

The ice was in perfect shape and with nice weather prevailing a good number of fans turned out.

Play opened with Marmora doing most of the pressing. Shannon made several good rushes, scoring on one after ten minutes play. A minute later McCay went through and scored. The period closed with no further scoring.

In the second period another rush by Shannon resulted in his netting the puck. Brady added nother from the rebound of Hughes' shot. In quick time Hughes scored from Shannon's rebound. period closed with the score 5 to 0 in Marmora's favor.

In the final period Tweed livened up and Loeworthy and Donnelly registered twice in quick srccession. A minute before time was called, Flynn obtained the final goal of the game.

Rashotte in goal for the visitors, was given a lot to do and shaped creditably.

McGrath, deputizing for Burns in the Marmora goal, showed form.

Following the game a lunch was tendered the teams in the council chamber.

The line-up:

Tweed: Goal, T. Rashotte; right defence W. Burgoyne; left defence, B. Handsford; centre, B. Rollins; right wing, H. Donnelly; left wing, A. Cordy; subs., A. Foster, . Leeworthy.

Marmora: Goal, J. McGrath; right defence, W. Shannon; left defence, C. McCoy; centre, H. Brady; right wing, W. Flynn; left wing E. Hughes, subs., F. Murray, M. Sanderson.

Referee, G. McWilliams.

Hockey is having a banner season both in the United and Canada and lovers of the sport are looking forward to a spectacular finish in the battle for championships. Heretofore hockey title have been one of the few things that Americans go not gain possession of. Whether 1926-27 season will carry a different tale remains to be seen.

JUNIORS SCORE 3-1 WIN OVER INTERMEDIATES

Superior Condition and Close Checking Turn the Trick.

A GOOD BATTLE.

Intermediates Score First But Are Soon Caught By Winners.

With both outfits at full strength, the Peterboro Junior O.H.A. team triumphed over the Intermediate squad by 3 goals to 1 in a practice game at Brock Street Rink last night, the superior condition and close checking of the youngsters turning the trick for them.

It was an interesting battle all the way, with honors more even than the score would indicate. Although the Juniors earned their win by their aggressiveness.

Early in the fracas it looked like an Intermediate win. The older crew were were doing the bulk of the attacking and when Thornton went in alone and drove a fast low shot past Mein, the Intermediates seemed to have the edge.

The youngsters, however, kept battling, and sewed up the game by scoring from a mix-up from in front of the net and soon after Ted LeBarr put his team in front by beating brother Jack with a shot from the left boards.

In the second half, the game was played in two periods, the Juniors stuck to their guns, and their close checking bothered the Intermediate attackers at every move. Finally Kenneally recovered the rubber behind the Intermediate net and batted another goal past LeBarr, to put the Juniors two markers up. The Intermediates came close on a number of dangerous attacks, but could not beat Gillespie, who played the last half in the Junior nets.

"Buck" Jones and Ted LeBarr stood out for the winners, while Maudsley and Lackey were best for the Intermediates. The teams:

Referee—Walter Jackson.

BOXER FATALLY HURT.

Dies From Injuries Received in Bout at Bradock, Pa.

PITTSBURGH, Jan. 25. Canadian Press. — Leo Mahan, a 17 year old amateur boxer, died to-day from the effects of a blow received last night in a bout at Bradock. Mahan collapsed in the ring after a blow in the solar plexus recived during a bout with Joe Tovlano.

SEATS FOR BIG BATTLE ARE IN GREAT DEMAND

Record Crowd Certain When Varsity Play Here

GRADS UNBEATEN.

Face Petes With a Record of Six Straight Wins.

The Varsity Grads, with several of their stars out of the line-up, had anther close call last night when they got the only goal of the game with Marlboros.

The ex-students will be here, therefore, on Thursday night with a record of six straight wins and their full line-up on in an effort to keep the slate clean.

On the other hand the Petes, keen to get even for their bad beating in Toronto, and with the chance of a tigher grip on second place, will be out there battling with everything they've got to hand Connie Smythe's machine its first defeat in the group race.

The game will be by long odds the feature event of the season and the fans are evidently looking at it that way, judging by the rush for reserved seats, which are practically cleaned up now.

The biggest crowd in several seasons will jam the Brock street rink for the clash between the old rivals.

NOT LEAVING CITY.

Dr. E. H. Wood Has Not Removed To Lindsay as Reported.

Dr. E. H. Wood, F.A.C.S., has been the centre of many rumors recently, it having been said that he had sold his practice here and was moving to Lindsay. This is not correct as Dr. Wood has merely arranged to spend one day a week there for consultive and operative surgery, spending the rest of his time in this city.

REV. MARKS HAS ACCEPTED A CALL TO THE BLAKELY BAPTIST CHURCH.

The Flourishing Organization is Fortunate In Securing This Cultured Gentleman.

At a well-attended meeting of the Blakely Baptist Church the congregation gave a call to Rev. A. T. O. Marks and was accepted. He will occupy the pulpit permanently after to-morrow. Rev. Marks has preached a couple of Sundays of late, and succeeded admirably in making a decided favorable impression. His sermons were exceptionally fine and his emphasizing facts had the desired results. Of late he has been a student at Crozer Seminary. Mr. Marks has a pleasant family of three children and their present home is in Peterboro. His congregation here has an excellent and well-kept property, they are inviting and it can be vouched for — they are kind people. Lest it be overlooked, we wish to say that they can well congratulate themselves on having secured such an able and cultured gentleman. Competent judges assure us that he is as able a preacher as has occupied that popit. With pleasure we join with a host of others in welcoming him and his to the community.

LAKEFIELD, Jan. 25.— Local residents were shocked to-day to hear of the death, at Elmvale, on Sunday, of W. I. Ianson, proprietor of Vlamede summer hotel, Stoney Lake, in his 38th year. The deceased was well and favorably known to many in Lakefield and Peterborough. He is survived by his wife and three small children. He was a member of the Masonic Order.

JOHN DUNCAN.

There passed away on Jan. 20th an old resident in the person of John Duncan, at the residence of his son-in-law, Jas. B. Fowler. The deceased, who was in his eighty-fifth year, had been a resident of Peterborough district for the past fifty-five year and had held positions of head miller in all the leading stone mills of the city during his life. He came from Montreal when a young man to take charge of the mill of Denne and Glover, afterwards known as the Hilliard mill.

He was a veteran of "66," having served under the late Lt.-Col. John Grant, of Montreal, at Hemmingford. He enlistend at the age of 18 in the 5th Royal Light Infantry the night it was organized, on Jan. 31st, 1862. They excelled as a battalion with the rifle, having fired not only against their own battalion, but the regulars, who were then stationed in Montreal about 10,000 strong. The deceased won against the field of regulars and volunteers at Logie's Farm, as well as the challenger, Lord Worsley, who was the crack shot of England at that time, challenged the winning man, who won, beating Lord Worsley at every range from 100 to 1,000 yards.

Shepherd, Dallas Texas; Mrs. Elizabeth Bertram of Los Angeles, Mrs. W. B. Adams, Mrs. D. Robinson, Mrs. Dollie List, and Miss Helen Chambers of Vancouver; Mrs. F. CONVICTS CLAIM NOT FED ENOUGH Trouble at Kingston Comes To Head When They Quit Work.

ALL QUIET TO-DAY.

KINGSTON, Ont., Jan. 25.—Although the authorities at the Penitentiary will give out nothing for publication, it was learned today that trouble which has been brewing for several days at the Portsmouth Penitentiary, reached a climax yesterday afternoon when a number of the convicts employed in the work shops refused to work. It is understood that the men claim that they are not getting substantial food for the work they are called upon to perform. The mail bag department, which is the largest shop in the institution, was affected by the walk-out. It is stated that all was quiet at the big prison today.

HUMANE SOCIETY ANNUAL MEETING

Local Branch To Hear Interesting Address at Meeting To-night.

The annual meeting of the Peterborough branch of the Humane Society, to be held at eight o'clock this evening in the board room of the Chamber of Commerce, should be of widespread interest to citizens generally. The local branch is a live and energetic organization, whose work is necessarily done in quiet ways but whose endeavors have a wide scope. The society looks after the welfare of dumb brutes of every type, trying at all times to succor and assist those who "cannot speak for themselves," and it is astonishing just how much it accomplishes in these ways, as revealed by the quarterly reports published from time to time. Dogs and cats, horses and cows, hogs and sheep and birds all come within the range of its work and its inspector is very capable and industrious in the carrying out of his work.

To-night, annual reports will be given by the various officers and an interesting address delivered by Magistrate K. J. Brown, of Toronto. All interested are invited to attend the meeting.

The society intends in the near future to bring to the city for an address, Jack Miner, the famous "Bird Man" of Canada.

Scot's Whiskers Alight Wife Calls Out Firemen

SALFORD, Eng., Jan. 25.—(United News.) — Trying to light a cigarette in a high wind with a Christmas gift lighter, George McWhirter set fire to his luxuriant red beard.

His wife, too frightened to notice that McWhirter had quickly extinguished the blaze with his hands, turned in a fire alarm. It was in the docks area, and six fire engines, forty firemen and twenty-five policemen responded. Angered, they offered McWhirter the option of paying a $25 fine for turning in a false alarm or permitting them officially to "subdue the whiskers with a fire extinguisher."

McWhirter is Scotch.

Radio Makes Everyone Equal In Stock Market

NEW YORK, N.Y. Jan. 25.—(United News.) — Using radio sets instead of the broker's ticker, farmers at 100 miles or more from Wall street are playing the market on an equal basis with their city cousins. Orders to sell rails were coming into the brokers' offices rapidly from exclusive clubs and other parts of Manhattan when suddenly a broker's telephone rang.

"This is Harry Langdon speaking from Riverhead. I want you to sell my rail shares, as I understand there is a rally." Langdon, no relative to the motion picture actor, is a farmer on Long Island. Amazed the broker inquired: "How did you know about the rally way out there?"

"Radio," was the laconic reply.

Franc Now Stabilized Poincare Tells Deputies

PARIS, Jan. 25.— (United Press.)— The French franc, which seemed to be on the road to worthlessness six months ago, was virtually stabilized to-day, Premier Poincare told the Finance committee of the Chamber of Deputies, when he appeared before it to report on his stewardship of French finances. Poincare said the franc practically had been stabilized at 122 to the pound sterling.

The franc, normally worth 19.3 cents, was quoted at 3.95 cents to-day.

CANCER CURABLE DOCTOR ASSERTS

Sir Berkeley Moynihan Says Fear Worse Than Disease.

LOCAL DISEASE.

LONDON, Jan. 25 (Canadian Press Cable).—"If the law of averages holds good a hundred people in this hall tonight will die of cancer," said Sir Berkeley Moynihan, President of the Royal College of Surgeons, and perhaps the greatest cancer expert in the world, while addressing a meeting under the auspices of the British Medical Association.

Despite the grim but kindly expressed warning, Sir Berkeley's message was full of hope. "Only one disease is worse than cancer, and that is fear of it. Cancer can be cured and the patient delivered from it for ever. Cancer initially is always a local disease, not caused by any particular foods, and neither hereditary, infectious, nor contagious."

HUMANE SOCIETY MEMBERS HEAR REPORTS OF YEAR'S WORK AND DISCUSS PLANS FOR 1927

Treasurer Reports Balance on Hand—Inspector Tells of Work.

INSTRUCTIVE TALK.

Magistrate R. J. Brown, of Toronto, Chief Speaker at Meeting.

The annual meeting of the Peterborough branch of the Humane Society was held last evening in the board room of the Chamber of Commerce, and a gratifying attendance was registered, with the seating capacity of the big room taxed to accommodate those who gathered to hear the annual reports of the society and to listen to Magistrate R. J. Brown of Toronto, in an informal, interesting address which was listened with keen and appreciative attention. The President, Charles H. Ackerman, was in the chair, and announced at the opening of the meeting that the election of officers, owing to the inability of the nominating committee to meet in time, would be postponed to a future date. Reports were given by the secretary-treasurer, Mrs. J. S. Chandler, and the society's inspector, R. C. Smith, both showing the increasing interest which is being manifested in the work of the Humane Society.

In a brief address President Ackerman alluded to the 1927 programme of the society, which includes a scheme to form a Junior Humane Society in the city, enlisting the co-operation of the Board of Education, in the belief that if children are taught to think right in plastic years with regard to kindly treatment of animals, they will do right in these things later on.

Financial Statement

The treasurer's report, as presented by Mrs. J. S. Chandler, was as follows: Balance from previous year, $187.77; membership fees, $295.00; donations, $57.00; court fines, $17.50; cats destroyed, $3.00; receipts from tag day, $406.38; dogs destroyed, $1; total, $967.65.

Expenditures—Court costs, $26.13; stamps, $10.49; affiliation fee with Ontario Society, $5.00; telephone, $80.96; Trebilcock Brothers, $3.75; Inspector's expenses to Havelock, $14.50; to Ennismore, $3.00; to Norwood, $3.90; Delegates to Toronto convention, $17.75; chloroform, 90 cents; Examiner Printing Company, $74.51; Inspector's salary, $550.00; literature, $1.82; express on literature, 55 cents; tag day expenses $21.75; dog food, $1.90; typewriter and ribbon, $21.00; Crown Attorney Hatton, $27.60; Humane Pleaders, $1.80; Mr. Wilson's expenses from Toronto, $5.65; veterinary fees.

Black Plague and "Flu" Are Epidemic In Russia

MOSCOW, Jan. 26.—(Canadian Press.)—A plague of influenza and typhoid fever has broken out simultaneously in different parts of Russia.

Within an area of 30 square miles in the Ural district, 30 persons have perished from the black plague, while thousands are ill. In the Kharkov district, 2,300 cases of pernicious influenza are reported, resembling the disastrous epidemic of 1919 which killed thousands.

Typhoid is raging in the Bryansk district, where, out of 400 cases, 17 have died.

The government is taking stringent methods to check the outbreak.

B. C. NEWSPAPER DENIES GETTING LIQUOR MONEY

Manager of Daily Province Declares Advertising Space Given.

CUSTOMS PROBE.

Royal Commission To Open Sitting at Calgary on Friday.

VANCOUVER, B. C., Jan. 26.—Emphatic denial that the Vancouver Daily Province ever received a single dollar from British Columbia liquor interests without giving advertising space to the full value, was made before the Royal Customs Commission by W. C. Russell, advertising manager of the Province.

Examined by Hon. R. W. Rowell, K. C., Commission counsel, Mr. Russell said that he was present when Russell Whitlaw, director of the Consolidated Exporters o. British Columbia, told of contributions by his company to the Sun and the Province, for special editions.

He submitted a statement covering the liquor advertising carried by the Province over a period of five years. In October, 1922, Mr. Russell said, the Province had received $250 from the Consolidated in payment for advertising on an industrial page published by the paper. In August, 1926, the British Columbia distillers had paid $10 for advertising on a new Westminster page published. These were the only amount received by the Province from British Columbia liquor dealers, Mr. Russell said, and these were in return for advertising.

VANCOUVER, B.C., Jan. 26.—(Canadian Press.) — The Royal Commission on Customs concluded sittings here last evening and left for Calgary to-day where the hearing will open Friday morning. There will be a submission by the Attorney-General of Alberta during the Calgary sittings.

To-day the Commission held no public hearing, but it is understood that the commissioners discussed in camera certain matters regarding the evidence adduced here and in Victoria. It is possible that an interim report on the Pacific Coast situation may be made to the Governor-in-Council.

Only four of the Retuerto's crew reached shore.

BOY BURGLARS ARE ARRESTED

Kingston Police Catch Two Lads Breaking Into House.

HAD REVOLVER.

KINGSTON, Ont., Jan. 26.—Two fifteen-year-old boys were caught by the police early last night, in the act of trying to break into the home of Mrs. Derbyshire, corner Union and Albert Streets. One lad had in his possession a bar jimmy and was endeavoring to force open a window. One boy had a colt revolver, but it was not loaded. In the arrest of these two lads, the police hope to clear up a number of burglaries which have taken place here recently. Arraigned in the juvenile court this morning, the boys pleaded guilty to attempting to break into the Derbyshire home and were remanded until Friday for sentence. It is believed that the boys secured the revolver at another home they entered earlier in the evening.

Dollar Day Will Include Thursday, Both as to Values and Giving of Coupons.

The Examiner office will remain open tonight to receive payments of accounts and subscriptions in connection with Dollar Day.

Due to the extremely cold weather, Dollar Day has been advanced to include tomorrow, both as to the values that are being offered by merchants and in the giving of estimate blanks. All day yesterday it was not anticipated that the weather would be as severe as it is, being about the coldest Dollar Day the city has experienced, and in order to include those who found it impossible to come in from the country and out-of-town places, as well as those in the city, due to the extremely cold weather, it has been agreed by all interested to make Dollar Day this year include Thursday, both as to the sale of the specially priced goods and the giving of estimating blanks.

The Examiner office will be open tomorrow night until 10 o'clock as well.

Mary Pickford's Magnificent Home Near Los Angeles Offered To President For Use As Summer White House

LOS ANGELES, Calif., Jan. 26 (United Press).—If the Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce has its way, President Coolidge will use Mary Pickford's Beverley mansion as his summer White House this year. After formal acknowledgment from Washington that the President had received the offer of the palatial Pickford residence for his summer home, Chamber of Commerce officials today said Miss Pickford had offered her house to the President more than a week ago.

"The place is close enough to the beaches and the mountains so that Mr. Coolidge can enjoy both without having to travel far," Arthur Arnold, the secretary said.

"Photographs of the interior and exterior of the home have been sent to the President for his inspection."

REEVE MIDDLETON OF SMITH IS ELECTED BY ACCLAMATION PETERBORO COUNTY WARDEN

New Warden Has Served Nine Years as Member of County Council.

COMMITTEES FORMED

Financial Statement Shows Affairs of County in Good Condition.

After nine years' faithful service to the County of Peterborough, J. A. Middleton, Reeve of the Township of Smith, was yesterday awarded the highest office in the municipal life of the County, when he was elected Warden by acclamation. No other names were mentioned, and Mr. Middleton was nominated by the Reeves of two of the largest municipalities in the county.

The present Warden is the forty-seventh man to occupy that chair since the forming of the County in 1880. During those 46 years the Warden has come from the Township of Smith eight times, the last being in 1920, when G. B. Nichols, Mr. Middleton's predecessor, became Warden.

Mr. Middleton has served on all the important committees of the County, and last year was chairman of the finance committee. After taking the oath of office and being robed in the Warden's gown, Mr. Middleton was escorted to the Warden's chair by his mover and seconder, Reeves Smithson and Lillico. The Warden then addressed the members somewhat briefly, thanking them for the honor they had conferred upon him and asking for their co-operation in the work which has to be done by the members of the Council this year. "Gentlemen of the County Council: Words fail to express appreciation of the honor which you have conferred upon me today. It is an honor I by no means expected when I came into this Council nine years ago. It is a position which requires thought and in its duties and the duties of the Council I seek your co-operation during the coming year. It is with some feeling of regret that there are so many changes in the Council, but I welcome the new members to the Council board and hope that 1927 will be a year of progress for the County of Peterborough.

Members of Council

Smith—Warden Middleton and Deputy-Reeve George Simpson.

WILL SEND NURSES.

Still Maintain Hopeful Attitude That Trouble May Be Averted.

LONDON, Jan. 26.—(Canadian Press.)— The most formidable array of British fighting ships brought together outside of home waters since the great war, is assembling at the China station to back up the policy of the British government in protecting life and property. The combined army and naval forces which will soon be on hand for armed service in China in the event of an emergency approximate from 19,000 to 21,000.

These include 1,000 marines who sailed singing merrily on the Minnesota yesterday afternoon from Portsmouth for Shanghai, as well as about 11,000 infantrymen, who will probably be all embarked by the end of the week.

Major General John Duncan who will command the land forces in China, departed for the Far East aboard the transport Megantic from Liverpool yesterday afternoon. The Megantic will call at Malta on the way. General Duncan has had large experience, particularly in Gallipoli and eastern Europe in the world war.

The naval forces already in China waters include the fifth cruiser squadron, consisting of six vessels; the third destroyer flotilla, eight vessels; the Yangtse and West River gunboat flotilla, fifteen vessels; thirteen submarines and three attendant ships; three vessels commissioned temporarily for special service; four sloops; a twin-screw mine sweeper, two surveying ships and the aircraft carrier Hermes.

Two cruisers are on their way from the East Indies and the destroyers "Wanderer" and "Wolverine" and the escorting gunboats "Aphis" and "Ladybird" from Malta. Four cruisers are steaming to China from the Mediterranean.

Preparing for departure soon as they are refitted and their complement is brought up to full strength are nine destroyers, which will sail probably withlin a fortnight from Chatham, and the cruiser "Dauntless" and the hospital ship "Maine," which will proceed from Malta, where they are under rush orders to refit and replenish supplies as soon as possible.

The effectives now being put in readiness for embarkation from England, Malta and other points, together with the China station naval forces, are deemed sufficient for the present, it was authoritatively stated last night, although a number of nurses, including women from the military hospitals, will likely be ordered to prepare to accompany the infantry brigades or follow them upon other transports.

Despite the precautionary measures, they still maintain a hopeful attitude that actual trouble will be averted, this based on the fact that Charge O'Malley and Eugene Chen, the Cantonese foreign minister, are continuing their negotiations at Hankow.

However, any progress toward an agreement has been made, nothing of the kind is indicated in the official dispatches given out here.

Scream Saves Woman From The Firing Squad

JUAREZ, Mex., Jan 26. — A daring woman rebel leader, who three times led her forces to victory over the federal troops, has been captured and escaped the firing squad by a scream.

Dressed in a soldier's uniform, the woman, with other rebels, was lined up before a firing squad. A frightened scream disclosed her sex, and the federal troops spared her, but three fellow rebels were executed.

The woman refused to reveal her identity. She is now awaiting trial in Zacectacas City.

Robs Girl In Hold-up; Escorts Her To Car

DETROIT, Jan 26. — Miss Esther Niemi, a maid, who lives at 426 Jonathan avenue, Fordson, was held up late Saturday night at Davison avenue and Oakman boulevard by a man who flashed a light in her face, threatened her with a blackjack and after forcing her into the doorway of a real estate office, robbed her of $1.50. After completing the hold up, the man escorted Miss Niemi to a street car and told her she must not return to the neighbrhood or report the matter to the police. After watching her board the car the man left the corner.

COLD WAVE HITS SOUTH ONTARIO

Ottawa and Peterborough Hardest Hit With 18 Below Zero.

WORSE TO NORTH.

TORONTO, Jan. 26 (Canadian Press)—Sweeping out of the north, Old Boreas descended on Ontario this morning bringing the lowest temperatures of the season and causing considerable trouble to electrical communication and transportation companies. The intensity of this morning's blast was practically unheralded, temperatures ranged from 30 degrees below zero at Lake Simcoe points to six below at Niagara Falls. Northern Ontario reports are not available owing to lack of telegraph communication, but it is be lieved that much lower marks were reached as the cold wave came from north of the lakes. Western Ontario did not suffer so severely.

While colder weather was anticipated intensity of this morning's blast was unheralded by Meteorological office forecasts and consequently citizens leaving their homes for business were greeted with a stinging salute. Comparatively balmy temperatures prevailed last night and it was not until about four a.m. that the mercury commenced its precipitate decline in Southern Ontario.

The cold weather is expected to continue for a day or so. Official temperatures show that Ottawa and Peterborough were among the coldest spots with marks of 18 below registered, but reports from outlying points were to the effect that much lower levels were reached.

30 Below at Malone

NEW YORK, Jan. 25 (Canadian Press).—An unexpected cold wave brought the lowest temperatures of the season to the North-eastern States today. Thirty degrees below zero was reported at Malone, N.Y., near the Canadian boundary.

Temperatures ranging from 15 to 20 degrees below zero were prevalent in northern New York and the New England States.

DOLLAR DAY TO BE REPEATED THURSDAY

The Unfavorable Weather Made It Advisable To Extend the Selling For a Second Day.

The merchants who went to so much trouble to make the 1927 January Dollar Day a record one for bargain giving, feeling that the public would be disappointed owing to the extremely cold dip this morning, have all consented to continue their Dollar Day offerings for another day, and if the weather is more favorable Thursday, should be a bumper day for business, and a most profitable one for shoppers. All advertised prices in Tuesday's paper will be good on Thursday. The estimating blanks will also be given with each Dollar purchase, and the box in front of The Examiner will remain open for the convenience of those who wish to fill in their tickets at home, up till 10 o'clock on Thursday evening. The box will only be left outside till 6 o'clock to-night (Wednesday), and set out again in the morning.

To-day being so cold, very few of the special bargains are likely to be exhausted, so Thursday should be fully as good as a money-saver as to-day.

Saved From Robbery By Respect For Laws

CHICAGO, Jan. 26 (United Press).—Respect for the traffic laws saved William P. brown from being robbed when two bandits jumped to the running board of his automobile at a crossing.

"Drive on," one robber commanded, menacing Brown with a revolver.

"I can't," said Brown, "the stop lights are against me."

When the bandit insisted, Brown became so angry that he twisted the highwayman's wrist, forcing him to drop his pistol. The robbers escaped.

IMMORTAL MEMORY OF BURNS HONORED BY PETERBORO SCOTS AT BANQUET HELD LAST NIGHT

Many Members of Caledonian Club Gather in Paragon Hall for Occasion.

SPLENDID SPEECHES

Rev. J. W. Gordon Delivers Principal Address—Good Programme.

Robert Burns, name and quotations from his poems, in the good broad Scotch which he made famous were to be heard on all sides as the Scottish folk of Peterborough gathered together last night to celebrate the 168th anniversary of his birthday. From before the skirling bagpipe announced the entry of the "Haggis" until after the singing of "Auld Lang Syne" brought the annual celebration to a close, the "Immortal Memory" was uppermost in the minds of all who attended.

George Low, President of the Peterborough Caledonian Club, presided at the banquet, which was held in the Paragon Hall. After a traditionally Scottish repast, which included the famous Haggis, a splendid programme of addresses and musical numbers was given.

To the lot of the Rev. J. W. Gordon, minister of St. Andrew's United Church, fell the honorable task of proposing the principal toast of the evening, that of "The Immortal Memory," and this he did in a masterful fashion, giving an instructive address plentifully spiced with quotations from the works of the poet. He said he had not had the privilege of being born in Scotland, but that his father had, and that he had been brought up to know and love the poet and his works, and the Ayrshire brogue he used.

Mr. Gordon said that Burns was a wonderful man, one of a group of wonderful men who died before they were forty. In this connection he mentioned Keats, Shelley and Byron. The poet was born a short distance south of Ayr. When he was nine he was taken from the common school and set to work, learning in the evenings from his father, who was a well-informed man. From old people of the district he heard tales of witches and other legends of the countryside, all of which he remembered.

By the time he was 16 Burns was the best read young man of the countryside. At that time he wrote a poem concerning a young woman with whom he worked. At 17 he joined a dancing school. He said that his father never forgave him for learning to dance, and disliked him after that, but his brother said that his father didn't object to his learning to dance, and did not dislike him, but thought that he would meet people there who would lead him astray into loose living. About this time he studied flax dressing, and also joined a debating club. The subject of the first debate in which he and his brother took part was, "Resolved that an ugly, stupid rich girl would make a better wife than a pretty clever poor girl," a debate which, said Mr. Gordon, is still going on.

Burns was also a member of a Masonic lodge, and Mr. Gordon referred to the delight he took in gatherings of all kinds, such as that of last night or a lodge meeting, and spoke of the prominent place he would take in any such meeting.

When his father was dead, the poet and his brother, Gilbert, bought a farm, which they worked between them, and for the first four years the poet's share of the revenue was seven pounds a year. About this time he was beginning to taste the applause people accorded to his poetry, and church controversies on at that time brought about two poems which Mr. Gordon quoted. The first was about a quarrel between two "Old Light" churches—that is, churches clinging to the old doctrine of election over church boundaries. This was entitled, "The Twa Herds," and read in part:

Sic twa! O, do I live to see it.
Sic famous twa should disagree't
An' names "Villian," "Hypocrit"
Ilk ither geein',
While New-light herds wi' laughin' spite
Say neither's leein'.

Another was "Holy Willie's

REV. NORRIS IS ACQUITTED ON MURDER CHARGE

Declared "Not Guilty" By Jury For Slaying of Dexter Chipps.

NO DISTURBANCE.

Fundamentalist Pastor Congratulated By Many Friends In Crowded Court-room.

AUSTIN, Tex., Jan. 25 (Canadian Press)—Dr. J. Frank Norris, fundamentalist pastor of the First Baptist Church at Fort Worth, was acquitted by a jury in District Court here last night on a charge of the murder of slaying Dexter Chipps. The jury was out two hours and nine minutes.

Former Sheriff Miller of Travis County handed the verdict to the judge. It read: "We, the jury, find the defendant, J. Frank Norris, not guilty."

There was a rush to Norris and his wife. The judge had threatened a $100 fine or three days in jail to anyone making a disturbance. There were a few handclaps by women as the verdict was read, but this subsided when Judge James Hamilton ordered the bailiffs to arrest anyone continuing the applause.

The crush about Norris shaking his hand prevented the crowd from moving. Norris finally broke away.

The verdict was returned at 6:48 p.m.

Dexter E. Chipps, Jr., son of the man Norris killed in the study of the First Baptist Church at Fort Worth last July, wept and could say nothing when he was asked for a statement.

Twice Saved From Lake Girl Drowns In Bathtub

CLEVELAND, Jan. 26.—(A.P.) — Saved twice from drowning in Lake Erie, Susan Kukla, 19 years old, was drowned in the bath tub at her home here last night.

When she was 15 the girl almost lost her life at a beach when she fainted while swimming and was rescued by other bathers. Two years ago at a beach party she swam out over her head and would have been drowned but a boy came to her rescue.

The girl had been ill during the last year because of fainting spells. Last night she told her mother she was going to take a bath. Ten minutes later she was found drowned.

To-Day's Record

THE WEATHER.

There was a sudden and decided drop in temperature early this morning. At daybreak the temperature was 17 below zero; later in the morning it got down to 21 below zero—the lowest of the present winter; at noon it was 13 below zero (a particularly low mid-day reading.) Dollar day bargain hunters may think it very cold to-day. It is. Two years ago Dollar Day buyers encountered a temperature of 36 below zero. By comparison to-day is quite balmy. —W. P.

CHARGE WINDSOR COUNCIL MEN WITH DISTRIBUTING LIQUOR TO OFFICIALS IN 1926 ELECTIONS

At Hearing Called By Unsuccessful Candidates To Set Aside Election.

BALLOT PLUGGING.

Alderman McConnell Bribed Official To Mark Ballots For Him.

WINDSOR, Ont., Jan. 26 (Canadian Press).—Witnesses called by attorneys for unsuccessful candidates in the Windsor 1926 municipal elections bared stories of liquor distribution to election officials and wholesale ballot plugging, at the opening session of the hearing to set aside the election, in Judge Duncan Ross' court in the City Hall yesterday.

Alderman John W. McConnell was under fire virtually throughout the entire session, as witness after witness, called to the stand by Wilfred D. Roach, counsel for the candidates who were defeated, told of irregularities involving marking of ballots after the polls were closed, with crosses opposite McConnell's name, and of liquor being distributed by McConnell before and during election day at the polls.

McConnel was absent because of illness, his counsel, Frederick Kerby of Windsor, told Judge Ross. A similar excuse was made for former Mayor Frank J. Mitchell, by Gerald McHugh, his attorney. Mitchell also is accused of giving liquor to election officials.

Mrs. Dorothy Nobbs, pretty 24-year-old polling clerk, told the court that McConnell came to her home on the Friday preceding election day, December 5, and asked her to help him in the election.

"Did he suggest that you mark ballots for him" Judge Rose enquired.

"Yes, he did. He said I would have lots of opportunity to, and I marked a number of crosses opposite his name," she replied. "Before he went away that Friday, he left me two bottles of wine. I did what I could for him. I marked ballots and I asked other people, probably four

AMERICAN INTERESTS UNEARTH BILLION DOLLAR "ZINC DISTRICT"

Ontario Hears of Immense Discoveries in Sudbury Area.

STOCK SOARING.

Discoveries Are Almost Enclosed By Sudbury Nickel Corporations.

TORONTO, Jan 26.—Ontario has lost another billion dollar development to American interests.

Report announces the fact that the Bunker Hill-Sullivan group of mine capitalists of San Francisco have uncovered and blocked out at Chelmsford, Ont., 47,000,000 tons of zinc-lead ore which assays $22 to the ton.

Diamond drilling in the Township of Balfour, Blezard and Lumsden conducted during last fall revealed probably the biggest bunch of single wealth ever taken out of Northern Ontario.

Nickel Surrounds Line.

This "zinc zone" occurs along a line of secondary intrusive faulting, the axis of which is parallel to the east and west direction of the formation of the nickel belt; in fact the zinc ore discoveries are almost enclosed by the mines of the Sudbury Nickel Corporations.

It is a tremendous block of mineral, with tracings of platinum and palladium showing right on the surface.

Stock of the Bunker-Hill Sullivan was selling yesterday on the San Francisco Stock Exchange at $110 per share. Dizzy heights are expected for this company's shares when the full benefit of the wealth on the property becomes known to the general investing public.

It is said that the Hollinger interests looked over this property about fifteen months ago but did not see that there was particular worth in development.

Others tried a few diamond drills here and there with some success, but it remained for the Idaho-Montana crowd to get right down to serious business, with the result that for the third time in about a year Canada has a billion dollars development on the way to a successful conclusion, the others being Aluminum City, Quebec, and International Paper, in New Brunswick.

Sudbury now produces 85 per cent. of the world's nickel. If all that is said proves half true Sudbury will also have the greatest lead and zinc proposition on this continent.

OLD MASTERS

A weary lot is thine, fair maid,
A weary lot is thine!
To pull the thorn thy brow to braid,
And press the rue for wine.
A lightsome eye, a soldier's mien,
A feather of the blue,
A doublet of the Lincoln green—
No more of me you knew
My Love!
No more of me you knew.

"This morn is merry June, I trow,
The rose is budding fain;
But she shall bloom in winter snow
Ere we two meet again."
He turned his charger as he spake
Upon the river'd shore,
He gave the bridle-reins a shake,
Said "Adieu for ever more
My Love!
And adieu for evermore."

Prince Stops Breakfast For London Phone Call

NEW YORK, Jan. 26.—(A.P.) — Prince William, of Sweden, likes his breakfast without interruption, of course, but when it is disturbed for "a magnificent thrill" that's another matter. That was his reaction to a telephone call from London. He was interviewed by the London correspondent of a Swedish paper, and it was just like talking from one part of Stockholm to another.

Lyrics Of Life

(By Douglas Malloch.)

THE MAN WHO QUIT

Tobacco is an awful thing.
It fills the house with smoke;
And, though a housewife ought to sing.
How can you, when you choke?
And so I got that man to say
He'd throw his old cigars away
And smoke his dirty pipe no more—
And now I'm worse off than before.

I never knew how mean a man
That man of mine could be Until his old tobacco can
Was buried in the sea.
The things he's said, the things he's done!
We've had a fight, a fearful one.
I never knew, until our spat,
Tobacco made a man like that.

That is, that no tobacco would.
Though women may correct,
A man can be about so good,
That's all you need expect.
And so I have decided I
Will go downtown today and buy
That man a pipe, and maybe then
He'll be the way he was again.

CHINA WATCHING CANTON ISSUE WITH BRITISH

Civil Wars Virtually Suspended During Cantonese Trouble.

STRIKES CONTINUE.

Nationalists Turn Attention Towards Whole Elimination of Foreign Influence.

SHANGHAI, Jan. 26 (Canadian Press). — Civil war which racked China for a year have been virtually suspended while the country focuses its attention upon the struggle of the Nationalist, or Cantonese, government against foreigners, particularly the British. The Cantonese having brought under their domination half of China in a remarkable campaign of arms and propaganda, have for the time ceased their attack upon the Northern forces and turned their attention to elimination of foreign influence.

The British alignment against the Nationalists has been more clearly drawn in the last two days with the Nationalists' vigorously pronunciamento Monday directed most specifically against Great Britain and the numerous despatches from London reporting that three infantry brigades have been ordered to China to protect British lives and property in Shanghai.

However, Chinese everywhere are asking whether a force of such size will be held for such limited objectives; whether part of it may not be used to attempt to restore the old position of the British at Hankow, whose concession district has been taken over by Nationalist authorities for administrative purposes. Hundreds of British and United States women and children have come to Shanghai for safety, since Chinese mobs forced them out of the British concession in riots of January 3 and 4.

There was civil war yesterday in only two theatres — Chekiang province, where the best reports agree that Marshal Sun Chuan-Fang, Northern leader, is at present holding his own against the Nationalist invaders of one of his provinces of Eastern China, and in Honan province, where confusion and obscurity resulted from defection of Lieutenants of Marshal Wu Pei Fu, whose provinces in Central China were occupied by the Nationalist armies.

Developments are expected soon in Chekiang. It is understood that orders have been issued for a general advance of the first Cantonese army from the Kiangsi province border toward Hangchow, on the seacoast of Chekiang. In this region Sun Chuan-Fang's troops have been attempting to stay the Nationalist advance toward Shanghai, 113 miles by railroad.

Elsewhere the Northerners apparently are content to rest on their arms, and watch the outcome of the contest of their nominal enemies, the Cantonese, against foreigners.

It is not doubted that events at Hankow where the Cantonese overran the concessions and took possession, have encouraged Chinese of all factions hopefully to anticipate the early arrival of the day when China will obtain the fullest sovereignty over all territories within her borders with the abolition of foreigners' special privileges. Persons high in the councils of Marshal Chang Tso-Lin, dictator of Manchuria and power behind the Peking government, including his son, Chang Hsueh-Liang, have not hesitated to declare that the British attempt forcibly to regain their Hankow concession would meet with the united opposition of the north and south.

The immediate threat to Shanghai is not considered by foreign authorities to be the possible invasion of a Cantonese army, but trouble from within by sporadic rioting of radicals, to which the Cantonese agitators sent on in advance undoubtedly contribute their efforts. Strikes involving thousands of Chinese constatly are in progress. As quickly as one is settled, another is begun.

Southern agitators who were known to be active failed to keep the tramway employees on strike a few days ago, but they succeeded in inducing the crews of public busses to walk out. Thus, they kept in effect a partial tie-up of the city's transportation.

The problem of the defence of Shanghai is claiming the careful attention of foreign consular and municipal authorities. The first troop reinforcements, a company of 200 men of a Punjab regiment, are due from Hong Kong this morning. Another company is expected Friday. These will be quartered at the race-course.

Preparations also are being made to house three brigades of troops which are due from India and England before the end of February, in warehouses and other buildings of the city.

Barbed wire barricades have been erected in every street where the French concession adjoins the native city. The international settlement is heavily wired in the vicinity of the railway stations.

There is a general feeling of uneasiness, especially among women, many of whom are preparing to leave. Considerable removal of household goods to warehouses have taken place in readiness for shipment homeward. The war risk insurance business is booming.

Aggressive anti-foreign and anti-Christian agitation and action virtually has been confined to provinces under Cantonese control, although northern militarists and politicians are watching sympathetically the Cantonese gains at foreigners' expense.

Winnipeg Talking About Using Beer Fountains As a Curb On Bootleggers Throughout Manitoba

WINNIPEG, Jan. 26 — Beer fountains controlled by nickel in the slot device may be used to curb bootleggers in Manitoba. This is the gesture following the plan to install public beer parlors and allow grocery stores to sell the beverages. One application has already been received for the privilege of installing nickel in the slot beer machines at filling stations on the highways outside cities for the benefit of tourists. Meantime the public is reacting very seriously against the campain of those interested in the booze traffic to debauch the community.

IMMORTAL MEMORY OF BURNS HONORED

Prayer," which the poet puts into the mouth of a man who was haled before Presbytery for his mode of living, although he himself thought that he was destined for Heaven. Part of this was given:

O Thou who in the Heavens dost dwell,
Wha as it pleases best Thysel',
Sends ane to Heaven and ten to Hell,
A' for Thy glory,
And not for any guid or ill
They've done afore Thee.

I bless and praise Thy matchless might,
When thousands Thou hast left in night,
That I am here afore Thy sight,
For gifts and grace,
A burnin' and a shinin' light,
Tae a' this place.

Yet I am here a chosen sample,
To show Thy grace is great and ample,
I'm here a pillar in Thy temple,
Strong as a rock,
A guide, a buckler, an example
To a' Thy flock.

Lord, hear my earnest cry and prayer
Against that Presbytery o' Ayr,
Thy strong right hand, Lord, make it bare,
Upo' their heads,
Lord weigh it down and dinna spare
For their misdeeds.

But Lord, remember me and mine,
Wi' mercies temp'ral and divine,
That I for gear and grace may shine
Excelled by nane,
And a' the glory shall be Thine,
Amen! Amen!

Another of his poems concerning church affairs referred to a pastor who was always preaching to his flock of the wrath to come. This man, Black Russel, is mentioned in "The Holy Fair," one verse of which gives his description as follows:

A vast, unbottomed, boundless pit,
Filled fu' o' lowin' brunstane,
Wha's ragin' flame, and scorchin' heat,
Wad melt the hardest whunstane.
The half asleep start up wi' fear,
And think they hear it roarin';
When presently it doth appear
'Twas but some neighbor snorin'
Asleep that day.

A man who came in for some very cruel satire in a poem by Burns was a chemist named Hornbrook, who gave a lecture at a Masonic meeting, and drew the poet's scorn and dislike by putting on a great many airs. The poem quoted made him such a laughing stock that he left the neighborhood:

Some books are lies frae end tae end
And some great lies were never penned,
Ev'n ministers, they hae been kenn'd
In holy rapture,
A rousin' whid a' times to bend
And naer wi' Scripture.

But this that I am gaun to tell
That lately on a night befel
Is just as true's the Deil's in hell,
Or Dublin City,
That e'er he nearer comes oursel'
'S a muckle pity.

The rising moon began to glour
The distant cumnock hills out our
To count her horns wi' a' my pow'r
I set mysel',
But whether she had three or four
I cou'd na tell.

I was come round about the hill,
And todlin' down on Willie's mill,
Settin' my staff wi' a' my skill
To keep me sicker,
Tho' leeward whyles against my will
I took a bicker.

Other poems written about this time were "To Mary in Heaven," which the speaker characterized as one of the greatest poems ever written, "The Cottar's Saturday Night," and "Tam O'Shanter." The latter he decided to emigrate to some place where he could make a better living, but the publication of a volume of his works brought him 900 pounds, so he changed his mind. He sent 180 pounds to his brother so that he could take care of his mother, and went to Edinburgh himself. Here he was well received but his head was not turned by the adulation of the people. Then he was appointed an excise officer and moved to Dumfries. In 1796 he died.

His Achievements.

In considering the achievements of Burns, Mr. Gordon said that he did work that was badly needed as about that time Scotland began to be absorbed by England, and it was bad form to us. the Scottish dialect, or dress in Scottish costume. Matthew Arnold said that to make a great man two things were necessary, a man with ability, and a need for his ability. Burns was the man needed at that time to raise the national spirit of the Scots.

It has been said that some of his poetry was uncle n, said the speaker, but it was as a limpid brook beside the collections of songs gathered by some other men at the same time. He took many filthy songs and improved them and raised the taste of his countrymen.

Many of his poems were real lyrics and had to be sung to be properly enjoyed. This was because he took old tunes and wrote songs to suit them. When he had a song written he would have a friend of his sing them, and would take out the harsh sounds until he had the songs to suit them. He took poetry back to nature, singing of the ordinary things of life instead of abstract things.

His Character.

Speaking of the man himself, Mr. Gordon said it would be foolish to defend him against the charge of drunkenness. In this he was like most men of his time. Almost everybody was drunk frequently, ... some very frequently, while the few who didn't drink were a disgrace to the community. Burns was like the best of of his day, and his drinking was largely dependent upon his mood.

In his family relations he was a model son, a good husband, and a kind father. He found time to write all his songs and poems, looked after his family and carried out faithfully the duties of his office, so that he could not have been a filthy sot. He put noble thoughts into the minds of the people, who were content to live in subjection] as their fathers before them and the conditions he sought to have remedied have now all disappeared. Mr. Gordon brought his address to a close by quoting part of "Tam O'Shanter."

The Twa Countries.

The toast to the Twa Countries was proposed by Joseph Grierson, who said that his was an honorable task, and one that pleased him as he had a great love for his own country and knew a lot about Canada.

Speaking first about the Homeland Mr. Grierson referred to the many great men who had come from Scotland and gave credit for their accomplishments to the tenacity with which they carry out anything they start. He referred to the struggles waged for conscientious liberty, and said that the history of those times is not studied enough.

The Scots had always been daring pioneers, he continued, and many of the early explorers of the Canadian West were Scots. They had carried civilization to many parts of the world.

Speaking of Canada, Mr. Grierson said he could see here the beginnings of a vast nation. If so much good could come from such a little country as Scotland there would be great possibilities for Canada, with her vast areas still awaiting settlement. Canada is still, he said, an agricultural country, and he was glad to see that they were working now to bring out men interested in agriculture. Many of those who come out encounter hardships, he continued, but they cannot expect to get something for nothing, or to have an easy time, although for many reasons conditions are easier for pioneers now than they were years ago. He hoped many more Scotsmen would come out to help develop Canada, although their loss to Scotland was being greatly deplored.

The Absent Ones.

On such nights as last, said the Rev. J. D. Paterson, who answered the toast, "The Absent Ones," Scotsmen meet in the land of their adoption and think of the old land, perhaps wondering if it would not be best to go back. He referred to the fifth commandment, "Honor thy father and thy mother" and said that Burns' night could teach them that they ought to go back and see the old folks once in a while. Those out here have the excitement of new scenes and better chances, while those at home haven't the thrill of adventure to make them forget their aching hearts.

Mr. Paterson also spoke of the great men of the past. With the places where they lived so close, the scenes came vividly to the minds of the people of to-day, who could almost conjure the participants up, feeling that they really knew them. He also referred to the glorious dead, mentioning that Scotland came next to Serbia in sacrifice in the World War. He closed by urging his hearers to think of the great men of the past, their fellow countrymen who had died, and their absent brethren.

The Lassies.

The Rev. W. S. Edgar was charged with answering the toast to "The Lassies," which was heartily honored by the gentlemen present. He said that he had been allotted five minutes, a short time for a great subject. The poet they had gathered to honor had been very fond of the lassies, and he had been inspired by them to write many of his beautiful songs. No lassies, the speaker declared, could beat the Scotch lassies for beauty of feature, charm of manner, or graces of the heart. Miss Toronto was Scotch, while George Young, a Scotch boy, had been inspired to his great feat by his love for a noble Scotch mother.

Our Club.

The final toast on the list was that to the Peterborough Caledonian Club, which was answered by James Brown. He referred to the history of the club since its reorganization, and urged the members to get behind the executive and turn out at business meetings as well as on other occasions. To those present who were not members of the club he extended an invitation to join, saying that attendance at meetings would make them think of home and distract their minds from the every day cares and worries.

The musical programme consisted by solos by Miss Greta LeBarr, Miss Jessie Pattison, J. A. Smith, and R. Hendry, a duet by Messrs. Smith and Hendry, violin selections by a quartette consisting of Mrs. M. B. Hoyland, Miss C. Taylor, and Messrs. W. Gaskin and R. Wyllie, accompanied by Mrs. M. Evans, and a violin duet by Mrs. Hoyland and Miss Taylor.

The auditors, B. W. Squires and Rae Williams were reappointed. When the communications were being read, the question of indigent patients in the local hospitals came up for discussion, and E. A. Peck, M.P., the County solicitor, was present, and he was asked for his advice. It appears by the new act that the municipalities have to pay half of the hospital bill and the county the other half, but hospitals are only allowed to charge $1.50 per day. These charges are provided for in the Act, but there is no reference to a doctor's bill, and this is where the dificulty arises, as to who should pay the doctors account.

An account of $200 was passed by the Council which had been previously paid on the advice of the solicitor. The members of the Peterboro County Council are of the opinion that when they make a grant of $1,000 to the Children's Aid Society every year, this should cover the cost of upkeep of county children. In four years the grant has been increased from $600 to $1,000, and the feeling of the Council at present is to do away with the grant if they are to pay the extra charge also.

Last year the upkeep of the provincial highway was $5,724.03, and the County's share of this was $1,146.42. The financial statement of the treasurer was read and adopted and referred to the auditors.

Report of House of Refuge.

The report of the House of Refuge Committee of 1926 was also submitted, which showed a balance at the end of the year of $256.11.

I respectfully beg to submit the following report:.

This report is required by statute (that is), a report from the preceding year must be made to the first session of Council succeeding. As per authority vested in your Board by the Council, a barn has been constructed, as set out in Council resolution, 60 feet long and 35 feet wide. The amount paid out during the year for such purpose being $3,469.08, with a further claim of $25.00 yet unpaid. There may be some small accounts, but they will not amount to much (if any).

Considerable trouble arose during the year due to acute and senile ailments of the old people. The auditors' report will show $461.50 paid out for hospital and funeral expenses.

Clothing, bedding and other necessities had become to a great extent depleted, consequently extra outlay ensued.

The results of the fire are still felt in the operation of the farm, but the same will not be felt this coming year.

The boiler has not been working satisfactorily, and is not yet giving proper results, although a lot of extra attention has been devoted to the same.

Heat, water and light and power have become a factor not easily handled, and I would solicit the assistance of the Council as a whole to look into the matter and give the Board the benefit of your advice.

The matter of handling a body of old, and in some cases eccentric, people is no small undertaking, and whilst perfection is not expected of man, your Board believe that your Superintendent and Matron are doing all in their power to obtain the desired results.

Herewith I attach the several statements that explain the financing:

TRAVELOGUE GIVEN ON LAND OF BURNS

Rev. David Wren Gives Illustrated Talk on Poet and His Conntry.

On Tuesday evening, a Travelogue on "The Land of Bobby Burns" was given in the Reid Street Hall, under the auspices of the Trinity Club. There were present between three and four hundred. W. Derry, President of the Trinity Club, presided. The following programme was given: Violin Solo, A. Wright; vocal solos by Mrs. H. F. Doig, accompanied by Miss Gwen Donley; a guitar duet by the Misses Hamilton, and lecture slides by Rev. Mr. Wren on "The Poet Bard of Scotland." Refreshments were served at the close.

Mr. Wren prefaced his remarks by reminding the audience that his grandparents and their children were all born within the vicinity of Burns' birthplace and that many of their ancestors were buried in the graveyard where the body of Burns once rested. The grandfather of the speaker was at one time elder in the kirk which was onte the place of worship of the young bard.

Mr. Wren pointed out to the young folk the advantage of biograph study and being well acquainted with the lives of the men and women who made their country great. In this respect the speaker thought that Burns was among the greatest of Scotland's sons whose spirit lives today. There are Burns' Clubs in every nook and corner of the earth and Scots keep alive the memory of this gifted son.

Burns lived at a time when the country was dark and volcanic, when people were hungry and desperate, when the land was filled with nobles and the courts blazed with splendor. His was the day of Burke, Fox, Goethe, Nelson, Mozart, Pitt, Wellington, and Napoleon. Amidst this splendid group was Burns, who appeals more to the imagination and affection of mankind than any of them. He had constantly to struggle against two handicaps—poverty and drink. Few appreciated his genius and so he was allowed to lose his grip and fall into the pit of drunkenness. He had two characteristics which made him great. He had sympathy and inspiration.

Burns was an inspired bard, who broke into song because he had no other way to express his thoughts. Scotland's debt to Burns cannot be estimated.

He bequeathed to his country the most exquisite collection of songs to be found anywhere in the world, many of which he rescued from the mire and gutter and hallowed and sweetened them with the breath of Scotland. His life was not perfect. Had he been devoid of genius people nowadays never would have heard of his vices and his woes. They glory in his strength and learn lessons from his weakness. He has enshrined with undying glory the land of his birth.

His poems did not grow. They awoke complete from the soul of the author. His feet may have been in the furrow, but the nobility of manhood was in his heart and on his lips was the voice of melody, and on his face the light of the morning star. In Dumfries, he sleeps in a beautiful mausoleum which living hands have reared to his memory, but down the long aisles of the swift revolving years his soul goes marching on.

Rupture Can Be Healed

Science Finds

And Without Operation, Delay or Danger

New Discovery Seals Rupture—Masters Human Scourge Which Defied Doctors for Ages. Thousands Tell of Benefits. Your Safety and Cleanliness Assured.

Try This New Way FREE

So Light, Small and Comfortable is the New Rupture Appliance, It Can Not Be Noted Even When the Wearer is Clad in Tights. Several Dancers, Sufferers from Rupture Due to the Unusual Exertion, Have Been Healed by New Discovery.

Little Children, Rupture Sufferers, Whose Hope of Relief Was Slight Until the Discovery of New Scientific Treatment of Hernia, Need No Longer be Left Hanging Between Relief and Disability, But May Now Look Forward to a Full Life, Free of the Handicap of Truss or Dangerous and Costly Operation. Their Tender Little Bodies May Now Be Whole Once More.

Strains of Unusual Positions Mean Nothing to Rupture Sufferers Now, as Science Has Perfected a Treatment for Rupture Which Even During the Healing Stage Does Not Interfere With the Body Actions.

Rupture can be healed.

Medical science, endless investigation, combined with modern inventiveness, has devised a method which actually heals rupture. For ages, the healing of rupture, or hernia as it is known medically, has been the aim of countless physicians and surgeons.

Investigations into the ills and body afflictions of ancients, disclose that in days, when history was noted on tablets of stone, rupture was known, and even then priests of that time were aimlessly trying to effect a cure. Trusses, as the implements which hold or retain the rupture are called, were in use at that period in history, but like the modern truss they held the rupture but failed to assist nature in healing the wound.

The ancients' attempts at healing were mere gropings, as they knew nothing of the circulation of blood and its effect on body tissue and body growth. The various phases of growth were mysteries which they were unable to fathom. Since Sir William Harvey, an English scientist of the early century, discovered that blood really circulated through the body, sending life-giving materials to all parts of the human system, the path of the rupture scientists has been more easy to follow.

They attempted to find, if possible, some method of retaining the rupture safely, yet something which would allow free circulation of blood and not irritate the edges of the hernia or rupture and which would heal the tear.

Assists Nature to Heal

This has been done. Experiments carried on for more than 30 years has resulted in the perfection of an appliance, light, safe, comfortable and clean, which assists nature and really heals the rupture. An additional improvement has been made; the entire appliance, which weighs less than two ounces, can now be washed in water or antiseptics, eliminating all body odors, irritations and causes of skin blistering. The announcement was withheld for some time, so that thousands of experiments which had been carried on in all sections of America, Holland, England, Canada and Germany could be investigated and the condition of these observed at frequent intervals.

These investigations have been made and it has been found that a great number of cases have been successfully treated. That the good effects have been permanent, is attested by letters written by the people themselves and sent to the offices of those who perfected the new rupture appliance. These included people in every walk of life, people who make their living by hard work, where strains, heavy lifting and constant muscular effort is necessary. Others include society women, working women and women in moderate circumstances. The successful treatments have been general in all classes.

Heals the Aged

In their zeal to prove the worth of the new process, men and women of advanced years were selected and their experiences recorded. A probe showed that even in this class a great number of permanent cures had resulted, where the patient followed closely the instructions of the experts.

To really understand what this great discovery and these years of experimenting and testing mean to humanity, it is almost necessary that a full description of the new method be given. Like all inventions and discoveries of science, its method of healing is based on logic and upon a keen knowledge of the subject.

A rupture or hernia, as it is known in medical science, is literally a tear or a separation of the muscle fibres in the walls of the abdomen. This separation is caused by a heavy strain, a violent jerking or unusual exertion. The fibres separate and allow a portion of the intestine to protrude through the opening. This results in a small knot or knob on the wall of the abdomen.

Before the investigation, which resulted in the discovery of this new method of healing, there were but two courses open. A physician or surgeon could be called and an operation performed or the patient or sufferer could seek some sort of comfort from a truss, which pushed itself into the rupture opening, keeping the protruding intestine inside the body.

The operation was expensive and dangerous, with the outcome a doubtful thing.

All the surgeon with his knife, could promise to do, was to bring the edges of the torn section together and sew it, then await the action of nature and allow growth to renew the torn sections.

Truss Prevents Healing

If the truss was called into service, the hard leather knob was forced into the tear, where constant irritation wore thin the edges of the wound and the hard pressure prevented proper blood circulation. The sufferer was forced to resign himself to a lifetime of rupture suffering, never free from the harness of the truss. No hope was held out by scientists that his rupture would ever disappear, although many manufacturers of appliances contended that such a thing was possible; scientific investigation showed that it was impossible to heal the rupture as long as the heavy pad was being pushed into the rupture opening, separating the edges of the tear and wearing thin the edges of the torn section.

The heavy springs in the usual truss pressed into the body, many times injuring the kidneys and causing unrepairable damage to the back, where the heavy steel pressed into the tender nerves, centred in the spinal column. Besides this so cruel was the old-fashioned truss, it was impossible to sleep in the apparatus, with the result that in sleep many times the rupture "came out" and even a doctor was unable to replace it. When this happened, an immediate operation was necessary if the life of the patient was to be saved. Peritonitis would result in 24 hours if the rupture strangulated or could not be replaced. The old truss was not washable; it caused skin irritations and the dirt which accumulated caused a feverish condition which retarded the healing.

The great number of rupture cases among small children and babies made necessary some method which would eliminate forever the pushing pad, the dangerous operation and heavy steel encircling the body, injuring the delicate nerve centres.

Experiments Bring Success

The experiments resulted in the discovery and perfection of the Brooks appliance. C. E. Brooks, a resident of Marshall, Michigan, was ruptured. He was not a doctor, but he was a well educated man. Rupture causes and rupture cures became his hobby, and after many years he developed the appliance which now bears his name.

He soon found the deficiencies of the truss—the things it did to retard healing. So he developed an appliance which did everything which the truss failed to do. With reverse logic he invented the rupture appliance which resulted in the many benefits narrated.

Can Be Washed Daily

His appliance, built scientifically and recommended by physicians and doctors in all sections of the world, lays—not pushes—on the rupture. Small, light, clean, safe and comfortable, its soft velvet-like air cushion of hygienic rubber retains the rupture and at the same time tends to bring the edges of the tear together. The action of the small oval is to gently close the wound, and in this way allow growth. Nature, when assisted, soon repairs the damage wrought in the injured side and the result is relief for the sufferer. The washable, sanitary feature, so necessary if healing is expected and health assured, was incorporated into this new invention.

He eliminated at once all metal springs and hard, unyielding pads. Soft washable material encircles the body and acts as a support for the small oval. There are no features in the newly perfected appliance which do not work for the benefit of the patient. Every movement of the body results in the edges of the wound being brought closer together, reversing the action of the old style which constantly forced the edges of the wound apart.

It is so light, so comfortable that it can be worn even while asleep, so that night and day, asleep or at work, the rupture is being healed.

Thousands Relieved

It is no wonder then that so many people have been benefitted by this new discovery. A volume of letters began to flow into the offices of the inventor as soon as the method was available. People who thought they were destined to wear a truss all their lives or submit to a dangerous operation, reported benefits in a few months, while success with small children were regular occurrences.

To ascertain the truth of the reports of permanent help by the use of the new invention, a check was taken over a period of years and letters written to hundreds who had worn the new device. The answers were amazing—the number of cases healed astounding. Hundreds, literally thousands, torn for years by rupture and weakened by its effects, had gained freedom from all devices by the consistent use of the new invention.

In a letter to the inventors, Mrs. Thomas Scott of 11637 125th Street, Edmonton, Alta., Canada, said:

"One year ago I bought your rupture appliance for my little girl, who was three years old. She is now four and the rupture hasn't bothered her since I put the appliance on.

"I surely am very thankful to you and you may use this letter, as it may help some other worried mother."

An amazing example was reported by C. H. Campbell, a carpenter, 75 years old, living at Freeport N. S., Canada, who had been ruptured many years. He said:

"I am pleased to inform you that I do not need anything in connection with the appliance, for I have not worn same for the last nine months and consider myself healed of rupture.

"The rupture has not troubled me for the last four years—thanks to you and your invention. It was a God-send to me, for the doctor said there was nothing for me but the knife. I am seventy-five years old and work every day at my trade as a carpenter. You are at liberty to use the above statement in any way you choose."

A brief period benefited E. W. Brown of Norwich, N. Y., who states:

"I discontinued wearing my appliance about six weeks ago and am happy to say that my rupture is entirely healed. Was examined by my doctor and pronounced well. Considering my age, 61 years, think this is wonderful work.

"Cannot express to you just how grateful I am, for up to the time I commenced wearing your appliance was miserable every minute."

Steel Trusses Fail

A proof that spring trusses failed to do the work while the more modern Brooks appliance made possible benefits which even a doctor pronounced positive, the letter from Albert Foote, P. O. Box 177, Sterling, Mass., said:

"Gentlemen: I wore your grand rupture appliance for one year day and night, after which I underwent a doctor's examination. He stated I was completely healed. This examination was made in December, 1921, and I haven't worn the appliance since and have had no trouble.

"I suffered from a double rupture and had used spring trusses for six years without help."

A further proof that the benefits are permanent ones, is verified by John Clark, Roan Mountain, Tenn., R. F. D. No. 2, Box 84, who said:

"Your rupture appliance has surely benefited me—I have been well for two years.

"You may use my name and this letter in any way you wish, for I feel very grateful."

A sad case was disclosed when a man writing from Peoria, Illinois, gave the following statement:

"Dear Mr. Brooks: I am returning the rupture appliance for refund, as father died from strangulated hernia the day before it came.

"We tried two years ago to get him to order one of your appliances and cannot help but feel that if he had done as we wanted him to—he would have been spared."

Never Sold at Stores

Unscrupulous advertisers are endeavoring to sell the public a cheap substitute for the Brooks Appliance, claiming that it is genuine. Do not be misled by imitations and substitutions. The genuine Brooks Appliance is never sold through agents nor at stores of any kind. Every appliance is made at Marshall, Michigan, to your individual requirements. Look for trademark bearing portrait of C. E. Brooks which appears on every appliance. None other genuine.

Thousands Relieved

On file in the offices of the company are thousands of letters, telling of the benefits effected by this new invention and many of them full of thanks and gratitude for the benefit which they had always thought impossible or too dangerous to attempt.

So convinced are the people who now make this new invention that it will heal rupture and bring instant relief they will allow a ten-day free trial of the new appliance. In ten days, they believe any rupture sufferer can tell whether or not it is satisfactory in his or her particular case. If it fails to give the comfort that they feel it should it can be returned.

Free Trial

The financial standing of the people who make this newly perfected appliance is above reproach. They give as references, banks, ministers, physicians and express companies in their city or in practically any large city in the entire nation.

"To gamble with rupture," said a prominent scientist, "is to gamble with life itself. Trusses hamper the wearer, they many times ruin the health of children for life. To secure an appliance which retains and at the same time assists healing is wonderful and means much to mankind."

HE KEPT HIS HEAD.

An outbreak of fire in a Winnipeg theatre the other day might have been followed by a disaster similar to that of the Laurier Palace in Montreal, had it not been for the cool-headed comedian who made the announcement calmly from the stage that the audience should leave the theatre.

The result was that the people quietly moved to the exits, and the building was emptied without the slightest trouble.

Panic is the great danger in situations where a crowd is concerned.

Had someone in the Winnipeg theatre given the alarm by wildly shouting, "Fire!" as was the case in the Montreal disaster, it is possible that there would have been a rush for the doors and a repetition of the Laurier Palace tragedy.

A comparison of the two cases should lead all house managers, if they have not already done so, to impress upon their staffs the importance of keeping their heads when danger threatens.

As long as the employees can be counted upon to do that there is no reason why a fire alarm should result in a panic-stricken audience.

BUT IT WAS THERE WHEN NEEDED.

The London Fire Department carried life nets for over twenty years without having occasion to use them at a fire—yet when an emergency at last arose that called for the nets to be employed they saved a dozen lives.

There is a moral to be found in this experience that can be applied to the whole matter of fire protection.

The tendency is to cut down to the minimum the appropriations for equipment that is not likely to be frequently needed, forgetting that some day a situation may develop that will demand such equipment.

Had the London Department been operated on such a basis and had life nets not been kept ready for use because there had not been a call upon them for many years, the young people trapped at the top of the burning building would have lost their lives in the fire or been killed in jumping to the street before a ladder could have been erected.

The lives saved by this one use of the nets amply recompensed the taxpayers of London for what it had cost them to keep their firemen supplied with the equipment that was not needed for over twenty years.

BIG BUSINESS.

Although Ban Johnson has been relieved from the active duties of the office of President of the American League, the man on the street does not consider him an object for pity seeing that he retains the title and will continue his salary of $40,000 a year under a contract that does not expire until 1935.

The salary paid this official and the fact that the man who is to carry on the work of the position will doubtless be paid on a somewhat similar scale, indicates not only that baseball is business, but business on the grand scale.

With two major leagues paying their Presidents much more than the Premier of Canada is receiving for his services to the people of this country and Commissioner Landis drawing the same remuneration for supervised baseball as Sir Henry Thornton is paid to direct the affairs of Canada's great railway system, the amount of money involved in professional baseball can be appreciated.

The importance of retaining public confidence in the integrity of the game is apparent.

These big salaries for officials and players and dividends for shareholders are only possible through faith on the part of the public and the tremendous influence of the newspaper publicity accorded baseball.

THE LOVE OF MONEY.

George Young, Canada's swimming marvel, continues to be "news"—especially in his own Province of Ontario.

Unfortunately, all the stories are not as pleasant reading as the first recital of the wonderful victory of the seventeen-year-old Toronto boy.

Money may not be the root of all evil, but the desire for money undoubtedly is responsible for much that is disagreeable, and the aftermath of the Catalina swim affords some proof of that statement.

One of the most interesting features of Young's trek to the coast was the story of how he and his friend Hastings were assisted by a honeymoon couple en route for California.

That added more romance to a recital that was full of romance.

It has all been killed, however, by a statement that the honeymooners intend to sue the victorious swimmer for $1,000, which they claim he promised him if he won the race.

And the reports that Young and Hastings have broken away from each other are regrettable, too.

The Damon-Pythias alliance between the two which started back in Toronto years ago and was apparently cemented when Hastings supplied his motorcycle as means of transportation and the two youngsters set out in search of fame and fortune, has not stood the acid test of prosperity.

CO-OPERATION IN CANADA.

The co-operative movement is growing in Canada, mainly in the field of marketing agricultural produce. Consumers, co-operatives, so-called, have not developed to any position of genuine economic importance.

The Canadian Co-operator is a little paper published in Brantford by the Co-operative Union of Canada, of which W. C. Good, of Paris, an intellectual and politician, is the President. Its December issue gives some figures on the 1925 operation of consumers' co-operatives in Canada. Sixteen societies report as against thirteen in 1924 and seven in 1923. This looks like growth, but the sixteen societies together only sold $2,892,872 of goods, which is about the turnover of a similar number of good grocery stores and not an imposing factor in Canadian business generally. The sixteen co-operatives sold $117,000 more goods than the fourteen sold in the previous year.

The Canadian Co-operator hastens to explain that the increase would have been larger had not the Guelph Co-operative Association failed from hazardous financing.

The various co-operatives were, in the main, successful financially during the year, the Co-operator claiming that net surplus represents an excess of what is necessary efficiently to operate retail undertakings. There are some 7,308 members of these co-operatives in the United Grain Growers, principally a marketing organization, it concluded.

But while consumers' co-operatives play a small part in Canadian economic life, much smaller than in the life of Britain and some other countries, producers' co-operatives are growing in importance. A large share of western wheat is marketed co-operatively through the wheat pools. Co-operative fruit marketing is in effect in the Okanagan apple district and representations have been made to British Columbia's Provincial Government to make co-operation compulsory. Co-operation marketing of Annapolis Valley apples is also suggested now. Other examples of co-operative agricultural marketing in Canada could be mentioned.

From the standpoint of the country as a whole co-operative marketing has some advantages, although the strong, efficient producers will have to give up something to help carry the smaller producers. And established sales channels that have proven their efficiency will continue in active operation. Witness the Winnipeg grain exchange, which operates side by side with the wheat pools.

Canadian Co-operator does well to emphasize that co-operation is not socialism and to warn socialists from attempting to seize the machinery of co-operation.—Financial Post.

"MA" FERGUSON'S TERM ENDS.

Mrs. Miriam A. Ferguson no longer is Governor of Texas. "Ma and Jim" have retired into decent obscurity and the dynasty of the Fergusons seems to have come to an inglorious close. "Ma" succeeded her husband as Governor two years ago, but it has been the persistent contention of their enemies that Jim was Governor in everything but name. Now Governor Ferguson has been succeeded by young Dan Moody, 33 years old, who drove out of power in Texas the Ku Klux Klan, and then with equal success exterminated the Ferguson regime. The experiment of woman government in Texas has ended in failure.

"Two years ago," writes a correspondent, "Mrs. Ferguson came into office with all Texas, excepting the Klan, wishing her well and pledging her support. Today she goes out with the reputation, earned or unearned, of having been the biggest political disappointment Texas has ever known."

The Ferguson regime crashed on the rocks of highways and pardons. A public scandal developed over road contracts, and as a result Moody, then Attorney-General of the State, recovered more than $1,000,000 from contractors and forced the cancellation of contracts for even greater sums. The situation over roads became so tense at one time that there was talk of impeaching Mrs. Ferguson, but nothing came of it.

"Ma's" pardoning proclivities delighted the State's criminal population but disgusted everyone else. She was in office 730 days, and in that time she pardoned 3,595 convicts, or an average of more than four each day. Such was her constitutional privilege, and in its exercise she freed bootleggers and murderers alike. A millionaire who robbed a post office and killed a clerk for the "thrill" of it got a full pardon. Another murderer was released because he was "unfortunate and penniless." Notorious swindlers and robbers profited by Her Excellency's clemency. One of her last acts was the granting of a pardon to a negro murderer on the condition that he serve Jim Ferguson for six years as a chaffeur at $15 a month.

Such was Governor Ferguson. Her lack of success was individual, and should not be ascribed to her sex. She failed precisely as many men have failed in public office. She fell under the domination of a stronger will—that of her husband—and her natural kindness of heart reigned supreme over her official responsibilities.

Blame the people themselves. Mrs. Ferguson had shown no qualifications for public office. She had never shown any indication of ability of any kind. Choice of her by popular vote as Governor of a great State had no shadow of justification.—Ottawa Journal.

MONTREAL GRAIN AND PRODUCE

MONTREAL, Jan. 26 (Canadian Press).—A feature of the export grain from the port of Montreal was the announcement that the first tramp vessel to carry a full cargo of grain from the port in the month of May to Avonmouth was engaged at 3s. 3d. per quarter. The foreign demand for Manitoba Spring wheat in the Montreal market yesterday was again fair and sales were made for February shipment.

There was an improved demand for grain in the local market and sales for some fair-sized lots of corn were made. The trade in oats was quiet and prices were firm. The corn market was stronger at a further advance of 1-2c per bushel.

Millers generally marked up prices another 10 cents per barrel in the flour market for Spring wheat grades. The volume of business was limited.

There were no new developments in the market for Winter wheat flour, the demand being still quiet.

An active business was done in millfeed and rolled oats. Rolled oats were unchanged.

The undertone to the baled hay market remains steady.

The trade in potatoes continues to be somewhat disappointing for the season of the year which to some extent is attributed to the absence of any important demand from outside sources, and in consequence the market remains quiet. Prices ruled steady with sales of odd cars of Prince Edward Island Green Mountains at $1.80 per bag of 90 pounds, and Quebec White stock at $1.40 per bag of 90 pounds.

The egg market was somewhat unsettled with volume of business smaller. Receipts 1,505 cases.

Receipts of butter were 24 packages. Prices were maintained.

Cheese receipts 174 boxes. This market was likewise unchanged.

CHICAGO GRAIN

CHICAGO, Jan. 26 (Canadian Press).—Wheat advanced sharply yesterday and closed at the highest level in some time. Active buying in which big commission houses were prominent, accompanied the ascent. Upward revision of estimated European import requirements had a decided strengthening effect, and further notice was taken of possible market influence of the crisis in the Far East.

Closing quotations on wheat were strong 1 3-8 to 1 3-4c net higher; corn 3-8 and 1-2 to 5-8c up; oats at 1-4 to 3-8c advance, and provisions unchanged to a rise of 15 cents.

Corn and oats sympathized with wheat strength. Country offerings of corn to Chicago were smaller.

A Thought For To-day

ON THE VALUE OF RECREATION.

I am convinced that there never was a wiser proverb written than that which implies that all work and no play make for dullness.

Rest is essential to good health, but so, too, is recreation; change also is imperative to physical well being and mental alertness.

When you realize that your interest in the job is dulled, when you get to thinking in circles and find yourself carrying a chip on your shoulder, when you feel aggrieved and sorry for yourself, make up your mind you need to break the monotony of work by a trip of some sort; you need to laugh and be merry and forget work in some pleasant recreation.

Merriment is medicine to the mind faged by work; to dance relaxes muscles taut with routine comings and goings.

A day of recreation is like a pace-maker—it makes you sprint ahead when you get on the track again.

HOW DO YOU SAY IT?

(By C. N. Lurie.)

Common Errors in English and How To Avoid Them.

(Copyright, 1927, McClure Syndicate.)

"ANY PERSON" and "THEY"

It cannot be repeated too often, perhaps, that such expressions as "someone," "anyone," "anybody," "somebody" "any person," and the like, are singular in form, and that the pronoun which refers to them should also be singular.

Violation of this rule is one of the commonest forms of transgression against good form in grammar. One does not have to be a stickler for the best English to be offended by such expressions as the following, taken from a recent newspaper:

"As for Mrs. Jameson, it is a wonderful thing for any person to be so imaginative that they think they are still attractive."

This should read:

"As for Mrs. Jameson, it is a wonderful thing for any person to be so imaginative that she thinks she is still attractive."

"They" is always plural and should never be employed with an expression or a word, that is singular. And "any person" is clearly and unmistakably singular.

HEALTH DIET ADVICE

QUESTIONS IN REGARD TO HEALTH & DIET WILL BE ANSWERED BY DR. McCOY WHO CAN BE ADDRESSED IN CARE OF THIS PAPER

AVOID FATIGUE

It seems that everyone complains of being tired at the end of the day. This is in spite of the fact that men and women are doing less work year after year, as they learn better how to make machines do the heavy work and thus save muscular strength. It would, indeed, be difficult to find a day laborer who is really exhausted because of the work he has done during the day. It is really true that as our muscular work has become less, our fatigue has become more pronounced.

I believe the principal cause of fatigue lies in the use of too much food of all kinds. The average person eats from two to three times as much as the body could possibly use, and when no muscular exercise is required in his work and he does not take vigorous physical culture exercise, only a very small amount of food is needed to repair the cell structure of the body. If two or three times as much food is used as the body can convert into tissue, the result will be a toxic state of the body, due to the digestion and assimilation of this food which cannot be used. The blood, filled with this excesive food material becomes thickened and sluggish, and fatigue of brain and body is the result. If fatigue is induced by this cause, the only cure is to increase your exercise and decrease your food.

Extreme toxic states of the body are also produced by wrong mental conditions. Anxiety, fear, worry, depression and thoughts of hatred, malice and envy will surely poison the body in a very definite way. So, if your day has been a bad one mentally, you can be sure that when night comes that you will be enervated and toxic from the effects of such mental poisoning.

There are many nervous people, who are in such a position that it does not seem that they have strength with which to live through another day. If they were really as sick as they felt, they probably could not. This is shown when in any emergency we tap a hidden supply of energy of which we are ordinarily not aware.

In the first place, fatigue very seldom means a lack of strength or real exhaustion. It is a very rare thing if one gets so tired that he cannot run for the nearest exit when someone shouts fire.

No matter what the real cause of yourapparent exhaustion is, you will find that if you take up some vigorous physical culture exercises and stop wasting mental energy, you will cure yourself of that tired feeling. If you wake up in the morning more tired than when you went to bed, resolve that day to cut down your food supply to one-third of what you have been using, and see to it that you banish from your mind all thoughts of worry, fear, anxiety, envy, jealousy, etc. The very day that you do this, you will be surprised and delighted to see how well you feel in the evening on the first day that you have been free from an excess of food and destructive thoughts.

If you will observe these rules, less sleep will be required than formerly, as sleep is needed most to allow the system to throw out the accumulated toxins of the day, and to adjust metabolism! If you require more than eight hours of sleep, you can be sure that you are dissipating your vital forces during the day, or have been careless in your eating. When you learn to live so that six or eight hours of sleep will suffice to adjust metabolism, you will have shown that your daily habits of eating, exercising and thinking have improved.

QUESTION: Mrs. D. D. M. writes: I am afflicted with arthritis in my hands, my finger joints are enlarged and one finger has fallen to one side and my hands feel very stiff and feverish. Wish you could advise me what to do to get relief.

ANSWER: Rheumatic disorders of which arthritis is one, usually respond readily, but slowly, to a fruit juice fast or a series of short fasts, followed by a non-starchy diet, but if you will persevere and fast, in time you will be entirely cured. Try a fast of seven to ten days on orange juice one-half glassful every two hours, followed by a glass of water. Take two warm water enemas and two shower or sponge baths daily to help elimination of toxins which are causing your condition.

QUESTION: Anna H. writes: What fruits do you recommend for a fruit juice fast?

ANSWER: I usually recommend oranges, grapefruit or lemon, but fresh apricots, cherries, grapes and apples may be used instead. These fruits or their juices are used several times a day with the addition of Agar-Agar or Mineral Oil. A glass or two of water may be taken with the friut or the fruit juices. Always take two enemas and two shower baths daily with tepid water (no tub baths) while fasting. Do not move too quickly at such a time as it will make you somewhat dizzy.

QUESTION: Carl D. writes: You seem to advise fasting for so many disorders. Does fasting cure every disease?

ANSWER: Limited space will not permit a very detailed answer to your question, but fasting achieves marvelous results, if followed carefully and conscientiously. Everyone should fast at least once each week, even when in good health, as it would help them to continue enjoying good health. This does not apply to very young children. Fasting rids the body of poisons which cause nervousness; it conserves energy, the restoration of energy being equivalent to curing disease. In short, there is no remedy known to medical science that is so effective in every way as FASTING FOR HEALTH.

QUESTION: Z. H. writes: Should raw salad vegetables be mixed together in the form of a combination salad?

ANSWER: It is not advisable and I only recommend one salad vegetable for the salad part of the meal.

QUESTION: Mr. A. C. writes: Please advise me if I am using too much sugar in my diet: At breakfast I use a few raisins and some honey at dinner, a few figs and at supper a few dates. What does too much sugar cause? What causes one to be muscle-bound?

ANSWER: Too much sugar causes an over-supply of fermentation, as the body only requires a very limited amount. Being muscle-bound comes either from lack of sufficient exercise or from an over-abundance of the same. It could also come from toxins caused by fermentation of food in the digestive tract. WATCH YOUR DIET!

QUESTION: Mrs. Cora S. writes: Have just finished a five-day fruit fast and noticed a dizziness when getting out of bed quickly or when moving my head too fast. What would cause this sensation?

ANSWER: The dizziness is due to changes taking place in the blood stream and is purely a fasting symptom. Do not be alarmed.

DR. FRANK CRANE'S DAILY EDITORIAL.

CRIMINALITY AND DISEASE

By Dr. Frank Crane.

Warden Lawes of Sing Sing, according to the figures he has compiled, delcares that most prisoners are religious and most are educated. To be exact, 99.4 per cent are of an acknowledged religion, and only 2.3 per cent are illiterate.

Whenever you hear of a man's committing some outlandish crime the explanation is always extended that he cannot help it. He is diseased.

In a sense every criminal is diseased, but it is to be doubted whether disease excuses him from responsibility.

The good, old-fashioned explanation of wrong doing, the explanation of most people, is that the wrongdoer is just plain bad. He lacks morality, or whatever you call it, and he ought to be punished for his crime.

Up to date society has found no way of repressing crime other than punishing the criminal, but doubtless it would be better to take the criminally minded off some place and treat him medically.

So long as a man is a free-willed agent and the Lord made him so, he can do as he pleases and he will probably occasionally please to do wrong. In that case there is nothign to do but to make him pay the penalty of his crime.

All the ideas of confining a drunkard to cure him of his drunkenness, or of a burglar to cure him of his burglarious tendency, or censoring plays to keep out the unfit shows, break down so long as man is recognized as a free moral agent.

All human laws are based on the theory of the freedom of the individual and of the responsibility that goes with that freedom. When a man does wrong he has to take the consequences. And no scientific gentlemen or weeping mammas can be allowed to interfere wetween him and his punishment.

When a man commits murder, that is, playfully shoots his friend or carves the woman he loves, he may be diseased, but if so, it is an old disease which society has found no way yet of curing, except to hang the man. It is not altogether a good remedy, for, as Bulwer Lytton says, the worst use to make of a man is to hand him, but then it is not altogether a very good disease.

SYNOPSIS

Ranny Forbes, star polo player, and his beautiful wife, Joan, are temperamental mismates. Joan wants a divorce. Ranny hesitates, loving her, although secretly knowing she loves Abner Gratman. They are all guests on a week-end cruise on the yacht of Stivner, a billionaire lumber king whom Ranny cultivates for business reasons. Clare, a widow, vamps Ranny. Stivner, loving Clare, is jealous of Ranny. Ranny, enlisting Stivner's aid, springs a trap to get proof that Joan is faithless, but instead of catching Abner it reveals Clare in Ranny's room. Stivner and Ranny nearly come to blows. Abner enters the room, innocently asking the cause of the trouble.

CHAPTER XI.—Continued.

Joan, whose face had taken on the dead pallor of chalk at the first raising of a question concerning Abner's very noticeable absence, breathed a sigh of relief when she saw that worthy himself saunter sleepily into the tensely charged room.

She regained command of herself with a rush of confidence that led her to whirl sharply upon Captain Marty and seek to emphasize Abner's innocence of any connection with the present mess by declaring sarcastically:

"You see, it was possible for SOMEONE not to be immediately awakened by this—er-r—disgusting uproar!"

"Possible, ma'am," retorted the captain, looking narrowly from her to Abner, "but not probable!"

Abner continued to appear bewildered, while blistering words welled to Joan's lips. Before she could give them voice, Ranny took command of the situation again, forgetting for the moment his hot desire to punch Stivner's nose in a hotter one to perform a similar service for Abner.

He strode to Abner and clutched

"I want the truth out of you now," him roughly by the collar of his bathrobe.

"Quit acting, Gratman! I want the truth out of you now, or I'll mash you on the spot. Were you—"

Ranny felt a firmly restraining hand upon his arm. He turned to look into the inscrutable face of Captain Marty, who said mildly:

"Hold your tongue now, lad. Don't let loose in your temper, a lot of insinuations that you may be sorry for. Let's adjourn for a spell—"

Something intense—some subtle signal—behind the masklike face of the man from Maine, served to check Ranny's temper. He released Abner with a snap that nearly jarred the fellow's teeth out, then stepped back.

Captain Marty exercised his sea rights of sole command with an ease and an assurance that kept the situation entirely in his control, even while it did not go against the ideas of Stivner, the plutocratic owner. Bowing with a courtesy that hid the real contempt in his eyes for such cats and crabs as these, the lean captain suggested:

"There's been an unfortunate mistake here, ladies and gentlemen; just a little unpleasantness that a private exchange of explanations between the principals will soon clear away. They can do that best alone, I believe. Therefore, I suggest that you all retire, and try to get some sleep, for we're headed into a bit of heavy weather that may make things uncomfortable before morning."

They were loath to go—these women with gleaming eyes and men with hawkish alertness—for scandal was the only spice and variety of their dull, rich lives.

Yet there was no disobeying this suave commander—who, with a mortgage and all the other appurtenances of his more than modest income, was unabashed by the aggregate billions he so calmly ordered out.

Perhaps because they sensed the captain's contempt, and hoped for a chance to defy him, one and all of the guests looked sullenly to Stivner. But he, with a shrug and a smile, confirmed the captain's judgment.

Suddenly, then, they crowded out, with many a reluctant look back upon the star acters who remained behind, waiting awkwardly for the next cue.

Abner started to follow the others out.

"Wait, you!" snarled Ranny.

"This is an outrage!" cried Joan, seeking defense in a vigorous offensive. "Ranny, how dare you talk to Mr. Gratman in that rowdyish manner? You're making a show of yourself—and a fool of me!"

"I'm the fool, a blind fool, and I have been for a long time—"

Joan, glaring haughtily at Clare, who still remained the calmest person in the room, interrupted:

"You proved that tonight! You, who seek virtuously to bully and malign other people, are the one who should be explaining—how this insufferable woman came to be here."

Clare laughed tauntingly at this: "Wouldn't you like to know?" she lisped.

That was the final straw for Joan. A real, old-fashioned Joan Forbes outburst, such as had kept Ranny's married life with her from ever becoming dull, shrilled on the air and rendered it blue, not from profanity, but from profuseness.

Clare lost some of her brazen coolness under the storm, and fell back involuntarily in fear.

Stivner and the others strove to soothe Joan.

Eavesdropping from corners and crannies in the corridors outside, and through the transoms of their respective staterooms, the barred-out guests heard, and were gleeful.

Only Ranny remained quiet, despite his own anger. Experience guided him.

At the end, Joan veered toward tears, as was her nature. She appealed to Stivner:

"Mr. Stivner, I shan't remain in this suite, which has been desecrated by this abominable affair, another instant. I must ask you to please assign another room to me—a single one!"

She fought the tears back resolutely. But her heaving bosom, her tremulous voice, indicated that they were dangerously close to the corners of her flashing eyes. The better to hide and to conquer them, she flounced into her bedroom and rang for one of the stewardesses.

Captain Marty, breathing an inward "Phew!" mopped his brow, and assumed command again.

"I think you might go, Mr. Gratman!" he said.

"Don't you presume to order me around, you common sailor—" sneered Abner angrily.

"Clear out, Gratman!" intoned Stivner crisply.

Which Abner did with the worst possible grace, as befitted him, while Captain Marty watched him with a sarcastic smile, and Ranny started to raise menacing fists until Clay yanked him back to order.

The stewardess appeared inquiringly. She, in common with the other servants and the crew, had been eagerly listening from afar, though no sign of interest showed on her blandly servile face.

"Mrs. Forbes thinks she would rest better in a different location," said Stivner shortly. "Assist her to move into the vacant room next to my suite—the ivory room, you know, B-D."

The stewardess went into Joan's cabin. Joan slammed the door shut.

Captain Marty stepped softly to the corridor door, closed it, leaned against it, and faced around quizzically. Plainly the next move was up to those more personally involved than he.

Stivner and Ranny, like two awkward boys, stared at each other—then at Clare—then back at each other—uncertainly, each waiting for the other to adopt the initiative. Stivner was haughtily angry; Ranny, just plain mad!

Clare, stamping her little slippered foot, grew petulant:

"I won't have you both glaring at me as though I'm a criminal. I won't have it, I tell you. I haven't done a thing—"

"Except break up and spoil a perfectly good week-end for everybody—" said Stivner.

"—and ruin all my plans, and make a nasty mess all around," said Ranny.

"—and exhibit yourself in a shameless way!" cried Stivner, in a tone of personal injury. "Clare, how could you dream of leaving your own cabin in your pajamas? Haven't you any sense of modesty?"

"There's nothing wrong about my costume," said Clare defiantly. She was cornered now; and using desperately all the personal artifices at her command—her lisp, her naivete, her great big eyes. "These are the beach pajamas I wore at the Lido last season. You saw me there in them yourself, Livingstone! If they are all right on a public bathing beach, why not on board a private yacht? You're acting like a lot of shopworn old grannies!"

That was frank feminine logic with which masculine minds found it hard to wrestle. Captain Marty smiled to himself to see how Clay and Stivner and Ranny looked helplessly at one another; and to see how a little blonde head could throw sand in these men's eyes.

POWER PROPOSALS BEFORE ASSEMBLY

Drive For Governor Smith's Object Starts at Albany.

ALBANY, N. Y., Jan. 26. — The drive for Governor Smith's water power authority proposal was started Monday by the two minority leaders, Senator Bernard Downing and Assemblyman Maurice Block, who introduced identical bills in the senate and assembly.

The authority to consist of three members to be appointed by the governor, would report next January after making an exhaustive study of the state's available water power resources, the horsepower which may be developed therefrom and its estimated demand from consumers, either now or in the future, the cost of development, the estimated capital expenditure required for dams, power houses, transmission lines, and the most available agencies for the distribution of power throughout the State. The authority must obtain specific instruction from the legislature before it may proceed with the water power development.

Mrs. L. Schooley

London, Ont.—"Ever since I saw the great benefit my daughter received from Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription during her second expectant period, I have never neglected the opportunity to recommend it to every prospective mother. I was with my daughter when she was miserable and sick. Thru my advice she took Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, and from the very beginning she gained in health and strength, was able to be up, and attended to her household duties right up to the last. She had comparatively no suffering—the least I ever witnessed. My only regret has been that I did not know of this wonderful medicine while bringing up my own family."—Mrs. Louisa Schooley, 505 Hill St.

THEATRE

AT THE GRAND.

'BEAU GESTE' WILL DELIGHT AT THE GRAND OPERA HOUSE FRIDAY AND SATURDAY

"Beau Geste" is the adventure story of three brothers who served in the French Foreign Legion. It is more than that. "Beau Geste" is a romantic biography of three brothers who loved each other from childhood through a glamorous and exciting maturity, and who were willing to give their lives for each other—in the end. No routine soldiers, they! But the adventurous spirits one associates with the lost Legion of the French Army.

Among the many enthusiastic readers who discovered the charm of the Percival C. Wren novel was Herbert Brenon, who if he never accomplishes anything else, will always be remembered as the producer of "Beau Geste." Once Mr. Brenon had read the Wren adventure he refused to be happy until he had acquired the picture rights. His enthusiasm was contagious, and it was not long until production plans were made in most pretentious fashion by Paramount. The result, oer a million-dollar production and classed as the finest picture of the year.

For the title role, into which he fits perfectly, Mr. Brenon selected Ronald Colman, who unquestionably controls a majority of the feminine votes throughout the country. Others who support Mr. Colman are: Alice Joyce, Mary Brian, Noah Beery, Neil Hamilton, Ralph Forbes, William Powell, Norman Trevor, Victor McLaglan and thousands of others. Of a certainty, "Beau Geste" is destined to crowd the capacity of the Grand Opera House on Friday and Saturday and seats which will be all reserved are now on sale. The big "Beau Geste" orchestra accompanies the production and special musical score, as presented at the Criterion Theatre, New York city.

AT THE CAPITOL

TOM MIX IN A SMASHING WESTERN, "THE CANYON OF LIGHT."

A Lost "Ghost City" Wrecked During Fight With Desperadoes — Thrilling Action on Flanders Fields a Feature.

Tom Mix has the role of Tom Mills, army captain in the French battle front sequences that figure in "The Canyon of Light," the cowboy star's latest Fox Films thriller, which will show at the Capitol Theatre to-morrow.

Many of the scenes were filmed in Yellowstone National Park and the picture has all the dash, color and drama of the West which mark Mix screen dramas. The range hears the call to arms and the best blood of the "fighting West" answers for overseas. The Westerners capture the enemy key position, but Captain Mills' buddy falls during the attack, just after writing home in praise of Mills. When he lands in America he receives a letter inviting him to visit the parents of his slain buddy.

Mills returns to his native town to find vigilantes organized to curb desperadoes led by his brother-in-law. He finds his sister dying at the moment the vigilantes are ready to hang her husband. Mills answers her pleas and tricks the vigilance committee. He frees his brother-in-law and gives him his own horse so he can return to his dying wife.

The desperado, instead of going home, dashes to "The Canyon of Light," his gang's lair. After his sister's death, Mills has the vigilantes pretend to hang him and outlaw spies carry news of this to their chief. The desperadoes find the letter of invitation and go to the ranch for a fiesta, expecting to loot the place. Mills had expected this and when he arrives there the desperado persuades the rancher he is an imposter. Mills is imprisoned but escapes too late to prevent the robbery and abduction of the rancher's daughter. He follows the gang to a Ghost City, an abandoned mining town, and after every building in the place is wrecked during the fight the desperado leader is overcome.

Hard-boiled critics who have seen previews of this latest Mix thriller say that it contains some of the most daring and spectacular riding ever shown, together with scenes of wild beauty in the Yellowstone Park sequences that are a delight to the eye. Suspense, too, of a superlative kind with a real story packed with romance will make "The Canyon of Light" a picture that is sure to enthuse any audience.

Dorothy Dwan has the leading feminine role while other well-known players in the cast include Ralph Sipperly, William Walling, Carl Miller, Barry Norton, Duke Lee and Carmelita Geraghty.

OUTLINE OF SCIENCE LXXXVII—Science Recognizes the Lever. by MAX HAHN

HERDS INSPECTED NEAR MILLBROOK

Cattle Listed for Sale to be Held by Holstein Breeders' Club.

MILLBROOK, Jan. 26. — R. S. Stevenson, of Ancaster, paid an official visit to this neighborhood last week, listing cattle from pure-bred herds for the annual sale to be held at Bowmanville in March, under the auspices of the Durham County Holstein Breeders' Club. The farms of W. Fred Fallis and H. I. Seymour were visited. A. Muir, of Courtice, is president of the Durham County Club, and H. I. Seymour, of Cavan, vice-president.

The Woman's Missionary Auxiliary of St. Thomas' church held its annual meeting at the home of Mrs. C. M. Westmacott, the attendance being very gratifying, and the reports received of a most satisfying character.

The president, Mrs. (Canon) Allen was in the chair, and expressed her appreciation of the faithful activities of the members during 1926, and her hope that 1927 might surpass the record of the year just closed, successful as that had been. The Divine guidance and blessing, coupled with loyal service and an increasing interest on the part of officers and members, meant that a new and higher ideal would be reached during the twelve months ahead.

The activities of the year included public adresses by the Rev. Mr. Walters, and Rev. P. C. Howard both of whom had served on mission fields in the Hudson's Bay region; illustrating their talks with lantern slides, much useful information had been gathered by the listeners, and interest had been stimulated by personal contact with workers from the home field. Two musical evenings, under W.A. auspices, had proved enjoyable and of financial benefit; a bale, containing a complete outfit for an Indian girl at the MacKay Home in Manitoba, was shipped last spring, and a Christmas bale, well filled with good things, was sent in December to the clergyman at Roche's Point, on Lake Simcoe. During the time Rev. Mr. Dewdney, now of St. Chad's church, Toronto, was curate he gave one or two instructive addresses to the Auxiliary at its regular meetings. A garden-party, under W.A. auspices, held at the rectory in June, was also a highly successful event.

The officers for 1927 were elected as follows:

President—Mrs. (Canon) Allen.
Vice-Pres.—Mrs. C. M. Westmacott.
Secretary—Mrs. E. Whyte.
Treasurer—Mrs. Charles McNeil.
Doreas Secretary—Miss Annie Armstrong.
Assistants—Mrs. George Fowler and Mrs. H. Russell.
Superintendent Junior Work—Miss Muriel Smith.
Superintendent Little Helpers—Mrs. J. E. Allen.
Secretary "Living Message"—Mrs. Thomas Harkness.

The study book for this year is "Moslem Women". The thankoffering envelopes were brought in at the annual meeting, and added considerably to the funds of the Auxiliary.

The usual bale is in course of preparation and will be shipped to the MacKay Home in April; the women of the entire parish help in the supplies for this bale which annually contains a complete outfit for an Indian girl, and is valued at between fifty and sixty dollrs.

Refreshments were served at the close of the business session, and a very pleaant social time was spent.

The next meeting will be held at the home of Mr. C. McNeil, the third Monday in February.

The visiting committee, whose members call on the women of the congregation and endeavor to enlist their sympathy and interest for the missionary cause, will be appointed at the February meeting.

S.O.E. Lodge Meeting.

St. Ives Lodge, No. 243, Sons of England, held its annual meeting on Friday evening, when encouraging reports were received, and the officers for 1927 were installed by District-Deputy, Brother William Tickell of Port Hope. The list includes:

W.P.P.—Bro. Wesley Brown.
W.P.—Bro. R. H. Hubbard
W.V.P.—Bro. J. W. Hilton.
W. Secretary—Bro. H. J. Hubbard.
W. Treasurer—Bro. Martin Pethick.
I.G.—Bro. William Mullen.
O.G.—Bro. H. Dew.
1st Committeeman— Bro. Cecil Hubbard.
2nd Committeeman—Bro. A. Coulter.
3rd Committeeman—Bro. B. Richards.
4th Committeeman—Bro. W. H. Coombe.

A supper was served at the close, and the usual social time thoroughly enjoyed.

St. Ives' Lodge, S.O.E. meets on the second and fourth Friday of each month at 8 p.m.

A special appeal for a free-will offering of $50.00 was made in the United Church Sunday School at the regular session on Sunday afternoon, to admit starting the year with a clean sheet, and $52 was the response received.

The Men's Adult Bible Class, Mrs. (Dr.) Rea teacher, contributed nearly $30.00 of the amount asked for. The superintendent, Mr. W. Fred Fallis, expressed heartfelt thanks, on behalf of the executive, for the generous response to the appeal. There has only been one other occasion, in the history of the school, when a similar appeal was made.

The school has recently made a considerable improvement in the musical part of its sessions by having the hymns thrown on the screen, using the lantern each Sunday, replacing the hymn books formerly used.

Reeves W. T. Wood, Millbrook, W. C. Wood, South Monaghan, M. Wilson, Hope, F. Gray, Manvers, Stuart Fallis, Cavan; Deputy-Reeves George Hootan, Cavan, F. Ough, Hope, and B. Richardson, Manvers, went to Cobourg on Monday to attend the inaugural session of the Countes Council. Reeve Wood is in the running for Warden of the United Counties this year.

The town hall was well filled on Thursday and Friday evening for the movies, when "The Sea Hawk" was shown, the audiences, apparently, being well pleased with the picture. Miss Ella Elson presided at the piano both evenings.

OBITUARY.

MRS. HOWARD LONG.

TRENT RIVER, Jan. 26.—The death took place at 11 Dickson Ave., Toronto, on Sunday, January 16, of Mrs. Howard Long, after an illness of a few weeks. Mr. and Mrs. Long were frequent guests with Mr. and Mrs. E. H. Fairbrother at their summer home here for a number of seasons.

ROBERT BULLOCK.

LAKEFIELD, Jan. 26.—The funeral of the late Robert Bullock took place on Friday afternoon from the family residence, Katherine street to the United (Presbyterian) church where the service was conducted by Rev. T. M. Wesley assisted by Rev. S. A. Kemp. Miss Nelson presided at the organ and two hymns selected by the deceased for th occasion were sung, they were, "Safe in the Arms of Jesus" and "Asleep in Jesus". Mr. Henry Batten sang "Some Day the Silver Chord Will Break," his beautiful voice being heard to great advantage in the selection. Mr. Wesley spoke briefly taking as his text, "Instead of the thorn shall come up the fir tree and instead of the briar, the myrtle." The subject was illustrative of the new life after death with the carping care removed and the glorious eternity in the Father's house of many mansions.

The pall bearers were Messrs. Thomas Cooper, Joseph Tedford, Andrew Fairbairn, Richard Batten, Howard Bullock, and Wesley Bullock. The service was attended by a large number who wished to pay a tribute of respect and regard to Mr. Bullock, whose upright character won him many warm friends.

Interment took place in Warsaw cemetery.

ANGELINE BENTLEY.

MARMORA, Jan. 26.—On Saturday, Jan. 22nd, Angeline Bentley entered into rest in the 90th year of her age. Though born in Waddington, N.Y. in the year of Queen Victoria's accession to the throne she had for the past seventy years resided in Canada, the greater part of which was spent in Marmora. Following the lead given by her parents, the deceased lady took an active interest in the Anglican activities of Marmora and was instrumental in the founding of the first Sunday school of the village of which she remained superintendent for the period of forty years. Though confined to her home for a number of years through affliction, she proved the cheeriest of invalids and nothing gave her greater pleasure than to recount stories of the early days. She was a cultured conversationalist and possessed a wonderful memory until the last. Her end was peaceful. Sincerest sympathy is extended her daughter, Mrs. E. S. Bennett, from whose devoted care God has called her. The funeral service was held at St. Paul's on Monday morning being taken by the rector, Rev. A. B. Caldwell. The hymns sung were "For ever with the Lord", "Safe in the Arms of Jesus" and "Jerusalem the Golden", the latter being a favorite of the deceased. Interment took place in Marmora cemetery. The pallbearers were: H. R. Pearce, R. E. Bonter, C. A. Bleecker, T. Warren, G. B. Airhart, and D. Shannon.

JAMES GIBSON.

CAMPBELLFORD, Jan. 26—Citizens of the community were shocked to hear of the sudden demise of James Gibson which occurred last night at his late residence George street.

The late Mr. Gibson was out in his yard yesterday afternoon and apparently as well as usual. After the evening meal he sat around for awhile and on retiring about 9 p.m. was seized with a weak spell and despite all that medical aid could do expired shortly after. Deceased was born near Hastings on the Cobourg road eighty-one years ago last August. He came to Campbellford forty-eight years ago and was engaged in the hotel business until his retirement from active life several years ago.

Competent to judge

There is no better way for you to learn the true value of commodities in general use than to read the advertisements day by day—regardless of whether or not you have any immediate intention of buying.

Those young housekeepers whose first experiences in marketing began in war-time have a fixed idea of high prices. Those of an older generation have an equally strong conviction that prices should be lowe..

With the shifting changes of a rapidly moving world both prices and values are bound to fluctuate. A financier studies these trends with scrupulous care in published financial reports compiled by experts.

An intelligent housewife may similarly make herself a competent judge of values by studying each day's advertisements of the things she needs—just as the broker studies his stock list.

Then as she comes to buy she may do so with full confidence in her knowledge.

PASTEURIZATION PUBLIC SAFEGUARD

Evidence Given in Libel Suit Against Montreal Star.

The mortality amongst children under one year old in Montreal has already shown a noticeable reduction since the entry into force of the milk By-Law in May 1926, despite the short period involved, Dr. S. Boucher, City Health Officer, told the court this morning during the hearing of the $10,000 libel action taken by the Milk Dealers' Co-Operative Association against the Montreal Star. Dr. Boucher said that he believed the milk By-law was the most important measure passed since his appointment as health officer of Montreal.

Dr. Boucher and Dr. Grant Fleming both testified that the greatest factor in helping to obtain the passing of this by-law, was the public education campaign of certain newspapers. The Star, they agreed, had played a prominent part in educating the public up to the standard of demanding the pasteurization by-law.

Experts told of the frightful infant rate in Montreal before any milk was pasteurized and the steady improvement as pasteurization became more general.

t five anyway, to vote for him. I d not mark crosses after any other ndidates' names because they did t ask me to."

This brought a smile from the ouch and a titter from the large udience in the Council Chamber hich, by closing time, soon after p.m. last night, had overflowed rom the crowded aisles into the corridors outside.

Mrs. Nobbs, before leaving the witness stand, told that McConnell had gone to her home at 31 Aylmer Avenue, Windsor, a number of times after the election in an effort to keep her from testifying.

He told me the attorneys and others were only bluffing, and that there was no reason for me to tell them anything, but when I found he would not help me, I decided to tell everything I knew about the whole business.

Michael Rourke, district deputy returning officer at his home poll at 423 Glengarry Avenue, said McConnell appeared at the poll during the day and gave him several drinks from a bottle of whiskey he had in his pocket.

"I did not mark ballots for him or anybody else. And I even was not asked to do so nor I would not if I had been," he told the court on leaving the stand.

Mrs. H. B. Smith, deputy returning officer at subdivision 10, of Ward 1, where A. E. Hooper, the relator, alleges that upwards of fifty ballots were illegally marked for McConnell and as many more for Alderman Henry, testified that the aldermanic ballots were counted by Joe McConnell and Frank Revel, agents for the two aldermen. Mr. Roach succeeded in having a number of board of education ballots from the same subdivision admitted as evidence, after Gordon Fraser, acting for Fred Clapp, one of the board of education defeated candidates had objected.

Mr. Roach said he wanted to show that crosses opposite the name of Clapp on some thirty ballots had been placed there by the same persons who are said to have accomplished some "ballot-plugging" in behalf of McConnell and Henry after the polls were closed. Mrs. Smith said very definitely, in reply to a question by Mr. Roach, that she did not mark any ballots.

The first sensational evidence of the day was given by Arthur Finnie, 1012 Albert Street, deputy returning officer in subdivision 3 of Ward 4. He admitted, and his evidence was not shaken, during a long cross-examination by F. C. Kirby, counsel for Alderman McConnell, that he had marked at least nineteen ballots in favor of McConnell, after the polls were closed.

Before introducing his witness, Mr. Roach asked that Finnie might be given protection of the court in that his testimony might not be used against him should criminal proceedings be introduced following the hearing. In reply, Judge Ross stated that he would not promise anything, but that he would "see."

In giving evidence Finnie stated that his relations with Alderman McConnell dated back to the municipal election of three years ago. At that time the witness had been deputy returning officer in a polling booth on Tecumseh Road. Against strenuous objections by Kerby, counsel for McConnell, Judge Ross allowed Mr. Roach to proceed with the evidence.

Finnie said that McConnell was a candidate for alderman at the election of three years ago. He, Finnie, was deputy returning officer on Tecumseh Road.

At the time, McConnell had a bottle of whiskey and Finnie had taken two drinks out of it. Also, Finnie said, McConnell had promised him a bottle of liquor if he were elected. McConnell was elected, but Finnie said he did not get the liquor.

During the hearing, Mr. Roach stated definitely to Mr. McHugh that the mayoralty is also an issue in the present appeal.

At the beginning of the hearing, Mr. McHugh asked that any evidence that might specifically relate to Alderman Frank J. Mitchell might be left to the end of the case. Mr. McHugh gave as his reason that Mr. Mitchell is ill and away from the city. Under the circumstances he found it difficult to consult his client. Both Mr. Roach and Judge Ross agreed that this measure would be only in due fairness to Mr. Mitchell. It was decided that any specific evidence in respect to Mr. Mitchell should be left to the end of the hearing, or until Mr. Mitchell would be able to be present in person.

Evidence was also brought out by Mr. Roach concerning the passing by the Council of the finance committee's report on March 22, 1926. This report contained the item of $2,000 salary for Alderman E. P. Holden as sanitary inspector for the Essex Border Utilities Commission. In this, Mr. Roach contended that Mr. Holden was an employee of the city.

Mr. Ross brought out, in cross-examination, that Mr. Holden had not voted on the matter in question.

KINGSTON, Ont., Jan. 26—Harry Horton, aged 56 years, 45 Johnston Street, employed with the Collingwood Shipbuilding Company working on the steamer Keyport, docked at the Canadian National Wharf, fell from a scaffolding at noon yesterday and died shortly afterwards from the injuries received. None of the men who were working on the ship with him saw the accident. The plank of the scaffold was a new one and had no ice on it, therefore it is thought that he must have tripped or stepped off. There may be a difference of opinion as to what it is that draws the large crowds to St. Paul's Presbyterian Church Sunday after Sunday, especially to the evening services, whether it is the ques-prelude to the evening service, the character of the preaching of the Rev. Wm. Allan, the new organ, which is being enjoyed more and more, or a combination of all of these, but the fact remains that the large attendance continues while the interest is as marked as ever. A question that was asked and answered at the evening service last Sunday evening which attracted more than usual interest related to Jarvis St. Baptist Church, Toronto, where close communion is practised. Someone who had attended a recent service in that church and enjoyed the service had been denied the right to partake of the Lord's Supper. This party wanted an expression of opinion on the justification for close, communion. Rev. Wm. Allan suggested that any person raising such a question might find it profitable to write to the pastor of Jarvis St. Church Rev. Dr. Shields, for his opinion. He pointed out that the Baptist denomination is different from Presbyterian, Anglican and several other denominations in that the local congregations have full control over their own affairs, including the right to decide who shall and who shall not partake of Communion. No person, therefore, can very well question them when they exercise this right. The only point on which others are justified in discussing the matter is where the implication of such action casts doubt upon the Christian standing of people who do not believe the same as those who practise close communion.

Without attempting to discuss the matter fully, Rev. Mr. Allan stated that Jesus never received Christian Baptism, nor is there any proof that the Apostles did, excepting possibly Paul. He pointed out, also, that people be immersed and still not be regenerated. Many Scottish Baptist churches have close Communion. This is not necessarily the same as closed membership. He said he had heard an eminent Prebyterian Divine preach an eloquent and powerful sermon in a Scottish Baptist Church, and later was denied the privilege of partaking of communion with the people of that congregation. Rev. Mr. Allan expressed difficulty in seeing how a man could be privileged to dispense the "Word of Life" and at the same time not be permitted to partake of the bread of the Communion Table. He concluded by stating that when a church permits certain people to sit at the Lord's table because they have complied with certain requirements set by that congregation and at the same time denies that right to others who have accepted Christ but have not interpreted the "Word of Life," in just the same way, then it makes "light" not "life" the test. Rev. Mr. Allan believed that the test should concern the "life" and not the "light", enjoyed by the individual concerned. Many people, he felt, could not help but feel that there was a suggestion at least of a lack of brotherhood in such action.

An Open Door.

The sermon was an eloquent one based on Revelations 3 and 8. "Behold I have set before thee an open door, and no man can shut it". In the preceding verse the speaker of these words, Christ, is referred to as "He that is holy, He that is true, He that hath the key of David, He that openeth and no man shutteth, and shuteth and no man openeth." In the light of these statements the text is one of the most startling statements found in any of the seven letters to the seven churches. Christ is the last word of authority, and there is no other court of appeal. Following these statements comes another in which Christ says, "I know thy works." This statement may be spoken approvingly or with disapproval. It may mean "Well done good and faithful servant" or it may imply condemnation.

The speaker dealt with different doors of opportunity. He asked members of the congregation if they were taking advantages of their opportunities to lead others to Christ and the members of St. Paul's congregation as a whole if they were seeking to have St. Paul's fulfill the work that God had planned for it. He asked the members of the congregation if they were loitering around the open door or passing through it.

The Scriptures state that there are none righteous, no not one. But Jesus opened the door to Salvation at the Cross. We are justified by faith and have peace with God through our Lord Jesus Christ. We have broken the law but God has opened the door and provided a way of escape. Anyone may pass through the open door into the new life found in Christ Jesus through belief in Christ. An earnest appeal was made to any unconverted persons present to pass through the door which Christ has opened into peace and fellowship with God.

How to—Avoid Colds

When a child is "always catching cold," or "always catching anything," it's a sign that the body's powers of resistance have been broken down. It is pitiful to see children who should be well and happy, playing and romping, "laid up" with colds and similar complaints.

Give them Virol. It builds up and strengthens the body. It enriches the blood, giving it resisting power to combat successfully the attacks of disease germs.

Build up your children by giving them Virol. They'll like it—and they will thrive on it.

EX-PREMIER TO GIVE EVIDENCE

Invited By Sub-Committee Investigating Charges Against Senator Gould.

BRIBERY CASE.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 26.—(Canadian Press.)—James Kidd Fleming, former premier of New Brunswick, was invited late yesterday by the Senate Elections sub-committee investigating bribery charges against Senator Gould, Reupblican, Maine, to appear befroe it and give his version of a $100,000 campaign contributions given his political party by the Gould interests in connection with the contract to build the St. John and Quebec Railroad.

Mr. Fleming, who is now a member of the Canadian House of Commons, had been charged before the committee with keeping $75,000 of the contribution for his own use in consideration for his signature to the guarantee for the railroad bonds. The former premier was invited to appear at any time within the next two weeks.

The right of Senator Gould to his seat in the senate has been challenged in a senate resolution, introduced by Walsh, Democrat, because of the contribution which it was charged, was in the nature of a bribe. Walsh proposed the invitation to Fleming.

At yesterday's session, Ross Thompson, of New Brunswick, associate of Senator Gould in the railroad construction, corroborated the Senator's testimony that the company had been "held up" in 1912 by the premier and forced to pay the $100,000 under threat of losing all of its investment.

"They had us by the throat," he added, 'and we had to contribute the $100,00 tdo unlock the $4,000,000 proceeds from the sale of the bonds in order to continue the work."

The Toronto Globe of last Saturday's issue contains the following item of local interest: "Intimation has been made to the effect that Dorothy Helen Wright, daughter of the late Lieutenant W. J. Wright, M.A., formerly principal of the Collegiate Institute at St. Mary's, Ontario, has won the Ontario Overseas Scholarship for 1927, which is donated by the Imperial Order Daughters of the Empire and is valued at $1,400. It will be remembered that Miss Wright was the winner of the Ontario Bursary for 1922, which is valued at $1200, over a period of four years. Miss Wright's father was killed in action near Lens in 1917." The young lady referred to is a granddaughter of Mrs. D. S. Robertson of this city and a niece of Mr. D. A. Robertson, 250 Charlotte street.

A Talent Tea under the auspices of the Cheerful Workers' Bible Class of St. James United Church was held on Tuesday evening at the home of Mrs. J. J. Grose, Princess street. The programme included an instrumental selection by Miss Capson, a group contest and a spelling match, with boxes of chocolates as prizes. The evening concluded with the service of a bean supper.

Mr. and Mrs. Hamilton Hutchinson, 179 Bethune street, celebrated the silver anniversary of their wedding in happy fashion on Friday evening last, when a number of relatives and friends, together with their children, assembled at their home for the occasion. The evening was spent in the enjoyment of games and old-time dancing, with wedding cake and other dainty refreshments served at midnight. Later, Mr. Alex Gillespie spoke a few words on behalf of the hosts, and Mrs. Hutchinson's sister, Mrs., John A. McIntyrye of Indian River, who was bridesmaid at their wedding, read a complimentary address, after which their small son, Allister, brought in a wagon prettily decorated with pink and white, and containing numerous lovely gifts in silver. A fitting reply, on behalf of his wife and himself, was made by Mr. Hutchinson.

An extremely delightful tea with a splendid attendance, was held at the new home of Dr. and Mrs. N. H. Sutton, 82 Dublin street, yesterday afternoon, under the auspices of the Art Study Club of the Women's Art Association. The informal atmosphere of the tea, following the English fashion, had a beautiful setting in the attractive house, which is built on English lines, with stucco finish inside and out, beamed doors and ceilings of dark woods, and small-paned, deep set windows overlooking a lovely view of the river. The furnishings of the house, in quaint pieces of antique design, are appropriate to the general effective scheme, which was described as "restful" by one of the ladies present, and is individual in the extreme. The guests were received by Mrs. Sutton and Mrs. B. L. Barns, president of the Art Study Club, with Mrs. D. N. Carmichael assisting at the door and little Tom Hooper as a page. The ladies were ushered from the living room, with its pretty soft lights and bright grate fire in the old-fashioned fireplace to the tea room, where the table was arranged with Florentine lace and centred by a large black satin bowl of daffodils. Lighted yellow candles were in old-fashioned wrought iron candlesticks, loaned by Miss Margaret English. Mrs. W. Sangster ushered the ladies to the tea room, which was in charge of Mrs. W. H. Meredith and Mrs. Vernon Foster. Tea was poured by Mrs. Wm. Blackwell, and assistants, gowned in English fashion in trim black dresses and white caps and aprons, were Mrs. W. Harris, Mrs. C. B. Waite, Mrs. R. A. Brown and Miss Linden Hall.

Word has been received from Jerusalem of the death there of Mrs. John Turnbull, who, with her husband, Rev. J. R. Turnbull, was attached to the Christian and Missionary Alliance in that city. Mrs. Turnbull was a native of Renfrew, Ontario, and previous to her marriage in India was employed on the Presbyterian missionary staff at Mhow and Memdhabad, India. She was formerly a school teacher in Munster, Renfrew and Port Arthur. Her husband, Rev. J. R. Turnbull, was a former resident of Peterboro and a son of the late J. C. Turnbull, a prominent merchant here some years ago.

HUMANE SOCIETY MEMBERS, ETC.

$24.00; Micks' Harware Company, $1.00; Campbell and Best, $1.70; Constable Pratt's expenses to Millbrook, $5.20. Total, $904.86.

Balance on hand, $62.79.

The society had 216 members last year and four sustaining members.

Mr. Ackerman explained than an innovation had been tried out by the Ontario Society this year, to increase financial and public interest in the endeavors of the organization. Mr. Wilson of Toronto had three travelling canvassers who went from town to town, selling calenders of The Humane Pleader, these calendars containing much interesting propaganda explanatory of the work. In Peterborough, something over four hundred of these calendars had been sold.

Mr. Ackerman also announced the coming visit of Jack Miner to the city, in the interests of the Humane Society.

Inspector's Report

The report of Inspector R. C. Smith was read, the inspector later referring in detail to several of the cases encountered during his year's work. The report was as follows: Horses examined, 142; horses humanely destroyed, 10; horses brought to shelter, 4; dogs brought to shelter, 32; dogs humanely destroyed, 25; dogs placed in homes, 21; dogs claimed by owners, 7; cats brought to shelter, 2; cats humanely destroyed, 69; cats given out to homes, 7; cattle examined, 79; summons issued, 7; convictions, 3; dismissals, 4; complaints investigated, 112; warnings issued, 65; emergency calls, 20; stables inspected, 24.

Mr. Smith spoke of the treatment of animals as meted out to them in several cases coming to his notice, the most cruel being the action of the man who worked a sick horse to exhaustion, then took it to the side of the road and cut its throat. He failed to complete his work, however, the animal reviving sufficiently to make its way, probably in the hope of succor, to the home of a former owner, six or seven miles away, where it stood at the barn door bloody icicles depending from the bleeding throat, in freezing cold, for several hours until the former owner returned home from a dance and found it there. On promise of the owner to treat it properly, and have the wound attended to, the finder allowed him to take the animal away, and the man promptly brought out his rifle and shot it. The man was later fined $25 and costs.

Cases that involved the starving of cattle, the neglect of stables, leading in one instance, where a horse had been kept in a stable for four years, to its having hoofs about eight inches long, the beating and overworking of horses to the point of absolute exhaustion, and the discovery in time to prevent dangerous complications, of a dog suffering with rabies, were referred to in the course of the inspector's verbal report, which was received with much interest by the members.

Mr. Ackerman, prior to the introduction of the visiting speaker of the evening, called on Mayor Holloway for a few words, who welcomed Magistrate Brown to the city, and assured him of the widespread interest taken in the work of the Humane Society.

Magistrate Brown.

R. J. Brown, a police court magistrate of the city of Toronto, a self-avowed Ulster man, whose speech still retains traces of the soft Irish brogue, and who kept the keen attention of his listeners throughout a friendly, personal sort of address that ranged from police court experiences gleaned in twenty years' service in this capacity in the city of Toronto, to personal encounters with offenders against the law with regard to cruelty to animals commenced with a brief description of the duties of the men who preside over police courts, which he characterized as the "most democratic institutions in the world, where you get the kid-glove gentleman and the ordinary hobo."

Several strong convictions were registered by Magistrate Brown during the course of his address. He has a very evident dislike of the lower foreign element. "We have enough foreigners here now," he said. "We should lock the doors and keep them in their own country. This will soon be Russia." And he is a strong advocate of the use of the lash for offenders against decency. Another conviction was expressed when he said many of the youthful delinuents who come up for the first time are neglected at home. "Trace it back, and you will find it in the home. They are not taught right and they don't do right."

Speaking of the Boards of Parole, he asked for leniency in criticisms of its workings. "Consider the human wreckage that it has to deal with;" he said, speaking of the need of kindness and assistance which is evident in dealing with many of the cases. He does not believe in long jail terms for drunks, thinking them useless in curing this evil. A short sentence and a fine is the better method, according to Magistrate Brown, who asserted that police court magistrates should not be criticized by those who do not hear all the evidence in the case. "Every case coming to a police court is tried on its merits, and legal guilt must be established by legal proof before a hair of the accused can be touched. That is British justice."

Referring to the work of the Toronto Humane Society, he gave some figures of last year's endeavors as follows: Horses examined, 9152; horses destroyed, 148; sent to stables, 197; and to shelters, 222; dogs sent to shelter, 6072; placed in homes, 487; sent to veterinary hospitals, 417; claimed by owners, 373; cats brought to shelter, 16,903; destroyed, 16,481 placed in homes, 412; animals examined, 58,612; poultry examined, 82,808; performing animals and birds examined, 741; summons issued, 87; convictions, 84; complaints investigated, 2572, warnings issued, 1958; emergency calls, 4953; calls responded to 15,955.

The magistrate referred to several instances encountered by himself of cruelty to animals, speaking of the man who sold a bull and then cut the ring from its nose with a penknife,because he wished to retain the ring, having paid $1.50 for it. He also told of having thrashed a man soundly on Winchester Hill, without the formality of bringing him to court, when the man was beating his horse, and of having knocked down and brought to the cells a foreigner caught making indecent advances to children. "A man who is cruel to animals is the meanest creature alive," he said. "A man who kills a horse deserves to be killed, and a beater of animals should have a taste of his own medicine as a punishment. A strict regard of the rights and feelings of whatever has feeling is a cardinal principle of Christianity. Some animals have a greater conception of kindness than human beings I believe that the Act with regard to cruelty to animals should be as faithfully enforced as any other act on the statute book."

Incidentally, Magistrate Brown paid an eloquent compliment to the local Chief of Police when he said that Inspector Wallace of Toronto had referred yesterday to Chief Newhall as "one of the best police officers in the Dominion of Canada."

A sincere vote of appreciation to Magistrate Brown was moved by Mr. E. B. Fowler and seconded by Magistrate O. A. Langley. Much applause from the audience signified the pleasure and interest of the listeners in the address.

SAINT and SINNER

By ANNE AUSTIN

"And I thought," Cherry's high musical voice was saying, "that we ought to try our dresses on and be sure they are just right, then go and have our pictures taken by that wonderful new photographer, Spurlock, tomorrow. Of course the papers will want pictures of all of us—"

"But, Cherry!" Selma Pruitt laid her face against clasped hands and looked at Cherry almost worshipfully. "You're the most beautiful thing I ever saw—absolutely! You're like a snow maiden, an ice queen—or, I know, like Queen Titania! It's a shame you'll have to hide your marvelous red curls with a veil—"

Cherry revolved slowly before the pier glass, her blazing golden eyes filled with an almost awed delight in her own beauty.

The ivory satin which tradition had dictated as the basis of the gown showed only as a sheen, a shimmer, a background for the intricate encrustations of seed pearls, rhinestones and crystals, wrought in fairy delicate embroidery over the entire surface of the dress.

"The veil isn't going to cover much of my hair!" Cherry laughed. "Trust little Cherry! See?" She lifted the cloud of veiling—yards and yards of it, from the big box which held it, and with Frances' help, adjusted the tiny cap of priceless rose point lace, which did not in the least obscure the glory of her copper-and-gold hair, but enhanced it.

Faith stepped softly into the room and Cherry laughed a little tremulously as she raised her apricot-tinted cheek for her sister's kiss. "Don't the girls look keen? I adore you in that golden poppy dress, darling. How do you like Sweet-Pea Selma and Cornflower Frances?"

The two bridesmaids were in dresses made exactly like Faith's, Selma's of pale lavender combined artfully with flesh-colored taffeta, and Frances' of cornflower blue taffeta, the exact color of the wide, childish eyes under the cloud of her silver-blond hair.

"Can I come in now?" Joy's voice came shrilly through the closed door. "Junior says him and Fay's sick and tired of waiting on you. And Mama's mad 'cause you didn't ask her to come in while you dressed!" The last sentence was delivered in a lower key, with portentious solemnity and warning.

"Here comes the bride!" Cherry chanted in answer "Scoot back into the living room, Joy, and tell 'em we're coming."

The shabby little Myrtle Street house must have shaken with surprised delight clear to its foundations as the little procession passed through hall and dining room on the way to the living room, Faith in the lead, Frances and Selma giggling together just behind her, and Cherry, her veil wound loosely over her arm to keep it from trailing in the dust of the old floors, bringing up the rear.

"Oh, gee! Oh, gosh!" Joy breathed ecstatically. "Ain't we got fun?"

Faith, the first in the room, nodded and smiled at Fay Allen, a plump, round-cheeked, chestnut-haired, gray-eyed girl who, except for the fact that she sat very close to "Long" Lane on the piano bench, gave no indication of deserving the adjective that the Lane family almost habitually prefixed to her name. "That fast Fay Allen" looked singularly childish and nice, in her little belted suit of golden-brown velvet.

In the clamor of exclamations and compliments and questions and half-finished answers that followed, Faith stood to one side, observing the scene rather than taking part in it. Her mother was visibly trembling with pride and happiness, a happiness expressed in a constant trickle of tears down her cheeks, and in embarrassed agreement with everything that Frances and Selma said. Mrs. Lane was patently in awe of these "fine friends" of her adored Cherry, could not quite get used to the idea that they were in her home on a basis of intimacy.

"Dad, you haven't said I look pretty! You haven't eyes for anyone but Faith, you bad, partial old parent. Don't you like your Cherry a tiny bit?" And, with impulsive disregard of her wedding finery, she plumped herself down on his knees.

"I'd rather see you in your shroud than in that there dress, to marry the man you've give your word to," Jim Lane's low gruff voice silenced every feminine twitter in the room.

Cherry slipped from her father's lap and backed away to stare at him, as if he had struck her. But his tragic, near-sighted eyes did not meet her blazing gaze. They were fixed on a vision of horror that became real to everyone in the room.

It was Mrs. Lane who broke the ghastly spell of silence. "If that ain't just like you, Jim Lane! Oh, Lord, oh, Lord! Life is just one thing after another! I wish I was dead!"

DRESS

By MARY MARSHALL

Rhinestone buckles showing the initials of the wearer, are worn on plain black satin slippers for evening.

If cinderella had worn one of the new initial slipper buckles the old story made famous by Charles Perrault would have been much shorter—and the ugly stepsister would not have had to cut off her toe. The handsome prince would have had only to make note of the initials—C. E.—on the slipper, and after that his task would have been fairly simple.

One thing that makes initial or monogram slipper buckles eminently desirable to the woman who can afford expensive trifles, and undesirable to the woman who cannot, is that they must be made to order. You can't of course, go into a shop, pay down your money, and depart with a monogram of the letters J. Q. MeB.

Slipper buckles are one of the accessories on which nowadays we can expend a great deal of interest, as well as money. We have fewer clothes accessories, perhaps, than we once had. At all events, we have fewer that are bought separately from the frock with which they are to be worn. Time was when we had sashes and belts, collars and cuffs, chatelaine bags and all sorts of odds and ends that we don't have now—each thing bought separately. Now we buy most of our accessories, such as they are, with the frock with which they are worn.

But we can indulge our liking for buying nicknacks when we fare forth after slipper buckles. The only difficult thing is to know when to stop buying. For there are all sorts of interesting things to choose from.

YOUNG AND LASKY UNABLE TO AGREE

Swimmer's Managers Want To Start Filming Right Away.

HOLLYWOOD, Calif., Jan. 26.—(Canadian Press).—George Young, the Canadian youth who won $25,000 in the recent Catalina swim, failed in his first attempt to break into the movies. Negotiations between Young and the Famous Players-Lasky, in whose studio he recently underwent film tests, were dropped when it was found it would be impossible for the producer to use the swimmer in a picture before May. Young's managers insisted that filming must start at once in order to release him for vaudeville engagements. The producers said film tests showed Young had a "pleasing screen appearance."

Modern Women's Hygiene

Ends worries of old ways. Discards like tissue

By ELLEN J. BUCKLAND
Registered Nurse

SHEER gowns and gay frocks, business and social exactments under the most trying of hygienic handicaps are a comfort women of today enjoy.

This because old hygienic ways are being widely supplanted by a new way called Kotex.

Kotex discards as easily as tissue. Thus no laundry, no embarrassment of disposal.

It's 5 times as absorbent as ordinary cotton "pads." Thus you wear lightest frocks; dance, motor, go for hours without a moment's doubt.

Deodorizes, too; thus ending all fear of offense. 8 in 10 better class women now employ this way. Doctors advise it. Nurses widely urge it. Obtain at any store without embarrassment simply by saying "KOTEX."

Try today and you'll never again risk the uncertainty of old ways. Box of 12 costs only a few cents. Be sure you get the genuine. Only Kotex itself is "like" Kotex.

HOROSCOPE

The Stars Incline, but do not Compel.

THURSDAY, JANUARY 27, 1927

This is an uncertain day, according to astrology, which finds that good and evil influences strongly conflict.

In the early morning there may be an inclination toward irritibility and unreasonableness, exceedingly threatening to domestic happiness.

It is well to practise poise and to follow routine work the first part of the day.

Women may be especially provoking under this sway which makes them capricious and changeable.

This should be a fairly fortunate wedding day, since it presages quick fluctuations of luck with the good always predominating.

Theatres and places of amusement should benefit, for there will be a general craving for entertainment that will lift the mind from practical reflections.

It is supposed to be easy to deceive oneself while this rule prevails, and for this reason one should not act impulsively on any sanguine plan.

The evening is a most auspicious time for any sort of intellectual entertainment and is read as peculiarly auspicious for psychic investigations, which are to lead to astonishing results in the future.

Large contracts will come to American manufacturers from the Orient early in the spring, according to the calculations of the seers, who foretell much foreign trade.

Financial anxieties, due to sudden fluctuations of value may be expected as part of the effect of this month's solar eclipse.

All the European astrologers indulge in prophesies of grave troubles in Asia as well as France, England, Ireland and other parts of the globe, America alone enjoying the prospect of peace and prosperity.

Saturn is supposed to exercise now a menacing power that if of exceedingly evil omen to all the British Empire.

Persons whose birthdate it is may have a year of test that brings coveted possessions and real happiness.

Children born on this day may meet with many strange experiences all through life. They are likely to be of strong personality and to enjoy nature's best gifts.

National Hockey League Circuit To Be Enlarged Next Year

ENLARGE CIRCUIT HOCKEY LEAGUE

National Hockey League to Include More Cities Next Year.

SEEKING FRANCHISE

NEW YORK, N.Y., Jan. 26 (By Canadian Press)—Frank Calder, president of the National Hockey League, in an interview with the Evening Post yesterday indicated that the circuit would be enlarged next winter to include more cities of the United States. The Post quotes Mr. Calder as saying: "We have received inquiries from American sources which I am not at liberty to divulge at this time."

"It is learned from other sources, however," says the Post, "that Cleveland has applied for a franchise. Other cities prominently mentioned are Philadelphia and Baltimore, with the former being the more logical site, if a twelve-club league is formed."

The Post hints that the addition of two more United States teams might result in the N.H.L. being divided into separate circuits of six clubs each.

Mr. Calder told the Post that he believed hockey rules as now constituted should not be tampered with to any extent. Apart from the possibility of changing players without stopping the play, he saw no immediate reforms in prospect.

The league president leaves for his home in Montreal tonight.

RING SEATS SELLING FAST

Elimination Bout Between Delaney and Maloney for Heavyweight Honors.

BIG DEMAND

NEW YORK, Jan. 26.—(Canadian Press).—Sanctioning a top price of $20 for ringside seats, the State Athletic Committee yesterday paved the way for a $200,000 heavyweight elimination fight between Jack Delaney and Jimmy Maloney, at Madison Square Garden on Feb. 18.

Commenting on the board's action, promoter Tex Rickard said he could sell out the ringside section twice over on applications already received. He predicted the highest previous gate drawn for an indoor match here—slightly more than $162,000, for the Dempsey-Brennan battle in 1920, and Delaney-Berlenbach bout in 1925—would be exceeded by between $30,000 and $38,000.

WINNING HONORS IN PRO HOCKEY

Former Ontario Hockey Association players who are making names for themselves in the National Hockey League this season are: Duke McCurry of Toronto, who is with Pittsburgh, and Norman Himes, late of Galt, but now with the New York Yankees. Himes is one of the sensations of the present campaign.

BRISTLING BATTLES OF BARE FIST DAYS

(MY LIFE STORY)

by Jack McAuliffe

CHAPTER EIGHTEEN

(Copyright 1927, NEA Service, Inc.)

It was at the 10th round of my famous fight with Jem Carney, champion of England, that I began to fade, after having made a sucker out of him in the earlier rounds.

I had boiled myself soft trying to make 133 pounds and that, added to my leg injury that prevented me doing any road work at all, was responsible for the frenzied feeling that gripped my heart, making me believe I couldn't win.

I don't know yet what I was fighting on. It must have been sheer spirit, for we went 74 rounds before we both collapsed.

After the 10th round Carney began to get overanxious and fouled me repeatedly. Jack Dempsey, my second, decided if the referee was not going to take any action, he would.

So a funny thing happened.

At the 12th round he pulled a towel up over me and leaning down, Dempsey bit me on the shoulder until the blood came.

I rushed right out of my corner at the whistle, pulled Carney's head over my shoulder, yelled bloody murder and claimed a foul.

The referee examined the teeth marks and then gravely opened Carney's mouth. Carney had NO FRONT TEETH.

Round after round both of us kept going. Slugging, jabbing, alternately taking the offensive and defensive. Round 30 came and went.

Round 40 was passed in a whirl of gloves. Round 50 and Round 60. It was an awful mess.

In the 64th round the only good opening of the fight came for me and my heart beat high with elation. Carney tore in with his jaw unprotected for a minute. I crashed him square on the chin with a lightning right. Down he went, rolling over twice.

He didnt stay down, however, but he got up and staggered toward me. So it went on, getting bloodier and bloodier. In the 73rd Dempsey cautioned me. "Watch yourself now, Jack, one good shove will send either one of you down."

In the 74th came the finish. We were in a clinch ,each struggling to batter the other, reeling back and forth. We stumbled and fell in a tangle. In falling we broke one of the ring posts. Everything clattered down in a heap, ropes, posts and all. We lay there stunned. Shouting seconds fought their way into a milling mob. It was all over. Referee Stevenson officially refused to give a decision and in the ritons hubub declared "All bets are off." The fight, later called one of the greatest in the world, was stopped then and there.

NOTE—In the next chapter this courageous veteran tells young men how they can conquer a "yellow streak."

SENATORS LOSE TO AMERICANS

League Leaders Trounced in Game at New York Six To One.

TEAM WEAKENED.

NEW YORK, January 26. — A 2-fold jinx that has been following the New York Americans was shaken here last night when the star-spangled outfit trounced Ottawa 6 to 1 in a National Hockey League contest. It was the first victory for the Americans over Ottawa since the former's entry into the N.H.L. over a year ago, and it also marked the first game in five on New York ice in which the locals have scored against Connell, the Ottawa goaler.

The visitors who lead the international section of the National Hockey League by a wide margin, were weakened for last night's fray by the absence of George Boucher, Hec Kilrea and Frank Finnegan, all three of whom were suspended for fighting during the Ottawa-Montreal game on Saturday. With Boucher off the Ottawa rearguard was wobbly.

The Americans took advantage of this fact to pile up an early lead, four goals in the first period giving them a working margin. Reise obtained the first on a lone effort after 33 seconds of play.

Milt Halliday, Ottawa substitute, scored the lone Ottawa goal in the third period. A hard drive from the left wing gave the recruit his first goal in professional company.

The victory sent the locals back into a tie for second place in the international Division with Montreal Canadiens.

HYDROS SUFFER FIRST REVERSE OF THE SEASON

Absence of Two Regulars Weakens Line-up on Monday's Play.

SCORE OF 9-1

Clever Work of Saunders in Goal Saves Higher Lead.

CAMPBELLFORD, Jan. 26. — Without Cecil Watt and Art Brown, the Hydros sustained their first reverse of the Town League schedule at Covert's Arena Monday night. The score was 9 to 1, and the Clerks were the team that piled up the record score on Saunders, the most goals the clever net guardian has let drift past him in two seasons, but for every one that beat him Saunders had a host of clever saves to his credit, and it was up on the front line that the Clerks showed their superiority. Wood, McArthur and Labrash gave the greatest exhibition of offensive and defensive hockey seen at the arena this winter. They swept down the ice two and three abreast in dazzling combination plays, that generally ended with a shot on goal, and they were back in time to check the return drive before it was well under way. They paid particular attention to Cowell, and the Hydro sharpshooter failed to get on the score sheet all night—that feat alone is one that few teams have accomplished in the past two seasons. The ice was the best of the season, and was particularly suited to the Clerks' open style of play, and they didn't seem to tire as in their previous games. The Clerk defence also showed improvement, and Fox turned in his best performance of the season. It is doubtful if the Hydro at their best could have withstood the fine performance of the McArthur gang. They had everything that goes to make a winning team, including a generous amount of good luck, and the game was not under way very long before a fan was heard to remark, "The Hydro are in for a trimming tonight if the Clerks keep up that pace."

Half-way through the opening period Labrash opened the scoring, taking McArthur's pass at the blue line and going around the defence, and a little later Wood was on the firing end of a three-man combination to make it 2 to 0. The Clerks had much the better of the play in centre ice, but were finding it difficult to beat Saunders.

They had more success in the middle period and finished with a lead of six goals. Labrash was playing the best of his career and his work was made more effective by passing the puck at the opportune time. He landed the first two scores of the period and carried the rubber down for the third, passing over to Atkinson at the goal mouth.

McArthur got the next when he circled the net and shoved the puck in the side. Wood got the Clerks' seventh marker when his shot from the side dropped from Saunders' pads and rolled into the net.

Johnston revived the dying hopes of the Hydro supporters when he went through alone for a nice goal.

Second period—Clerks 7, Hydro 1.

The Clerks kept up their attack in the third period, but more of the individual variety, and kept a close watch on the defensive. Wood went through the Hydro defence alone for a goal, and McArthur followed in his shot from outside the defence when Saunders threw the puck behind the net. McArthur picked it up and came around the net to shove it in the corner. Labrash made the prettiest try of the night. Grabbing the puck at his own blue line, he sailed down the right boards, cut over to the left around the defence and back across the net, but Saunders foiled his attempt at the last moment.

Fans who passed up the engagement on the pretext that the Hydro would win, missed probably the best exhibition of the season, and in the future the moral is plain, "Take no chances. See them all."

The midget game was also better than any previous game the youngsters have played. The players held their positions better than usual, opening up the game and making it faster. The Tigers were winners by a 2 to 0 score, showing their biggest advantage on the wings.

D. Runions and Dunk were the best of the Bear Cats, and G. Runions, Blute and Stocker were the pick of the Tigers. Both goalers made many good saves, with Bush having the most to do.

The line-up follows:

Tigers—Reynolds, goal; Wilks, r. defence; Cubbitt, l. defence; Blute, centre; Stocker, r. wing; G. Runions, l. wing.

Bear Cats—Bush, goal; Free, r. defence; Dunk, l. defence; D. Runions, centre; Peake, r. wing; McPherson, l. wing; Henson, sub.

Referee—B. Kerr.

Clerks—Fox, goal; McMullen, r. defence; Lee, l. defence; McArthur, centre; Labrash, r. wing; Wood, l. wing; Atkinson and Sloggett, subs.

Hydro—Saunders, goal; Beatty, r. defence; Brunelle, l. defence; Nesbitt, centre; Johnston, r. wing; Cowell, l. wing; Soles and Free, subs.

Referee—B. Kerr.

HOCKEY NOTES

MILLBROOK, Jan. 26—A hockey match, in the local league series, postponed from last week, between the Anglicans and the Independents, took place on the Cosmos rink on Monday night. There was a good attendance of spectators, and considerable interest manifested. The teams lined up:

Anglicans—Goal, D. Sheppard; defence, A Thorne, W. Budd; centre, R. Shaw; wings, J. Mitchell, H. Jordan; subs, W. Whyte.

Independents—Goal, B. Freclove; defence, A. Jeffrey, K. Donnelly; centre, E. Nattrass; wings, W. Skitch, C. Ingram; subs, W. Sayles.

The score was 7-4, favor of the Anglicans. A. McCorry refereed to the satisfaction of all.

At a business meeting held afterward Howard Lancashire was appointed manager of the Presbyterian team, replacing Rev. J. Riddle who has been unable to attend either the executive meetings, or the league games.

Jack Sharkey, the Boston heavyweight, who hopes to meet Gene Tunney for the world's title before the end of 1927, is 25 years old and a native of Binghamton, N.Y. He is of Lithuanian parentage and his real name is Josef Paul Cukoschay.

GROVE SCHOOL DEFEAT JUNIORS

But Lose in Round for Play-Off With Peterboro Juniors.

FEW PENALTIES

LAKEFIELD, Jan. 26—Grove defeated Lakefield Juniors in the final tilt of a three game O.H.A. series at Lakefield rink last night but were unable to overcome a four goal lead won by locals in the first two games, Juniors winning the round by 12—9.

The Juniors are to play Peterborough in home and home games, the first to be played here on Friday night. A large crowd is expected to be in attendance as both teams are about evenly matched and from all appearances a strong battle will be witnessed by the fans. The Liftlock city boys will in all probability bring a large crowd of rooters with them and it is up to hockey enthusiasts of Lakefield to step in and help cheer the boys on to victory.

Most of the scoring was done in the first period, each team sinking three goals; Wannamaker (twice) and Hamblin for Juniors; Northey, Hudson and Daggs for Grove.

In the second Northey and Daggs for Grove, while in the third Hamblin scored for Juniors, resulting in a 5 to 4 victory for the prep school.

Both goalies played good games. In the second period Morin was hit in the eye which put him out of the balance of the game.

The penalties were few, the referee dealing out an equal number to each team.

Line-up:

Junior—Goal, Junkin; right defence, Morin; left defence, Lawless; centre, Wannamaker; right wing, Hamblin; left wing, Stabler; subs, Sherrin and G. Wannamaker.

LINDSAY WINS GROUP.

Defeat Port Perry in Fast Intermediate Fixture By Socre of 8-2.

LINDSAY, Jan. 26. — Lindsay clinched the group honors last night when they defeated Port Perry intermediates by 8 to 2. The game was fast, with Lindsay scoring on combination. Williams, the fast wing man, was injured in the second half, and had to retire from the game. Deshane, in gaol for the visitors, gave a fine exhibition, while Lindsay's goaler had little to do. Score by periods: 1—1, 5—2, 8—2.

Lindsay will play an exhibition game here Tuesday against Peterborough seniors.

Lindsay — Goal, Hargrove; defense, Carew and Killen; centre, Coombs; wings, Williams and Wilford; subs, Davis and Reeves.

Port Perry—Goal, Deshane; defense, Rogers and Boe; centre, McGregor; wings, Walker and Welsh; subs, Roache and Paugman.

O. H. A. BULLETIN

Harry Batstone is unable to act, and Tom Munro, of London, will referee the U. of T. Grads at Peterborough senior game to-morrow night.

Orangeville juniors have defaulted their remaining games in Group No. 7.

U. of T. seconds play in Burlington Wednesday, Feb. 1, instead of Friday, Feb. 28, as originally scheduled.

GLADIATORS OF BARE FISTS DAYS

TOM MUNRO TO OFFICIATE IN TILT TO-MORROW

Well Known London Referee Selected To Handle Big Game.

SURE OF FAST ICE.

Varsity Grads and Petes Will Meet Under Ideal Conditions.

The importance placed upon tomorrow night's game by the O.H.A. is shown by the fact that Tom Munro, well known London referee, has been detailed to handle the affair. Munro is regarded in the west as one of the most efficient referees in the business and his selection for a game down this way shows how much is at stake.

The cold dip has ensured the Grads and Petes meeting under most favourable ice conditions. Both teams of course want the going to be fast and the sheet should be perfect to-morrow night.

There was a rush for tickets yesterday and all indications point to the biggest crowd in a number of seasons.

The teams will be at full strength with the line-ups likely as follows:

Varsity Grads:
Goal—Sullivan.
Defence—Porter, Taylor.
Centre—H. Plaxton.
Right wing—Hudson.
Left wing—Trottier.
Subs—Gordon, Delahaye or Frank Sullivan or Fisher or B. Plaxton.

Peterboro:
Goal—Dwyer.
Defence—McLeod, Rose.
Centre—Collins.
Right wing—Bogardis.
Left wing—Ranger.
Subs—Kane, Williams.

HOCKEY MATCH ARRANGEMENTS

For the convenience of those who are attending the hockey game tomorrow evening, and enter the east side of the rink, an additional ticket booth has been erected in order to facilitate the selling of the tickets and the getting in of the crowd into the rink.

To-morrow's game has created a great deal of interest, and it has necessitated the taking on of extra ticket sellers and extra policemen to see that everything is in proper order preceding and during the game.

MINUS THREE STARS MONTREAL PROS WIN

One Period Overtime Necessary To Defeat Detroit By Score 2 To 1.

MONTREAL, Jan. 26.—A weakened Montreal team snatched an overtime victory from Detroit in a National Hockey League game here last night, 2 to 1.

Two minutes before the end of the extra session, Russell Oatman, substituting at left wing for "Babe" Siebert, took a fast pass from Broadbent and drove a backhanded, twisting shot off Holme's stick from the deciding tally.

Minus Siebert, Noble and Phillips, who are on the suspended list of the league, the locals were forced to battle on sheer nerve to win, as they were staggering and badly exhausted when the end came.

Detroit played improved hockey over their last game here, especially on the defence. Both goals scored against them were backhanded shots from well out, though Maroons earned their margin having missed other excellent chances by the closest margins through spectacular saves by "Happy" Holmes.

The win was the first for the Maroons on home ice in nine games.

KITCHENER TAKES GAME FROM GALT

Work of Mickey Murray in Goal Keeps Score Close.

GALT, Jan. 26. — Kitchener strengthened its grip on first place in Senior Group No. 1 last night by defeating Galt 2—1 in a game which did not provide much good hockey, but was interesting. Galt, in addition to being without the services of Art Gauthier, had Mickey Murray come out of a sick bed to play, while Al Gauthier played the full game with a broken finger. The visitors displayed more combination, had more finish to their play around the goal and were more accurate in shooting. It was a close and hard-checking affair, Referee Cameron handing out 13 penalties, nine of which went to Galt.

Kitchener scored both of their goals with Galt a man short. Then George Karges received an unfortunate injury that caused his retirement for the balance of the game. He and Gross were checking Hoffman on a rush, and Gross's stick caught Karges over the eye, opening up a nasty wound. After that the visitors were as badly disorganized as were the locals.

Kitchener — Goal, Klem; defence, Hinsberger and Karges; centre, Roth; wings, Hiller and Gross; subs, Seagram and Hillman.

Galt—Goal, Murray; defence, Hoffman and Himes; centre, Al Gauthier; wings, Woods and Duncan; subs., Patterson and Stockford.

Referee—J. Cameron of Toronto.

COLD WEATHER AFFECTS TRADE ON DOLLAR DAY

Business This Morning Disrupted By Extremely Low Temperature.

TWO DAY EVENT.

Most Merchants Favor Having Sale Longer Than One Day.

The cold wave that hit the city today with such a resounding bang also delivered a blow to Dollar Day. A couple of the stores registered fairly good business, and they had better sales on account of the advertised sales than they would otherwise have done, on an ordinary day in such cold weather. This fact, taken in conjunction with the continuance of the sale tomorrow, should make the annual January event just as successful as usual.

Small crowds were waiting at several of the stores at high-past eight o'clock this morning and were allowed in at once, on account of the extreme cold, but the country patrons were conspicuous by their absence, although one lady drove in from Westwood for the occasion. "Some women will come out for a bargain, no matter what the temperature," said one department store manager. He likes it in January, he says, because it ties up with the January sales and has a large lot of stock well out of the way before the new stuff comes in, in February. But another big store manager would much rather have Dollar Day in February after the January sales have been forgotten, thus making a wind-up for the season, as the August Day does.

"For all the trouble you have with it, it should be continued for two or even three days," said another merchant, who referred to the custom of other cities in carrying the event through several days.

All the stores were unanimous in favoring the carrying of the event over tomorrow, which will be done this year.

QUAKER OATS FIRE DAMAGE IS SMALL

Firemen Three Hours Conquering Blaze Which Threatened Plant.

CEDAR RAPIDS, Iowa, Jan. 27 (Canadian Press).—Officials of the Quaker Oats Mills stated today that the fire which threatened to wipe out the plant here last night had caused damage which will not exceed $50,000. Firemen were three hours in conquering the flames. Reports that one fireman had been killed and two were missing were shown to have been erroneous. Two workmen, however, were slightly injured.

Prisoner Breaks Jail To Visit Barber Shop

HUNTSVILLE, Ala., Jan. 26 (United News).—Willie Green, his face rosy, hair sweetly scented, and finger nails glistening, has returned to jail. Willie had broken out of his cell, where he was serving a term for automobile theft, because he thought he needed a shave, hair cut, shampoo, and manicure. After buying everything on sale at a local barber shop he returned and presented his imaculate self to a bewildered sheriff. Four companions also escaped with Willie. The rough ungroomed fellows are still at large.

WEDDING BELLS.

GRAHAM—MURRAY.

The wedding was solemnized at Buffalo January 18th, by Rev. Father Phluger, of St. Mary Magdaline Church, of Elizabeth Murray and Gordon Graham, both of this city.

EASTON-RIPLEY.

Last Saturday afternoon, Jan. 22, Mr. George W. Easton and Miss Edna Ripley were quietly married at Knox manse, King street, Rev. W. McDonald, B.D., performing the ceremony. The young people were supported by Mr. G. W. Thomas and Miss Ivy Wilson. They will take up residence at 50 Jackson avenue.

HEWITT—BIDGOOD.

A quiet wedding was solemnized at the George street parsonage on Jan. 6 by the Rev. Mr. Todd. The contracting parties were Miss Delphine Bidgood and William George Hewitt, both of Peterborough. They were attended by Miss Nellie Hewitt, sister of the groom, and Mr. Thomas Franks, of Peterborough. The happy couple left on the five o'clock train for Lindsay and points north for a short honeymoon.

FONTAINE-COLLINS.

At eight o'clock yesterday morning at the Church of the Immaculate Conception, Right Rev. Monsignor McColl performed the ceremony which united in the holy bonds of matrimony Margaret Ellen Collins, youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Collins of Otonabee, and Joseph Stephen Fontaine, youngest son of Mrs. Emma Fontaine and the late Francis Fontaine.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore a frock of midnight blue chiffon, embroidered with French flowers, with hat to match, and bouquet of opehlia roses.

The bridesmaid, Miss Alma Fontaine, sister of the bridegroom, was in rose flush crepe with hat to match and a bouquet of Columbia roses.

Mr. Albert Belanger, of Toronto, cousin of the bridegroom, acted as best man.

During the Nuptial Mass, Miss Stella Brady sang Gounod's "Ave Maria," with accompaniment by Miss Leona Hummell, who played the wedding music.

After the ceremony a dainty wedding breakfast was served at the home of the brides parents. Later, Mr and Mrs. Fontaine left by motor for Port Hope to catch the International Limited, for a honeymoon trip. On their return they will reside in the Crown Apartments.

ICE BREAKER TUG TAKES SHORT TRIP

MIDLAND, Ont., Jan. 26.—A six-mile trip in midwinter through ice varying from fourteen to eighteen inches, was the unique experience of a number of people on Monday. They were on board the ice breaking tug "Strathbogie" of the Burke Towing and Salvage Company as she cut her way through the Georgian Bay from Midland to Port McNicoll. Pictures were taken of the different mills and elevators along the shore for the Ontario Government.

All boats with storage cargoes in the Midland harbor having been unloaded and berthed for the winter, the Strathbogie remained at Port McNicoll to move a couple of freighters still to be unloaded to the C.P.R. elevator there as soon as orders are received.

BRITISH ENVOY MAKES OFFERS TO EUGENE CHEN

Proposals Give Effect To Points Outlined By Chamberlain.

GUARANTEES ASKED.

Australia Decides To Take No Action—Moscow's Plans Disclosed.

LONDON, Jan. 26 (Canadian Press).—Definite proposals which British official circles hope will bring order out of chaos in China, have been made by Mr. O'Malley, British Charge d'Affaires, to Eugene Chen, Cantonese Foreign Minister, with whom he has been in conference at Hankow.

The proposals would give effect to the points outlined by Sir Austen Chamberlain, British Foreign Secretary, in his recent memorandum. They pertain to certain guarantees which the British Government is anxious to have regarding British concessions and holdings throughout China

The memorandum delivered by the British Charge d'Affaires to the representatives of the treaty powers at Peking on December 18 was notable for its frank recognition of the changed conditions in China and the rise of a strong nationalistic movement. Its main proposals were:

"No foreign control of an unwilling country; readiness to negotiate revision of the treaties; immediate levy of the Washington surtaxes for the benefit of China; and amendment of the extra territorial system."

The memorandum held that "for the powers to unite in an attempt to impose control upon an unwilling China would be entirely opposed to the spirit of the Washington treaties."

Australia Remains Inactive.

MELBOURNE, Jan. 26 (Canadian Press). — After discussing the Chinese question to-day, the Federal Cabinet decided that it was unnecessary for the Commonwealth to take action at the present time.

Foundation For Statement.

LONDON, Jan. 26 (United Press) —The usually well-informed diplomatic correspondent of the Daily Telegraph said to-day that events in China indicated there had been more foundation than at first supposed for Secretary of State Frank B. Kellogg's statement that Bolshevik intrigues had a part in recent differences of opinion between the United States and Mexico.

The correspondent suggested that Bolshevik agents had sought to distract American opinion from Chinese affairs by aggravating the "Mexican chaos," hoping to prevent United States co-operation with Great Britain for the protection of foreign lives and property in China.

Moscow thereby hoped, the correspondent said, to obtain the ejection from China of the two great "Imperial capitalistic powers," Britain first, and then the United States, later leaving Soviet Russia and China confronted only by Japan.

Shanghai Threatened

SHANGHAI, Jan. 25 (Canadian Press)—The heavy concentration of Cantonese (Nationalist) Government trops which is reported in Chekiang Province front has raised apprehension in Shanghai.

The Nationalists interpret the concentration as part of a supreme effort to be made by the Cantonese to capture Shanghai before the majority of the British expeditionary force of 20,000 soldiers and sailors arrives at the end of February.

More Trouble Feared.

SHANGHAI, Jan. 26 (Canadian Press)—It is also feared that the landing of Punjabi troops to-morrow from Hong Kong will provide the match that will light a new anti-foreign, especially anti-British, conflagration in the provinces held by the Nationalists, which include about half of all China.

In view of this danger and the threat that the Nationalists will overrun Kiangsu province, in which Shanghai is situated, the possible necessity of evacuating American women and children from this province is under careful consideration.

Marshal Sun Chuang Fang, ruler of Chekiang, Anhwei, and Kiangsu provinces, is concentrating his troops to resist the Cantonese concentration in the region of Hangchow, Northern Chekiang. Sun is denuding neighboring towns of troops for this purpose.

IN MEMORIAM.

HORSLEY. — In loving memory of Annie Horsley, who passed away January 26, 1925:

Often, often, my thoughts do wander
To a grave that's far away;
Where we laid our dear mother
Just two years ago to-day.

I oftimes think of you, dear mother,
No eyes may see me weep,
But many silent tears are shed
When others are asleep.

Friends may think I have forgotten
When at least they see me smile;
But they little know the heartache
That the smile hides all the while.

Sadly missed by her loving daughter, Margaret Williams.

THE MARKETS.

Mining Trade Light With Downward Trend

TORONTO, Jan. 25 (Canadian Press).—The lightest session for some time on the Standard Mining Exchange took place to-day, when only 290,834 shares were dealt in. The market was inclined to be easier, and declines outnumbered gains. Nipissing, however, was stronger, gaining 40 cents to 10.00. Argonaut Consolidated dropped 3-4 at 43¼. Area was down ½ at 09. Duprat declined one at 23, and Kirk Hunton was two lower at 20. Mining Corporation was three higher at 330. Teck Hughes and Vipond Consolidated each lost one point, the former at 601 and the latter at 164. Amulet, on the unlisted side, was up 13 cents at 165.

Wheat Turns Down Again On Reports From Argentine

CHICAGO, Jan. 26 (Canadian Press).—Wheat underwent an early downturn today, influenced by the likelihood of larger shipments from Argentina and by bearish views taken of the Canadian Government crop report. Opening 1-4 to 7-8c down, wheat held near to the initial range. Corn and oats were easier and provisions steady, with corn starting unchanged to 3-8 to 1-2c off but later recovering somewhat.

Opening prices were: Wheat, May 141 1-4, July 132 1-8; Corn, May, 81 1-4 July 84 1-2; Oats, May 48 7-8, July unquoted.

Brazilian's Gain Feature On Toronto Stock Market

TORONTO, Jan. 26 (Canadian Press).—A gain of 2 3-4 points in Brazilian Traction was the feature on the Toronto Stock Exchange to-day, the issue closing the early session at 114 in heavy trading. British Columbia Fishing was also active and stronger, gaining one point at 87. Canadian Canners Preferred was up ½ at 79 3-4. Industrial Alcohol eased off ¼ at 22, Canadian Pacific Railway was down one at 168, and City Dairy was one lower at 85. Industrial Nickle, heavily dealt in, closed unchanged at 40. Massey Harris Common declined 1-8 at 48. The unlisted market was again active. Gooderham and Worts declined ¼ at 46¼, Hiram Walker was up 5-9 at 83, the old issue of British American Oil gained 2½ at 87, and Imperial Oil was up 1-8 at 41 1-8.

Stock Prices Go Up In Brisk Market Session

NEW YORK, Jan. 26. — Stock prices rallied briskly to-day. Pools resumed aggressive operations in a number of issues, Columbia, Carbon, Loews and Erie first preferred being marked up to the highest point in years. Chesapeake and Ohio, which was weak yesterday on rumours of new financing in connection with the Van Sweringen merger plans, rallied 4 points, coincident with the resumption of conferences arranged in the hope of compromising the differences between the Cleveland capitalists and the minority stockholders' committee. Substantial recoveries also were made by a number of other recent weak spots in the railroad group.

ENGINEERS TO HEAR OF DEVELOPMENT

J. S. Wurtele Will Address Local Branch To-morrow Night.

There will be a meeting of the Peterborough Branch of the Engineering Institute of Canada at 8.15 p.m. tomorrow night, January 27th, at which an address will be given by J. S. H. Wurtele, B.A., B.Sc., vice-president and plant manager of the Southern Canada Power Company, Limited. His subject will be "Some Features of the Hemmings Falls Hydro-Electric Development on the St. Francis River, Province of Quebec, Canada." As the electrical equipment for the Hemmings Falls development is entirely of Canadian General Electric Company's manufacture, this paper should be of considerable local interest. The address will be illustrated with lantern slides. The chairman for this meeting will be Mr. Max Sauer.

Colonel Miller Wires Army Headquarters For Information.

BUNTON'S DENIAL.

WINNIPEG, Jan. 26. — Colonel G. Miller, chief secretary for Salvation Army work in Western Canada, in a statement, expressed the belief that "there must be some misunderstanding about the statement made in Toronto that the Army has placed a ban on its officers and members being connected with certain secret societies and other organizations."

Colonel Miller said that he intended cabling the London headquarters of the Salvation Army "to be put right on the matter," as he could not "believe there was any truth in it."

Speaking generally regarding the Army, Colonel Miller said that it was not a dictatorial organization. "We are organized on broad lines," he said, "and I know, speaking for myself, I could belong to any secret or fraternal organization that my conscience would permit."

Bunton Denies Resigning.

In connection with Salvation Army officers being barred from secret societies, Adjutant Wallace Bunton, Windsor, emphasizes the fact that he is an Adjutant, and not a Brigadier, and states that he has not resigned his commission in the Salvation Army, neither has he any intention of doing so.

COUNTY COUNCIL HEARS REPORTS OF INSPECTORS

Too Many Teachers Change Every Year in Rural Schools, Say Officials.

MORE PUPILS.

Attendance Has Shown Slight Increase Since Act Was Passed.

At this morning's session of the County Council the two public school inspectors, Richard Lees and R. F. Downey, submitted their reports. Both inspectors pointed out the value township school boards would be to the education life of rural Ontario.

Inspector Lees in his report said that the two important questions in the management of public schools today are the school attendance and the constant changing of teachers. The latter has somewhat improved from a few years ago, as more teachers are available, but in his inspectorate more than half the teachers changed to another school last midsummer.

Seven years have passed since the School Attendance Act came into operation, and Mr. Lees gave a report of the enrollment in the different townships in his inspectorate, as it was in 1921, one year after the act came into operation, compared with last year. On the whole there has been a slight increase in the enrollment of pupils in his inspectorate and in the majority of townships the percentage of those attending school has increased.

Mr. Downey said the department would not allow third class teachers teaching after midsummer of this year. He recommended a plan by which orators may be developed. In this the County Council would hold a field day, when the winners of the oratorical contests at the school fairs would compete against each other for some prize before the members of the Council. He has found a growing interest relative to newer subjects such as manual training, household science, and agriculture among his schools. He pointed out the need of re-adjustment in the school boundaries as some pupils have four miles to walk to school. In the near future many of the schools will have to be replaced by new buildings. He thought it would be a very opportunite time for the members of the Township Council to meet the school trustees with a view to re-arranging and re-adjusting the school section boundaries.

SCENES OF DESTRUCTION FOLLOWING BRITISH RETREAT

A bicycle shop shared the damage suffered by the British concession in Hankow when an insweeping horde of Chinese coolies vented their hatred of the extra-territorial foreigners. It was not until a guard of British volunteers had been replaced by Chinese troops that the coolies dared attack. In the background of this exclusive NEA Service picture some of the soldiers may be seen.

United States Stands For Recognizing China On a Basis of International Equality—Tone of Official Declaration Is Regarded as Friendly.

"The United States Government has notified the Powers and China that it stands for recognizing China on a basis of international equality." According to Secretary Kellogg the United States is eager to see China obtain full control of her own tariff schedules.

Though there is a sharp warning about the necessity of the United States having protection of the lives and property of its nationals, the tone of the statement is regarded as friendly.

The British Foreign Office regards the United States statement as expressing much the same spirit as was displayed in the recent memorandum, which proposed "no foreign control of an unwilling country, readiness to negotiate revision of treaties, and an amendment of the extra territorial system."

Japan is also understood to favor a new treaty with China on an equal footing, with mutual granting of most favored nation treatment.

British army and navy forces are racing to Shanghai.

(By Henry Somerville, Special Radio, Copyright)

LONDON, Jan. 27.—Firm denial is made in authoritative quarters of the report that London transmitted a request to Ottawa for miliary to help in China. The War Office neither asked for such assistance nor even intimated that a contingent of troops would be acceptable.

If the statements of those in the confidence of the Government on the situation in China are to be accepted on their face value, it would seem there is very little ground for speculation on a general Empire military movement. As it stands at present, the composite force being sent to China is designed for police work, rather than for active hostilities against the Nationalists.

It cannot be too emphatically stated that the British government does not anticipate war with China or any section in China. One might go further and say Britain will refuse to become involved in a war with China. A war could settle nothing and lead nowhere. The British easily could send forces to occupy any city in China but they would then have to hold that city and maintain lines and communications and the would be as far off as ever from securing British trade with China or ending the political unsettlement in China itself.

Britain would not resist a Cantonese occupation of Shanghai itself. It would confine its efforts to protecting Britis subjects and property against violence. It is true Britain might have to fight if the Cantonese tried to drive the British out of China. But the Cantonese have no such desire. They declare that they will give protection to British trade and property provided that the British will surrender their treaty privileges, such as extra territoriality. Britain has already announced that she is willing to discuss a revision of treaties. The danger in China is not war but of mob outbreaks. There are about 17,000 British in Shanghai and a million and a half Chinese.

The Labor Party in England condemns the Government for "flaunting military forces." It is quite reasonable to believe that the despatch of troops, however few, is not calculated to assist the Government's policy of settlement by negotiation On the other hand the feelings of British residents isolated among the Chinese millions, have to be considered.

OTTAWA, Jan. 27—Major General J. H. MacBrien, Canada's chief of staff, having offered his services to the war office, his example has been followed wherever news of his action has reached. From many parts of Canada volunteers are telegraphing the department of National Defence for Chinese service.

Medical Men Urged To Drop Title "Dr."

MONTREAL, Jan. 27 (Canadian Press Service)—Abolition of the prefix "Doctor" was recommended last night by Dr. J. L. Austin, of Queen's university, Kingston, in an address to the St. James' Literary society.

"Go back to Mr. So and So, physician and surgeon, as they do in the Old Country," counseled Dr. Austin. "Here, the term 'Doctor' includes dentists, doctors of divinity, doctors of laws, honorary degrees of universities and any form of healer, from the osteopath to the Indian healer who picks herbs by moonlight. We are trying to restrict this in Ontario."

ABUNDANCE OF WAR LORDS CAUSE OF CHINESE CRISIS

THE WEATHER

Most of our cold weather originates in Eastern Siberia, crosses to Alaska, then southerly to the prairie provinces and south easterly over Ontario and the New England states. Our last cold dip, however, came almost directly from the north, probably from Baffinland and the archipelago of islands north of Hudson Bay. Hence its unexpected arrival, unannounced. It carried the breath of the frozen north. The centre of this cold wave likely passed over or very close to Peterboro as the barometer has been at a very high point —30.89 inches. Lowest temperature last night was 25 degrees below zero, at daybreak one degree higher. Yesterday with 21 degrees below was cold; last night was 4 degrees colder. The weather will now moderate, and if the usual routine follows, we will have some snow.—W.P.

Foreign Exploitation Has Kept War Smouldering Since Republic Formed.

CLASH THREATENS.

Flaming War Equal To Boxer Rebellion Threatens—Foreigners Are Scapegoats.

An over-abundance of war lords brought on the present crisis in China.

Nominally a republic—proclaimed so when the Manchu emperors were cut off the country's payroll 14 years ago—China in fact is a crazy quilt of clashing military powers.

Hopes of democratic rule inspired the overthrow of the emperors. But "war lords" stepped in where the Manchu despots left off, and nipped these hopes in the bud.

Since then China has been a welter of political disorder, banditry and military aggression by this ambitious dictator and that.

But the blame cannot be placed entirely on the Chinese war lords. Foreign exploitation, through the various concessions, has kept the war smoldering until it now threatens to burst into a flame equalling the Boxer rebellion.

The Chinese war lords are politicians and, with some justification because of exploitation in the past, they have made hatred of foreigners their battle-cry. That rarely fails to rally the Chinese to the various armies.

Two Groups Now Foremost.

Two main groups of military leadership now are contending in China. They are:

Marshal Chang Tso-lin, ruler of North China, and his followers.

The Cantonese or "Nationalists," comprising followers of the youthful Chang Kai-shek in South China and the Yangste River valley and Feng Yuhsiang in the Chinese north-west.

Popular opinion among Chinese heavily favors the Cantonese faction. European nations, seeking first of all to preserve their investments in China, are said to support the rival Chang Tso-lin or Peking Government.

Division of Chinese sentiment and military control extends considerably beyond the south China-north China split, however.

In some of the Chinese provinces, no war lord has succeeded in establishing himself. At least two, Yunnan and Shansi, the authority of local governors has been preserved.

Tibet and Mongolia are dependencies of China in theory. In fact, Tibet is independent and Mongolia is subject to Russian influence.

Dozens of other war lords have risen and fallen since China first forsook the Manchu monarchy. One of these was Wu Pei-fu, who fought with Chang Tso-lin in 1920, against him in 1922-24, and with him again in 1926. Wu Pei-fu now is in virtual retirement.

Up To-Day, Down To-Morrow.

Sun Chuang-fang arose from Governor of Chekiang to military control of this and four other provinces. He proclaimed their independence. Now the Cantonese, invading the Yangste valley, have reduced his territory to the one province of Kiangsu, in which the city of Shanghai is located. Sun

AFTERMATH OF CHINESE RIOTS

Withdrawal of a voluntary guard of Englishmen and their replacement by uniformed Chinese in the British concession at Hankow, emboldened coolie rioters. Wrecked shops, damaged homes and razed business structures, as shown in this exclusive NEA Service photo, stood mute victims of nationalistic fervor after they had passed.

FIREMEN SUFFER FROST BITES DURING BLAZE IN GALT PLANT

Unable To Save Foundry, But Protect Adjoining Buildings.

DAMAGE $10,000.

GALT, Ont., Jan. 27. Canadian Press. — Fire of unknown origin during the night completely destroyed the plant of the Galt Foundry Company, with a loss estimated at $10,000, half of which is covered by insurance. The building was doomed when the firemen arrived, and with the thermometer registering 18 below zero, they worked hard, and succeeded in saving the adjoining buildings. All of the firemen suffered from frostbites, and three had narrow escapes from injury, and possible death, when the roof collapsed.

Faithful Steed Guards Body Of Dead Horseman

PORT HOOD, N.S., Jan. 27 —Word of the sudden death of a horseback rider and how a faithful animal lay down beside the body of its master and kept constant vigil over it all night, has reached here. Dougald McDonald, farmer, of Black River, and a lover of horses, was stricken while riding horseback some miles from his home. When his body was discovered the next morning the horse was reclining beside it and apparently had not left it during the night.

German Envoy At Cabul Save Woman From Bondage By Bidding High Price For Her In Afghan Market

BERLIN, Jan. 27—In order to save a German woman from being sold in an open market as a slave the German Minister at Cabul was obliged to purchase her in the name of his Government, according to information received here.

Several years ago a native of Afghanistan, Abdullah Chan, who was living in Berlin, married a German girl. When the inflation period came on he, with his wife and children, returned to Cabul where the couple lived happily and prospered.

Six months ago Abdullah Chan died. When his wife applied to the courts for possession of her husband's property, she was informed that as her late husband belonged to the mountain clan of Alfriden, his estate was not subject either to English or Afghanistan laws.

The clan holds to the old custom that the brother of the deceased gets all the property, including his wife which he is allowed to marry or sell. The brother offered marriage which was rejected and he then used the clan perogative of bringing the wife to the auction place.

The German Minister refuses to disclose the purchase price but it is said to be the highest ever paid in the Cabul slave market.

A Checkerboard of War Lords

How China has been checkerboarded into territorial strongholds by contending war lords is depicted in the map above. The key identifies the military leaders who dominate the various sections of the country. The two provinces shown in white are subject only to their own local governors.

They were convicted in police court yesterday of the authorship of the greatest chain of robberies ever committed by juveniles in Hamilton. They stole autos from six of Hamilton's leading citizens; they broke into and stole from the house of the county judge, and when business was bad they stole grips from hotels. They went to Burwash, taking lease of their friends to-day with the attitude of patriots going to the firing squad for right.

PREMIER POINCARE PROMISES MAINTAIN STABILITY OF FRANC BUSINESS CIRCLES ARE EASIER

Says He Will Do "Everything" To Keep Currency 25 To Dollar.

GENERAL REVIEW.

Shows Treasury Strong Enough To Meet Any Attack.

PARIS, Jan. 27—The maintenance of the franc near 25½ to the dollar for a considerable time to come was announced yesterday by Premier Poincare before the Finance Commission of the Chamber as the firm intention of the Government.

"We will do everything within our power," he said, "to maintain the franc stable at between 122 and 123 to the pound sterling."

At the same time he held out strong hope that this intention would be easily realizable. He made no promise, however, as to what will be done finally. That, he said, depends on factors and arrangements at present indefinite and incomplete, such as, for instance, though no specific mention was made of it, the ratification of the debt accords.

Meanwhile, the business community of France, which has been greatly affected by the past fluctuations in the value of the franc, has confidence that there will be neither any too sudden ascent or descent. The Bank of France is provided with sufficient foreign funds to meet all ordinary speculative attacks and the situation has been improved by the dispatch of a gold reserve to the United States.

This announcement by the Premier has considerably cleared the political air around the Palais Bourbon and in financial and business circles, where his long hesitation between stabilization and continued revalorization has recently caused considerable disquiet.

Now French manufacturers and business men can adapt prices and conditions to the stable value of their money, which is fixed at a rate which the Premier believes will enable them to hold their own in the world markets.

Reviews Stewardship

The Premier's statement came to an end with a long account of his stewardship of the Treasury since last July, when the franc was worth just half what it is today. Point by point, with that historical precision which always characterizes his statements, he accounted for all he had done from the time when at the end of last July he saved a desperate situation by obtaining from the banks of the country an advance of 930,000,000 francs.

During August and September the sale of Treasury defence bond, over and above the amount repaid to the bond holders, the influx of taxation and the improvement in the value of the franc enabled the Government to meet all its budgetary and foreign debt obligations and to repay the advances to the banks.

By September 30 the margin at the disposal of the Treasury at the Bank of France, which had practically disappeared in July, amounted to 1,850,000 francs.

The part played by the sinking fund in relieving the Treasury situation the Premier showed had been very remarkable. Sooner than was expected measures were taken to suppress the further issue of three-month bonds, as the legal limit had been reached. And the same time the interest rate was reduced. Three billions of national defence bonds were consolidated in securities guaranteed by the National Tobacco Office, repayable in forty years, while the creation of two-year defence bonds effected a further step in consolidation.

Treasury Position Strong.

Despite the allocation of important revenues such as those from the tobacco monopoly to the sinking fund, the Treasury was able easily to meet all its obligations and create important reserves by the purchase of foreign moneys on the market. Not only was the Treasury able to constitute a reserve larger than the Morgan fund, but, the Premier said, it now possesses foreign moneys which will enable it to meet all the foreign debt service during 1927.

The only bond issue which the Treasury has made is the new series of ten-year Treasury bonds with which it will met the maturity of 1,395,000,000 francs of Credit Nationale bonds due on February 1. Between September and the end of the year foreign loans on railways, which did not ingrease the indebtedness of the State, amounted to 250,000,000 gold francs. This does not take account of the latest loans recently announced.

These measures, the Premier said, had secured for the Treasury an easy situation and that enabled it at the end of the year to reduce the legal limit of the advances from the Bank of France to the State to 36,500,000,000 francs.

Brother Shoots Youth Walking In His Sleep

IOLA, Kansas, Jan. 26 (United News).—Raymond Maloney, 15, walked in his sleep. Raymond's older brother, Lee, seeing a shadowy form moving in the hall of the Maloney home, called out "Halt." Simultaneously a policeman across the street shot at a dog. The shadowy form continued to move. Convinced that the form was that of a robber, Lee opened fire.

It all came out later at the police station, where Lee, 20, was held for a few hours in connection with the slaying of his sleep walking brother.

MANY CITIZENS OF CANADA HELD IN U. S. JAILS

American Capital Tightens Migration Law Enforcement Along Border.

WARRANTS ISSUED.

Some Had Failed To Report Back to the Frontier.

WINNIPEG, Jan. 27.—Scores of Winnipeg citizens are languishing in jails of North Dakota and Minnesota and dozens of warrants have been issued by the United States immigration service for other citizens who stayed south of the boundary instead of reporting at the border when their time limit expired. A. A. Burmaster, chief inspector of the Winnipeg branch of U. S. immigrations service, stated yesterday.

Canadians are allowed to cross the line without quota, Mr. Burmaster said, but before they enter the United States, they must state whether they wish to make a visit or stay permanently. If on completion of their visit, they desire to stay, they must report back at the border. This is the procedure for temporary visitors.

Tightening Up.

The United States immigration service is tightening on delinquent immigrants and border runners, and those caught will be made to suffer the penalty of law, Mr. Burmaster said.

Chicago headquarters alone, he said, had issued 300 warrants within the last month, but none had been served yet.

MANY DESIRE CAROL'S RETURN

Most Rumanian Political Parties Favor Reinstatement To Rights.

PAPERS FAVORABLE.

BUCHAREST, Jan. 27.—(Canadian Press).—More and more public opinion is supporting the proposal to reinstate Prince Carol to the position he had before renouncing his rights to the Rumanian throne a year ago. The majority of the political parties, with the single exception of the die hard Liberals, are openly advocating the return of Carol and the newspapers are distinctly favorable to the suggestions.

Lyrics Of Life

(By Douglas Malloch.)

YOUR CHICKENS

You turn your chickens loose to run,
To get the air and get the sun,
But somewhere near the old back stoop,
The alley and the chicken-coop,
So, when the day is over, then
Your chickens will come home again.

That's how to run the chicken game,
And, brother, dollars are the same:
Don't lock your chicken s up too tight,
Don't hide your dollars from the light,
But let them out awhile to roam—
But somewhere where they'll come back home.

A man might better be content
With four or five or six per cent
Than try for eight or nine or ten
And never see his flock again.
If you're content with five or six,
They'll all come home, and bring some chicks.

Christmas Comes At Last To Lone St. Kilda Isles

LONDON, Jan. 27 (A.P.).—St. Kilda, a lonely island in the Outer Hebrides, where spasmodic attempts have been made in the past by Canadian immigration organizers to secure settlers, has just received its Christmas mail. It was delivered by the first trawler to touch the island in three months.

Men, women and children swarmed from their cottages to the beach and launched the worn-out lifeboat given to them years ago to serve on such occasions. They scrambled aboard the trawler, begging tobacco and comforts from the crew. They were bitterly disappointed to find the vessel was able to provide only a small quantity of parrafin and some potatoes.

The trawler brought away multitudinous orders for provisions for the islanders, especially for soda with which to make scones. One elderly woman ordered a bottle of whisky.

BUDGET DEFICIT OF 15 MILLIONS

May Be Chief Factor in Weakening Power of Tories.

TAX BURDEN.

LONDON, Jan. 27.— This year's budget will, it is expected, show a deficit of £15,000,000, a fact which is causing the government the greatest alarm.

Already there is a deficit of nearly £115,000,000, but most of this sum will be made up by the end of March. The fact that the burden imposed upon the taxpayers by Winston Churchill, chancellor of the exchequer, is now £21,000,000 more than when Philip Snowden filled the same post in the late Labor government, is being stressed by the opposition as a warning to Churchill that if he attempts to increase taxation the country will unite against him. Altogether it is obvious that this year's budget will be the chief factor in determining how long the present government will survive.

REEVE PUZZLED ABOUT INDIGENT

Wants To Know Who Pays Bill For Man Hurt on Road.

NOW IN HOSPITAL.

When is a person a resident of a municipality, and when is that municipality responsible for him if he is an indigent patient in a hospital?

This was the question asked by the Reeve of Belmont yesterday at the meeting of the county council.

The Reeve told a pathetic story about a man 87 years old who today is lying in one of the local hospitals suffering from a broken hip. This man has spent his whole life wandering over the continent of North America ,and he calls no place his home. The other day while walking through the Township of Belmont he slipped on the road, as a car was passing him, and fell, breaking his hip. The driver of the car, not knowing that anything had happened, drove on, and later on the man was picked up by a traveller along the road. The reeve had this man sent to the hospital, but he does not think that the municipality should be held responsible for half the hospital charges of this indigent patient.

REFORESTRATION DISCUSSED BY COUNTY COUNCIL

E. J. Zavitz, Deputy Minister, Outlines Work of Forestry Department.

FORM COMMITTEE.

Children's Aid and Trent Waterway Delegations Wait Upon Council.

Delegations were the order of the day at the County Council yesterday. They were there from the Children's Aid Society, from the Trent Waterway Association, and E. J. Zavitz, Deputy Minister of Forestry in Ontario, also addressed the Council.

Mr. Zavitz in his address outlined the work of the Forestry Department. It was in 1905 that the first efforts at reforestation were made, and by the time of the war 500,000 trees were being distributed annually to the small land holders. Last year over 5,000,000 trees were given out by the Department.

In the last few years the Department has started reforestation on a larger scale throughout the province and over 40 municipalities have set out lots to be forested, whereby the township buys the land and the Department supplies the small trees.

At present there is a movement on foot, whereby the county will set aside land to be reforested and for this purpose Mr. Zavitz visited the County Council yesterday. The Department desires that the lots will at least be 1,000 acres in extent as they supply a man to look after these lots and any smaller lots could hardly be worked on a financial basis. At present four counties have set aside lots to be reforested. The county is supposed to furnish the land and the Department does the rest. At the end of 30 years the county may take over the wood-lot, paying the Department the initial cost of planting without interest; or, the province may take over the wood-lot, paying the initial cost of the wood-lot to the county, or, both county and Government may become joint owners and share the profits on a 50-50 basis.

In Norfolk county a wood-lot was set out in 1913, and to-day the red pine are from four to six inches in diameter. The idea is to reforest some non-productive, non-tax-paying land somewhere in the southern part of the county near some of the main highways.

The northern part of the county was mentioned to Mr. Zavitz as being very suitable for such a reforesting idea, but the department intends to carry out a skeleton project in the northern part, whereby the best of pine trees will be planted but scattered, and these trees will be left to produce seed, for it is found that in these parts there is a second growth of pine growing. The majority of the members of the county seemed favorable to this plan, and a committee was nominated by the Warden to discuss the matter further with the department. Those on the committee are Reeves Tanner, Hawthorne, Curtis, Brown, and Scott.

The initial cost of this plan is the only cost to the county, and as it is land which is being reclaimed, it should not cost very much. In sixty years the wood-lot would be a very valuable asset to the county claimed Reeve Tanner.

Children's Aid.

John Edgar, F. H. Dobbin and J. L. Hopwood formed the delegation from the Children's Aid Society. Mr. Edgar addressed the Council and asked for a grant of $1,250 to carry on the work of the Society this year. This is a $250 increase over last year, but the Society expects the expenses to be a little heavier this year than last, so they are asking both the County and City Council for more money. There arose some discussion about the bill of over $200 sent in by the Society for the Dwyer children. This was explained by Mr. Edgar. The Dwyer children were only temporary inmates, and they had been sent there by the two Justices of the Peace instead of sending them to jail, for they were to be held as material witnesses on an indictable offence. The mistake arose from Mr. Edgar not making this known to the treasurer so as he could have collected part of this account from the Government. The other two members addressed the Council briefly.

Solicits Aid.

F. D. Kerr, K.C., J. J. Turner, and J. W. Fraser addressed the Council, asking for a grant to the Trent Waterway Association, and also solicited the aid of the Council in asking the Federal Government to complete the Trent Canal.

Highway Question.

The question of the proposed highway through the County of Peterborough to Belleville came up for discussion, and the Council decided to aid the contention of Hastings County, whereby the route should go through Norwood, Havelock and Marmora, joining the Belleville-Bancroft highway two miles east of Marmora.

ADDRESS ON TEETH AT BABIES' CLINIC

Dr. J. J. Craig Gives First of Series of Lectures.

The first of a series of what promises to be exceptionally interesting addresses on "How to Build up Sound Teeth," was given on Tuesday afternoon at an open meeting of the Well Babies' Clinic, in the Canadian Legion hall, when Dr. J. J. Craig commenced the lectures on this subject, which he will give to the members during the coming season. There was a large and attentive audience at the meeting, which was presided over by Dr. J. Birnie, and at its conclusion tea was served by the King's Daughters.

Dr. Craig opened his address by congratulating the Clinic for its work among the infants of the city and said that one of the first duties of the parents was to build up sound teeth in the children. This could be done by the mother taking proper precautions in this regard before the birth of the child, and the speaker emphasized the necessity of proper rest, exercise and fresh air, with the drinking of plenty of milk and right methods of eating, also warning his hearers against the dangers of over-eating and of hasty mastication of food. A thorough examination of the expectant mother's teeth should be made, in order that wrong conditions might be corrected and she should spend considerable time daily in cleaning the teeth.

The next lecture of this series will take up the subject of care of teeth from Birth to Two Years of Age.

OLD MASTERS

A thousand miles from land are we,
Tossing about on the roaring sea,
From billow to bounding billow cast,
Like fleecy snow on the stormy blast.
The sails are scattered abroad like weeds;
The strong masts shake like quivering reeds;
The mighty cables and iron chains,
The hull, which all earthly strength disdains—
They strain and they crack; and hearts like stone
Their natural, hard, proud strength disown.

Up and down!—up and down!
From the base of the wave to the billow's crown,
And amidst the flashing and feathery foam
The stormy petrel finds a home—
A home, if such a place may be
For her who lives on the wide, wide sea,
On the craggy ice, in the frozen air,
And only seeketh her rocky lair
To warn her young, and to teach them to spring
At once o'er the waves on their stormy wing!

O'er the deep!—o'er the deep!
Where the whale and the shark and the swordfish sleep—
Outflying the blast and the driving rain,
The petrel telleth her tale in vain;
For the mariner curseth the warning bird
Which bringeth him news of the storm unheard!
Ah! thus does the prophet of good or ill
Meet hate from the creatures he serveth still;
Yet he ne'er falters—so petrel, spring
Once more o'er the waves on thy stormy wing!

BRITISH HURRY CHECK ADVANCE UPON SHANGHAI

Expect To Dock on Yangtse Near the End of February.

GUARD INTERESTS.

Laborites Adopt Resolution Deploring Flaunted Military Demonstration Against Cantonese.

LONDON, Jan. 27 (Canadian Press).—The race for Shanghai, prize city of the Orient, is on between the British army and navy and the Chinese Nationalists. The Cantonese conquest of the great international settlement at the mouth of the Yangtse, where 40,000 foreigners reside and many foreign refugees from all parts of China are now gathered and where the immense foreign trade interests of China are centered, must be accomplished within six weeks if the Cantonese are to avoid dealing with the British defence force of 20,000 men, who are hurriedly leaving or will soon leave English ports, Malta and India.

It is repeatedly emphasized by the British Foreign Office, however, that there will be no clash between the British and Cantonese unless British lives and property in Shanghai are endangered. The British defence force will make an effort to prevent the Cantonese from entering and occupying the city of Shanghai if strong enough to do so.

The British maintain that the question of the control of the Chekiang Province, right up to the limits of Shanghai's international settlement, is a problem to be settled by the attacking forces of General Chiang Kai Shek, commander of the Cantonese troops, and the defending army of Marshal Sun Chuan Feng, ruler of Chekiang.

Should Shanghai itself, be threatened either by actual fighting or by the rabble of a Chinese army, the British defence force, together with the Shanghai volunteer organization and whatever forces Japan, United States and France have available, would probably be deployed along the 21 mile line, which would completely cut off Shanghai from the interior and render the city unassailable from Chinese attacks or occupation. This 21-mile line has been defended on previous occasions by volunteers and foreign detachments when Chinese civil war threatened the city.

London Interested

While government officials lay stress on neutrality and non-aggressive intentions in the Far East, the man in the street seems mainly interested in Britain's 'new little war," which is being played up in the London newspapers.

The Foreign Office maintains that the emphasis given by the press to the precautionary measures distorts the whole picture of the Chinese problem confronting the country. It is explained that it will take a month to six weeks to move the British troops to Shanghai. The precautionary steps, therefore, must be earlier than by other countries, such as Japan, which is only a few days' steaming from Shanghai, and the United States, which can meet emergencies by the quick despatch of troops from the Philippines.

Lieut.-General Sir Philip Chetwode, Commander-in-Chief at Aldershot, in saying farewell to the troops departing for China yesterday, said:

"There is no state of war in China and won't be if we can prevent it. You are going to protect property we hold by treaty. Keep your temper smilingly."

The British Labor movement last night sent a delegation to Sir Austen Chamberlain, Secretary for Foreign Affairs, after which the Laborites adopted a resolution deploring "the flaunted military demonstration against the Canton Government, as the effect may stir up a spirit of panic and aggression on both sides and make inevitable the very misfortunes it is pretended to prevent.

"This demonstration, moreover,' the resolution adds, "is likely to thwart the policy of negotiation and amicable settlement which the foreign office was preparing to pursue, and tends to set that policy aside for one of threat and defiance."

FOUR CANADIANS RECEIVE MEDALS

John B. Orrock, 20, of 67 Pape street, Toronto, Ont., received a bronze medal for rescuing Gertrude E. Coffee, aged 16, who fell from a dock into deep water at Lakeport, Ont., on July 24, 1921.

Dorothy F. Brown, of Kamloops, B.C., saved Ida E. McNeill, aged 40, from drowning at Canoe, B.C., on Aug. 21, 1925. Mrs. McNeill unexpectedly got into deep water while swimming in Salmon Arm of Shusway Lake and lost self control.

ASK VILLAGE

HILO, Hawaii, Jan. 27.—Kalapana, immortalized by the stage play, "The Bird of Paradise," has been suggested by local civic interests as an appropriate site for a Hawaiian village. Primitive forests, warm springs, the cave of refuge, beautiful cocoanut groves and the ruins of ancient "heiaus" (temples) are some of the attractive features of the section. The establishment of a Hawaiian village at Kalapana is urged s a means of perpetuating the native grass houses and the native arts which are becoming rare.

$65.00 Conscience Money Sent To Railway Office

WINNIPEG, Man., Jan. 26 (Special to The Examiner)—The following letter from Long Beach, California, together with three $20 bills and one $5, was received by the Passenger Department of the Canadian Pacific Railway yesterday.

"Enclosed you will find $65.00 for a fare of a six-year-old boy I took over the Canadian Pacific road without a ticket from Moose Jaw, Canada, to Long Beach, California, three years ago. This includes interest over the coast route.

"I take this time to beg your forgiveness."

Not within the memory of any of the staff has so large an amount of conscience money been received and it is unusual to have the name of the sender attached as was the case with this amount.

FEAR CANTON ATTACK AGAINST FOREIGN REFUGE

Report Nationalist Government Troops Forming in Northern Chakiang Province.

LEADERS UNITE.

Landing of Punjab Troops May Be Match To Light Conflagration.

SHANGHAI, Jan. 27 (Canadian Press).—Apprehension was felt yesterday that this chief commercial city of the Far East and home of many thousands of white foreigners would be attacked in the near future by the Cantonese invading troops.

A new wave of anti-foreign agitation and violence is expected to roll over the Yangtse River basin, from which hundreds of foreigners were ousted in recent weeks, notably in the cities of Hankow and Kiukiang, when their concessions were taken over by Cantonese after mob attacks.

The Cantonese or Nationalist Government troops are reported forming in heavy force in Northern Chekiang province, approximately 100 miles from Shanghai. They intend, it is believed, to attempt to capture Shanghai before the main body of British troops arrive here late in February. The British, 20,000 strong of both the army and the navy, have been ordered to Shanghai from England and elsewhere with ships of war in large number.

Chekiang may be the scene of the next clash in the war between north and south China, for Marshal Sun Chuan Fang has ordered his troops concentrated to repel the advance of the Cantonese from Chekiang into Kiangsu province toward Shanghai.

Marshal Sun, who lost two of his five provinces to the Cantonese horde rolling northward, in his alliance with other northern leaders, plans determined resistence.

Troops Landing.

Troops of the Punjab province of British India, which are expected here to-day as the vanguard of the British forces, may by their presence start the flame of resentment against foreigners, particularly British sweeping over the Central and Southern China which the Cantonese are dominant and where propaganda against foreigners has been spread under Russian direction.

United States warships safeguard foreigners in Shanghai capable of landing 800 men they are the largest foreign naval contingent at present protecting the "Paris of the Orient."

There was more apprehension felt yesterday for safety of foreigners in the interior and other coastal cities than for those in Shanghai, at least for the present. Most of the women and children already have left the Foo Chow district of Fukien province, and the remainder are preparing to withdraw. Anxiety was caused there by the recent attack upon foreign mission property and upon foreigners themselves, many being beaten by fanatical Chinese mobs.

Ten Chinese were executed for the mob violence in Foo Chow after the Cantonese had arrested 200 charged with being implicated in it.

From the interior of Chekiang and Kiangsu provinces evacuation of women and children is planned to Shanghai in view of threats that Cantonese armies are about to overrun those provinces and because of the anti-foreign feeling that has been /engendered.

Small disorders continue in towns up the Yangtse River, but some encouragement was felt when British and American business men returned to their vocations in Hankow.

ASK EXEMPTION OF TAXATION ON ALL CHARITY AID

Request of Leading Canadian Citizens Made To Government.

NATIONAL BENEFIT.

Would Assist Art Galleries and Be in Interests of Education.

OTTAWA, Ont., Jan. 26 (Canadian Press).—Exemption of all contributions to charitable and education institutions from taxation under the Federal Income Tax Act was requested by a deputation of prominent Canadian citizens which waited upon the Government late yesterday afternoon.

Hon. J. A. Robb, Minister of Finance, who, with Hon. J. L. Ralston, Minister of National Defence, received the delegation, stated he would take the matter up with officials of his department and then lay the whole situation before his colleagues. The request would be given consideration, Mr. Robb stated, although he intimated that he saw some difficulty in the administration of the proposals.

Included in the deputation were such prominent men as Sir Arthur Currie, Sir Lomer Gouin, Sir George Foster, J. E. Atkinson, Toronto; R. Y. Easton, Toronto; Hon. Herbert Marler, Montreal; Isaac Pitbaldo, K.C.; Herbert Symington, K.C., Winnipeg; Col. Herbert Molson, Montreal, and many others.

Sir Arthur Currie, President of McGill University, presented a lengthy memorandum in the matter. The deputation, he stated, represented more than four hundred Canadian institutions from coast to coast. Victoria University, Toronto, said Sir Arthur, had recently lost a donation of $20,000 because of the fact that the requested exemptions were not in effect. It was estimated, he said, that 50,000 people in Canada with taxable incomes made annual gifts to these institutions. Sir Arthur urged that the proposal for exemption now presented be granted.

R. Y. Eaton, Toronto, declared the granting of exemptions would assist art galleries and be in the interests of education.

J. E. Atkinson referred to the United States income tax act. The provisions in effect in the United States did not exempt from income taxation donations from corporations to charitable and educational institutions. There should be no such discrimination in Canada. The exemptions requested would be a national benefit.

Hon. Herbert Marler, Montreal, declared that the exemption from taxation of donations of this nature would make it easier for private individuals to support many institutions through Canada deserving of support.

Sir Lomer Gouin, representing the University of Montreal, supported the appeal. The University of Montreal wanted to construct a new building; and all such institutions should be assisted in their efforts by the granting of exemptions on donations.

Sir George Foster, Ottawa, joined in the request. Exemptions on all donations, whether from private individuals or corporations, should be granted, he declared.

WINDSOR VOTE MAY BE UPSET

Judge's Statement Taken To Show Possibility of Invalidation.

LAWYERS DIFFER.

WINDSOR, Ont., Jan. 27.—(Canadian Press).—Possibility of the Windsor municipal elections of December 6, 1926, being declared invalid was indicated in a statement of Judge Duncan Ross, presiding at the hearing of an application to upset the election.

The judge's statement came when counsel were engaged in argument as to whether or not Wilfrid Roach, counsel for the appelants, could ask E. A. Gigniac, a witness, if he had voted for John W. McConnell.

It is the purpose of Mr. Roach to show that many of the 116 votes cast for McConnell in Ward One, Sub Division 10, were secured through illegal methods. Judge Ross stated that if Mr. Roach could produce thirty or more witnesses to testify that they did not vote for McConnell at that particular sub division, it would tend to show that there was a conspiracy on foot at that particular poll to have McConnell elected by illegal means.

ANNUAL MEETING OF NORWOOD FAIR

East Peterborough Society Reaching Healthy Financial Position.

NORWOOD, Jan. 27.—The annual meeting of the East Peterboro Agricultural Society was held on Wednesday afternoon last in the Council Chamber of the town hall. There was a good attendance of the officers and members.

The secretary-treasurer, John E. Roxburgh, presented the financial statement, which showed the Society was gradually growing into a good position financially, having paid off all its indebtedness except $115.00. This balance would have been cleared off this past year had not $186.00 worth of new poultry coops been purchased. These, however, were a necessity to take care of this growing exhibit, and made an added asset to the Society's prosperity.

Messrs. Gilbert Elmhirst and John E. Roxburgh were appointed delegates to the convention of the Ontario Association of Fairs and Exhibitions.

A motion was passed extending the deep sympathy of the Society to David Barrie and family in their recent bereavement. Mr. Barrie has been an enthusiastic supporter of the Society for many years.

The officers were re-elected with one exception, James Hawthorne of Dummer was elected as a new director in place of Richard Graham, who is attending college at Guelph. Two new honorary directors were added, namely, Dr. A. T. Embury, M.P. and W. A. Anderson, M.P.P.

WOOLER RANGERS HOLD BOX SOCIAL

Debate Feature of Enjoyable Programme—Wooler News.

WOOLER, Jan. 27.—The Trail Rangers group entertained a large audience to a box social. The programme was very interesting. It included a debate. "Resolved that more education is derived from travelling than the reading of Books." The affirmative was taken by George Rutlan and Neal Nelson, and the negative by Marjorie Murray and Alice McColl. Each one gave such emphatic points that it was difficult for the judges to reach a decision. However, more points were allowed for the negative. Then followed a vocal duett by Frances Terrill and Loretta McColl, and another vocal number by Douglas Steinburg.

The Trail Rangers group entertained the audience for a time in presenting a "Siberian Mock Trial.'

Vocal solo, Jean Steinburg. Another vocal solo, Douglas Steinburg.

This closed the programme, but excitement was still in evidence, when C. F. Wessels auctioned the various fancy boxes for lunch.

Owing to the inclemency of the weather on Wednesday evening, the meeting of the Horticultural Society was postponed.

On Thursday, Mrs. J. J. McColl and Mrs. William Montgomery served lunch at noon to the Ladies' Aid. A large number were present and quilted a quilt, and transacted the business for the day.

VESTRY MEETING ALNWICK CHURCH

Wardens Report Small Balance in Treasury of Church.

ROSENEATH, Jan. 27. — The annual vestry meeting of St. James' Anglican Church was held recently. Mr. Edward Weir kindly loaned his home for the occasion. The Rector, Rev. W. A. Pippen, occupied the chair and addressed the meeting.

Mr. W. R. Coyle was appointed vestry clerk.

The incumbent gave a short address on the work of the past year and suggested that the wardens call a meeting of the members to discuss improvements, in and around the church premises.

The wardens' report showed the finantes of the church to be most satisfactory, with a balance to be carried forward.

The auditors' report of the Women's Auxiliary was presented, and showed considerable activity in their work with a nice balance on hand.

The organist, the wardens, W. A. Society, and sidesmen deserve credit for their faithful service throughout the year.

Moved by John Webb, seconded by Thomas McCracken, that John T. Drope be people's warden for 1927. Carried.

Rev. W. A. Pippen appointed Mr. Herbert McCrocken as incumbent's warden.

Moved by John Brickman, seconded by Gordon Parker, that the same auditors, James L. Timlin and W. R. Coyle, be re-appointed. Carried.

Moved by John T. Drope, seconded by John Brickman, that James Webb be delegate to Diocesan Synod. Carried.

It was decided that the Sunday services be held at 9 a.m., after the 1st of May next, during the summer months.

Mr. John Brickman was appointed caretaker of the cemetery.

The wardens informed the vestry that the late Mrs. Eliza McGivern donated $25 to St. James' Church, Alnwick, the same to be deposited in the bank, Roseneath, the interest of which is to be used in perpetuity for decoration of the family plot.

After the business transactions, the men enjoyed a social chat in the drawing room, while the ladies of the congregation prepared the tables, after which a delicious and wholesome supper was served with oysters in abundance, pies and many other good things, including a beautiful and huge birthday cake, made and decorated by the ladies of the congregation. It being the third annual vestry meeting held at Mr. Weir's home, there were three lighted candles burning on the cake, and a fourth candle to represent good luck and prosperity. About sixty guests were present. Rev. Pippen led in prayer and gave a toast to the honored and highly respected gentleman of the congregation, Mr. Edward Weir. The gathering held without any attempt at display or ostentation gave evidence the esteem in which Mr. Weir was held by all present, and all joined in singing "For He's a Jolly Good Fellow." Not only was it the annual meeting anniversary, but also a re-union to Mr. Weir as his three sons werep resent. Bert, who lives with his father; Willis from Western Canada, and George from Northern Ontario. The latter arrived home a few days previous to the occasion.

Mr. Weir was greatly taken by surprise on entering the dining room at seeing the beautiful decorated and well filled tables and in a few well chosen words thanked his many friends and expressed his appreciation for the many courtesies and kindnesses extended to him, and said his home would be always open to his friends and for them to come again at any time and feel themselves welcome.

"The best that has been need not necessarily be the best that can be," he said. "Let us enter this year's work with our faces toward the Light, and all the shadows will fall behind us. Only in this way can we have true and cheerful fellowship one with another."

The gathering thanked Mr. Weir for his hospitality, and dispersed.

Mr. Charles Grigg is confined to his bed, and under the doctor's care.

Mr. Frank Cowle has returned home after spending his vacation with friends in Toronto.

Mr. William Renwick of Waskada, Manitoba, is visiting among his old time schoolmates, and renewing old acquaintances after an absence of forty years.

Nujol acts like Nature, said thousands of doctors

RECENTLY we made a country-wide investigation among leading doctors to learn why they advised the Nujol type of treatment for their constipation patients.

80.7% were prescribing it. A large proportion said it was "The more natural method of treatment." As one doctor put it, "Laxatives are irritating. Their repeated use brings on the laxative habit. Nujol trains the bowels to act naturally but thoroughly."

Doctors Advise Nujol

Nine doctors out of every ten told us they were advising the Nujol type of treatment for their patients in place of laxatives—and for these reasons: 1. Nujol is not habit-forming; 2. A more natural method; 3. A lubricant is better than a laxative; 4. Does not gripe; 5. Is not irritating; and 6. Nujol gives lasting relief.

Unlike Laxatives

Laxatives and cathartics act by irritating the intestinal tract. They cause the bowels to frantically expel the contents of the intestines and thus rid the system of the drugs that pills and potions contain.

Nujol acts entirely differently. It contains no drugs, no medicine. Its action is mechanical. It merely softens the dried waste matter in the intestines and lubricates the passage so that the muscles of the bowels can expel the waste matter regularly, naturally and thoroughly.

Nature-given Remedy

Nujol appeals to the medical man because it is a simple, scientific and safe remedy for constipation, no matter how severe the case may be. It is gentle in its action and pleasant to take. Children love it!

Get a bottle of Nujol from your druggist today. Doctors advise it for constipation whether chronic or temporary. Avoid substitutes.

BATH IS RITUAL.

TOKIO, Jan. 27.—Bathing in Japan is a ritual—a ceremony that Nipponese observe religiously. Scalding water is the custom of the country. There first must be a generous soaping on a bamboo mat. After te plunge the servant usually hands you a striped kimona and large straw hat to run down to the river for a cool dip. After the bath, food is the order of the day.

ALL SAINTS' SEMI-JUBILEE.

The fact that the congregation of All Saints' Church is this month celebrating its semi-jubilee with a special service tomorrow night as one of the outstanding features, will once more impress upon old-time residents that time is fleeting.

To those who have lived for some time in Peterboro it seems scarcely possible that a quarter of a century has elapsed since All Saints' Church was made a separate parish; it does not seem that it was twenty-five years ago this month since the church was launched out on its own account.

The history of All Saints' is a story of progress and advancement, with the building of a new church to replace the original structure as one of the major events of the quarter century.

The service of thanks-giving, which is to be held tomorrow night, will doubtless be heartily entered into by a congregation able to look back over the record of the past twenty-five years and find it good.

BRINGING THEM TOGETHER.

The annual banquet of the Peterboro Industrial Exhibition tonight promises to live up to the best traditions of this event, the Exhibition Board gatherings being noted for their bright programmes and the spirit of good fellowship which always prevails.

The Directors have been particularly fortunate in securing as the principal speaker for this year's banquet the Provincial Minister of Agriculture, Hon. John S. Martin, always a pleasing speaker, with a message that is worth while remembering.

Hon. Mr. Martin has the happy faculty of being able to discuss with equal authority and ease urban problems or farm questions, and he is at home whether speaking to a rural audience, a city gathering or to a mixture of both.

One of the best things to the credit of the Peterboro Industrial Exhibition that will be noticeable in the attendance tonight is that it has brought farmers and city residents together to work in a common cause, and through their association on behalf of a bigger and better Exhibition to learn a good deal about the other fellow's problems and obtain a better understanding of his viewpoint.

THE NEW WARDEN.

Upon Reeve J. A. Middleton of Smith, has fallen the honour and responsibility of presiding over the deliberations of the County Council during the present year.

His selection entitles the county, the township he represents and Reeve Middleton himself to congratulations, all the more hearty because he was the unanimous choice of the county legislators, who for the first time since 1920 have selected a Smith representative as Warden.

The new Warden has given excellent service on the county body.

He has been a member of the County Council for nine years, and his opinion in the many matters that have engaged the attention of the Council during that time has always commanded the respect of his colleagues, who have shown their confidence in him by electing him to the highest office in the gift of the Council.

Warden Middleton's work last year as Chairman of the Finance Committee indicates that he should prove a worthy head for the county organization.

THIS IS MUCH TOO MUCH.

Will someone please page Frank Stinson?

The Secretary of the local Chamber of Commerce is at present in New York, speaking at meetings and over the radio on the subject of what Peterboro and district has to offer the tourist.

It looks as if such propaganda is very badly needed.

A copy of the magazine section of The New York Evening Graphic with a couple of columns devoted to proving that Lionel Conacher is the greatest all-round athlete in the world shows just why.

The writer, one Archie MacMillan, declares that Conacher was born "in the obscure little town of Peterboro on the outskirts of Toronto, Canada."

What do you think of that?

It's bad enough to call Peterboro an "obscure little town," but when they put us down as suburban Torontonians it's time for Mayor Halloway to call a protest meeting.

Here we are with the world's biggest liftlock, the largest single concrete span on this terrestide footstool, the biggest cereal mill in the British Empire, the headquarters of canoe building and the gateway to some of the finest scenic country on the continent, and some hack writer tries to make us out as a suburb of Toronto.

It is to be hoped Mr. MacMillan had his earphones on when the Secretary of the Chamber of Commerce was on the air yesterday.

FARM HOURS.

Apparently there is a section of the urban community that will never understand that in agriculture it is impossible to apply labor rules and regulations that work well in other employment, particularly the trades. The farmer's eight-hour day for a good portion of the year, particularly if he is engaged in dairying, means more like eight hours before dinner and another eight hours following the mid-day meal. Such is the nature of his employment and such are the returns therefrom that he may not materially reduce his daylight-to-dark working period without danger of losing whatever profit there may be for him in the business. The Toronto Globe suggests that the farmer may shorten his labor hours much by the use of modern agricultural machinery, and adds that there are farmers who get along without slaving. They even find "both time and means for as much of a holiday as the average industrial employer gets," says the Toronto paper. No doubt about it, there are many of us on the farm who do not plan as well as we might, who do not systematize our operations and who do not organize as efficiently as is possible. There is a tremendous amount of wasted or lost time in the average daily farming operations, due to preventable causes quite within the average farmer's control. The saving of this lost time would make an appreciable difference in the hours of farm labor, spread over the year, but it would not bring the average labor day on the farm down to the eight-hour basis. It is doubtful if that will ever happen on the farm, no matter how well conducted or how well machined. Nor is it necessary that it should. With his life in the open air the farmer does not feel the strain of long hours as would an indoor factory hand. He may be physically weary at the end of his day, but it is a healthy tiredness. However, if planning, systematizing and organization will tend to shorten farm labor hours, we should all be strong for all three of them. None of us works the long hours just because we like work so well.—Alberta Farmer.

ANNIVERSARY THOUGHTS.

In this anniversary year of confederated Canada we are looking back sixty years. Let us look forward. We must, of course, substitute speculation for facts, and be mindful of the saying that prophesying is the most gratuitous of human errors, but if we bear this in mind the forward look may be interesting. In 1871, when the first census after Confederation was taken, the population of Canada was nearly 3,690,000. The census of 1921 showed a population of less than nine millions, and the estimate for 1925 was 9,364,200. If this rate of increase should be maintained the population sixty years hence would be rather less than twenty-five millions. It is likely that the rate of increase will be greater in the future than in the past. Migration to the United States and Canada is likely to decline as the density of population in the latter country increases; and Canada will more and more attract immigration not only from the old world but from the United States. Still, even twenty-five millions would make a very respectable figure, enabling us to develop our resources more rapidly, and to bear the burden of taxation more easily.

Apparently no estimate of the value of field crops was taken until 1901, when it was under $200,000,000. In 1925 it was considerably more than a billion dollars. The same rate of increase would give us more than five billion dollars in twenty-five years and the figures for sixty years would make one dizzy. But a maintenance of the rate shown during the period of enormous expansion of the production of the prairies can hardly be expected. The value of Canadian dairy products grew from 15 millions in 1871 to 253 millions in 1925. Here again it would perhaps be rash to predict a proportionate increase in the next sixty years. Our external trade was less than 142 million dollars in 1871. It is more than two billions today. One hardly dares to anticipate the maintenance of a rate of increase which would give us trade something like thirty billion dollars in sixty years. Products of factories were valued at less than $222,000,000 in 1871, and at $2,781,000,000 in 1923. These figures are for gross production, the net value apparently not having been shown in the earlier years. In regard to this again the increase has been so enormous that one is warned to moderate his predictions as to the future. Progress in material development in the past has far outpaced increase in population. Perhaps in future years there will be a closer relation between the two.

When every allowance is made for the fallibility of prophecy, it is still plain that the prospects of progress are bright, and calculated to stir the imagination of Canadians. The younger men and women and children are likely to see wonderful things and to enjoy opportunities such as will be found in few other countries. We have spoken so far of material progress—growth in what may be called the physical body of the nation. We do not forget that the nation has also a mind and a soul. Canada is on the whole a well-governed country. No doubt there is room for improvement, but the common habit of scolding "politicians," that is largely those who govern the country and make its laws, is unjust as well as foolish. Members of the Dominion Parliament and the Provincial Legislatures are fairly representative of the people, and it is in the power of the people to improve the quality where it is defective. The progress of Canada in self-government, culminating in the report of the Imperial Conference, is an evidence of political ability of a high order. Responsible government in the overseas Dominions is a distinctively Canadian idea. The British Empire, so far as these Dominions are concerned, rests upon a foundation built in Canada. Confederation also was a Canadian idea and a Canadian achievement. Our people are law-abiding, and the administration of justice in Canada is viewed with envy by our neighbors to the south. The relations between those of French and those of British descent, and between Protestants and Catholics, are an evidence of good sense and fairness.

The standard of living on the whole is high, as to food, clothing and shelter. As to this, however, we ought not to be too easily satisfied. The grand test of civilization is the quality of the home. The dwelling should be reasonably spacious and adequate for health, comfort, decency and a measure of privacy. There is liberal provision for education, and here, too, we ought to be satisfied with nothing less than the largest possible opportunity for the development of every human faculty. Material progress is beneficial only so far as it promotes the full growth of the individual in body, mind and spirit. Nothing that we can think of in our celebration of the sixtieth anniversary of Confederation is so important as this intellectual and spiritual progress.—London Advertiser.

EDITORIAL NOTES AND COMMENT.

As yet no suitable punishment has been devised for the individual who persists in asking, "Is this cold enough for you?"

Yesterday was what White River folks would describe as a balmy January day.

Eighteen thousand New Yorkers paid nearly $30,000 to see sixteen Canadian hockey players in action the other night. George Young and professional hockey are combining to keep Canada on the sport map.

"Fair and decidedly cold," said the weather forecast for yesterday. It was conservative, to say the least.

The thermometer must have decided to do down in sympathy with the prices.

MONTREAL GRAIN AND PRODUCE

MONTREAL, Que., Jan. 27 (Canadian Press)—The export trade in Canadian grain on the Montreal market yesterday was quiet owing to the fact that foreign bids were below local exporters' views. A fair amount of business was done with New York exporters in ocean grain room to the continent from Saint John, N.B., for February loading at seventeen cents per hundred pounds, and there continues to be a good enquiry from the same source for room for May shipment from the port of Montreal at 16 1-2c per hundred pounds with steamship agents asking seventeen cents per hundred pounds. The demand for room to the United Kingdom in all positions was quiet and rates ruled steady.

The domestic trade in the local cash grain market was quiet but prices were steady.

Owing to the further strength in the Winnipeg cash wheat situation, the local market for spring wheat grades of flour was again strong and prices scored a further advance of ten cents per barrel. This makes a net gain for the month to date of thirty cents per barrel. The export and local trade was moderately active.

Prices for all grades of winter wheat flour were well maintained under a quiet demand.

The demand for all lines of millfeed continued good and the undertone was firm. The trade in standard grades of rolled oats was quiet and prices were steady.

A feature of the egg trade was the weaker feeling that developed and prices for fresh and storage grades were reduced two cents per dozen. This was attributed to the large receipts and the small demand. The receipts were 2,226 cases.

The undertone to the potato market was steady with a fair trade passing. Sales of car lots of Prince Edward Island Green Mountains were made at $1.80 per bag of ninety pounds, and Quebec white stock at $1.40 per bag of ninety pounds in bulk, ex-track.

The demand for butter was of a limited character but prices were unchanged. The receipts were 47 packages.

Extreme dullness marked the cheese trade, there being practically no demand from local and foreign buyers. Prices were unchanged. The receipts were 105 boxes.

CHICAGO GRAIN

CHICAGO, Jan. 27 (Canadian Press)—Fresh strength developed in the wheat market yesterday toward the last. Upturns were ascribed to active buying for previous speculative sellers, especially clients of Eastern houses. Better European call for Canadian wheat was reported. Closing quotations on wheat were unsettled, 1-4 to 7-8 net higher, corn 5-8 to one cent up. Oats at 1-8 to 3-8 advance and provisions varying from 2 decline to 10 cents gain.

Export sales of corn had a bullish effect on the corn market. Besides there were requests here from England for other offers to deliver corn in Liverpool at 96c per bushel off, a good premium above the cost of corn from Argentina; oats followed corn.

THE RISE OF THE SMOCK

By Dr. Frank Crane.

The characteristic dress of the artist, the painters and sculpture men, has always been the smock, that is a loose, cotton garment which is worn over everything.

Now out of the artist's studio the smock has come into every other department of life, and its increased use recently has been significant.

The employment of the smock solves a great many problems.

The smock is not necessarily drab and dull, but may be colored in any way, and give full employment to one's artistic sense.

It may be made very attractive.

It is useful in the school room. The question of uniforms for school children is one that has been often urgently presented. The smock solves this question. Uniforms could be kept in the school room and donned by the children when they appear. It would thus keep all their other clothes clean, at the same time giving them a pleasing personal appearance.

The smock is better than the apron in the kitchen as it covers all the clothes and is easily taken on and off, and the housewife may quickly throw it over her other clothes, preserve them from dirt, and be ready at any time by doffing the smock to make a presentable appearance to company.

In offices the smock has made great incursions.

The Milwaukee Trade School for girls uses smocks in sewing classes.

The students of Downer College have adopted the model for classroom wear.

In the junior continuation schools of Dayton, Ohio, they are used very largely.

Girls working in department stores and hotels, manicurists and hairdressers find them convenient.

The use of the smock has not been confined to women. Men are making use of the garment more and more.

Of course it always held sway in the artist's atelier, but it is now in use in chemical laboratories, factories, offices, newspaper composing rooms and telegraph rooms.

Its utility should not be over-emphasized, for it may be made smart. Its attractiveness offers unlimited possibilities.

The smock combines ease and comfort with economy, serviceability and style.

In one office the boss's wife used it and recommended it, and it became universally adopted by the help.

On account of its artistic associations it comes well recommended and nobody should be ashamed to wear it.

Mr. C. W. Staffler in "Commerce and Finance," gives many instances of its modern usage.

COMMENTS ON "BASEBALL" ENGLISH

"Whether or not the lively ball is being used in the big leagues this season, one element of artificial liveliness has practically disappeared from the national game, and the result is highly satisfactory," said the New York Times in an editorial.

"There has been a tremendous deflation in the literary style of baseball writers in the past year or two. We no longer read of a batter labasting the spheroid over the outermost barrier; he hits one over the fence. Baseball stories, in other words, are now written in a language intelligible to millions of people who never had time to learn the intricate, unstable and obscure dialect prevalent a few years ago.

"The advantage to the writers is as great as it would be, say, to a writer whose mother tongue is Gaelic to learn and write English. They reach more readers. On the whole, the new style, though it involves something very much like straight, matter-of-fact reporting of the actual plays, is a good deal more interesting than the old as well as more intelligible."

A Thought For To-day

ON BEING HONEST

"I'm honest and I just have to speak my mind," proudly said a girl to me recently, and the tone of finality in her voice seemed to permit of no argument.

Once I had this same opinion and expressed myself with equal personal satisfaction and courage. Now I am older grown and have learned that honesty of thought does not suffer by silence.

The years teach us that it is better to be tactful than talkative—that discretion is not deception.

We may be honest, but ignorant—ignorant of both sides of a question, and when you speak too quickly and express an opinion with too strenuous a tone of conviction, you may never have more than one-sided information.

Voluble speech is neither clever nor profitable. It is better to do a "heavy thinking part" than to talk out of order and without good reason.

The brutally frank are usually quite pleased with themselves, but they are seldom kind or generous. Be they ever so honest, they are usually more interested in broadcasting their own opinions than they are in making them of benefit to anyone or anything.

Honesty of thought is essential to personal well being. We gain rather than lose and are more helpful by kindly consideration and tactfulness.

HEALTH DIET ADVICE

By Dr. Frank McCoy

"The Fast Way to Health"

QUESTIONS IN REGARD TO HEALTH & DIET WILL BE ANSWERED IF ALL COST YOU CAN BE ADDRESSED IN CARE OF THIS PAPER

© 1927 DR. COY HEALTH SERVICE, LOS ANGELES, CAL.

The following "general interest" questions have been gleaned from letters received by Dr. McCoy during the week of December 27th, and each carries a personally dictated answer.

QUESTION: Mary S. writes—I am past thirty. Have catarrh of the stomach, bladder, intestines and also have neuritis. Also have a catarrhal sore throat which is covered with small sores or patches. Please give me a list of vegetables and fruits with the least uric acid in them.

ANSWER: The most of your troubles can be traced to an excess of carbohydrates (sugars and starches) in your diet. Non-starchy and salad vegetables as well as the acid fruits contain the least uric acid. The only foods that contain uric acid to excess are the proteids, such as meat, etc. If you will follow my column in this paper you will gain very valuable information regarding the proper combination of food.

QUESTION: Mrs. M. F. B. writes: Am daily reading your health notes, and if in city should try to consult you. Problem as follows: Have had hydrochloric acid for years. Eat no meat. Use lamb broth, chicken, fish, plenty of butter and cream. Only spinach, green peas and beans, also beets for vegetables. Have Asthma also. What can you suggest to help me?

ANSWER: An extended fruit fast, using oranges, lemons or grapefruit would undoubtedly prove very beneficial in your case. By fasting, natural forces in the body will correct the deficiency in digestive juices and intensive elimination over a long enough period of time will clear out all congestion. Try taking one-half gassful orange juice (water as desired) every two hours; also two warm shower or sponge baths and two warm water enemas daily, while fasting.

QUESTION: Mrs. H. N. J. writes: I read your articles regularly in this paper and have tried to follow your advice in many ways. Am very much distressed about the condition of my gums. Have Pyorrhea in eight teeth and much bad pus comes from the gums. I have a bad case of stomach trouble and am sure my teeth are the cause of it. Please tell me what to do.

ANSWER: Would advise that you consult a pyorrhea specialist immediately, because from description given of your teeth and mouth, that is the first and main step to take. This condition of your teeth, undoubtedly, comes from a toxic condition of your entire system. Watch your food combinations. If you will continue to follow my articles in this column, digest and live up to their teachings, you will be greatly helped.

QUESTION: Cora W. writes: Will you please print the correct diet for kidney patients. Also give a few samples of balanced meals for a day. I thank you for your helpful answers to my recent questions.

ANSWER: In kidney trouble, it is always best to fast until the abnormal condition of the urine disappears, then follow up with a diet that will continue to flush the kidneys, such as milk, and which if, after a certain period of time, the urine remains free of impurities, should be followed by a starchless diet such as: one or two coddled eggs, three or four slices Melba Toast, stewed prunes, figs, raisins or apples (cooked without sugar), for breakfast. Acid fruit luncheon and a small proteid dinner, for example: roast beef, chicken or mutton, cooked spinach, summer squash, green string beans (choice of one), a salad vegetable such as celery, lettuce, etc., and a dessert (if desired) of any of the stewed fried fruits used for breakfast, or jello, several times a week. An article on different menus will appear in this column. Watch for it.

Don't Tell the Wife

BY WILLIAM B. COURTNEY

SYNOPSIS

Ranny Forbes, star polo player, and his beautiful wife, Joan, are temperamental mismates. Joan wants a divorce. Ranny hesitates, loving her, although secretly knowing she loves Abner Gratman. They are all guests on a week-end cruise on the yacht of Stivner, a billionaire lumber king, whom Ranny cultivates for business reasons. Clare, a widow, vamps Ranny. Stivner, loving Clare, is jealous of Ranny. Ranny, enlisting Stivner's aid, springs a trap to get proof that Joan is unfaithful, but instead of catching Abner it reveals Clare in Ranny's room. Stivner and Ranny nearly come to blows. Dismissing the crowd, the men demand an explanation from Clare.

CHAPTER XI.—Continued.

Jealousy, however, offers scant foothold to distracting sand thrown by the object of one's love. Stivner shook the misleading mist from his eyes, and plunged indignantly to the core once more:

"Granted your attire was excusable under some circumstances, what possessed you to enter this man's room that way?"

"Oh, he's not overmarried!" Clare lisped cynically, broadly making her implication clear for the benefit of Joan, who at this moment sailed out of her erstwhile cabin, followed by the stewardess with the luggage.

Joan's eyes were red-rimmed—the wet wake of a spent emotional storm. But her hauteur was still unmelted, still Alpine. She disdained to take notice either of Clare's words or of Clare, or, in fact, of anyone in the room, as she crossed it swiftly and exited through the door which Captain Marty held open for her.

"Joan!" cried Ranny, as miserable as rageful, starting involuntarily after her. But she passed on and out of sight, unheeding; and then his rage predominated again, and he turend upon Clare savagely:

"You rattlebrained little troublemaker, for God's sake wipe that insipid grin off your face and explain why you ever did such a reckless thing as to come into my room—half dressed like this—"

Clare burst into quick tears. "Don't talk to me like that, Ranny, please. Am I so bad?"

She looked from one to another, hoping they would say yes.

She got no encouragement. Nothing but an impatient verbal prod from Stivner, which made her hurry on to sob:

"Oh, dear, I can't see for the life of me what all this fuss is about. I just came here to remind Ranny that he promised to write in my autograph book. See!"—she produced the book from a pocket of her loose fitting silken garment.

Stivner's face cleared. "That was the only motive?" he pressed.

"You rattlebrained little troublemaker."

"Why, yes!" The big, baby eyes were innocence personified. "What else did you—COULD you—think? No one answered when I knocked, but the door was open, just a crack, so I stepped in. Then, all of a sudden things began to happen so quickly that I grew bewildered. I heard Mrs. Forbes' voice on the sundeck. She seemed excited. She was coming in. I heard someone in the corridor, too. I know it was foolish of me, but I didn't want HER to catch me, and I didn't know who was coming in the other door, so I dodged into the handiest place. Then"—she shuddered at the recollection, and made a quaintly wry face—"that awful, plagued bell began to ring when I closed the closet door. Oh, dear! I hope—I hope—you're not terribly angry with poor, foolish little me!"

She tiptoed up to Ranny, sniffling. He turned away, with an impatient exclamation.

She tried Stivner. He, loving her, was more plastic clay. But he took her soft little chin into one big hand, and shook the forefinger of the other hand under her nose:

"Not angry, but terribly disappointed—and embarrassed. You'll have to be a mighty good little girl from now on to live this down, with me."

Clare pouted a bit, like any schoolgirl under a scolding, and eventually by way of promising, playfully seized Stivner's warning finger between her pearly teeth and nibbled it. But the sheep's eyes she cast, as she did so, were for Ranny Forbes, who would not notice her.

"Better go to your own room now," advised Stivner, whose word was law to the whole lumbering world, to big business, and to society in general—but not to one willful blonde widow.

"Won't you write in my autograph book, then?" sighed Clare, walking up to Ranny, and brandishing the book provocatively.

"I never write in autograph books!" said Ranny shortly.

Rebuffed, Clare hesitated sullenly. Stivner took her arm and escorted her out of the room, and to her cabin.

In a moment he returned, and when the door was closed strode directly up to Ranny, with outstretched hand, and declared frankly:

"Forbes, I apologize with all my heart for losing my temper as I did. I'm sorry your plans—everything—got so unmercifully shellacked!"

Ranny, with a wan smile, took the proffered hand and shook it in hearty token of peace and friendship. His face immediately reset in hard, weary lines.

He passed a hand across his eyes, and shrugged futilely:

"The best laid plans of mice—and fools"—he quoted bitterly.

Captain Marty, who, after Clare's departure, had gone unostentatiously into Joan's deserted room, emerged now and listened quietly while Ranny ranted on:

"It's all a mystery to me. I'm dead certain that Abner was ripe to be trapped. Why, Clare plainly heard them, this afternoon, making a date to meet on the sundeck. He was to climb down. And I gave Joan free ground by the excuse that I was going to stay late with you fellows in a poker game, and for her not to sit up and wait for me. Why, their coast couldn't have been set clearer for them. Yet—he couldn't have been with her—"

Clay broke into the conversation now, for the first time since the whole amazing complication had developed:

"But they were together, Ranny. Captain Marty and I, when we sneaked to the railing above the sundeck heard two voices—theirs. Then we began to talk loudly, so that they would hear us; the captain 'betting' me, according to plan, that I was too old and stiff to climb over the railing, and I taking him up on it, offering to engage him in a climbing race. When we started over the railing, we plainly heard them scamper in."

Ranny nodded: "And I could have sworn I heard a man's heavy footsteps and voice, when I was making the fuss over opening the corridor door, as we agreed I should, to give him time to dodge into the closet. And yet—he wasn't here, and now there's nothing I can do. They'll be wary hereafter. All hope of catching them is gone. And Joan will have no use for me at all after this, if I know her! I'm doomed for the fate of a deceived husband!"

Captain Marty interrupted quietly: "Don't give up so easily, Mr. Forbes. Things are not as hopeless as you think. Come, I've got something important to show you!"

Surprised, Ranny, Stivner and Clay followed the doughty mariner into Joan's abandoned cabin. While they crowded close to his shoulder, he pointed to something caught on a latch, used to hold open the port-window that looked upon the sun-deck.

It was a fragment of a woolen blazer coat. They recognized it instantly. Abner had worn such a coat after dinner that evening.

"You see," expounded the captain calmly, "the whole affair is quite clear now. Excuse me for a pointing a moral, but if we seafaring men lost our heads and quit reasoning about things to fly at each other's throats as Mr. Stivner and Mr. Forbes did, we'd go down in our first storm. Here's what happened. Gratman was trapped—just as you planned, he'd be, only worse. Mrs. Clemoneau dodged into the closet just before he and Mrs. Forbes ran in. With someone at every door, and that mysterious bell ringing in the closet, he didn't know where to hide. Mrs. Forbes shoved him into her bedroom. We were all too intent on the bell ringing closet to pay any attention to the bedroom. Gratman probably waited until Mr. Varick and I stepped in from the sundeck; then he climbed out this window, shinnied up over the railing, ran to his room and put his dressing gown on over his clothes to make believe he had been sleeping. That would account for his delay; and I noticed a look pass between Mrs. Forbes and him when he did come!"

"I wanted to catch him redhanded," bemoaned Ranny.

"Well," suggested Captain Marty, "demand to see his blazer. If this piece fits—THAT would be evidence enough for ME, if I were Mrs. Forbes' husband, to set him adrift!"

THEATRE

AT THE GRAND.

"BEAU GESTE" INTRIGUING MYSTERY TALE AT THE GRAND OPERA HOUSE FRIDAY AND SATURDAY.

"Beau Geste", an unfathomable, intriguing mystery, a tale of the African desert and a deathless love, will hold forth at the Grand Opera House on Friday and Saturday, and without exaggeration it may truthfully be said that it is a profoundly interesting film production, in its conception, in the conviction of its characters and in the tender sympathy of its love interest.

It is truly the greatest work ever produced by Herbert Brenon and it boasts the finest cast ever assembled for a motion picture. Of a surety "Beau Geste" is a breathless tale of adventure quite outside the commonplace. It is the work of Major P. C. Wren, a writer whose work has attracted nation-wide attention. "Beau Geste" is a novel comparable only to the best. It has been made into a picture by Paramount which ranks among the most costly of all film productions. Herbert Brenon, in transferring Major Wren's great story to the screen, has managed to keep the spirit of the novel intact, and the result, a tremendous motion picture. The story of the three brothers, "Beau", John and Digby Geste, is highly dramatic and moving. The love that binds them together is a wonderful thing, and when the suspicion of theft of a valuable sapphire falls on one of them, each drops out of sight in order to shoulder the blame. They meet again as members of the Foreign Legion of France, and on the burning sands of the Sahara, the sapphire again exercises its baneful effect upon their fortunes, culminating in the final tragin denouement. Ronald Colman plays the title role, as "Beau Geste", he is destined to break a million hearts and set a new high mark for histrionic achievement. Noah Beery is indeed the deviling Lejaune brought to life. Norman Trevor is splendid as the Major. Ralph Forbes and Neil Hamilton, are excellent as the brothers. Alice Joyce, Mary Brian and William Powell together with thousands of others make up the balance of the splendid cast. "Beau Geste" will be seen at the Grand Opera House Friday and Saturday and those who have read Major Wren's thrilling story will not want to miss seeing this tremendously worth-while production which will be presented with the big "Beau Geste" orchestra and special musical score by Dr. Hugo Reisenfeld. Seats for matinee and evening performances will be reserved and are now on sale.

AT THE REGENT

BUCK JONES' LATEST STARRING PICTURE IS "A MAN FOUR SQUARE"

Screen Version of Thrilling William McLeod Raine Story is Booked at Local Theatre

"A Man Four-Square," the latest William Fox production starring Buck Jones, will open a three-day engagement today at the Regent Theatre. This story, which deals with western life, gives the popular Fox star a picture full of suspense and action.

The picture was directed by William R. Neill from the story by William McLeod Raine, one of the foremost writers of western fiction.

"A Man Four-Square" deals with a westerner who goes to Chicago for a whirl at life. But after experiencing synthetic gayety and artificial friends, he realizes that his heart is really in the West where his true friend are. He returns to the West just in time to help a friend who is in trouble and also breaks up a gang of cattle rustlers who are operating in the country. He makes a spectacular rescue of the girl with whom he later falls in love. This picture gives Jones an opportunity to show the West as it really is.

PILES DISAPPEAR

No Cutting or Salves Needed

External treatments seldom banish Piles and for the very good reason that the cause is inside—bad circulation in affected parts, veins are flabby and bowel walls weakened.

To quickly and safely rid yourself of piles you must free the circulation—send fresh, healthy blood to the raw, sensitive membranes. Internal treatment is one safe method. Ointments and other external treatments can't give lasting relief.

J. S. Leonhardt, M.D., a specialist, set at work some years ago to find a real internal remedy for piles. He succeeded. He named his prescription HEM-ROID, and tried it in 1000 cases before he was satisfied. Now HEM-ROID is sold by druggists everywhere under guarantee. It is a harmless tablet, easy to take, and can always be found at McDermid & Jury, who will gladly refund the purchase price to any dissatisfied customer.

EMPLOYMENT BUREAU OFFICIALS HEAR MANY STRANGE REQUESTS

Artificial Fly-Maker Could Not Be Found in Canada.

FEW SKILLED MEN.

Request For "Good Looking Housekeeper" Among Those Received.

Most people have problems or their own, but there is one office in town that is not concerned with its own, but deals essentially with the problems of other people. It is the Ontario Employment Office on Charlotte street.

At this office, especially at this particular time of the year, six days in the week, may be seen men in search of employment.

A strange feature about the employment situation is that there are always jobs to be had but unfortunately these jobs are for skilled men, or are not in the city, and consequently nearly always go begging for someone to fill them.

On the other hand the majority of those who need the service are in the unskilled class for which, even when times are at their best, there are not enough jobs to go around.

The peak of unemployment is usually reached during the month of January, but towards the end of the month enquiries from farmers for help come in to such a great extent that the demand will be considerably in excess of the supply.

A number of men are sent to the lumber camps in the northern districts, but as these camps are on the small side, the number taken care of by these is not as great as in former years.

The larger camps in New Ontario are largely filled up by harvesters who have got as far east as Winnipeg when their funds ran out. These men are usually the type that spe l the winter in the lumber camps and the summer on construction work, going from that to the harvest.

For the fiscal year endin; Oct. 31, 1926, at the loc l office there were 1927 applicants and 1713 placements.

This does not mean, however, that only 200-odd men failed to find work as many of the placements were for labor of the casual type, the same applicants in a number of cases being kept going with a series of spell jobs.

He Made Good.

That the position of supervisor requires a peculiar knowledge of men and their ways is evinced by the following:

One morning, bright and early, a one-armed man walked in and asked to be sent to a lumber camp. He was told in a kindly way that his disability was of the nature that would render it practically impossible to find a job in a camp, even as a helper to that important individ al, the cook. The man became indignant at this and declared: "I can operate a cross-cut saw with anyone." He made such a good plea that he was sent to a camp, and turned up the following spring with the remark that his employers considered him as good as anyone they had. This man has since gone back to the lumber camp for a period of several years.

Another query was from a farmer who wanted nothing more or less than a good looking housekeeper."

Probably the strangest enquiry came from a firm located about 60 miles from Peterboro. It was for artificial fly makers—not the house variety, but for salmon and trout-fishing. Although the query was sent from coast to coast to the many offices maintained by the government they failed to find a man for the job. The job was finally filled by bringing a man from Scotland.

On one occasion the local office supplied men for tower construction work in France, the work requiring men specially skilled in working at great heights.

Applications are received from men over 70 years of age, and in one case from a man who gave his age as being 76. About the only outlet for these men, on whom the mantle of old age has fallen, is the farm. The factories have no use for them, principally on account of their inability to avoid accidents, which are made possible by the high-speed machinery of to-day.

With the closing of each school term a fresh problem presents itself, when boys and girls, fom 16 to 17, who want to leave school find their way down to the office in search of employment. Most of them have no particular desires but nearly all specify that they would like a 'clean' job.

MANY INQUIRIES FROM TOURISTS

Banner Season Expected at Trent River This Summer.

TRENT RIVER NEWS.

TRENT RIVER, Jan. 27.—Never in the history of Trent River has the tourist traffic been greater than the coming summer gives promise of seeing. Each year new guests are booked up at the various resorts but from many letters received by different parties, the coming season promises to excell. The general storekeepers are putting in greater quantities of ice than heretofore, one party being supplied with nine hundred blocks of ice, as many cottagers who previously had their ice houses filled get their supply from either of the general merchants. One party received a letter recently from a party of tourists from the American side, making enquiries about accommodation, fishing, etc. These people are planning their first trip here this coming season. This is only one instance out of many.

A THREE DAYS' COUGH IS YOUR DANGER SIGNAL

Persistent coughs and colds lead to serious trouble. You can stop them now with Creomulsion, an emulsified creosote that is pleasant to take. Creomulsion is a new medical discovery with two-fold action, it soothes and heals the inflamed membranes and inhibits germ growth.

Of all known drugs, creosote is recognized by high medical authorities as one of the greatest healing agencies for persistent coughs and colds and other forms of throat troubles. Creomulsion contains, in addition to creosote other healing elements which soothe and heal the infected membranes and stop the irritation and inflammation, while the creosote goes on to the stomach, is absorbed into the blood, attacks the seat of the trouble and checks the growth of the germs.

Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of persistent coughs and colds, bronchial asthma, bronchitis and other forms of respiratory diseases, and is excellent for building up the system after colds or flu. Money refunded if any cough or cold is not relieved after taking according to directions. Ask your druggist. Creomulsion Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

Accountants- try this Nib

Exclusively Waterman's

A few moments spent with a Waterman's dealer will demonstrate the daily usefulness of this Waterman's Accountants' Special Nib.

This special nib is absolutely rigid and scientifically gauged as to hardness, thickness and durability.

The special "capillary duct" slit provides an ever-ready supply of ink; the pen writes the instant it touches paper, and writes longer, too, for Waterman's has a greater ink capacity than any other fountain pen of the same size.

The perfect regulation of the ink flow and the rigid hardness of the nib, enable the smallest figures to be put down clearly, evenly, accurately, without blotting.

WAS SO STIFF AND SORE HE COULD HARDLY BEND

As good as new next morning after simple home treatment

After tramping around all day with wet feet while out gunning, a Philadelphia sportsman found himself so stiff and lame he could hardly bend. "I went to work but had to come home," he writes. "I applied Sloan's Liniment freely and went to bed. I was as good as new next morning, thanks to the quick and sure action of Sloan's."

Sloan's gives real relief because it doesn't just deaden the pain. It helps the body to throw off the cause of the pain.

Apply a little lightly, without rubbing. Right away the stiffness and pain ease up, as fresh healing blood is sent to the sore spots.

Get a bottle of Sloan's today and have it on hand for the first emergency. All druggists—35 cents.

W. I. MEMBERS BID FRIEND FAREWELL

Mrs. J. W. Fairman Leaving Seymour West For Hastings.

SEYMOUR WEST, Jan. 27.—The Seymour West Woman's Institute gathered on Monday afternoon at the home of Mrs. John W. Fairman to spend a social farewell time ere Mrs. Fairman's departure to her new home in Hastings.

During the afternoon Mrs. Martin McArthur rendered a piano solo, Miss Reta Longmuir sang a solo, and the ladies one and all took part in a miscellaneous contest.

After programme Mrs. Charles Macoun gave the following address to Mrs. Fairman and Mrs. Charles McArthur presented her with a beautiful pair of silver candlestick holders and candles.

"Dear Mrs. Fairman—We, the members of the Seymour West Woman's Institute have met this afternoon, we hope not for the last time and all hope that the short move you are making will not mean the severing of your association with us.

"Since you came among us you have always shown a keen interest in our work and helped to make it a success.

"We feel grateful to you for your hospitality on many occasions and all will carry memories of the very pleasant, as well as helpful, afternoon spent in your home.

"We are so proud today of the Woman's Institute, which stands out as the greatest oganization in force today.

"Today not only our Agricultural papers but our urban press vie with each other to give credit to the Womans' Institute for the wonderful work it is doing.

"Again let us express hope that Mrs. Fairman may find it possible to join us on many future occasions. As a tangible expression of our good wishes we ask you, Mrs. Fairman, to accept these small articles that they may remind you of your well wishing friends."

Mrs. Fairman replied in well chosen words, thanking the ladies for their thoughtfulness and wished them further success in their excellent work.

All joined hands and sang "For She's A Jolly Good Fellow" and a lovely lunch was served at the close of the afternoon's proceedings.

FIRE COMPLETELY DESTROYED HOME

Thought To Have Started From Overheated Stove.

CAMPBELLFORD, Jan. 27—Fire which apparently started from an overheated stove completely destroyed the home and contents of Roy Sweet, one block west of St. John's United Church last night. And only the direction of the wind saved the two adjoining houses. The three houses were built close to each other with Sweet's the farthest west.

Mr. and Mrs. Sweet went to a neighbor's about 8:30 and were only there 10 or 15 minutes when their home was discovered in a mass of flames. The only article of furniture that remains is a phonograph. A little black spaniel dog was also a victim of the flames.

The firemen played two streams hours and were a mass of ice when they returned to the fire station.

OMEMEE A.Y.P.A. ENTERTAINMENT

Young People of Sister Churches Guests at Social Evening.

OMEMEE, Jan. 27.—A very pleasant evening was enjoyed on Monday in the basement of Christ Church when the A.Y.P.A. entertained the young people of the Presbyterian and United churches. In the absence through illness of the president, the chair was ably takeln by Mr. Horace Hill, who in a few well chosen words welcomed the guests. Several contests were indulged in and soon much merriment resounded. Short speeches were heard from Mr. F. Brockley of the Presbyterian church and Rev. E. W. Rowland, pastor of the United church, and Mr. F. G. Sandy, president of the Young People's Union, in each of which was expressed the thanks of the association they represented, for the splendid entertainment provided each year by the A.Y.P.A.

Dainty refreshments were served and a social hour enjoyed.

The harvesting of ice has commenced. Mr. William Irwin and his assistant, Mr. N. Lovett, have a new cutting machine which is in excellent runnning order, and which operates faster than the two teams engaged can draw it away. Many orders are already booked. The ice is about 20 inches deep and of a splendid quality.

The dance on Friday evening under the auspices of the Hockey Association was a decided success and has been acclaimed by many as "The best eve." The attendance was good and all were delighted with the orchestra from Lindsay under the able direction of Wagner Steen. The hockey colors of blue and gold composed the decorations.

Monday afternoon the home of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Clemett was open to the friends of their daughter when a troussea tea was held prior to her marriage on Wednesday. The rooms were prettily decorated with daffodils while the tea table, presided over by Mrs. Charles Ivory was centred with a large bowl of pink and white tulips. The guests were received by Mrs. Clemett and in company with Mrs. E. H. Mitchell and Miss Clemett viewed the pretty gifts by the glow of soft candle light. Mrs. H. Lamb and Miss Irene Clemett assisted in the dining room.

WEDDING BELLS.

McKINLEY—CLEMETT.

OMEMEE, Jan. 27.—On Wednesday morning a wedding was solemnized in Christ church, Omemee, when Miss Annie Elizabeth Clemett, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Clemett was united in marriage to Laverne Henry McKinley, son of Mrs. McKinley and the late John McKinley, of Franklin. The nuptial knot was tied by the rector, Rev. A. T. Weir.

The bride, who was unattended, was given in marriage by her father, and was becomingly attired in a beautiful gown of ashes of roses Georgette, over priscilla crepe with rose bonnet and blonde velvet slippers. Her only adornment was a sterling bar pin with aquamire setting, the gift of the groom. She carried an ivory prayer book with mother of pearl inlay, the gift of her mother.

Only the immediate relatives and friends of the contracting parties were present. Mrs. T. C. Stephenson and Mr. Noble Clemett acted as witnesses.

Immediately following the ceremony, Mr. and Mrs. McKinley motored to the home of the bride, where she donned her travelling outfit of black satin faced crepe with Japanese embroidery, shoes, hat and gloves to match and Persian lamb coat which completed her costume. Amid showers of confetti and good wishes the happy couple left on the 11 o'clock train for Toronto, via Port Hope, where after a brief honeymoon they will reside on the groom's farm near Franklin.

Miss Clemett was one of Omemee's most popular young ladies, and she will be missed by her many friends, having served as teller in the Bank of Toronto for several years. The good wishes of friends follow her to her new home.

Enjoy your breakfast every day—Gain appetite the Kruschen way!

He never leaves his breakfast now

Six months ago this man could not look eggs and bacon in the face.

He had no appetite.

He went off to his day's work leaving his breakfast untasted, and his wife miserable.

Look at him now! He's a different man. Up with the lark, comes downstairs two at a time, full of life and "zip," and clamours for cereal, bacon and eggs, toast and coffee. Eats like a navvy. Then off, with a good breakfast inside him, to do a good day's work.

It's the little daily dimeful of Kruschen Salts that has done the trick. His wife sees that he takes it every morning in his breakfast cup of coffee or tea, and gazes with loving pride at the new man it has made of him.

There are six different salts in Kruschen, and every tiny pinch you take is a combination of these six salts, which are absolutely necessary to restore to full activity the organs of elimination that have become tired and sluggish through lack of open air and daily exercise, through overwork, worry or errors of diet. Kruschen removes the impurities that have crept into the blood and clogged the system, and so banishes depression, headaches, tiredness, sleepiness after meals, indigestion, rheumatism and the like. And all the time Kruschen makes its tonic influence felt, invigorating both mind and body, filling the whole system with a bracing sense of fitness.

Start the healthy Kruschen habit now, and enjoy your breakfast every day.

Tasteless in Coffee or Tea

Put as much in your breakfast cup as will lie on a 10 cent piece. It's the little daily dimeful that does it.

Kruschen Salts

Good Health for Half a Cent a Day

Every morning dip a pinch of the magic Kruschen—as much as will lie on a 10-cent piece—into your breakfast cup of coffee or tea. You won't taste it. In a 75c. bottle there are 96 doses—enough to last you for three months. Get a bottle at the first drug store you pass. A breakfast appetite is cheap at half a cent a day!

REEVE ELLIOTT CHOSEN WARDEN ON FIRST BALLOT

Defeats Reeve Wood of Millbrook, By 23 Votes To 17.

COUNCIL OPENS.

Bowmanville Reeve Has Been in Counties Council Six Years.

COBOURG, Jan. 27.—On the first ballot at the opening session of the Council of the Counties of Northumberland and Durham on Monday, Reeve Milton Elliott of Bowmanville was elected Warden by 23 votes to 17 in a brief contest with Reeve W. T. Wood of Millbrook.

The division was apparently influenced by political affiliations and its result had been predicted for a month or more to within one of the recorded majority. And it lacked the exciting uncertainties of similar elections during the last five or six years.

Reeve Wood was the first to congratulate the new Warden.

Warden Elliott was nominated by Deputy-Reeve Thickson of Bowmanville, seconded by Reeve Wilson of Hope Township, and Mr. Wood was nominated by Reeve M. J. Holman of Clarke Township, seconded by Reeve S. A. Clarke of Cramahe Township.

Graduates Present

Five former Wardens were present for the opening ceremonies: John McCubbin, M. E. Maybee, M.P.; J. L. McCamus, Fred Slade, and Fred Bowen, M.P., also Dr. W. G. Robertson, M.P.P., who had served as a Councillor during the war.

Warden Elliott has been six years in the Counties Council, four as a reeve, and two as deputy-reeve. His election was decidedly enhanced by the fact that his opponent has been one of the outstanding personalities and one of the most capable members of the council in recent years.

Warden Grateful

"I thank you very sincerely for the honor you have conferred on me," said Warden Elliott, "and I also thank you on behalf of the municipality I represent. Bowmanville has had a Warden only once, in 1893. With all due respect to Mr. Wood, who would have made an excellent Warden, the honor was coming to the west half of Durham County. I have never seen a Warden elected so quickly as tonight. I shall do my best to deserve your confidence, and I hope that you will all co-operate in the work of the United Counties."

How Council Divided

The division on the Wardenship was as follows:

For Elliott.—H. Beda, Reeve of Brighton Township; Major J. M. Bygott, Reeve, and C. H. Davidson, Deputy-Reeve, of Campbellford; W. E. Chesterfield, Deputy-Reeve of Cramahe; R. Edgerton, Reeve of Cartwright; W. F. Elliott, Reeve, and A. Nelson, Deputy-Reeve of Murray; M. J. Elliott, Reeve, and W. H. Thickson, Deputy-Reeve, of Bowmanville; S. Fallis, Reeve, and G. H. Hooten, Deputy-Reeve of Cavan Township; F. S. Gray, Reeve, and B. Richardson, Deputy-Reeve, of Manvers; W. S. Grills, Reeve, and Russel Perke, Deputy-Reeve, of Seymour; J. H. Hess, Reeve of Hastings; Jay Mills, Reeve of Brighton Village; M. Wilson, Reeve, and Fred Ough, Deputy-Reeve of Hope; F. Gordon Parker, Reeve of Alnwick; G. Thompson, Reeve of Cobourg; J. Ross, Brighton Township; W. H. Nelson, Reeve of Percy.

For Wood. — W. J. Jibb, Reeve, and T. Bradshaw, Deputy-Reeve of Hamilton; S. A. Clarke, Reeve of Cramahe; Sam Dudley, Reeve of Colborne; R. J. Edmunds, Reeve, and I. H. Giddy, Deputy-Reeve of Port Hope; M. J. Holman, Reeve, and A. McKay, Deputy-Reeve of Clarke; A. R. McKenzie, Reeve, and Z. Harnden, Deputy-Reeve of Haldimand; W. J. Maher, Deputy-Reeve of Cobourg; C. A. Wight, Reeve of Darlington; Wilbur C. Wood, Reeve of South Monaghan; W. T. Wood, Reeve of Millbrook; A. S. Williams, Deputy-Reeve of Darlington; J. A. Sykes, Deputy-Reeve of Percy; H. S. Britton, Reeve of Newcastle.

Rev. Monsignor Kelly invoked the divine blessing upon the council's sessions in the follow prayer:

"We pray Thee, O God of might, wisdom, and justice, through Whom authority is rightly administered, laws are enacted, and judgment decreed, assist with Thy Holy Spirit of counsel and fortitude the members of this Council elected, that their administration may be conducted in righteousness, and be eminently useful to Thy people for whom, and over whom they are to legislate; by encouraging due respect for virtue and religion; by a faithful execution of the laws in justice and mercy; and by restraining vice and immorality.

Let the light of Thy divine wisdom direct their deliberations, and shine forth in all the proceedings and laws framed for the welfare of the citizens of these Counties, so that they may tend to the preservation of peace, the promotion of national and municipal happiness, the increase of industry, sobriety, and useful knowledge.

We pray Thee to grant a peaceful and long reign to our Gracious Majesty, King George V., and to His Royal Consort, our beloved Queen; and protection, prosperity, and loyalty to His subjects in the great and vast Dominions of the British Empire.—Amen."

Fat Babies, Like Turkeys, Have Little Resistance

NEW YORK, Jan 27. United Press. — The model baby for 1927 is as lean as a greyhound, Dr. J. L. Bloomenthal, who cares for 40,000 infants a year in his capacity as director of the Bureau of Child Hygiene, says every mother should strive to keep her baby as well as herself from becoming fat.

"Fat babies are pretty," Dr Bloomenthal says in his annual report, "but like fat turkeys they have little resistance, and less health."

SAINT and SINNER

By ANNE AUSTIN

At that ghastly sound in the room which Jim Lane had stricken to silence with his stern Mad words—"I'd rather see you in your shroud than in that there dress, to marry the man you've give your word to"—Cherry flung her bare white arms above her head, dropping the cloud of her wedding veil, so that it fell in a pile at her feet.

"Oh, oh!" Her voice rose on a high, shrill note of hysteria and anger and grief and pain. Faith, watching her, her own limbs drugged with terror and the natural revulsion of a reserved nature toward a "scene," knew that Cherry could not have controlled herself to save her life.

"Cherry! Baby!" Mrs. Lane moaned, reaching out a trembling hand. "Just look what you've done, Jim Lane, before Cherry's high-toned friends!"

"Shut up!" Cherry screamed. "Oh, God! I wish I were dead. My own father wishes I were dead! He tells me so! When all I'm trying to do is to help my family, to make somebody of myself! You want me to marry a day laborer like you, I guess!" she whirled upon her father, who sat looking up at her with stunned, almost stupid brown eyes. "If I'd married Chester Hart or some other poor but honest working man—" her voice curled like the lash of a whip around the despised words—"you've had slobbered all over me with joy, and you'd have been perfectly satisfied to see me slave and get old and ugly and raise a houseful of brats, like Mother did! But just bedause I've got the looks and the brains to snatch off a rich husband, you'd rather see me in my shroud.

"I hate you!" her passionate voice shrilled on. "I hate everybody! Oh! Oh!"

Regardless of the wedding veil which wound itself disastrously about her tiny, spurning feet, she sped from the room, shaking off Faith's detaining arm as she passed her.

"Let's get out of this house, Fay!" "Long" Lane rose, pulling his frightened sweetheart to her feet. "Say, Dad, if you want to beat her again, I won't try to stop you. Good Lord! What a family!"

Fay Allen, with a shy, frightened glance over her shoulder at "Long," advanced jerkily to where Mrs. Lane sat rocking and weeping. "Good-bye, Mrs. Lane, I'm—I'm glad I met you. I had a nice—" she caught herself up in time, blushing furiously. "Good-bye, Mr. Lane. —I hope I'll see you again soon."

Faith suddenly found herself, in spite of her terrible distress, liking the way the girl they had all called "that fast Fay Allen" was bravely going through the gestures of polite leave-taking. Even Selma Pruitt and Frances Warren were smiling almost naturally as they acknowledged her timid farewells.

"Good-bye, Fay," Faith moved forward suddenly, laid a hand on the sleeve of the little brown velvet suit. "You must come again soon for dinner. I'm awfully glad you and Long are such good friends."

"Thank you—Faith," Fay Allen's lips trembled, then suddenly she raised her face, confidingly as a child, for a kiss.

"I think she's sweet," Faith whispered to "Long" at the door.

"Let's undress. I feel foolish in this Colonial dress, after wearing short skirts," Selma Pruitt seized Frances' hand. "Oh, Faith, darling, would you mind bringing our clothes to your room?"

With a heavy heart, Faith went slowly to Cherry's door, after having shown Frances and Selma to her own room. As she had expected, the door was locked. She bent and called softly through the keyhole.

"Please, dear, the girls want to dress. May I just come in and get their clothes?"

There was no answer, but Faith heard the thud of slipperless little feet as Cherry slipped from the bed upon which she had thrown herself to weep and rage. After a long minute, the door was opened a few inches and Cherry's bare arms, piled high with dresses and hats, were thrust out, though her body and face remained concealed. When she had flung the things at Faith's feet, she banged the door.

"Vulgar little beast! I'm going to tell George Pruitt I don't care what he says, I'm not going to be her bridesmaid! She's as common as pigtracks, no matter how pretty she is! I'd do anything for Faith, for George's sake—though it looks pretty plain to me that she won't marry him—but I'll be double-darned if I'm going to make a fool of myself—"

"That wedding dress!" Frances Warren's laughing voice cut in. "Wouldn't you think she'd be ashamed to splurge so on his money before she's married to him? Everybody at the wedding will know he bought all her things! Me—I'd rather wear a white China silk that my own father paid for—"

Faith raised a hand to knock on the door, unable to bear anything more.

REBELS BANDITS GENERAL FINDS

No Catholic Army in Field Under Archbishop, He Reports.

DESPATCH FALSE.

MEXICO CITY, Jan. 27.—(Canadian Press).—General Alejandro Mango, miltary commander, who has just returned from the state of Jaliso, is quoted in a despatch from Tepic printed by El Universal Grafic as declaring "wholly false" the reports that Archbishop Grozco Y Jimenez of Guadalajara is at the head of a rebel army or has risen in arms against the government.

General Mango, the despatch adds, asserted that he had not found any Catholic army and had not found anything to fight except groups of bandits, some of them calling themselves rebels.

INFLUENZA PLAGUE GRIPPING BRITAIN

Hundreds of School Teachers Ill and Some Stores Closed.

LONDON, Jan. 27 (Associated Press).—A wintry spell last week has caused the recent epidemic of influenza which has been prevalent in many parts of Europe to tighten its grip on Great Britain, 667 deaths being reported in Britain for the week ending yesterday.

The official death roll in the County of London has shown a steady increase during the past three weeks, the figures being 72, 137 and 197. The reports from 105 large towns apart from London for the same period of time show 172, 326 and 470 deaths.

In some of the poorer districts of London people have had to stand in line to obtain death certificates, while there is hardly a public department or business house part of whose staff is not on the sick list.

Hundreds of school teachers are ill, while some small shops in the east end have put up their shutters and placed a notice on the door reading "the whole family is ill of influenza. Will reopen when better."

Some of the country districts have been badly stricken. Half the schools have been closed in Nottinghamshire, while half the police force in Dorsetshire is sick. There is a hardly a household in the villages of Northamptonshire which has escaped. All the public officials at Penmaenmawr, Carnarvonshire, Wales, have been stricken.

During the last five weeks there have been 500 more deaths from influenza than for the corresponding period last year.

A bulletin issued yesterday by the health section of the League of Nations, which has been following the influenza epidemic closely, showed widespread prevalence of the illness in England and Wales. The bulletin reported that the epidemic was continuing in Denmark, the Netherlands and Switzerland, was increasing in Bulgaria and diminishing in Spain.

HOROSCOPE

The Stars Incline, but do not Compel.

FRIDAY, JANUARY 28, 1927

Good and evil stars contend today, according to astrologers who warn that there may be much thwarting of plans under this planetary rule.

This may be a most unlucky time to deal with superiors in rank or age, and it is wise to postpone all important matters.

While there is a promising sign for those who seek employment they may be impeded in whatever they undertake while this co-figuration prevails.

Mars is in a threatening place that bodes ill for the world's comfort and happiness.

Men will shed one another's blood in the coming year which will be an important one in history, the seers warn.

The evening is fairly favorable for association with men in high place and banquets should be successful.

Lodges and associations of men are to assume many new functions in the coming year, when they may be objects of religious prejudice.

The evening is fortunate for letter-writing and there may be big benefits through them, it is forecast.

In the autumn of this year the transit of Mercury across the disc of the Sun is believed to be followed by countless distresses in many parts of the world.

Calcutta, Tibet, and Lhasa as well as Ireland, Moscow and Turkey may be grievously affected by this conjunction.

The transit of Mercury is read as presaging great plans of war, the development of secret armaments and sedition in many places.

Persons whose birthdate it is should stick to their jobs and resist the temptation to speculate in real estate in the coming year.

Children born on this day probably will be industrious and clever. They should prosper marvelously through their own talents.

DRESS

By MARY MARSHALL

A black taffeta coat for Southern or late spring wear shows collar and cuffs of beaver and a rather elaborate design made by incrustations of the black taffeta.

There are always two tendencies to be noted in the workings of the influential French dressmakers—two tendencies that lead in exactly opposite directions. On the one hand they design frocks of the sort that will appeal to the maker of ready-made clothes here and elsewhere—tricky, smart frocks and wraps that can be copied without difficulty. Then, for what we call the exclusive customer they bend their energies to make smart clothes that are less easy to copy. It is a decided achievement to make a frock that actually defies every effort of the copyist. And of course the woman who pays high prices for an original frock—or a frock the like of which has not been sold to a maker of ready-made clothes—likes to feel that she has paid for something that will not become commonplace.

As a rule ingeniously trimmed frocks are easier to copy with success than frocks that have little or no trimming on them. Draped frocks are especially difficult to copy and apparently the simpler the drapery, the more difficult the re-production.

So-called self-trimmed frocks are not so easy to reproduce, because of the very skillful workmanship required in making them. Moreover, the fact that they show no obviously expensive sort of adornment would make them less attractive to the woman who wants her money's worth when she buys a ready-made frock. So it is that among the frocks and wraps made for the more exacting individual customers there are always a number that show this apparently simple but actually complicated sort of workmanship. Cyber has shown some kasha frocks trimmed with v-shaped insets of the material stitched with matching silk. Sometimes there are elaborate angular designs achieved by stitched narrow bands of the material. Applications of the material stitched down in intricate angular designs are sometimes spoken of as incrustations.

FISHERMEN SAVED FROM ICE FLOW

Locked Up Five Days in Lower Lake Michigan.

CHICAGO, Jan. 27 (Canadian Press).—Three weather-worn fishermen, for five days held captive by ice that locked their tug boat in the middle of a big ice floe in Lower Lake Michigan, were rescued today when the ocean-going freighter Bandmaster crushed through to their side. The rescuers found supplies of food dropped from an aeroplane had staved off hunger, but the men were wrecking the tug for fuel.

For twelve hours the Sandmaster charged the ice field in the dark and at midnight flashed radio word to her Chicago owners that she had won and was alongside the tug.

A line was quickly run to the diminutive Imperial, then lying off Michigan City, Ind., the three men were transferred to the freighter, and she started back for Chicago with the tug in tow.

The men, Frank Jentzen, Harvey Frayer and Joe Van Kirk, apparently had suffered no serious effects from the long exposure and period of hunger which ended Tuesday when an aeroplane swept within a few feet of the tug and dropped food, clothing and fuel.

The men were known to be in peril of their lives in the event of a sudden breaking up of the ice field, which detached itself last Saturday and moved out in the lake with its three prisoners.

CANADIAN FANS MAY BE HELPED

United States' Legislators To Stop Pirating of Wave Lengths.

MEETS ALL NEEDS.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 27 (Canadian Press):—The troubles of Canadian radio fans caused by the pirating of Canadian wave lengths by stations in the United States are believed to be nearing an end. Radio legislators here have prepared a bill which is believed to meet all needs that have developed. The bill would establish governmental control over all channels of inter-State and foreign radio communications. The bill vests in a commission of five members complete control over radio for the first year after its enactment, and then gives the Secretary of Commerce control after the first year.

W. E. GLADSTONE CHARACTER HAS LIBEL HEARING

Peter Wright, Journalist, Commences Action Against Statesman's Son.

OPENS TO-DAY.

Writer Claims Statements Made on Authority of Late Lord Milner.

LONDON, Jan. 27 (Canadian Press).—The character of the late William E. Gladstone was to all intents placed on trial today when Captain Peter Wright's libel action against Lord Gladstone, the 73-old-son of the Victorian Prime Minister, opened before Justice Sir Horace Avery.

Captain Wright, London clubman and free lance journalist, characterized the elder Gladstone in a book entitled "Portraits and Criticisms" as:

"Mr. Gladstone, ... who founded the great tradition, since observed by so many of his followers and successors with such pious fidelity, in public to speak the language of the highest and strictest principles and in private to pursue and possess every sort of woman."

Viscount Gladstone immediately challenged Wright, called him a liar, a coward, and a fool, which invited the libel action from Wright.

Captain Wright repeated the aspersion and then, accepting Gladstone's invitation, brought the libel action. Wright maintained his written statement in his book was made on authority of the late Lord Milner, who said the elder Gladstone was "governed by his seraglio" — his harem.

Information upon which he based his intimations of immorality in the life of the late W. E. Gladstone was given him by various persons as a historical fact, Capt. Peter Wright testified in a British court to-day during trial of his libel action against Lord Gladstone, 72 years old son of Britain's grand old man, who has come to the defence of his father's name.

Before a court room crowded with some of London's "most fashionable figures" Wright told of receiving information which linked the older Gladstone's name with Lily Langley, noted actress. He had also been informed by a well known West End doctor now dead, he said, that women patients had complained to him of the famous statesman trying to make their acquaintance on the street.

Sydney Battery Offers

The fighting Highlanders of the Cape Breton coast have sniffed the battle from afar and are all eagerness for the strife. To-day the department of National Defence received a wire from the Sixth battery of artillery of Sydney N.S., and one from the Cape Breton Highlanders volunteering as complete units for Chinese service.

Spirit of 1914 Strong

There is no question at present of a Canadian contingent, though should the Chinese situation ever become really serious the volunteer offers now being received indicate that the spirit of 1914 is still strong as ever and that the call of adventure is still heard by Canadian men of war. Most of the offers come from officers and men who served in the great war and who are ready to embark at once for Chinese service.

National Defence Talked

Interest in the Chinese war has revived the national defence controversy in Ottawa and reports are rife that at the forthcoming session of parliament the Dominion will embark on an ambitious programme of national defence. It was reported that a twenty year naval policy was in course of preparation which would include destroyers, cruisers, battle cruisers, submarines and all the panoply of naval might, and that military and air services were to be greatly expanded. It was even alleged that promises to this effect had been made at the Imperial Conference.

It can be authoritatively stated that no such promises were ever made and that no such programms are in contemplation. It is possible that parliament may be asked to consider the very modest increase in the expenditure of national defence, concommitant with the adoption of the principle that each self governing Dominion be responsible for its own coast defence. No promises were made, the whole matter being left to parliament but it was felt that public opinion in Canada, even including Quebec, would approve some definite move in a modest way to adequate defence measures.

British Concede

LONDON, Jan. 27 (Canadian Press). — Proposals which Charge d'Affaires O'Malley has been authorized make to the Cantonese Foreign Minister at Hankow are said to embrace terms of complete eventual surrender of British concessions throughout China, including extra territoriality and plans for new treaties supplanting the present "unequal" ones.

It is not known here whether the proposals have actually been handed to Foreign Minister Chen as yet, but they are expected to be made public soon.

Meanwhile the British Government is keeping the United States, Japan and other interested Powers fully informed on negotiations between Chen and Mr. O'Malley, which are expected to have a most important bearing on the whole crisis arising out of anti-foreign excesses in the Yangtse Valley.

In making their proposals to Chen, the British have been most careful to state that identical terms will be made to other Chinese authorities—that is, the Peking Government—thus preventing the impression that Great Britain recognizes the Cantonese Government as the responsible authority for all of China.

U. S. TRUSTS CITIZENS BRITAIN.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 27, Canadian Press. — Assurances that the United States government is ready to enter into treaty revision negotiations with both Cantonese and the northern factions in the present civil war, were given by the State Deparment to-day in amplifying the formal statement issued last night by Frank B. Kellogg, the Secretary of State.

No direct or indirect proposals for a conference between the United States diplomatic agents and representatives of the two factions have yet been received. On the contrary such intimation as to the intentions of the rival authorities in China as have come to hand are in the nature of protests from each side against any step by the United States government to deal with the other side.

In a statement issued to-day Senator Borah, chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, advocated a policy looking to a free and disenthralled China. He expressed the opinion that the action of Great Britain in sending a large military and naval force to Shanghai might have "a disastrous result."

He favored protecting United States people in China by bringing them out of danger until all danger is passed."

WARSAW, Jan. 27. — (United Press.) — The Polish Government wireless to-day said that 50,000 Soviet Russian troops were concentrated on the Manchurian border and that representatives of the Cantonese Government at Moscow was urging Russia to send officers and instructors to the assistance of the Nationalist army which was approaching Shanghai, in the Yangtse Valley.

Unlisted Issues Feature Toronto Exchange To-day

Press).—Unlisted issues, notably British American Oil and Brewery stocks, were heavily dealt in on the Toronto Stock Exchange this morning, while trading in the regular list was comparatively light after a busy opening. Prices generally tended slightly higher, though a number of recessions were shown. Seagrams, an active leader, firmed a quarter at 17, and British American Oil climbed to a new high at 92½, later easing a half at 92. The new British American Oil strengthened a half at 23, Hiram Walker gained a quarter at 35¼, Brazilian eased a quarter at 114 3-4, and British Columbia Fishing, after touching 89, eased to 86 3-4, a net loss of 1 1-8. Industrial Alcohol was ¼ lower at 21 3-4.

General Recession To-day On Standard Exchange

TORONTO, Jan. 27 (Canadian Press). — Most mining stocks lost slightly in light trading on the Standard Mining Exchange this morning. Firm spots were in evidence, however, Amulet being one of these. Amulet touched 164 and closed at noon at 163, two points higher. Laval-Quebec eased a half at 36, and Nipissing softened ten cents at 9.80. Argonaut was fractionally lower at 43, Dome 25 cents lower at 9.50, and Corona a point and a half lower at 23. Teck Hughes lost three cents at 6.65. Kirkland Lake firmed two at 90.

General Firmness To-day Low Priced Rails Sought

NEW YORK, Jan. 27 (Canadian Press).—Occasional bursts of speculative sentiment again characterized today's stock market, but the undertone was fairly firm.

Prospects of an early declaration of dividends on Erie First Preferred stock, or the announcement of the revised "Nickel Plate" merger plan containing some guarantee to holders of that issue, stimulated speculative enthusiasm for the low-priced rails. Despite the failure of the Van Sweringens and the minority committee of the Chesapeake and Ohio to reach an agreement on merger terms, Wall Street was still of the opinion that the obstacles were not insurmountable.

Market leadership was shared at intervals by such issues as Adams Express, Western Union, Remington Typewriter, Hudson Motors, Collins and Aikman, and General Railway Signal.

Wheat Prices Advance When Buying Is Renewed

CHICAGO, Ills., Jan. 27.—(Canadian Press.)—With renewed buying in which eastern houses took the lead, wheat advanced to-day after a sag at the start. The intial weakness was due to the fact that Liverpool quotations failed to respond well to yesterday's upturns here.

Opening unchanged to 5-8c. off, wheat soon rose to about yesterday's finish. Corn, oats and provisions were easy, corn starting unchanged to 1-8c. up, but later averaging a little lower.

Chuang-fang is an ally of Chang Tso-lin.

Feng Yu-hsiang once was a corporal. He won the friendship of Wu Pei-fu, and came to dominate the Peking Government. Later he withdrew to the north-western provinces he now rules.

The Master of the North.

Chang Tso-lin, rugged master of North China, started out in Chinese public life as a bandit chief, fought for Japan in the Russo-Japanese war, and after the Chinese republic was proclaimed, achieved supreme power in Manchuria.

The Cantonese or "Nationalist" movement has been accompanied by China's nearest approach to formation of a political party called the "Kuomintang."

This party is the outgrowth of the patriotism of Sun Yat-sen, who fomented the overthrow of the Manchus. Its political programme calls for unification of China territorially and modernizing of its governmental institutions, along with the abolition of all treaties not based on the equality of both contracting parties.

This last provision, affecting "extraterritoriality" and foreign control of customs duties, is of vital concern to the great western powers. (Copyright, 1927, NEA Service Inc.)

The Misses Blue rendered "Farewell to Thee" on their guitars and their music, as it always is, was much enjoyed by all present. The meeting closed with the Mizpah Benediction, after which the recreation period was spent in contests. Next week the topic will be "Expressing the Missionary Spirit," and will be taken by Miss Grace Blue and Mr. Arthur Collnson.

The Service Which Makes the Milk in this Tin So Good

CARNATION realizes that good evaporated milk must start at the farm. So Carnation condenseries are located only in districts where dairying reaches its highest level. To aid dairymen there is the Carnation Field Force—a body of men whose sole job is to see that the dairymen who supply Carnation with milk, supply the best milk in the world.

This is but one of the many features which make Carnation Milk so good—but one of the many reasons why Carnation adds creaminess to coffee, and makes all cooking so delicious. Carnation is just pure, whole milk, evaporated to double richness and made safe by sterilization. Diluted, it gives superior results in all cooking. Undiluted, it takes the place of cream at one-third cream cost. Order Carnation from your grocer.

Final score—Port Hope 8; Peterboro 4.

Peterboro's Intermediates played their best hockey of the season at Port Hope last night, holding the home team even until the middle of the second period, but the desperate Ontarios forged ahead towards the end of the second period and the final score was 8—4 for Port Hope. The Ontarios now have a great chance to tie Oshawa by a win at home on Monday.

Last night's game was the kind the fans like, but there weren't many fans out to see it. There was plenty of rushing and checking, with both teams showing speed on the hard ice. The combination was lacking at first but towards the end both forward lines were sweeping in three abreast.

LeBarr was possibly the star for the Petes. He was beaten only by close-in shots. Many times the Port Hope forwards, coming in in line, got right in on top of him, only to be foiled. Lackey and Collins gave him good protection, besides contributing some telling rushes. Lackey went down the centre time after time, flanked by the wings, and he figured in two of the team's goals, besides being beaten many times by Micks.

There was no star on the forward line. They rushed and checked, outfooting the Port Hope line, and at times displayed splendid combination. They seemed, however, usually to shoot direct at Micks or just outside the goal posts.

Finnegan Hills, who admits that this is his fifteenth year in the O.H.A. shared honors on the home team with "Dempsey" Crossett and Micks. He broke fast on passes out to his own blue line and scored three of this teams goals. He worked in close to shoot and played well in combination. Crossett was constantly in hot water with the forwards, because when he got the puck he headed straight for the opposite goal until he was checked or had shot. He was constantly urged to pass but usually he was too far ahead of the wings for this to be of any use.

Micks was good in goal. He showed good judgment in clearing and in coming out to check attackers, and turned aside many close-in shots. He had good protection from Crossett and Hutchings.

Johnny Rowden of Port Hope was referee. He was lax on interference and let a number of offside plays get away. He was little troubled with penalty offences, sending only two men to the box in the entire sixty minutes.

First Period

Play started fast, with both goalies being quickly tested, with the Petes having a slight edge. Both teams were finding the fast ice to their liking, and attempting combination, although bunching was evident on both forward lines. Three minutes after the start Lackey rushed and, when turned into the corner gave Maudsley a perfect pass in front of the net for the opening score. Hutchings and Crossett were leading the Port Hope attack, but with little effect, while the veteran Finnegan Hills was leading the forwards, checking and skating like a whirlwind. Hills took a pass from Crossett with eight minutes gone, just inside the Petes' blue line, and went in close to score. After that, play went from end to end and both goalies had to move fast to stop wicked shots, from both far out and close in.

No more scores were made, however, during the opening stanza.

Second Period.

Chances galore were missed by the Petes in the second period. They were through the defence time after time, only to have Micks rob them by a fine stop or to miss an open net.

Dissension was apparent on the Port Hope team, Crossett apparently preferring to see his name on the score sheet to playing a defensive game or giving a pass to a teammate. Arthur Hills opened the scoring from a rush by the three forwards. The period was half over before the score was equalized. Lackey then scored on a pass from Thornton right in front of the net. Crossett's rushes, heretofore futile, brought the next two goals. He went right through the Petes twice, the second time shooting as he was tripped. Two penalties were served in this period, one by Collins, and one by Hutchings.

Third Period

The best hockey of the game was played in the third period, and goals were plentiful. Both teams played combination, the work of the Hills brothers and Ware being outstanding in this respect. Cripps started the scoring, counting on a pass from Maudsley. Finnegan Hills counted the next two, both on close-in passes, one from his brother, and the other from Ware. Maudsley's rush brought the next goal. Micks came out and stopped him and both went to the ice. Dundas grabbed the loose puck and flipped it in. Art Hills counted next, to be followed by Crossett on a lone rush less than a minute later.

BRISTLING BATTLES of BARE FIST DAYS

(MY LIFE STORY)

by Jack McAuliffe

(Copyright, 1927, NEA Service Inc.)

What can you do to beat a yellow streak?

I have seen lots of fighters, I have fought lots of fighters and I know something about this thing, cowardice.

I believe that bravery is nothing but the control of fear. In every man there is a certain amount of fear that is inherent. The brave subdue the fear in themselves. The cowards are subdued by the fear.

I have found that among fighters there are two qualities of what we are forced, against will, perhaps, to call cowardice. There is that quality which makes a boy timid when he is subjected to punishment and there is more serious feeling, a panic, that takes the fight clear out of others.

Timid fighters can be cured because it is more often lack of confidence in themselves that makes them timid. When they get to be better boxers they become less timid. But the real coward never can be cured and has no place in the ring.

I came across a typical case one time in St. Louis when I obtained permission to interview a prisoner in the death house who was to be executed in two days. I wanted to talk to a man who was about to die and get some ideas on his philosophy. The result of the interview did me more harm than good as I felt I had all the symptoms of cowardice I saw in him—a bold front, a surface indication of bravery, and a faltering heart underneath.

It took me years to get out of it before I found myself.

John L. Sullivan and the original Jack Dempsey were afraid of nothing and there are some fighters to day of the same winning fearless disposition. There are others whose gameness, downright gameness, understand, we all question.

About this time several fights were arranged for me in Williamsburg and I had a chance to meet the famous Jake Hyams, an Englishman who created a great splurge when he visited this country because he had beaten Jem Carney and claimed not only the title of Great Britain but also the world—until we fought.

* * *

Note—In the next chapter McAuliffe tells of his fight with Hyams and how he met up with, and was backed by, Dick Roche, well-known gambler on the Great White Way of New York.

SYMPATHY FOR BAN JOHNSON

Feeling That the President of American League Got Unfair Deal.

CREATED LEAGUE.

NEW YORK, Jan. 27. — (United Press). — While official baseball manifested restrained elation over the settlement of the feud between Commissioner Landis and Ban Johnson, president of the American League, there has arisen a feeling, minor as it may be, that Johnson got an unfair deal.

Johnson's die-hard partisans insist that the club owners of a league that he created and spent 27 years of his life in keeping alive and developing it to a priority over the old National League, threw him down and bribed him with a $40,000 a year salary to take a vacation and stay out of baseball.

It was generally admitted that Johnson to-day is physically unfit to administer the business affairs of a corporation worth millions of dollars.

Those not thoroughly familiar with the happenings of American League politics since 1919—and perhaps before that—might be justified in thinking that it was unfair to "throw out a sick and doddering old man."

But, as Tammany Young, the famous gate crasher, Broadway sage and baseball fan, remarked:

"Say, when I do enough to get fired from my racket and they fire me for the rest of my days at forty grand a year, I want to be fired. I'll go crazy this minute for that much dough."

CURLING GROUP WON BY CAMPBELLFORD

Curlers Qualify For Provincial Play-offs in Cobourg District.

COBOURG, Jan. 27 — Campbellford curlers qualified here on Monday for the District Cup provincial play-offs by winning the local group honors from Cobourg, Oshawa, Belleville and Colborne. The Trent town rinks trounced Cobourg by 36 to 26 in the afternoon and in the evening engagement defeated Belleville by 35 to 21.

This was the fourth successive year Campbellford won their group. Last winter they reached the finals losing to Agincourt. This time they hope to bring home the trophy.

Splendid Curling

Frank Bonnycastle and Dick Cole played almost faultless games backed up by the steady, helpful work of their rinkmates. In the afternoon against Cobourg it was Bonnycastle who piled up the big score, and in the evening the honors were reversed, Cole counting heavily while Bonnycastle was battling to hold a narrow lead. It would be unfair to single out anybody as outstanding on the day's play.

Cole's five end against Burn of Cobourg on a raise from the hog line to the button to kick out the Cobourg shot was perhaps a feature, and Bonnycastle's run of thirteen shots, including a four end, in a string of eight trips to the score board killed Cobourg's hopes and provided a lot of fine curling by the skip. But both rinks were in great form, and they won in rather easy form.

T.C.C. DEFEATS NORTH TORONTO

Losers Provide a Stubborn Resistance, But Loses Senior Struggle.

SCORE 6-4.

TORONTO, Jan. 27. — Last night's hockey menu at the Arena Gardens was provided by the tail-end teams in O.H.A. Senior group No. 2, the Toronto Canoe Club sending the North Toronto boys to the foot of the class by registering a 6 to 4 victory. About a hundred shivering fans viewed the contest, which wasn't as bad as one might suppose considering the lowly positions of these teams in the race. It was a game that kept the players hustling through every minute, and had both clubs started the season with as much playing strength and condition as they displayed last night, they might have been several notches nearer the playoff positions.

Coach Jimmy McFadyen of North Toronto introduces several new players to the fans every night his team is scheduled to perform. Last night he brought out a couple more new ones, and is anything they improved the team instead of weakening it. Finlayson, an Industrial League player, and Varnell from the North Toronto Juniors, together with Graham, were the newcomers to Senior hockey. Of the three Finlayson was the best, and he fitted in well on the front line with Heyd and McCaffery. Varnell and Graham also looked good. Jack Cain was replaced on the defence by Bert Gibb, and the latter turned in the best game he has shown since he joined the team. Gibb is a tricky stickhandler, and if he would pass the puck oftener and not wait too long to do his shooting he would be more effective.

Canoe Club a Play-off Possibility.

Toronto Canoe Club paraded the same team that has been giving the other clubs in the group trouble to beat for the past two weeks. The Canoe Club right now looks as good as any team in the race outside of University Grads, and it may play an important part in upsetting the chances of some prospective candidate for the play-off position before the group finals are played; in fact the Canoe Club may yet be the team that battles it out with the ex-students for the group title.

North Toronto offered stubborn opposition last night and at one stage of the game had a two-goal lead on the eventual winners. The boys from North Yonge Street were leading at the end of the first period by 3 to 2, but at the end of the middle frame they were on the short end of a 5 to 4 score. The Red Ringers scored the only goal of the final period.

Goals came so fast in the opening period that it looked like a hard night for the goaltenders. Heyd opened the scoring when he pierced the Canoe Club defence in the first minute of play and drove wickedly in from left wing. Smith evened it up on a shot that appeared to go in off McAllister's chest. Mollenhauer put T.C.C. ahead two minutes later and then Finlayson provided the equalizer when he stole the puck from Mollenhauer while the latter was stealing across the front of his own nets. Heyd and Gibb combined for a pretty rush, with Heyd notching the goal that gave North Toronto the lead at the first rest period.

King George is one of the finest shots and keenest sportsmen in Great Britain. One little thing about the King's shooting is not generally known. Whatever sport has been like, it is his invariable rule, whether the bag be birds or stags, to send off the major part of it to the hospitals.

OMEMEE TEAM IN FOUR GAMES

Beats Y.M.C.A., C.P.C. and Bethany During Week-end Matches.

LOSES TO LINDSAY.

OMEMEE, Jan. 27.—On Friday night, Omemee defeated Peterboro Y.M.C.A. in Omemee. The ice was very heavy, with a mist overhanging, making it difficult to follow the play. The fans got their money's worth in thrills and spills due to the sticky ice. It was a very clean game as no penalties were given by Cecil Mills, who handled the bell.

The line up for Omemee was as follows:

Goal, S. Trip; defence, L. Adams, R. Faulkner; wings, G. Morton, J. Crafton; centre, N. Clemett; subs, T. Rowan, W. Morton.

Lindsay C.I., 5; Omemee, 2.

Quite unexpected, a team from the Lindsay Collegiate Institute arrived on the 8.30 train the same evening. But by this time several of the Omemee players had left the rink and having an interest in the dance under hockey auspices, they could not be induced to return. As a result several junior members were brought into play. The ice was heavy and the locals met defeat by a score of 5-2.

Omemee, 8; C.P.C. 1.

On Saturday evening the Canadian Packing Co. of Peterboro was represented by a team who played an exhibition game with Omemee. The condition of the ice was excellent and the quality of play was good. Walter Mitchell was the capable referee. The visitors lost to Omemee by a score of 8-1.

Omemee, 4; Bethany, 1.

On Monday night three sleigh loads of forty merry makers comprising members of the hockey team and their lusty-voiced rooters travelled to Bethany. Circuitous routes landed the sleighs there on the instalment plan but by nine o'clock the team were ready to play. For sixty minutes the fans witnessed a game replete with spills, heavy checks and collisions on the poorly lighted rink.

Bethany scored the first goal but after that the boys from the tannery town led the march up and down the rink. The final score was, 4-1.

The members of the team were banqueted right royally by the manager of the rink, Mr. Davis, and after skating for an hour the gang piled into the sleighs and started for home. The return journey was considerably lessened by the ideal night, with the bright moonlight and the rabbits scampering up the road.

FEATURE GAME OF SEASON WITH GRADS TO-NIGHT

Everything Set for the Hockey Classic of the Year.

BOTH AT STRENGTH.

Rivals Are in Best of Shape For Important Fixture.

With a perfect sheet of ice, a good referee, both teams at full strength and in the best of shape and a record crowd certain, to-night's Senior O.H.A. game at Brock Street Rink between Varsity Grads and the Petes will be the feature event of the season.

Referee Tom Munro of London will send the teams away at 8.30 o'clock, and in spite of the cold weather there is not likely to be a vacant seat in the house by the time the puck is faced.

Both teams will give all they have for victory.

The Varsity crew have always had the idea that the papers made too much of the Petes' weakened condition in the Allen Cup series last year, robbing the students of some of the credit for their win, and on that account they will endeavor to beat Eddie Wright's team as far off as possible to-night.

On the other hand the home crew can get a stranglehold on second place by beating the students, and at the same time secure a whole lot of satisfaction.

It will be a battle all the way, and there shouldn't be a dull moment.

ROADS REPORT SUBMITTED TO COUNTY COUNCIL

Total Expenditure of United Counties For Good Roads Was $94,218.83.

HASTINGS PETITION.

COBOURG, Jan. 27—The expenditures on county roads in Northumberland and Durham in 1926 amounted to $95,213.51 as shown in the annual report of the Superintendent George Greer to the Counties Council. This total is reduced by $994.68 for sales of certain materials and for rebates leaving a net expenditure of $94,218.83, half of which amount will be returned to the Counties by the Ontario government. A requisition for this sum of $47,109 from the government was authorized by resolution at the opening session.

A summary of Mr. Greer's statement was included in his report to the Council as follows:

Expenditure

Road Construction	$40,539.34
Bridge Construction	11,678.76
Road Maintenance	26,962.64
Rebates, Towns & Villages	5,010.78
Machinery and Tools	6,548.87
Superintendence	4,473.12
Total	$95,213.51
Less Sales and Rebates	994.68
Total Expenditure,	$94,218.83

In the maintenance and repair of county roads in towns and villages $599.12 was spent in Campbellford, $215.55 in Hastings and $223.33 in Millbrook.

The Warkworth bridge cost $701.64, of which $307.30 was for cement used in the substructure in 1925 but paid for in 1926, and $394.34 for the floor put on in 1926. The bridge was built in 1925 but not completed until last year.

In the item for machinery $3671.60 was for new machines and $2877.27 for repairs.

Maintenance and repair of roads include $573 on Hoard's road in Seymour, $904.25 on the Hastings road in Percy and Seymour, $4702.66 on the Meyersburg road and $4503.02 on road No. 23 in Cramahe and Haldimand.

Hastings Petition

Reeve Hess of Hastings renewed his appeal for the Counties' support in obtaining a paved strip twenty feet wide on the main streets of Hastings that link together the county road systems in Peterboro and Northumberland.

The resolution from Hastings council set forth that the Ontario government would pay "dollar for dollar" with the Counties council, and that of the estimated cost $12,500 would be borne by Hastings and $12,500 by the Counties council. The proposed pavement would be on Bridge, Front, New, Victoria and Albert streets. The petition was referred to the Roads and Bridge committee.

High School Deputation.

A deputation representing High School Boards in the two counties, gave the council a troublesome and brain-fagging hour Wednesday afternoon with a request, which Deputy-reeve Maher of Cobourg said at one stage of the discussion, was "as clear as mud." Briefly, the visiting trustees and school officers asked the council to take cognizance of a 1925 amendment to the statutes providing for a refund to high school boards of money paid in the previous year to the counties council by the towns towards the cost of the education of township pupils.

The school rate levied by the counties applies alike to high school areas and the rural sections outside these areas, and consequently imposes on the towns a part of the cost of educating township students. The new amendment is designed to unscramble this discrepancy, but the method of the unscrambling involved arithmetica. nd technical details that required an extemporaneous short course in school finance.

The deputation was composed of W. J. Morrison, C. H. Mason and W. B. Couch of Bowmanville, C. McCallum, Dr. George Ferris and James McCulloch of Cobourg; George O'Sullivan of Campbellford; Dr. Thompson of Port Hope, and H. P. Pearce of Newcastle.

Reeve Wood of Millbrook, Deputy Reeve Thickson of Bowmanville, and Maher of Cobourg, were prominent in the council's side of the discussion. It was suggested that the additional amount due to a high school Board, according to the 1925 amendment, was the fraction which the local assessment was of the counties' equalized assessment of the total amount paid into the counties' treasurer in the preceding year.

Warden Elliott remarked that the payments were not due until June, thereby affording a respite for the Committee on Schools, and it is expected that the school board secretaries will obviate further cerebral pains by themselves calculating the amounts payable under this amendment, which, it was stated, should have been applied a year ago.

MODERN SPORTS IN ANCIENT SETTING

Winter sports are a joy at any time, but in the ideal environment of old Quebec they give a degree of pleasure unknown in more prosaic places.

Skiing down the Glacis 'neath the shadow of the ancient citadel, tobogganing on Dufferin Terrace with snow-blanketed Lower Town and the ice-bound river far below; sleigh drives through a countryside of quaintness, history and romance! There is winter sport indeed.

Canadian National train service is appreciated by those who seek the winter joys of old Quebec. Trains leave at convenient hours; accommodation and service are typically Canadian National.

TURNER, Idaho, Jan. 27 (Canadian Press.)—7 persons are dead and nearly a score injured, 12 seriously, as the result of an explosion of acetylene gas which wrecked the Morman Chapel and Recreation Hall last night while a basketball game was in progress.

Nearly 200 persons had assembled in a frame building for the game. Shortly after the play started some one struck a match and a terrific explosion followed. A portion of the ceiling fell near the exit and before the hall could be cleared the front wall collapsed. Most of the dead and injured were found near this exit.

COBB AND SPEAKER ON RESERVE LISTS

Cleared Of All Charges, Says Statement of Judge Landis.

CHICAGO, Jan. 27 (Canadian Press). — Tyrus Cobb and Tris Speaker to-day were cleared of all charges which might make them ineligible for participation in professional baseball, in a decision by Judge Kenesaw Mountain Landis, and given permission to rescind their withdrawal from baseball and return to the reserve lists of the Detroit Tigers and Cleveland Indians respectively.

"This is the Cobb-Speaker case," the decision by Commissioner Landis says. "These players have not been, nor are they now, found guilty of fixing a ball game. By no decent system of justice could such a finding be made. Therefore they were not placed on the ineligible list.

"As they desire to rescind their withdrawal from baseball, the releases which the Detroit and Cleveland clubs granted at their requests, in circumstances detailed above, are cancelled, and these players' names are restored to the reserve lists of those clubs."

CENTREVILLE CHURCH.

Congregation Hold Annual Meeting—Show Increase of Membership.

The annual meeting of the Centreville Presbyterian Congregation, was held in the Sunday school hall, on Tuesday, Jan. 18, with a good representative attendance. Rev. Mr. Riddle occupied the chair and gave the report of the session, showing an increase during the year of fifteen members.

Encouraging reports were presented from all the organizations of the church. The total receipts from all sources and for all purposes during the year were $3400, and after paying all expenses the Board of Management reported a balance of over $500. The Missionary givings, exclusive of the W.M.S. and Mission Band were $400, and with these included, were $653.

The Sunday school showed steady progress during the year.

The Ladies' Aid was active in raising over $400, a considerable sum of which was spent in re-decorating the Sunday school hall, and in other repairs.

A special committee was appointed to devise some means of establishing a fund, the interest on which will make the cemetery in connection with the church self sustaining.

After the business was concluded the ladies served lunch, and a social hour was spent.

His Joke Was Ill-Timed; What Became Of Constable?

WORCESTER, Mass., Jan. 27th.—(United Press.)—Traffic Officer Power was "broke" and wanted to borrow a couple of dollars until pay day. So when he saw his friend, Thomas Conlin, approaching in an automobile he lifted his white gloved hand and asked:

"Hey, Mr. Vanderbilt, have you got time to scribble me a check for $1,000,000. Both Conlin and a companion seemed embarrassed."

Later Policeman Power learned that the other occupant of the car was William H. Vanderbilt of New York and Newport.

HEMMING FALLS DEVELOPMENT WELL DESCRIBED

J. S. H. Wurtele Addresses Local Branch of Engineering Institute.

WELL ILLUSTRATED

Talk of Interest Because Power Machinery Was Largely Made Here.

At a meeting of the local branch of the Engineering Institute of Canada held in the Chamber of Commerce Council Chambers last night, J. S. H. Wurtele, B.A., B.Sc., vice-president and plant manager of the Southern Canada Power Company, Limited, delivered a most comprehensive and educational address on the Hemming Falls development on the St. Francois River in Quebec Province.

His address was of peculiar interest to most of those present as most of the equipment and machinery used in the development was supplied by the local factory of the Canadian General Electric Company.

B. L. Barns, President of the Institute, made a few announcements regarding the activities of the Institute.

The speaker of the evening was introduced by Max Sauer, who officiated as chairman for the occasion.

Illustrating his address with a variety of interesting views and diagrams showing the arrangement of the machinery, Mr. Wurtele entered into considerable detail regarding the activities of his company in that section of Quebec.

The Hemmings Falls power site, two and one-half miles above Drummondville, is at a point where a fifteen-foot fall terminated a series of rapids in which there was a total drop of fifty feet in a five-mile stretch of the river, declared Mr. Wurtele. There were favorable conditions in banks and riverbed at this point, and a practical scheme of development was evolved consisting essentially of a north wing wall, power house section, sluiceway section, spillway and south wing wall, together with an isolated earthfill dam. In this scheme two of the principal considerations which determined the exact location of the power house were, that a natural declivity could be enlarged to afford a well protected tailrace without excessive excavation, and advantage could be taken of an opportunity to so place the gatehouse that it would be exposed to the morning sun in winter time, and full advantage could so be taken of what assistance nature is willing to give towards overcoming operating difficulties in the frazil ice season.

Old Songs Of South Appeal To Mussolini

ROME, Jan. 28 (United Press)—Negro students from Fisk university, Nashville, Tenn., yesterday initiated Premier Mussolini into the melodies of their race during a private concert at Il Duce's home.

Mussolini listened with marked enthusiasm until finally the quintet sang My Old Kentucky Home.

"That was the best of all," exclaimed Mussolini, although he admitted that Old Black Joe was a close runner-up.

Mussolini gave the singers an autographed photograph.

FRENCH EXODUS FROM QUEBEC HOTLY DEBATED

Opposition Leader Charges Government With Paying For Press Silence.

FIGURES QUOTED.

Ministry Says Only 18,000 Left Province For States Last Year.

QUEBEC, Jan. 28. — Canadian Press. — The exodus of French Canadians from the province still formed the subject of discussion in the Legislative Assembly when the debate on the budget speech resumed yesterday.

Arthur Sauve, the Opposition leader, made another onslaught on the newspapers of the province, except for what he termed the "free press," saying that the newspapers were under orders from the government never to criticize the government but always to attack the opposition, and he exclaimed that disobedience to this order brought the removal of newspapers from the government fund. The government, he said, had paid newspapers more than five million dollars in the last ten years to secure their support.

Hon. Mr. Perrault, minister of Colonization ,said Mr. Sauve was appealing to prejudice and felt that the government which could produce such a surplus as had been produced had nothing to fear as to its record. He showed that Washington figures showed that only 91,000 Canadians had left for the United States last year, and of this number only 18,000 had been French Canadians.

TWO MEETINGS HELD AT RESERVE

Plowmen's Banquet at Oshweken and Protest Gathering Peaceful.

BRANTFORD, Jan. 28. — While two factions on the Six Nations Indian Reserve held opposition meetings 200 yards from each other last night, it was a case of peaceful warfare. There was no demonstration, such as was staged recently when the Agricultural Hall, locked and bolted by official orders, was broken open.

The situation remains as before the meetings, with the factions deadlocked and looking forward to some authoritative settlement of their differences

Plowmen's Banquet.

Wednesday night's gatherings were the annual plowmen's banquet and a protest meeting staged by members of the Six Nations Agricultural Society, the organization which refuses to consider itself nonexistent, though it has officially been declared so by department authorities.

'Whispering Gallery' Author Acquitted By London Jury

LONDON, Jan. 28 (Canadian Press).—Heskels Pearson was acquitted by a jury today of the charge of obtaining £225 from the John Lane Publishing Company under false pretences, by claiming that his book "Whispering Gallery" was written from the diary of Sir Renneli Rodd.

Pearson admitted that he wrote the book himself and that Sir Rennell was not involved, but declared he assumed the publishers knew the true situation.

Because of its alleged revelation concerning prominent personages, "Whispering Gallery" caused a sensation at the time of its appearance last November.

PRESENTATION TO PRESIDENT AT ANNUAL FAIR BOARD BANQUET

Suitably Inscribed Tray Given Roland Denne by Members of Board.

LARGE ATTENDANCE

Deputy Minister of Agriculture Gives Instructive Address.

Appreciation of the work done by President Roland Denne, expressed by every speaker at the annual banquet of the Exhibition Board last night, found tangible expression in a presentation made to him by the members of the Board. William Steinkrauss made the presentation, on behalf of the directors, of a silver tray, inscribed, "Presented to Roland Denne, president, by his fellow directors, Peterborough Exhibition Board, 1927."

President Denne, in expressing his thanks, said that any work he had done had been a pleasure, but the biggest pleasure of his work for the Exhibition had been the men with whom he had to work. The good fellowship that had existed between himself and the directors had been the best reward of all.

The banquet was held in the Empress Hotel, and the guests, who included the members of the County and City Councils and other citizens, filled the large dining-room. The Hon. J. S. Martin, Minister of Agriculture for Ontario, who was to have been the chief speaker, was unable to attend, because of illness, and the Deputy Minister, W. B. Roadhouse, officiated in his stead in a most capable manner.

Mr. Roadhouse opened his address by expressing the regrets of the Minister at his inability to attend. He said that Mr. Martin had looked forward to the function, and had been disappointed at being prevented by illness from attending. The Deputy Minister said that he had come to show appreciation for the work of the Exhibition, and to say a few kind words which might prove of some use. He joined in the congratulations of President Denne on his re-election for a tenth term, recalling that two years ago he had attended the annual banquet, presided over by Mr. Denne, and expressing hope that ten years or so from now he might attend a similar function and find him still in the chair. He said that this would be showing greater kindness to the Exhibition Board than to Mr. Denne as the presidency was a job that made great demands on the time and energy of those in charge.

The speaker said that two years ago Mr. Denne had made two requests of him. One was that the county agricultural representative should be transferred from Norwood to Peterborough, and the other was for a grant for the Fair. The first of these was being done this coming spring, not that other parts of the country were to be neglected, but that the representative would be better able to reach all districts and be of better service. Perhaps when the revenues of the Province become more buoyant there will be some hope of fulfilling the other request. The difficulty with this is the large number of fairs to be considered.

Peterborough Fair stands first in the province except for those in the large cities of Toronto, London and Ottawa. The directors have built up a splendid Fair, of which they may well be proud.

Turning to a more distinctly agricultural subject, Mr. Roadhouse took up the dairying industry. This, he said, is an important industry in Peterborough County, and it is one with which the department has been principally concerned during the past year. The milk industry is important from many standpoints.

He took up the cow testing plan introduced at the beginning of May. By this a producer is enabled to find out the production of his cows both in quantity of milk and in butter-fat. Some interesting figures have been compiled. The best twenty cows tested averaged 7,622 pounds of milk in six months, while the poorest twenty averaged only 4,478. This, the Minister said meant

LITTLE DAMAGE TO PEACH TREES

Growers Say Weather Has Not Yet Been Cold Enough.

ST. CATHARINES, Ont., Jan. 28. —Fruit growers expressed the opinion here yesterday that the severe weather ha. to date had little or no effect on the peach orchards, despite the recurring reports each year that zero weather kills the peach crop.

"The mercury can drop to 12 below zero and no damage will be occasioned," said an experienced grower. The lowest in this distric during the late cold dip was six below.

G. B. Shaw Acts As Chairman Of Debate About Women Causes More Amusement Than Remarks Of Debaters

LONDON, Jan. 28 (Canadian Press).—George Bernard Shaw had a new role when he acted as chairman of a debate on the "Menace of Leisured Woman" last night. The assembly which gathered at Kingsway Hall to hear the debate between Gilbert Chesterton and Lady Rhondda were more tickled with the remarks of Shaw than in the actual debate.

Formerly, said the famous writer, women had little leisure, but nowadays that was changed by service in flats, and residential hotels, and " a woman can spend her time drinking cocktails, going to night clubs, dancing the Charleston, and doing all the things many women seem to imagine will fill their lives gloriously."

He did not know if Mr. Chesterton was going to defend night clubs, but it was his opinion that if challenged to dance the Charleston with Lady Rhondda, Mr. Chesterton could not do it.

Lady Rhondda said the existence of leisured women constituted a grave menace to civilization, while Mr. Chesterton held that home was the place for women.

CANADA'S HISTORY AND DESTINY DISCUSSED BY KIWANIS SPEAKER

Ven. Archdeacon Renison, of Hamilton, Delivers a Thoughtful Address.

COUNCIL PRESENT.

Peterborough County Council and Clergy of Rural Deanery Guests.

Members of Kiwanis Club and their guests, the Clergy of the Rural Deanery of Peterborough and the members of the Peterborough County Council listened to one of the most inspirational and educational addresses that has ever been delivered in the city.

Venerable Archdeacon R. J. Renison, D.D., of Hamilton, was the speaker, the occasion being the usual weekly luncheon of the Kiwanis club held in the Empress Hotel to-day.

I. P. McNabb, president of the club extended an official welcome to Warden Middleton and the members of the County Council and congratulated Warden Middleton on his election to such " a high and exalted office.'" He also welcomed the clergy of the Rural Deanery of Peterborough and a number of others who were the guests of members.

The speaker was introduced by Kiwanian the Rev. J. D. Paterson, who said that he was "outstanding in his work among the natives in James Bay and in the district around Cochrane, before the railway had entered there. From there he was called to Hamilton and in a few weeks will assume charge of the most important Church in Canada, west of Ontario.

The booster for the day was J. P. Bond. The prize winners were J. C. Green, Jack Comstock, and Joseph Wearing.

The musical programme was ably supplied by Jack Smith and Bob Hendry. "The Singing Scots" and Harry Wagner who gave two delightful numbers on the guitar.

Archdeacon Renison

Declaring that he would depart from the usual conception of a luncheon address to members of clubs, Venerable Archdeacon R. J. Renison said he would pay the Peterborough Kiwanis Club the compliment of "speaking as seriously as I can."

There are some periods in the history of every nation when men stop to think. During the past ten years Canada has descended from the mountain peaks of idealism when the youth of the country made the name of Canada famous throughout the world, when, baring their chests to the spears of German militarism, and facing the diabolical gas, they died, but saved the name of Britain. "Those young Canadians who died may have left their bodies on a foreign soil but in so doing they

Famous Child Prodigy Now Seeking Divorce

NEW YORK, Jan. 28.—(Canadian Press.)—Mrs. Louis P. Hyman, who was an infant prodigy, is seeking divorce. At the age of three she noted that a cow would not leap a fence, let alone the moon, called her mother a provacarist, and published an attack on Mother Goose. The child's mother, Mrs. Winnifred Sackville Stoner, then became an antagonist of childhood fables. Also she has been an advocate of early marriage.

SEVEN KILLED IN WINDSTORM

Buildings Collapse in Glasgow During Fierce Storm To-day.

MANY PEOPLE HURT.

GLASGOW, Jan. 28 (Canadian Press).—Seven persons are reported to have been killed and many were injured here to-day in the collapse of a number of buildings, caused by a fierce windstorm which swept Scotland and Northern England.

Three men are reported to have been buried in the ruins of a warehouse. Four persons lost their lives in another collapse and two tenement houses fell.

Fifty persons were taken to the hospitals.

Instead Of "Dentist" Say "Gnathologist

CHICAGO, Jan. 28—"Gnathologist,' that's it. Following the quest of barbers and bakers for new names, the dentists want to be known by a new high-sounding name of Greek derivation. "Dentist," they aver, means naught but a humble "tooth carpenter." They are above that now; they claim to be scientific.

Dr. B. B. McColumn of Los Angeles made the demand for adoption for the new name to the National Convention. He says it means a person "versed in the science of the masticatory apparatus."

President To Curb Oratory Of Reichstag Deputies By "Go" and "Stop" Signals Same As Traffic Signs

BERLIN, Jan. 28.—President Loebe of the Reichstag will direct the oratory of the Reichstag Deputies with a series of signal lights, the same as a traffic policeman gives "Go" and "Stop" signals.

On his desk are a series of buttons connected with different colored lamps at the Deputies' desks. The loquacious will be warned five minutes before the expiration of the allotted speaking time by yellow lights. When time is up another light will be flashed by President Loebe. Should this fail to quell the speaker, he will resort to a large handbell, which is used instead of a gavel to call the house to order.

The traffic light system is another step of President Loebe to curb parliamentary time-wasters, the original idea of which was inspired by Vice-President Dawes in his attempts to curb unlimited debate in the American Senate.

PETERBORO' EXCHANGE STARTED IN 1880 WITH 15 SUBSCRIBERS

Ensuing 47 Years Have Seen Great Progress in 'Phone System.

80 EMPLOYEES NOW.

Nearly 5,000 'Phones Connected Now, With 32,000 Calls Daily.

It was during the year 1880, the same year the Bell Telephone Company was incorporated, that the first telephone was installed in the city. Year by year since that time the telephone has kept pace with every modern development, and so common is its use that it would be hard to conceive just what it would mean to business people to be without it.

During the 47 years that have elapsed since the number of telephones has increased from 15 to 4,986 at which figure it stands today.

The first exchange was opened by George D. Edwards, a brother of the late E. B. Edwards, a local barrister, who at the time was on a visit to his parents who lived in the city.

The following year, 1881, F. Prout was appointed as manager, being really the first man to occupy that position here.

The switchboard was one of the earliest type, known as the "Post," and was located in the rear room of E. B. Edwards' law office, which was situated on Simcoe street. The first operator was Harry Brown, a son of J. Brown, who kept a furniture and undertaking establishment.

In January, 1882, A. T. Smith was appointed manager for Peterborough, Lindsay, Port Hope and Cobourg. He made his headquarters at Peterborough, replacing Mr. Prout, who was completely discouraged and in bad health. By this time there were 37 subscribers connected on the Peterborough switchboard. Lines were single grounded and each line carried from three to six stations. They were constructed on house tops, trees, etc., as the only poles in town carried telegraph wires. During the year, however, poles were erected on Water, Charlotte and several other streets, and by the end of the year there were 81 subscribers, making it necessary to remove the office to larger quarters.

It was placed in the upstairs rooms at the corner of Simcoe and George streets, above the store now occupied by the Kingan Hardware Company, and formerly occupied by the late Senator George A. Cox as a photograph studio and lending library. Immediately underneath, W. J. Flavelle (now Sir Joseph) occupied a flour and feed store.

The first lady operator was Miss Lettie Moffat, a member of a well known family. E. F. Mason, now one of the city's most prominent merchants, was also an operator.

Early in 1883 the first long distance line between Port Hope and Peterborough was completed, being extended to Lindsay later in the same year. This consisted of a single grounded iron wire, connection with Toronto and Belleville being obtained via Port Hope.

In those days it was far more difficult to talk to Toronto than it is at present to talk from Peterborough to Vancouver. On the completion of these long distance lines the telephone rapidly graduated it to the list of essentials and from that time on the growth of the local exchange was rapid.

Today the entire staff consists of 80 persons. An average of 32,000 calls is received at the local office. This if taken for a year reaches the stupendous total of 11,680,000 calls.

That the future of the telephone in Peterborough will attain even greater dimension than it has already accomplished is indicated by the fact that the Bell Telephone Company spends on an average about $50,000 a year for additions to plant and modern improvements.

DENIES RUMOR CANADIANS TO ENTER CONFLICT

Premier King's Answer Regarding Canada's Part in Chinese War.

NO ANNOUNCEMENTS

Consider Commission's Report on Maritime Rights at Cabinet Council.

OTTAWA, Ont., Jan. 28 (Canadian Press).—"Tell me where the rumor came from and I will talk to you about it," remarked Premier Mackenzie King last night concerning the report that Canada was being secretly sounded out on the question of military participation in the Chinese war. It was at the close of a four-hour Cabinet Council, the first Premier King has attended for a week. He stated that sessional business had been under discussion all afternoon, and that he had no announcement to make.

He dismissed with a smile questions concerning the possibility of Canada being embroiled in the Chinese affair. "Why should we?" he asked. "I really cannot say anything about it because there is nothing to say. It is a civil war between North and South China. To attempt to drag the Canadian Government into it is merely mischief-making."

Consider Report

It is understood that one of the matters discussed at yesterday's Council was the report of the commission on Maritime Province rights and claims. It has not been disclosed and probably not yet decided, how far the Government will go this session towards carrying out the recommendations of the Andrew Rae Duncan commission.

It is rumored that the recommendation regarding coking plants will be carried out this year as well as the suggestion that a flat increase be made in the Federal subsidy to the three provinces pending a revision of the whole financial agreement between the Dominion and Provinces. The recommendation regarding subsidised freight rates, however, is said to be unlikely to go through this session. There is known to be a division of opinion in the Cabinet and the matter will be very thoroughly threshed out in Parliament before the Government commits itself to the principle.

Apparently no appointments were made at yesterday's Council. That of W. W. Moore to the Tariff Board chairmanship was made at an earlier Council, but was held up pending the return of Premier King to his office. He has been at his country home for a few days.

THE WEATHER.

The temperature this morning was 15 degrees above zero—forty degrees higher than 24 hours previous. The lowest the thermometer reached was 5 degrees above. There is no decidedly cold weather anywhere at the present time, but snow is falling in many places.—W. P.

Too Raw For Broadway "The Drag" Is Abandoned

NEW YORK, Jan. 28 (United Press).—Broadway finally has "fessed up" to having found a play too raw for its taste. "The Drag," which was to have its premiers in Stanford, Conn., this week, never will see the footlights of New York. C. William Morgan Thorn, producer of "Sex," which is by way of being a red rag before the censorial bull itself, was to have sponsored the new play and had invited a number of New York theatrical magnates to witness a dress rehearsal here. Then some one with an ounce of vision took a look at "The Drag" and suggested that a garbage pail with a tight cover would be a nifty place for the manuscript, which is where it has gone.

GREAT BRITAIN TO OFFER TERMS FOR SETTLEMENT

While Not Yet Made Public Terms Expected to be Generous.

LONDON ANXIOUS

Assume Proposals Will Provide Security and Basis for Trading.

(By Canadian Press.)

A full exposition of Great Britain's policy towards China, which Col. L. C. M. Amoy, Colonial Secretary, describes as generous," is expected when Sir Austen Chamberlain, Foreign Secretary, speaks at Birmingham on Saturday night. He is expected to outline the new proposals made to the Nationalists at Hankow.

Meanwhile it is unofficially reported that the policy embraces surrender of British concessions throughout China, including extra territoriality, and new treaties with certain guarantees.

Measures of ensuring the safety of Shanghai foreigners in cases of emergency are continuing. Foreign consuls deny they have received a memorandum from the southern nationalists proposing that no British troops be landed in Shanghai, or that troops of the Northern army evacuate the city and allow the Cantonese forces to protect foreigners. The situation is reported to be unchanged. Eight thousand British troops will leave for China over the week-end as part of the British protective force. The British Labor party, supporting China's nationalistic aims, will hold demonstrations a week from Sunday supporting peaceful settlement.

LONDON, Jan. 27 (Canadian Press).—Great Britain is about to offer to China what are described as "generous" terms, to end, if possible the serious situation, with its grave possibilities, that has arisen in the Far East.

The British press and public are anxiously awaiting official publication of the proposals, but up to the present the Ministers content themselves, with repudiating inaccurate versions of alleged terms published in the foreign press, and at the same time asserting that the terms, when made public, will be found to be generous. The impression drawn from the Ministerial hints is that while the proposals may not go far enough to satisfy the Government's Liberal and Labor critics, they will prove too conciliatory to please the ultra-Conservative supporters of the Government and the British business communities in China.

Though it is understood that the terms will provide for the eventual surrender of the British concessions in China, including extra territoriality, nothing has been allowed to leak concerning a question, which is considered vastly more important, namely, what are the guarantees that will be required from China and in what way does the Government propose to get over the difficulty that there is no single governing body in China at the present time by which such guarantees could be extended.

It is generally assumed that the Government, in drafting its proposals, has looked beyond existing difficulties to something which will provide security and a satisfactory basis for trading of a permanent character.

Modifications Lenient.

L. C. M. Amery, of the Colonial Office, in a speech at Kilmarnock last night, said that when the terms were published it would be found that the modifications proposed to the present treaty position would be so far reaching, so generous and so considerate that it would be impossible to conceive of their being rejected by any section in China. If they were rejected, he declared, it would be owing to the dominance of Bolshevik agents and policy over the real will of China.

Col. Amery reiterated that there was no idea of war or conquests or participation in the civil struggles of China, nor even of influencing negotions through the forces despatched to China.

An interesting report from Shanghai mentions a movement on the past of Cantonese leaders to reach a self-denying agreement with the northern leaders to withdraw all Chinese troops from the Shanghai district, thereby affording no excuse for the landing of foreign troops. Such a development would

NEW POLICE WEAPON.

NEW YORK, Jan. 28. Canadian Press. — A new armament was added to the New York Police Force today, in the form of a 20-inch six-shot repeating rifle. It is a cross between a pistol and a rifle and will be used in long distance firing at bandits in flight.

STABILITY POLICY FOR FRANC ACCLAIMED IN FRENCH CAPITAL

Bourse Reflects Political and Business Satisfaction Over Poincare's Plan.

POSITION STRONG.

Capital Believes No Combination Can Upset His Cabinet.

PARIS, Jan. 26.—The Bourse yesterday reflected strongly the satisfaction felt in political and business circles over Premier Poincare's statement Wednesday that the Government, through the Bank of France, will do everything possible to maintain the franc at its present value.

Politically the Premier has made his position at the head of the Government all but impregnable. His record of accomplishment during the past six months, which directly appeals to an enormous number of French voters who own Government securities, now steadily rising in value, is said to be such that no party or combination of parties can be formed with strength enough to attack his Government of national union.

In the means used to relieve the tragic situation of last July the Premier is considered to have been particularly skillful. He has avoided most of the means which would have given his political opponents a chance to criticize him. He has made no large credit operations such as the French experts advised and Joseph Caillaux considered necessary, and, by so doing, he has avoided the charge which was made against M. Caillaux, that he was preparing to hand the country over to the mercy of "Anglo-Saxon financiers."

The foreign loans which he has raised at successively improving rates have been carefully sought in neutral countries, and it is even acclaimed in yesterday's comment that the Premier has avoided further indebtedness to the allied creditors.

Bourse Reacts Favorably

On Bourse yesterday the result of the Premier's statement is evident in the notable rise in the value of French industrial securities and the hardening of rentes, despite a certain weakening of the exchange, due, it is stated, to the heavy purchase of foreign moneys by importers who are seeking to cover, there being no immediate possibility of a further rise in the franc.

Of the Bank of France's ability to hold the franc near the present value there is little doubt, and interest is centred in whether industry and living costs will adapt themselves to that rate without serious economic difficulties.

It is evidently the Premier's hope, and his statement is so interpreted here, that the present rate will be only a stage in an advance of even greater revalorization. He carefully emphasized that the present stability is intended only to give time to industry to reorganize itself. Following this reorganization he is understood to have conveyed the wish that there might be another step. That will, however, depend entirely on how satisfactorily this first stabilization works out.

There is already a fairly large though not disastrous slackening in industry and many trades, but it has been characterized by the steady refusal of manufacturers in trades of all kinds to reduce prices with the improvement of the franc. It is that reduction of prices which is now said to be M. Poincare's objective.

He is now going to try to get the whole scale of living in France, which has suffered enormous exaggeration during the period of franc depression, back on something like the solid basis of five times the pre-war scale. The task is going to be slow and costly. At the present franc rate, however, it is not an impossible task, and politically M. Poincare is strong enough to put it through.

CAMPAIGN FUND PROBE PROPOSED BY GOVERNMENT

Creation of Inquiry Board Urged on British Columbia House.

WANT CLEAN-UP.

Legislation For Future Cases May Be Provided.

VICTORIA, B.C., Jan. 28 (Canadian Press Service).—The question of campaign funds from liquor interests occupied the attention of the British Columbia legislature for the greater part of Wednesday's sitting, both Premier John Oliver and Attorney-General A. M. Manson in turn reviewing the whole matter. At the conclusion of his address Mr. Manson moved that a transcript of the evidence that had been taken before the royal commission investigating the customs and excise department be obtained and tabled in the House and that a select committee composed of Brigadier-General Victor Odlum, D. McPherson, and Dr. W. R. Inch, Liberals; W. A. MacKenzie, Conservative, and R. H. Neillans, Labor, be appointed to examine this evidence with power to examine witnesses under oath and to make such recommendations as they see fit. If, in the opinion of committee it was deemed wise, legislation would be provided at this session of the legislature dealing with the matter of campaign funds.

Moved by Labor

Mr. Manson's motion was in the form of an amendment to the motion of F. A. Browne, Labor, which calls for an investigation into campaign funds.

R. H. Pooley, Conservative House leader, opposed the amendment, saying that members on his side of the House wanted the matter cleaned up without delay.

Debate was adjourned.

Lyrics Of Life

(By Douglas Malloch.)

MAN'S PLACE

"Woman's place is in the home,
Among her pots and pans,
Men will tell you, while they roam—
I wonder where is man's?
Well, I judge, from where he spends
His time, and where he meets his friends,
It isn't home, I want to warn her,
But at the store around the corner.

It's at the ballgame, on the links,
It's maybe playing pool,
It's almost any place he thinks
It's either warm or cool,
According to the time of year—
It's almost anywhere but here,
It's at a dinner or a smoker,
Or else a little game of poker.

It's sitting on an empty box,
Or fishing from a log,
It's up the alley seven blocks
To see a fellow's dog,
It's somewhere playing politics,
It's somewhere helping someone fix
An automobile that is balking,
But helping mostly with the talking.

"Woman's place is in the home,
Among her pots and pans,
Men will tell you, while they roam—
I wonder where is man's?
Well, I judge, from where he spends
His time, and where he meets his friends,
While around the town he chases,
Man's place is all the other places.

Measure Prepared In France To Prevent the Sale Of Antiques and Objects Of Art To United States

PARIS, Jan. 28.—Aroused by the transfer to the United States of many works of art, chateaux, and other objects which could be classed as historic public monuments, Henri Auriol, Deputy for Haute Garonne, has prepared a measure which, if approved, will prevent such sales to Americans and other foreigners.

M. Auriol says that 32,000 historic monuments in France are going into decay for lack of State funds to keep them up. Antique dealers are reaping huge profits through sales to American millionaires and others. The bill would definitely place ruined chateaux, objects of art, etc., in the category of State treasures and authorize the seizure at ports of any of these destined for shipment abroad.

"France has already been despoiled of many of her priceless works of art and it is high time that an end was put to this shameful practice," said M. Auriol.

ARGUMENT ENDS IN GOULD CASE

Had Abandoned Hope of Receiving Testimony From Ex-Premier Flemming.

BRIBERY CASE.

WASHINGTON, D.C., Jan. 28 (Canadian Press)—With conclusion of argument by counsel last night, the senate election committee took under advisement the case involving bribery charges against Senator Gould, Republican, Maine. It plans to submit a report next week.

The committee abandoned hope for receiving testimony from former Premier Flemming, of New Brunswick, concerning the $100,000 campaign contribution of the Gould railroad interests to his party, his physicians advising Mr. Flemming was ill.

In closing argument Frederick W. Hinckley, chief counsel for Gould, declared that the Sentor's innocence had been proved conclusively and that the case "would fall flat in a court of law." He compared Gould to a man with a highwayman's pistol at his head and said that the $100,000 had been paid in 1912 to save Gould and his associates from ruin.

Martin Paskus, of Gould's counsel, contended the senate had no power to judge the fitness of a person elected to that body or to refuse a seat to a senator because of any act committed prior to his election. By permitting Gould to take the oath, he argued, the Senate already had passed on his qualifications and it can only expel a Senator for committing an offence against the senate.

A different line of argument was taken by Senator Walsh, Democrat, Montana, who is prosecuting the case of the committee. He held that the payment of $100,000 would have constituted a bribe of Premier Flemming even if it had been made at the premier's request to a charitable organization. He said that he never had contended that Gould actually handed the money over to Flemming but that the evidence showed that he had agreed to pay it.

Mr. Walsh took the position that the senate was the sole judge of its membership and had authority to expell a member for just cause.

be welcomed by many in England, who fear that the British military and naval preparations might have a provocative effect and who strongly object to Great Britain assuming the role of European policemen in China.

Reports current in London yesterday say that a number of additional aeroplanes are being despatched to the Far East. More than 8,000 troops will sail from London and Southampton for Shanghai to-day and to-morrow. This is the biggest transport problem undertaken here since the Tchanak crisis in the Gallipoli campaign in the Great War.

OLD MASTERS

How many thousand of my poorest subjects
Are at this hour asleep! O sleep! O gentle sleep!
Nature's soft nurse, how have I frighted thee,
That thou no more wilt weigh my eyelids down
And steep my senses in forgetfulness?
Why rather, sleep, liest thou in smoky cribs,
Upon uneasy pallets stretching thee,
And hush'd with buzzing nightflies to thy slumber,
Than in the perfum'd chambers of the great,
Under the canopies of costly state,
And lull'd with sound of sweetest melody?
O thou dull god! why liest thou with the vile
In lothsome beds, and leav'st the kingly couch
A watch-case or a common 'larum bell?
Wilt thou upon the high and giddy mast
Seal up the ship-boy's eyes, and rock his brains
In cradle of the rude imperious surge,
And in the visitation of the winds,
Who take their ruffian billows by the top,
Curling their monstrous heads, and hanging them
With deaf'ning clamor in the slippery clouds,
That with the hurly-death itself awakes?
Canst thou, O partial sleep! give thy repose
To the wet sea-boy in an hour so rude,
And in the calmest and most stillest night,
With all appliances and means to boot
Deny it to a king? Then, happy low lie down!
Uneasy lies the head that wears a crown.

1926 EARNINGS SHOW INCREASE

Bethlehem Steel Corporation Profits Greatest of Any Peace Year.

FORM NEW BASIS.

NEW YORK, Jan. 28. —(Canadian Press.)—Total earnings of the Bethlehem Steel Corporation for the final quarter of 1926 and for the year were the largest of any like period in peace itme. This was disclosed to-day in the report of Pres. E. Grace to directors at their quarterly meeting. Earnings were the largest since the acquisition of the Lackawanna Steel Company and the Midvale Steel and Ordnance Co. in 1922, and 1923 respectively, which brought about a new basis for comparison.

Total income for the quarter was $10,751,118, compared with $10,585,064 in the preceding three months and $10,543.136 in the final quarter of 1925. Earnings for the year $45,405,253 compared with $38,988,742 the year before.

Fourth quarter net earnings were equivalent to $1.55 per share on the common stock as compared with $1.57 a share in the third quarter, the decrease being due to increases in amounts charged off for interest, depreciation and similar issues.

No action was taken on common stock dividends, which were discontinued in 1924.

WARKWORTH, Jan. 28.—Mrs. George Potter of Percy died at the home of Mr. Randolph Potter on Jan. 23rd, after a few days illness. Mrs. Potter was in her seventy-third year and a resident of this vicinity all her life. The remains were interred in the Warkworth cemetery.

THOMAS SYKES.

WARKWORTH, Jan. 28.—Death has claimed another of our well known residents in the person of Mr. Thomas Sykes, of Percy. Mr. Sykes was seventy-six years of age and spent most of his life in Percy township. The funeral, which was largely attended, was held on Tuesday, interment in Warkworth cemetery.

NELLIE MAY WILLIAMS.

MARMORA, Jan. 28—Widespread gloom was cast over the village on Tuesday evening when it was learned that Nellie May Williams, eldest est daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Jesse Williams had passed to rest in Nicholls Hospital, Peterborp. The deceased young lady was one of the most energetic that the village has known. As a girl, she displayed much ability at school and Marmora was proud when a little over four years ago she was appointed to the teaching staff of the Publics chool where she had the oversight of a home of five sisters of which she was the eldest, having been bereft of both parents withing nine months. Herein she showed capable management. She was also an example to others in her religious life, working zealously for the welfare of the United church of which she was a member. As Sunday school teacher, chorister and Young People's League president, she will be long remembered there. She is survived by four sisters, Elsie Hazel, Gladys and Jessie, for whom the deepest sympathy has been manifested. The funeral took place on Thursday afternoon, being conducted at the United church by Rev. C. J. Beckley, pastor. Beautiful floral emblems were seen in evidence of the high esteem in which the young lady was held, further evidence being forthcoming in the large attendance at the church.

GENERAL STRIKE COST TRAINMEN MILLION POUNDS

Additional Levy Will Be Made on Union Members.

MORTGAGE FUNDS.

No Money But Weekly Income To Meet Calls.

LONDON, Jan. 28 (Canadian Press Service).—The general strike in May last cost the National Union of Railwaymen a million pounds. An additional levy is now to be made on members of threepence a week, and members are disposed to criticize this imposition.

To answer the criticisms a statement appears in The Railway Review, the official organ of the union, showing there is now no money but the weekly income of the union with which to meet the daily call for members' assistance. Two weks ago, for the first time since the general strike, the union received more money in a week than it paid out.

Funds Mortgaged

At the end of 1925 the general fund of the union amounted to £727,000. From this source is paid administrative expenses, unemployment pay and strike pay. During last year, and mainly of course, owing to the general strike, the union paid to its members £1,750,000 in strike and unemployment pay. Consequently it was necessary to mortgage the accident fund, disablement fund, head office employees' superannuation and other funds to meet the calls of unemployment benefit for members.

PRESENTATION TO PRESIDENT

a difference of over $500 in the revenue from a herd of ten cows. This, he said, is the result of a little more care and feed under similar conditions. Going further into the matter, he said that 170 pounds of butter-fat is necessary to pay for the feed and care of a cow for a year, so that more than this must be produced to show a profit. The poor cows showed 78 pounds above the minimum, while the good ones showed 172, or two and a half times as much profit.

One important object of these tests is to get information so that the producers can raise the standards of their herds. In Wentworth County they were started two years ago, and the second year's tests showed a gain in average milk production of several hundred pounds. Even if only $200 were added to the income from the farm for the year it would pay the taxes, and the entire industry in the county of Peterborough would be a million dollars ahead in a very few years.

Discussing milk from the standpoint of diet, Mr. Roadhouse said that irradiated milk had been suggested by an article in an English paper. This arose from the discoveries that exposure to the sun's rays had beneficial effects of the health of people so treated, and it was suggested that a cake having absorbed some of the properties of the rays might be fed to the cattle, so that the benefits could be received through milk charged with vitamins. It was not wise to be skeptical of any proposal or suggestion of what the future might hold, the speaker said, when the marvels of recent years were considered.

Science underlies agriculture as well as other activities, and the fairs are useful here by recording the advances made and by giving impetus to further advances in years to come. In arts and industry, live stocks and manufacturing, there is presented in a striking way the progress made and the further progress possible.

Fairs are an inspiration to higher citizenship, he continued, and this year, as the sixtieth anniversary of Confederation, the fairs could do well by trying to show some of the incidents of the building up of the nation. They could show the contributions of their own districts towards the national growth, thereby making their contribution to further growth and higher and better citizenship. Fairs do this now by bringing together men of all walks of life and impressing on them their common duty and privilege in spite of their differences in occupation. He closed by quoting a short verse on greatness:

"That man is great, no matter what his labor,
Who wins the admiration of his neighbor;
That man is great, no matter what his station,
Who truly serves his God, his home, his nation."

Thomas McIndoo, vice-president of the Fair, said that the Hon. J. S. Martin was considered one of the most outstanding men in Ontario life, but that Mr. Roadhouse must be second, and moved a hearty vote of thanks.

Reg. H. Turner said that he could not add to the words of Mr. McIndoo in expressing the vote of thanks.

He referred to the presence of several men there who had been on the Exhibition Board when he had been elected the same year as Mr. Denne's first election as president. He said he had been proud when he had been elected in his father's place. He had wanted then to get out as he couldn't do the work. He had been persuaded to stay and had been one of those who had worked for a big front, i.e., a new gate.

Ball Room Is Being Planned For Super-Zeppelin Design Problems Now Postpones Its Completion

FRIEDRICHSHAFEN, Jan. 28.—The design of the super-Zeppelin for the Spanish-South American air service is presenting so many new construction problems that it is now predicted that the time for its completion will be set back from Autumn of this year to the middle of next year.

The problem of storing the gas which will be used instead of gasoline for fuel is presenting a difficult engineering problem. The designers are also asking that special instruments be made by which solar observations from the moving ship will be more accurate than with the present type.

Great improvements in radio equipment are requested, both to insure proper weather predictions being given to the navigators and to establish locations when observations are impossible.

The comfort of the passengers will be one of the first considerations. A kitchen capable of supplying choice viands to forty passengers will be electrically operated. The dining room, which is to be in a separate gondola, can be converted into a ballroom where the guests may dance to radio music on the rich carpets.

Sleeping quarters will be similar to those on luxury trains. Special attention will be paid to the ventilation of the gondolas, providing an even temperature whether the flight is over snow-capped mountains or under the vertical rays of the tropic sun.

A collection was made which produced $1,700 for the gates. Since then $50,000 has been spent on the grounds, besides the work done by the farmers who came in with their teams.

He advised those present that money was wanted more than ever, and said the Board would put dollar for dollar to the grants given, either by money or labor. He thanked all for previous assistance and asked them to continue it.

President Roland Denne.

President Roland Denne, in his inaugural remarks, thanked the directors for honoring him by electing him for the tenth year. They should, he said, have elected William Steinkrauss the dean of the Board. The position of the Exhibition, he said, was peculiar, as after nine successful years, the grant paid as a Class B fair by the Dominion Government would be cut out. Now the Board is seeking to have the Fair put into Class A. This is the heart of the Midland district, and judges from Toronto and Ottawa have said that Peterborough should have a Class A fair.

The banquet this year, he continued, was held so that the members of the County Council could attend, and he welcomed them as well as the Aldermen.

He spoke of the need of more accommodation at the grounds, and advised the councils that increased grants would be sought. He reminded them that $5,700 was paid in prizes to rural residents.

The fact that many people couldn't visit Toronto and other fairs, was given as a reason for improving the fair here.

Mr Denne thanked the representatives of the railways companies for service given in moving stock, and urged his hearers to patronize them instead of using the bus lines and ruining the roads the people pay

Mayor Holloway.

His Worship Mayor Holloway expressed his pleasure at being present and congratulated the president on the success of the banquet, tendering the visitors "the freedom of the city and the key of Mr. Denne's cellar." He spoke of the progress made by the exhibition, which he called the most important event in the year in the city. The directors had built up an exhibition of great value, especially educational to old and young.

He urged the necessity of supporting the exhibition, saying that its success did not depend entirely on the Board. A larger membership would be a guarantee of certain success. The survival of the fair, when others broke up was given by the Mayor as a reason for the retention of the Dominion grant.

W. H. Bradburn, M.P.P.

W. H. Bradburn, introduced as the bearer of good news to those present was greeted with a request for information as to the near arrival of the first of May. He announced that the Minister of Agriculture had promised him that the Agricultural Representative in this county would henceforth be stationed in Peterboro instead of in Norwood.

He referred to the progress made by the fair and bespoke the assistance of the City and County councils for the exhibition so that the directors could make it an even greater success.

Warden Middleton.

Warden J. A. Middleton, on behalf of the County Council, thanked the directors for the invitation to the banquet.

He congratulated Mr. Denne on his re-election and the board on their securing him as president. He promised the continued support of the County council.

D. McMillan.

Dan McMillan, Division Superintendent of the C.N.R., congratulated the board on its choice of a president and the president on his re-election, and also congratulated the board on getting the members of the County council present, as the farmers are the salt of the earth. He said that he considered Peterboro as his home and that he was proud to be a guest at such a function. He thanked the people of Peterboro for the support given the C.N.R., saying that the co-operation of such cities had been in large measure responsible for the success of the system.

J. J. Duffus.

Ex-Mayor J. J. Duffus expressed his appreciation of the honor of being present, and promised to do anything he could in pressing for the inclusion of the fair in class "A."

Those at the head table were Pres. Denne, W. B. Roadhouse, E. A. Peck, M.P., W. H. Bradburn, M.P.P., Mayor Holloway, and Alderman G. A. MacDonald, Warden J. A. Middleton, Reeve Cavanagh of Ennismore, and Reeve Clark of Galway, representing the County Council; D. McMillan, Superintendent of the Belleville Division of the C. N. R., Rev. R. C. Blagrav, D.D., R. R. Hall, K.C., W. G. Morrow, E. J. H. Vanstone, W. Steinkrauss and J. J. Turner.

HEMMING FALLS DEVELOPMENT

the complete development was awarded to the Foundation Company of Canada, Limited, on September 1st, 1923. Two weeks later work was under way on a three-mile siding from the main line of the Canadian National Railways. This siding was ready for operation November 15th, by which time a temporary coffer-dam had been built and the power house site unwatered and excavation started.

Excavation at power house site and tailrace was well under way by December 18th, at which time a more or less expected ice barrage formed in the river, below the tailrace, gradually drowned out the work, and necessitated abandoning this part of the excavation until April 15th, 1924. The river, loaded with frazil ice, rose to over 15 feet above normal level. It is interesting to note that since the effect of the Hemmings Falls rapids has been done away with by the construction of the dam, no trouble from frazil ice has been experienced at the Drummondville power house. Also, during the past winter there has been no ice barrage such as ordinarily occurred heretofore, and there has been no winter rise of tailrace water level at Hemmings Falls.

Excavation work was carried on throughout the winter at the site of the north wing walls, and some 3,000 cubic yards of concrete were poured at this point as a try-out for the concreting plant and other items of equipment. Other than this, no actual work could be done before the middle of April, 1924, when the temporary coffer dam was again unwatered and rock excavation resumed. By May 20th actual concreting operation started, and thereafter work was carried on to completion with only one short delay.

The major items in the work were as follows: 62,000 cubic yards of rock excavation; 108,000 cubic yards of earth excavation and embankment; 80,000 cubic yards of concrete; 530 tons of reinforcing steel; 530 tons of structural steel in buildings; 1,175,000 bricks.

All concrete from the mixers was handled by means of trains, hauled by gasoline locomotives, operating on a trestle with track elevation 18 inches above the crest of the bulkhead sections of the dam. Each concrete train consisted of two cars and carried 4 cubic yards of mixed material. The trestle was about 2,000 feet in length, with a maximum height of 60 feet, and was located on the up-stream face of the dam. Concrete was deposited into all parts of the work directly from this trestle, using short lengths of chutes and hoppers fixed to the trestle stringers. With these facilities, concrete could be placed at any number of different places during a single day's run without the usual delays incident to changing hoppers and chutes. It was also possible to carry on form work at a number of places simultaneously.

All reinforcing steel was bent on the job. Rail carbon steel was used for straight rods and medium steel for bent rods. The number of different sizes was kept to a minimum, and to avoid mixing the two grades in the field, the hard steel was carried in rounds and the medium steel in squares.

All construction plant was motor driven with the exception of steam shovels, locomotive crane and gasoline locomotives.

Power was delivered to the site at 2,300 volts and stepped down to 550 volts for distribution to individual motors.

The connected motor load was 800 h.p.

Fifteen hundred cubic feet per minute of air was provided for rock drills and other pneumatic equipment.

The maximum force employed was 750 men.

A noteworthy feature of the construction work was the short time taken to pour the river bed section, some 950 feet long. Concreting of this portion started May 20th. By July 10th the up-stream coffer dam in the deep water channel had been completed and the river diverted through temporary sluices left in the spillway section adjacent to the power house. A down-stream coffer dam was built in the deep water channel. By August 1st excavation for the base of the dam at this point had been completed and concrete had been placed. In ten weeks the river had been completely coffer-dammed, the flow diverted, the bed rock and cut-off trenches prepared, and concrete had been placed across 950 feet of river bed.

The thanks of the members was ably expressed to the speaker by A. L. Killaly in his usual effective manner.

TO ELECT CHANG AS PRESIDENT OF NORTH CHINA

Former Bandit to Head Portion of China Under Peking Control.

LEADERS UNITE

Combine Duties as Chief Executive With Generalissmo of Army.

PEKING, Jan. 28 (Canadian Press)—Keen foreign observers of Chinese politics discussed with interest today the indication that Chang Tso-Lin, former bandit and present dictator of Manchuria and maker of Peking government cabinets, will be elected president of China within a few days. Chang, head of the Northern militarists' coalition against the Cantonese invasion, can be president of that portion of China controleld from Peking it is said whenever he desires that honor.

The old senate, prorogued from year to year, may be assembled for the formality of declaring Chang president, the first chief executive since Asao Kun was forced to resign May 1, 1926 by militarists.

As president of the Peking government Chang Tso-Lin would combine the duties of head of civil affairs with that of Generalissimo of the alliance against the Cantonese. When the southerners' advance reached the Yangtse river and spread into Kiangsi province, the war lords of those regions, Wu Pei Fu and Sun Chuan-Fang, respectively, suffered severly. Wu lost virtually all power in his several central Chinese possessions and retained fighting control of three, Chekiang, Kiangu and to a lesser extent Anhwei.

Combine Forces

Chang Tso-Lin, Sun Chuan-Fang and Chang Tsung-Chang, governor of Shantung, fearful of losing their dominions, have been combining their resources for the expected supreme struggle against the Cantonese against Shanghai and Peking delayed for months.

APPOINTED HEAD ADVISORY BOARD

W. H. Moore To Fill Vacancy Left By Hon. Geo. P. Graham.

EFFECT IN FEBRUARY.

OTTAWA, Ont., Jan. 28.—(Canadian Press.)—Appointment of W. H. Moore, of Dunbarton, Ont., to the chairmanship of the Dominion Advisory Board on tariff and taxation was announced last night by Hon. J. A. Robb, Minister of Finance. The appointment takes effect Feb. 5.

Senator the Rt. Hon. Geo. P. Graham who resigned from the post when he was elevated to the Senate, will preside over the three-day hearing scheduled for next week, when the tariff on boots and shoes will be the chief item for discussion. Of the six references on the agenda for next week, four are re-hearings, which is no doubt the reason why Senator Graham is remaining at his post until they are disposed of.

Announcing the new appointment last night, Mr. Robb said:

"Under the chairmanship of the Rt. Hon. G. P. Graham, the Tariff Board has made quite a successful start. They are shortly moving into larger quarters which will give them better facilities for hearing applications and carrying on the general business of the Board. The instant success that the Board has met with bears testimony to the respect in which Messrs. Graham, Lambert and McKenzie are held by the people of Canada and I am sure that this support will be continued during the term of office of the new chairman."

Mr. Moore is a barrister and a graduate in economics. He was formerly connected with the Canadian Northern Railway. He has a stock farm at Dunbarton.

GETTING DOWN TO BUSINESS.

Premier Ferguson has declared that he sees no reason why the Ontario Legislature cannot finish its business and complete the session in eight weeks.

It is to be hoped that the Premier's prediction proves to be correct.

Why it should be considered necessary, as it has on some occasions in the past, to keep the Legislature together for three or four months has always been a conundrum to the public.

The programme of really important business considered at each session is never lengthy enough to justify any such time for its consideration; as a matter of fact, it has generally been the case that the legislation that mattered received too little attention, while the time of the legislators has been frittered away in endless discussion on non-essential business.

It is understood that very little legislation, with the exception of the new liquor act, is to be introduced.

That should tend to speed up the proceedings of the session and make it possible to confirm Mr. Ferguson's prophecy.

REFORESTATION.

The appointment by the Peterboro County Council of a special committee to discuss the question of reforestation with the Ontario Forestry Department is a very encouraging sign.

The Provincial Government is on very sound ground in energetically pushing its reforestation programme, and should have wherever possible the co-operation and assistance of municipal authorities.

The forest wealth of the Province is being rapidly depleted, but a wise system of building up reserves, if generally entered into, will ensure a continuous supply of trees, and there is no reason why such a reserve cannot be established.

Already a number of Ontario counties have embarked upon a plan of reforestation, setting aside lots for this purpose, the work being carried on by the Forestry Department.

The northern part of our country offers a splendid chance for the introduction of such a scheme here, and the present negotiations, it is hoped, will lead to definite action.

A SPLENDID BOOKLET.

The Royal Bank of Canada is to be congratulated upon the booklet, "Canada and the Twentieth Century," issued by the bank and prepared by Donald M. Marvin, M.A., Ph.D., and J. Edwin Van Buskirk, B.Sc., M.B.A., the economist and assistant economist, respectively, of the Royal Bank.

Illustrated by many fine photographs and written in a bright, pleasing style, this booklet is a veritable treasure trove of information in regard to Canada, its natural products, its industries and its problems.

It deals with such matters as climate and agriculture, dairy production, industries, mining, fisheries, the Provinces of Canada, the playgrounds of America, British Empire preference, tariff agreements with other countries, and many other items of great interest.

Particularly important is the chapter devoted to Canada as a field for investment.

"Canada and the Twentieth Century" is full of material that is of value and interest to the Canadian people, and the Royal Bank deserves credit for the great care and attention that have evidently been devoted to the turning out of this very important work.

THIS IS FOR FARMERS.

Although, as Barron's editorially declares, anybody who suggests that our farmers might with advantage know a little more about farming takes his life in his hands, The Examiner wonders whether in this district anything like full advantage is being taken of what is being done by the various Governments to improve farming conditions.

The thought was suggested to us by a farmer who has been studying the question for himself and who has arrived at the conclusion that the farmers of the immediate district are not alive to their opportunities.

"There is no more important matter before the citizens of our country," declares this thoughtful farmer, "than efficient farming and a happier and better rural life.

"The Governments, both Provincial and Dominion," he goes on, "are doing everything possible to better the condition of the farmer, but very little advantage is taken of their efforts, especially in this vicinity.

"True, there is a branch of the U.F.O., but little or nothing is done to secure the benefit of what the Governments are trying to do to improve the status of the farmer.

"Occasional meetings are held for entertainments of a social nature or to buy supplies, but Government efforts to improve methods of farming and to secure better stock are allowed to go to waste.

"Nor are our farm women organized along the lines set forth in a recent article in The Examiner, entitled "For a Better Rural Life.'"

These views are set forth for the consideration of The Examiner's rural readers as those of a farmer who is anxious to see an improvement in rural conditions.

On its own part The Examiner has often felt that the mass of information provided by Provincial and Federal Departments of Agriculture is not being utilized by our farmers to anything like a satisfactory degree.

The world's oats growing and wheat-growing championships were both won last year by the same individual, a man who a few years ago knew absolutely nothing about farming.

He was not handicapped by an instinct to do things a certain way because they always had been done that way.

On the contrary he wanted to do things in the most efficient way, and, sensibly, he decided that the experts of the Government whose life task was to study farm problems and to constantly endeavour to improve farm methods were the best authorities he could find.

Securing all the Government literature on agriculture he could obtain—and it is available for everyone—he followed the advice of the Government officials to such good purposes that he grew the best oats and the best wheat to be shown in competition at Chicago.

In Ontario and throughout the Dominion our agricultural departments are maintained at heavy expense to the people.

It is sheer waste if the research work and general efforts of these departments are not being used to advantage by our farmers.

WHY THEY LEAVE THE FARM.

(From The St. Catharines Standard.)

We have just discovered why boys and girls leave the farm. The revelation came in reading a news story in The London Advertiser on Saturday. It related to the debate among the trustees of School Section No. 4, Westminster Township, just outside of the city of London, as to whether it would be advisable to instal Hydro lights in the school at a cost of $1.71 per month or adhere to the coal-oil lamps now in use.

It had been represented to the progressive elements in the community and to the Trustee Board that for at least twelve days in the year it became so dark at times that the pupils could not see the blackboard and the uncertain light affected their eyes. Still, the trustees refused to consider Hydro lights. Then a Community Welfare Club offered to meet the obdurate trustees in their refusal. Perhaps the news report will best illuminate what otherwise is a dark subject. Here it is in part:

"Allan Trunks, prominent ratepayer, declared there was no Hydro when he went to school and it was not any more necessary now in his opinion. If Hydro or anything else was necessary, the ratepayers could pay for it. The school was not an object of charity, he declared.

"Trustee E. H. Shuttleworth, who is the Westmount representative of the School Board, declared it was not a matter of charity, but a matter of saving the eyesight of children on dull days. A dull day produced dull scholars, while bright Hydro lights would make the children equally responsive to their studies, he maintained. Mr. Shuttleworth referred to the fact that a story had been spread that the women of Westmount would use the school for evening bridge parties, should Hydro be installed. This was an absolute falsehood, he declared, as he advocated that the school should be used for lecture purposes during the winter months. He referred to the danger of using coal-oil lamps, and felt sure that should the trustees change their minds Westmount Community Club would be glad to instal Hydro in the school at absolutely no cost to the ratepayer.

"James H. Mair, an ex-Reeve of the township, said there were too many frills and not enough education in the schools of today. He, too, was opposed to Hydro.

"'That's right, and the universities are turning out flappers and sheiks, instead of educated men and women,' shouted a farmer from the back of the school-house."

The above would be tragic if it were not true. For a year or two past, reports have been submitted showing that the number of rural schools in the Province with attendance of two, three or four pupils each is increasing. Can it be wondered at when there are men with the narrow vision possessed by those trustees at Westminster in charge of rural education in many parts of the Province? Could it be expected there would be any advance in the science of farming, any advance in the standard of living to make farming more attractive from the Westminster type? Is it any wonder that the Minister of Education has had to withdraw his bill for Township School Boards twice already before he can convince the hard-headed ones that he is actually aiming at an improved state of affairs in rural education?

Of course, all rural school trustees are not the Westminster type. That would be doing a grave injustice to many conscientious trustees all over Ontario. But where the Westminster Township complex does prevail, one may well expect that boys and girls are not going to linger around when they can get away, and try and keep in step with modern standards of life and progress. And you can't blame them. Because our forebears in a new rough country had to do things in a certain way is no reason why the present-day generation should follow. That savors too much of Russia.

EDITORIAL NOTES AND COMMENT.

What right has this place Hornepayne to crowd White River out of the limelight as the coldest spot in Canada?

One way to feel warmer during a cold snap is to read George Young's story of his sixteen-hour swim in icy waters.

Studying the Charlie Chaplain case, a cartoonist has arrived at the conclusion that Dan Cupid is following the general example by turning pro.

Silk stockings in below zero weather suggest that Kipling might have said, "The female of the species can stand more than the male."

The salary of the St. Mary's Chief of Police is to be slashed. "The policeman's life is not a happy one."

Says The London Advertiser. "Nobody in this country is worrying over the Imperial Conference." It must be admitted there seems to be more interest in the matrimonial troubles of one Charles Chaplin.

There may be apathy in municipal politics elsewhere, but apparently Windsor has no reason to complain of lack of activity in that respect.

MONTREAL GRAIN AND PRODUCE

MONTREAL, Jan. 28 (Canadian Press).—The foreign demand for all lines of grain on the Montreal market yesterday was of a very limited character and no new business of importance was done. Another tramp vessel has been engaged to lead a full cargo of grain from the Port of Montreal to Antwerp-Rotterdam at 15 1-2c per 100 pounds between May 10 to 22, which makes the second feature up to the present.

There was no further change in the condition of the domestic cash grain market, prices being unchanged under a limited demand.

Prices for Spring and Winter wheat grades of flour were well maintained with a moderate trade passing.

The trade in millfeed continued active and firm. The demand for standard grades of rolled oats showed no improvement and the market was quiet but steady.

Owing to the fact that several cars of British Columbia fresh eggs are in transit to Montreal and that further importations are being made from the United States, the undertone to the local egg market was weak today yesterday and wholesale prices scored a further decline of 3 cents per dozen.

In sympathy with the above, the jobbing market also displayed further weakness, and prices were lowered another one cent per dozen. Prospects are that they will go lower. On the whole the market was quiet. The receipts were 475 cases.

The potato market continued quiet but the undertone was firm. Car lots of Prince Edward Island Green Mountains were quoted at $1.80 per bag of 90 pounds; New Brunswick Green Mountains at $1.80 per bag in bulk, and Quebec White stock at $1.40 per bag of 90 pounds in bulk, ex-track.

The demand for butetr was confined to small lots and the market was quiet with a steady undertone. The receipts were 99 packages.

Extreme dullness marked the local and export trade in cheese, but values were unchanged. Receipts were 63 boxes.

Sterling demand $4.85 5-16.
Sterling cables $4.85 7-8.

CHICAGO GRAIN

CHICAGO, Jan. 28 (Canadian Press).—After ascending yesterday to the highest prices reached of late, wheat reacted on account of heavy profit-taking sales and of enlarged receipts southwest. Closing quotations on wheat were unsettled at the same as Wednesday's finish to 7-8 and 1c down; corn 3-8 to 3-4c off; oats at 1-4 and 3-8 to 1-2c decline, and provisions varying from 10c loss to an equal gain.

Corn and oats eased down with wheat.

CHICAGO CATTLE

CHICAGO, Jan. 28 (Canadian Press).—Cattle 11,000; best heavies 13.40; yearlings $11.75; stockers and feeders holding up mostly $7.25 to $8.00; vealers strong to 25c higher at $12.50 to $14.00, mostly.

Hogs 47,000; late bulk better grade hogs $12.25 and $12.30; top $12.35 paid for several loads of outstanding butchers; most packing sows $11.00 to $11.25; most slaughter lots $11.75 to $12.15; few selected lots upward to $12.25.

SUGAR MARKET

NEW YORK, Jan. 28 (Canadian Press).—The raw sugar market was firmer early yesterday, prices advancing 3-32 of a cent to the basis of $5.02 for Cuban duty paid.

Raw sugar futures closed at net declines of 1 to 2 points. Selling was probably promoted by the increased offerings in the spot market at the close. Approximate sales 33,000 tons. March closed $3.17; May $3.27; July $3.37; Sept. $3.44; Dec. $3.24; Jan. $3.09.

The refined sugar market was firmer and unchanged to 15 points higher at $6.20 to $6.40 for fine granulated.

DR. FRANK CRANE'S DAILY EDITORIAL.

SENDING THE DEVIL TO MARKET

By Dr. Frank Crane.

In a brochure recently got out at Antioch College, Ohio, reference is made to the custom of the old-time Shakers, who generally observed the laws of Christian brotherhood, of sending their most unscrupulous members out into the world to do their trading. Hence originated the saying that the Shakers always sent the devil to market.

The implication is that while Christian living and principles were suitable for ordinary affairs and in family life, they were not suitable for the outside world. There you had to fight the devil with fire and deal unscrupulously with unscrupulous people.

A very common idea is that those people get along best in this world who do not strictly adhere to the moral law. You have to be crooked enough to get along and yet not crooked enough to fall afoul of the law.

Those who are old and experienced in this world's dealing know the fallacy of this reasoning.

The fact is that it pays to be honest—to be honest in little things as well as in big, and to be honest in the privacy of your chamber as well as in the open forum of the market.

Honesty is not a thing to be put on and off and to be used for certain purposes. It is something to be adhered to all the time, and a man who is faithful in all his dealings, both at home and abroad, has the best chance of success.

Ed Howe, the sage of Potato Hill, can hardly be accused of being a strict religionist, and yet in his homely philosophy and experience, he has discovered that doing right is one of the surest means of success.

If any boy or girl is knocking about seeking some secret of success, none better can be offered than strict integrity.

To be just and upright in all things may occasionally get you into difficulty, but as a rule and in the long run it pays.

A man who keeps his hands clean and his heart right is always prepared for any attack, and as it has been roughly expressed, "He can look any man square in the eye and tell him to go to blazes."

A Thought For To-day

A LONESOME TRAIL

Thousands think that the road to success is overcrowded with competitors.

The route to achievement is a very lonesome trail.

Success is the result of study and preparation, industry and ability.

Thinking and planning for your future success is not done on the dance floor.

I doubt if any man can make a success in business or in a profession until he leaves the crowd for one, two, or three hours a day and there keep at arm's length from all intrusion while he studies, prepares, plans.

To retire to a quiet room while others are having a big time calls for that brand of determination that only the successful have.

Success means frequent seclusion. Success is found while the failures are fast asleep. Success sees the hands on the dock as they point to the hour past midnight.

But all these solitude seasons are not disagreeable or hard if you have the earnestness and enthusiasm to want to win.

The measure of your success depends on how much you want to win. For, remember, no man will work hard to win unless he really wants to.

The broad avenue to failure is crowded with clock-watchers and pleasure-seekers. The lonely trail to success has one big advantage—few get in your way.

JUST A JINGLE.

There was a man in our town,
He thought that he was wise.
He picked a fight The other guy
Just closed up both his eyes.

HOW DO YOU SAY IT?

(By C. N. Lurie.)

Common Errors in English and How To Avoid Them.

(Copyright, 1927, McClure Syndicate.)

Don't say, "hear 'to" when you mean "listen to," "hear of," "consent to," etc.

For example, it is incorrect to say, "I asked him to go with me, but he would not hear to it." Say, instead, "I asked him to go with me, but he would not consent," or, simply, "I asked him to go with me, but he would not go."

Another use of the word "hear" that is incorrect—perhaps it was more commonly heard years ago than now—is in the expression "hear tell of." One hears occasionally, for example, some such expression as the following:

"Have you heard of the accident?"
"Yes, I've heard tell of it."

The meaning is, "I've heard of it," or, "I've heard it talked about."

BE STRONG AS A LION

It is true that all of us have the habit of drifting into certain grooves of thinking, and such habits of thought tend to impress themselves upon the physical body, changing the contour of our faces, of our heads, and also of the entire physical organism. Such mental impressions often stamp the body with certain markings, which resemble different members of the animal kingdom.

Who among you cannot remember some friend who has the cunning of a fox; or another one, who is as cumbersome as an elephant? You can recall one with a hawkish look, and another with a sheepish expression; and here and there an acquaintance will stand out showing the courage of the lion. Think over a list of your friends who have been ill for a long time, and notice how much they resemble the sheep or the lamb.

People who have developed the sick habit are always bleating like a lamb about their troubles, whining about their weaknesses, and eternally looking for sympathy. In this condition of mind it is not likely that they will ever attract a condition of strength, which they claim they are striving for.

There is an old Hindu fable about a lioness who, while heavy with young, went about in search of food. She fell upon a flock of sheep, but the exertion brought about her death; yet while dying a young lion was born to her, and grew up with the sheep, all the time thinking he was a sheep. He learned to nibble grass and to bleat like the rest of the sheep, frisking about and playing with them, until on day another lion came upon the scene. This visiting lion was amazed, to see the other young lion acting like a sheep, and he said to him, "Don't you know that you are a lion?" The young lion answered, "No, I am a sheep," and started to bleat. Shereupon the other lion took him down to the edge of the water, and made him look at his reflection in the water. A great revelation came to him as he realized for the first time that he was really a lion. Instantly his whole attitude changed, and he let out a roar that rocked the hillsides. At once he felt the strength of a lion, and he and the other lion pounced upon the flock of sheep and had a good meal.

The moral of the story is this: As long as you visualize weakness and sickness, you will be like that young lion, who thought he was a lamb. As long as you bleat about weakness, you can expect to experience weakness. When you come to a sudden realization of the strength which is naturally yours, you will soon be like a lion in strength.

The more I see of sick people, the more I believe that they remain sick in a large measure because they waste most of their energy continually picturing sickness, weakness, debility, enervation, and such conditions from which they see no escape. They seem to be always waiting for the "Demon Disease" to jump upon them.

Those of you who wish to realize health more abundantly, must picture yourself as a lion in strength, who gives no power to disease any more than the lion gives to the lamb. Do not stop only with visualizing strength but act accordingly. Eat for strength, breathe for strength, exercise for strength, and do everything you can to bring about that buoyant, exhilarating, virility which will make you a lion among men, and make you laugh at those diseases, which come from weakness and at those thoughts and actions which make for enervation.

HAVE YOU HEARD THIS PROVERB?

The answers given by children to questions on general knowledge are sometimes very amusing. One may suspect the genuineness of some of the examples reported, such as the schoolboy's alleged definition that "The custom of having one wife only is called monotony," or the schoolgirl's statement, in an essay on evolution, that "Both men and women sprang from monkeys, but women sprang farthest." The humor is a little too pointed and subtle to be unconscious.

But genuine examples do occur quite frequently, and it was a real boy in a real class who recently headed his list of the six most popular proverbs with the slogan, "Bovril puts Beef into you."

The youngster was certainly observant, and probably prophetic, for if the slogan has not yet quite attained the standing of an accepted proverb, it seems well on its way to that dignity.

DON'T TELL THE WIFE

SYNOPSIS

Ranny Forbes, star polo player, and his beautiful wife, Joan, are temperamental mismates. Joan wants a divorce. Ranny hesitates, loving her, although secretly knowing she loves Abner Gratman. They are all guests on a week-end cruise on the yacht of Stivner, a billionaire. Clare, a widow, vamps Ranny. Stivner, loving Clare, is jealous of Ranny. Ranny, enlisting Stivner's aid, springs a trap to get proof that Joan is unfaithful, but instead of catching Abner it reveals Clare in Ranny's room. However, Clare explains satisfactorily; and other evidence decides the men to confront Abner.

CHAPTER XII.

The captain's untrimmed suggestion, delivered in that drawling nasal voice which had been salted to brittleness by many spumy winds whipped from many far seas, brought Ranny's attention and hope simultaneously to the forefront again.

He thought it over, looking wide-eyed from one to another of his reflective companions.

Clay Varick sought to spur and encourage his decision: "Why not, Ranny, old son? What difference makes the manner of catching him? I admit that the bell, signaling his caddishness to the world, was a ripping stunt—if it had worked to schedule. It didn't. Yet things have so happened that beyond all doubt you have the goods on him!" Clay held up the piece of cloth, torn from Abner's coat, and added with an apologetic grin, "No pun intended, of course."

"Varick is right," put in Stivner, almost gaily. Since his own affair

of the heart had been absolved from complicity he regarded the thing as no end of a lark. "I think the notion of giving somebody a ride in a towed dory is a bully one."

Stivner guffawed, then went on: "It's the first red-blooded, hair-on-the chest, stunt that I've ever known to be proposed in polite society. Reminds me of my lumberjack days, when a deceived husband could trip his rival headfirst into the rotary saw, or drop a tree on him, and no questions asked, and gouging out eyes was a mere pleasantry!"

Captain Marty chuckled, and thought of many hardshelled ports. But Marty's breed take their fun quietly, with few words; so, while heartily in the spirit of frolic which pervaded his boss, he merely commented:

"Ain't that there's real danger about this. It's just a right smart way of showing a man up. Tossing around behind the tail of this yacht, on a night that threatens to freshen up tolerably, will give him the best oppotunity in the world to pine over his sins. And I'll reckon it'll work up more than—an—appetite—in his inners!"

Ranny was sold. All he had needed to inspire renewed enthusiasm for his scheme to fix Abner for good and all, was the moral backing of his companions. He had that, obviously:

"We'll go to his cabin, confront him with this evidence, and I'll wring the truth from his neck—"

"—and then the captain and I, by virtue of our authority on the high seas, will hold a summary court-martial." Stivner's sense of fun was effervescing, due partly to his sense of fair play in the man-and-woman game, but mostly to the warming reaction of the many cocktails he had drunk at dinner, and highballs since then, during the social evening. The full effect of this expensive inspiration had risen to his head on the exciting wings of the night's plots.

It was the first time that his yacht had ever been the scene of anything other than the ordinary insipid, banal cruise. But here was the food his strong, fundamentally atavistic nature craved. This week-end justified the hundred dull parties that had gone before!

"Somebody's going to ride in the dory!" he insisted sententiously. "It might have been you, Forbes, if you hadn't come clean with me about Mrs. Clemoneau. But it's better to make Gratman the goat, because I like you, Forbes. You're a he-man—while Gratman gives me a swift pain Let's go!"

Single file, the conspirators strode out into the corridor, and tiptoed along under an injunction from Captain Marty to walk quietly lest they rearouse the other guests.

Pale red exit lights glowed in the hatchway angles of the thickly carpeted corridors, ghostly auras glimmering impotently against the eerie darkness that is typical of a ship at night.

The Speedwell was making heavy weather of it now; rolling on the greasy bosom of a ground swell as she passed out beyond Montauk Point Light. She was encountering a stiff headwind, too, from the East, which slapped her bows with gusty cracks when they were tilted out of the black waters, and plunged her deep on each trough dive. A light, squally rain combed her, as with the points of a liquid rake.

Abner's cabin was locked and lightless; but the low voice that responded to Captain Marty's muffled knock and command to open gave no hint that its owner had been sleeping.

"Whom, and what, have I to thank for the honor of this rather—uncommon—visitation?" sneered Abner, when the light had been turned on and the four men had entered and closed the door behind them. Despite his effort to maintain a brazen, unalarmed front, his voice quaked and his face was blanched.

"I want to see your blazer—the coat you wore during this evening," said Ranny coldly, ignoring his querulous question.

"You get to the devil out of my room!" retorted Abner.

Ranny, looking quickly around, saw the blazer through a half-open door of the wardrobe and drew it out. He held it aloft, while Clay calmly measured the fragment of cloth to it.

The match was perfect, undeniable.

There was a serious glint in the eyes of Clay, Stivner, and Captain Marty, while Ranny's face began to color with a slow but terribly mounting rage.

Abner, ashen and desperate as he saw the fitting and realized that he was trapped, snatched the coat away from Ranny.

"Get out of here, all of you," he shrilled. "Stivner, what sort of way is this to treat one of your guests? Captain, I appeal to you as an officer to protect me from this jealous fool's suspicions—"

"There ain't any suspicions involved. Those are just plumb plain facts!" drawled the captain.

Abner, beside himself, acted with the cunning instinct of a trapped animal. With a swift and unexpected motion he switched off the light and made a break for the door in the confusion.

Ranny, by now, had reached the boiling point. All the pent-up rages of months against this man who had come between him and his wife, and who had so insolently flaunted his hold over her so that all the world knew Ranny's unenviable status, erupted in a frenzied moment.

He lunged after Abner; collared him.

When Captain Marty reswitched the lights it was to reveal Ranny and Abner locked in a fighting, clawing, kicking clutch of savagery. Abner fought with the insane rage born of desperate fear; but he was child's play in the strong hands of Ranny, who subdued him, lifted him up bodily, and bore him out of the cabin, up the stairs, out into the rain of the open deck and along it towards the stern.

Captain Marty hurried on ahead, and under his directions two startled sailors lowered a dory.

The captain was prankful, but not a potential murderer. "Lash it stoutly, mind you, men," he ordered. "If it broke away on a night like this it would mean—death."

Screaming maledictions, Abner was stowed in the boat, which was allowed to drift about twenty yards in the foamy wake—just to the rim of the circle of light thrown by the stern lantern—before it was made fast.

At the last, Clay had pitched the box of dog biscuits into the dory beside Abner.

Then Abner was left alone with the night and the storm, in the dangerously bobbing cork of a dory, while the yacht forged drunkenly on through tumbling seas.

"Have an eye to him once in a while," Captain Marty softly warned the watch.

Descending alone to his cabin after that, Ranny sat for perhaps an hour plunged in deep brooding—in morose reflections. He felt poignantly the emptiness of Joan's cabin. Even in their most quarrelsome hours he had always felt, heretofore, the comfort of knowing she was physically near. The knowledge had always carried its own promise and hope.

Perhaps he had been bitter, asinine, hasty. He would seek Joan this very minute, apologize, and try to reason out with her a basis for reconciliation, for a new start.

TOM MIX IN "THE CANYON OF LIGHT"

One of the most interesting Western pictures seen here in some time is "The Canyon of Light," with the popular Tom Mix as Tom Mills, the hero, in a cyclonic affair of thrills and peppy action, which travels all the way from Rattlesnake Gulch in Wyoming, to the battlefields of France and then back again to the American continent. The hero recruits a battalion to fight the Germans and goes away, just after he rescues the heroine from a runaway. He doesn't know her name, but her brother is his pal in France, and "goes West" after a sniping attack, while carrying motorcycle despatches. Returning to his home, after the coming of peace, Tom finds his brother-in-law, Ed. Bardin, the leader of a gang of bandits that are terrorizing the Gulch. Ed. has left his wife, Tom's sister, whom the latter finds in a dying condition, and is about to pay the penalty of his crimes at the end of a rope, when Tom intervenes and manages his escape, with the aid of his wonder horse, Tony, who is as interesting a feature as usual, in this picture.

Tom is given the task of finding the criminal, who fails to return to his wife, and goes to the rodeo which is being held at the Deane ranch, in honor of the supposed Tom, who is being impersonated by the rascally brother-in-law. The action, which is swift throughout, winds itself up to a stirring climax in the thrilling fight of Tom with his enemies, at Ghost City, a deserted mining camp where the shells of long deserted buildings sink to the ground in ruins under the fierce onslaught of fighting men. This is a queer scene, with the combatants running up and down the sides of tottering structures, and Tom finally emerging victorious, to claim his charming lady love.

The comedy is a mirthful one, illustrating the trials and troubles of a youth who tries to get rid of his mother-in-law, and there is an entertaining section of "Bill Grimm's Progress."—Jeanette.

AT THE REGENT

JONES REVEALS HIDDEN TALENTS

Fox Western Star Proves he is n t Limited to Stunts on Horseback.

With every successive picture, the popularity of Buck Jones, Fox Films big, strapping ,two-fisted western star, seems to gain a few notches. His latest "A Man Four-Square,' came to the Regent Theatre yesterday and it affords the big fellow plenty of opportunity for a display of his ruggedness.

There is something different about Buck Jones. He is all that could be asked as a delineator of western types, but he doesn't stop there. He sbowed by his portrayal of "Lazybones," a recent Fox picture, that he has genuine acting ability and should he ever grow weary of the rough-and-ready drama, there is plenty of room on the screen for him in other roles.

The greater part of the film is devoted to running down the real rustlers and be it said that Jones fairly out-Joneses himself in the running down of the guilty culprits. There are fights and more fights, and no film patron who fancies the western brand of photo-drama is going to be disappointed in this one.

REPORTS TO COUNTY COUNCIL

The following reports were presented to the County Council at Thursday's session by the Public School Inspectors for the County.

Inspector Lees.

GENTLEMEN:—

I beg respectfully to submit for your consideration my report on the public schools of the Inspectorate of Peterborough East for the year 1926.

All the schools of the inspectorate were in operation during the year, though three of them were not open for the full school term.

The schools were all visited according to the regulations of the Department of Education. Accompanying this is a copy of the report required by the Department, showing when each of these visits was made.

There is no incident of special importance to record. One year is so much like all the others that, of necessity, each annual statement becomes more or less a repetition of all that have gone before. Two questions, at least, force themselves into prominence perennially. They are the questions of school attendance and constant changing of teachers.

In regard to the latter, there is probably some improvement from a few years ago when teachers were in so great demand, but not so much as might reasonably be expected. During last year there were many changes. More than half of the teachers in the rural schools of the inspectorate changed at midsummer besides a number at other times, making a total of 41 changes out of a staff of 74 teachers. Six changed to other schools in the inspectorate, while others drifted off, some to other occupations, and some to teach elsewhere. A number of them were teachers of experience and proved worth, whose going was a distinct loss to the educational interests of the county. While some serious mistakes were made in filling the vacancies, there are other cases where the new teachers are filling worthily the positions to which they succeeded.

It is now seven years since the School Attendance Act came into operation. For the purpose of furnishing some means of estimating its efficiency, I have made a comparison of the attendance, as reported, for the year 1921 with that of last year. At the beginning of that year, the Act had been one year in force, and was just beginning to get into operation properly, though it may be that it had even then brought about some improvement in conditions. In the table, following, the figures in the first two columns show the numbers enrolled in 1921 and 1926, respectively; while the other two show the percentage the actual attendance was, of the possible, for the show the numbers enrolled in 1921 and 1926, respectively; while the other two show the percentage the actual attendance was, of the possible, for the same two years.

	Enrollment.
	1921	1926
Asphodel	201	201
Belmont and Methuen	453	449
Burleigh and Anstruther	93	85
Chandos	167	176
Douro	374	339
Dummer	261	295
North Monaghan	81	90
Otonabee	454	485
	2084	2120

	Percent of Possible Attendance
Asphodel	85.6	83.2
Belmont and Methuen	74.	80.
Burleigh and Anstruther	63.	82.
Chandos	73.	75.
Douro	79.	82.4
Dummer	81.8	82.
North Monaghan	86.3	82.5
Otonabee	85.	88.

In the case of North Monaghan, the suburban school at Byersville is not included.

With the last few years, there has been a marked improvement in the qualification of the teachers and a larger proportion of male teachers is employed. There are, at present in the rural schools, 8 teachers with First Class Certificates; 71 with Second Class, and one with a Permanent Third Class Certificate. The women number 63 and the men 17. The teachers with First Class Certificates are, one in Belmont, 2 in Burleigh and Anstruther, one in Douro, one in Dummer, one in North Monaghan, and two in Otonabee. The others all hold Second Class Certificates, except one in Chandos with a Permanent Third. The men are, one in Asphodel, two in Belmont, one in Anstruther, one in Chandos, five in Douro one in Dummer, three in North Monaghan and four in Otonabee. In the villages there are three men and 14 women, all holding Second Class Certificates.

No new buildings were erected during the year, but some much needed repairs and improvements were made in a few cases. Much, however, yet remains to be done along that line. The difficulty of getting that kind of work done in most of the country districts together with the cost has delayed, in many cases, improvements that were overdue long since, but some progress is being made.

As to building, there are several places still in use that are very unsuited for school purposes and have long outlived their time of service as educational institutions. In these cases it will be imperative that steps be taken, in the near future, to provide more suitable accommodations, or the assistance granted from outside sources will have to be withdrawn. Grants are made from public funds for the purpose of enabling local communities to provide adequate and suitable facilities for education. If this is not done, in justice to the general public and especially to those who do make such provision, these grants must be withdrawn.

Fifth Form classes have been carried on with a fair measure of success at Keene, Lang and Warsaw, with smaller classes in some other schools. At all three places named, much has been done in the way of providing the necessary equipment, but at none of them is the accommodation what it should be. This work is important, and should be given every possible them is the accommodation what it should be. This work is important, and should be given every possible measure of encouragement.

The question of Township School Boards is still before the people of the province. The Premier, who is also Minister of Education, has issued a second letter on the subject in which the question is dealt with somewhat more fully than in the former letter. Some of the advantages of the system that are set forth and enlarged on are the following.

1. It would tend to decrease the cost of elementary education in rural districts.

2. It would go a long step toward equalizing the cost of education in country schools.

3. It would make possible a better distribution of the teaching force. A board could so place its teaching staff as to secure the maximum results for the outlay incurred.

4. It would result in securing better educational facilities. Secondary or high school education could be provided for in rural communities in a way that is not now possible.

In his letter, the Minister quotes from an address given at the Easter meeting of the Trustees' Association, by Mr. M. A. Campbell of Milton, a couple of paragraphs that are worth repeating:—

"Two years ago I was opposed to Township School Boards and was responsible for having a resolution passed and being sent down to this organization. Had anyone asked me why I was opposed I would have said because of expense, because it was not practicable, because it took the power out of the hands of our local people, etc., but had I been asked to back up my statements showing where it had failed, and where it had done any of these things I would have failed to do so.

"I have written to every State in the United States, 20 in all, which have the system; to the President of the Farm Bureau, and to the Department of Education in all the places in Canada where it is in operation; and I have not received one reply discrediting in any way the system of the larger unit. Under these conditions, could I remain opposed or even neutral? I must be in favour of the principle of Township School Boards."

It is to be hoped that in the near future there will be many more like Mr. Campbell, open to the appeal of facts, and not afraid to change their minds.

All of which is respectfully submitted by Yours Faithfully,

RICHARD LEES.

Peterborough,
Jan. 25th, 1927.

Inspector Downey.

GENTLEMEN:

I have the honour of presenting my annual report for your consideration.

During the year all the schools have been visited twice and a third visit has been made to some of them. All the schools of the inspectorate have been in operation during the year under fully qualified teachers.

Now that the supply of teachers is sufficient to meet the demand, no Third Class teachers should be appointed to the schools. Personal applications are never amiss in the selection of teachers to fill vacancies in the schools. Teachers would be well advised to make a personal application when applying for a position, and trustees would do well to engage more First Class Certificated teachers. Other things being equal, the teacher holding a First Class Certificate should prove more successful and useful to a section because of her wider scholarship and training.

As pointed out ast year, too many teachers have changed schools at Midsummer. In the rural sections, 50% of the schools engaged new teachers. It is a mistake for trustees to allow capable and efficient teachers to leave their schools if they can be induced to remain. There are a few schools in this inspectorate where the sections have benefited greatly by an uninterrupted service, covering several years.

On the whole the character of the teaching is commendable; methods are fairly well known and applied, but too many teachers are weak in organization and apparently careless in making prompt and accurate reports. Perhaps much of this is due to failure on the part of teachers to study the course of study closely, to read carefully, letters sent out from the inspector's office, to inexperience and to delay in making a start on their reports. Teachers should realize that their inspector is willing and anxious to lend a helping hand to those who need assistance and guidance.

Teachers are often very seriously handicapped in their work by the continued irregularity of certain pupils in the section. It is difficult for a teacher to establish a high standard of efficiency unless pupils are regular in attendance and diligent in their studies. An examination of the aggregate and possible attendance in the different schools has forced this point upon my notice. Here, indeed, is one of the greatest sources of waste in our schools, and this defect should be removed as far as possible. Parents, trustees, teacher, attendance officer and inspector should co-operate to insure regularity of attendance of the pupils of our schools.

A few of the schools have received a coat of paint during the year but they are really the exceptions. In my judgment trustees should keep their school property in good repair. A few dollars wisely spent each year will do this without placing any heavy burden on the taxpayers. Some aggressive trustees have done a little towards beautifying the school grounds. Much more might be attempted.

Many of our school libraries need resorting, culling and re-cataloguing. Some of the volumes are beyond repair, and need replacing. The library is for use, and one must expect to find some of the books worn and soiled. A good library in a school—one that is read—gives a fair index of the intellectual life of the neighbourhood. The Department of Education, by liberal grants, endeavours to help enterprising schools to build up really worth-while libraries.

From the standpoint of equipment I am glad to report some progress, but much still remains to be done. Additional maps, charts and other equipment should be provided. To do successful work, the teacher should be supplied with the material necessary to make her work interesting, instructive and effective.

A growing interest relative to the newer subjects—Manual Training, Household Science and Agriculture—is being developed in the schools. Particularly is this true of Agriculture. Boards of trustees would do well to encourage this sort of work in their schools. The "hot dish" has made a strong appeal where it has been tried. Liberal grants are made by the government to encourage school sections in this work.

I notice that a few County Councils have a sort of Field Day to encourage "budding orators" who have won glory for themselves and their schools at the School Fair, held in the autumn of each year. The plan is to invite the winner in the oratory from each School Fair of the county, and have their various winners further compete before the County Council.

As pointed out last year, this inspectorate is well provided with opportunities for Secondary Education. A few schools are undertaking Fifth class work locally. I may say that a good percentage of the candidates who were successful last June in their Entrance Examination are availing themselves of some form of higher education.

Let us point out again, as I have done on previous occasions, that the health of the pupils is of very great importance. I am a firm believer in the benefits to be derived from a wise medical and dental inspection of the children. The machinery has been provided for all these services, and the responsibility for setting this machinery in motion rests with the local council and boards of trustees.

Trustees should be very careful to see that their schools are kept in a sanitary condition. The health of the pupil is of very great importance. Trustees would be well advised to visit the school frequently to see that everything in and around the school is in proper shape.

I am very sorry to report that a few pupils have too far to go to school. A distance of four miles is too great to ask any child to walk to school. The time is at hand for re-adjustments of school boundaries where such conditions exist. In the near future many of the school houses of this inspectorate will have to be replaced by new buildings. It might be well to hold conferences between the township council and boards of trustees, with a view to such re-arrangements and re-adjustments of section boundaries as would bring every child within the three mile school limit. Now is the time to study this question before the new schools are built.

Premier Ferguson, who is also Minister of Education, has recently issued a second letter relative to the establishment of township boards of trustees for rural schools. In it he reviews what he outlined in his former letter, endeavours to remove any misunderstandings lingering in the mind of the public, and again states his conviction that township boards of trustees will prove of great benefit to rural Ontario. I propose to quote from Mr. Ferguson's letter, so that the county council and ratepayers of my inspectorate may know at least some of the points set forth in his letter:—

"It is admitted that in the rural school there should be facilities for the teaching of such special subjects as Manual Training, Household Science and Elementary Agriculture, all of which have a particular usefulness for the country child. Obviously this training cannot be satisfactorily given under the present conditions. One teacher cannot possibly teach the ordinary subjects of the school programme in all the grades and at the same time do justice to this special work.

"It is also admitted that the country boy requires a secondary education just as much as the city boy, and is equally entitled to have it. He needs it for two important reasons, first, that he may be the better equipped for the work by which he is to make a living, and second, that he may be the better prepared to discharge his duties as a citizen. . . .

"The schools can be so arranged as to have an attendance sufficiently large to do effective work. The pupils can be given instruction in such special subjects as Manual Training, Household Science and Agriculture, in addition to the ordinary course. For this work the regular teachers might be assisted by a corps of itinerant teachers who have special qualifications, and who go about from school offering courses particularly adapted for farm boys and girls can be established at strategic points. Part-time courses, specially suited to the needs of those pupils who cannot attend the full-time classes, can be instituted at places within the reach of all.

"The necessary machinery for the reorganization which I have suggested has been provided by various clauses in the School Acts. But, though they have been on the statute books for many years, these provisions have seldom been put into operation. The reason is evident. Before advantage could be taken of them, there would have to be co-operation among school sections on a more or less extensive scale. Individual sections have neither a sufficient number of pupils nor the necessary financial resources for the establishment of a high school or the maintenance of a part-time course. Co-operation among sections for this purpose, as experience has long shown, is most difficult to secure. These educational facilities can be provided for rural communities only through some method that affords a wider opportunity for co-operation than now exists. Apparently the most direct method of securing this greater co-operative action is to enlarge the administrative unit. The substitution of the township for the section as the unit of school administration would make it possible to reorganize the existing rural schools in such a way as to place them on the same plane of efficiency and usefulness as the urban schools. This is the main purpose that has prompted the introduction in the Legislature of the Bill to Establish Township Boards for Rural Schools.

"A township board having the resources of the township at its back, would be able to provide not only the elementary education at present given in the rural schools, but also any or all of three other educational services. It would be able to give special work in manual training, household science and agriculture through a system of itinerant teachers. It would also be able to provide high schools which, in addition to a general education, would give instruction in those branches which are of special value to pupils who intend to be farmers. Still further, it would be able to institute part-time courses with a vocational bias for those who could not take advantage of a full-time high school course.

"If an organization of this type were set up, the Department of Education would be in a position to assist the townships in a financial way, as it is now doing in the case of technical education in the cities.

"Not the least of the benefits resulting from the establishment of a larger administrative unit would be the equal distribution of the cost of education. I think it is generally recognized that, in fairness to all the ratepayers, there should be an equalization of school taxes throughout the whole township. At present, as is well known, there is great variation among sections in the tax rates for school purposes. If there is level rate throughout the township for roads, bridges, drains and other municipal services, why should there not also be a level rate for education?

"I have come to the conclusion that it would be desirable to make the school areas correspond to the present sections. But in some townships, this would give a board of more than ten members, which would be too large and unwieldy. Therefore, it has been proposed that in townships having more than ten sections there might be two or more boards not exceeding ten members each. This arrangement would give a board of reasonable size, and would give representation thereon to each and every section. The election for trustees would be held at the same time and place and under the same conditions as the election for the municipal council, and each trustee would ordinarily hold office for two years."

THE STORE OF BETTER MERCHANDISE

NEW BUILDINGS ARE REQUESTED BY INSPECTORS

Attendance Records Show Less Irregularities in Past Year.

SCHOOL FAIRS.

Eighty-four Per Cent. of Candidates Were Successful at Midsummer.

COBOURG, Jan. 28.—R. Boyes of Campbellford, inspector in the No. 3 district of Northumberland, reported to the Counties Council, 97 schools under his supervision. He visited each school twice, except No. 15 Murray, which was closed the day he called.

Qualificatons of teachers—1st, 12; 2nd, 85. There are 15 men and 82 women teachers. The highest salary paid in rural schools is $1,200 and the lowest $750. The highest salary in urban schools is $1,900 and the lowest $700.

"No new buildings were put up," the report states. "A good deal of repairing was done, but a number of new buildings are needed. More candidates than usual wrote on the High School Entrance Examination. This would show that more pupils than ever are taking advantage of the courses of study up to the end of Book IV.

Uniform promotion examinations were held in June for the Senior III and Senior II classes. The number of candidates who were successful at the above examinations would show that good work is being done in the schools. Every school in the district now has a library.

Nearly all of the rural schools took part in the school fairs. This movement is showing more importance each year, I am satisfied that a good year's work has been done and that conditions are favorable for continued success in 1927."

Inspector Odell

J. W. Odell, Inspector of No. II division of the twin counties listed the qualifications of the 94 teachers in his inspectorate as follows: 1st class certificates, 8; second class, 83; third class, 1; kindergarten 2.

"The salaries have not changed much. The following shows the township averages per teacher: Cavan $1,000; Haldimand $962; Hamilton $983; Hope $970; South Monaghan $975; Millbrook $1033; Cobourg $1,050.

The attendance records have shown less irregularities the past year than formerly. There is yet room for improvement. I am of the opinion that special instructions to the attendance officers in their duties and powers as well as definite regulations regarding their remuneration for services and expenses would be beneficial.

The proficiency of the pupils is on the whole quite satisfactory. At the recent Entrance Examination 84 per cent of the candidates were successful.

School No. 10 Hamilton is an object lesson as to what can be done at small cost to make the poorest lighted school to the best.

One new brick schoolhouse of modern type has been erected on a new approved site in S.S. 8 Haldimand, at a cost of $6,700.

One school, S.S. 1, South Monaghan at Bailieboro, purchased the full fifth class equipment, as laid down by the Department of Education, for a new Fifth Class of fourteen pupils started last September, with prospect of it growing into a continuation school in the near future. The prospects for this development are bright and their ambition should be encouraged as much as possible.

E. E. Snider of Port Hope presented his report as inspector of No. 1 division in Durham.

COUNTY COUNCIL OPPOSES TRENT CANAL GRANT

Vote in Committee Results in Majority of One Against $200 Grant.

COMMITTEE NAMED.

To Interview Department With Regards To Paving Streets in Villages.

COBOURG, Jan. 28.—New members of the Counties Council were conspicuous among the opponents in the Finance committee which yesterday rejected an appeal from the Trent Waterways Association for a grant of $200.

Reeve Bygott, of Campbellford, and Reeve Hess, of Hastings, supported the request, briefly reviewing the work of the association in advertising the attractions of the Trent waterways in Canada and the United States.

"I don't know of any cheaper way of advertising this district to United States' tourists," said Reeve Bygott. "A thousand or more inquiries were received last year concerning this district and we know there was a very marked increase in the number of tourists last year."

Reeve Hess said the Trent waterways Association had been actively engaged in its propaganda for some years and deserved the material support of local municipalities whose people benefitted from the influx of tourists.

The vote in committee resulted in an adverse majority of one, and later Major Bygott said he intended to bring up the Association's request on the floor of the Council.

Hastings' Petition.

Reeve Hess monopolized the time of the Roads and Bridges committee Thursday morning with two petitions which he had presented last year. One of them sought the county's approval of a scheme of financing the construction of a twenty foot strip of pavement on the main street of the village, linking together the county road systems of Peterborough and Northumberland counties. It was finally decided that the Counties Road Commissioners, George Hooten, W. H. Nelson, Warden Elliott, Reeve Hess and the Road Superintendent, George Greer, interview the Department of Highways "with regard to the paving of streets in the various towns and villages and all matters pertaining thereto."

The Commissioners were authorized to attend the annual meeting of the Good Roads Association in February and when in Toronto will interview the Department about urban streets linking county roads.

Reeve Hess also urged the Council to provide for resurfacing the Hastings village bridge. He referred to the unsatisfactory expense limitation imposed by the Council last year, and advised that the planking required adequate protection to obtain full value of the creosote flooring that had been used.

The road commissioners, with Reeve Hess, were instructed to surface the floor temporarily with the traprock and tarvia on hand, the cost not to exceed $250, and to buy extra material if it is needed.

SHORT STORY

THE LAME JUMPER

(By Jane Osborn.)

Reginald Foster's devotion to his mother was less filial than fraternal. He felt like a big brother toward a rather frivolous younger sister. For Reginald at thirty felt and often looked older than his mother at forty eight. His own father had died when he was young and his mother, now wife of the well to do Peter Posner, had a family of young boys and girls whom Reginald looked upon as nieces and nephews. Every Monday morning when Reginald reached his office there was a letter lying on his desk from his mother—that is unless he had chanced to spend the week end with her at the Posner country house thirty miles out.

This morning there was little news save that dear Peter had put through some very important contracts recently. "I meant to come to town last week but everyone seemed to be having parties here and I couldn't get off. So I wonder if you'll do some shopping for me. You know how busy Peter is—don't you, Reginald darling? I really must have a lame jumper. I haven't an idea how much they cost but get a good one." Then followed a list including everything from a sun dial for the garden to a good dog for one of the children. "And don't forget," said Reginald's mother in closing, "to have the lame jumper sent out at once. Monday and Tuesday I shall be motoring to the shore and back, but I do want the things Tuesday when I get back." Reginald was annoyed—as he always was on a busy Monday to have a shopping list to attend to for his mother—but he felt annoyance not so much with his mother as with Peter, her husband. "Pretty sleek," quoth Reginald aloud. "He's too busy to bother."

Reginald heard two or three notes of a pleasant little laugh which was quickly suppressed when he looked up. Daphne, his partner's twenty year old daughter, had come into the office ostensibly to get her father to forward her next month's allowance and had come in unannounced to Reginald's office. She was laughing at him as he muttered to himself.

"Who's pretty sleek?" she asked.

"Peter's sleek," said Reginald abruptly. "Peter Posner, who married my mother."

"Oh, I think Mr. Posner is the dearest old thing—he's your step father, I suppose."

"I don't consider him any sort of a father to me," answered Reginald, "and he isn't at all old. He is some years younger than my mother, if that interests you—so he is not much past forty. I happen to be thirty myself."

"You poor old dear," said Daphne. Reginald looked intently at Daphne without a smile. "You are very charming, Daphne," he told her. "There's no one I like so well at a dance—but in an office you're a nuisance."

"All right, I'll run away," said the girl, moving toward the door. "Only why did you say Peter Posner was pretty sleek?"

"Because he lets me do his wife's shopping. I've got to take time this noon to go out and buy a dog and a radio and a lame jumper, whatever that is."

"Ask me to have lunch with you," suggested Daphne, "and I'll help you."

"You wouldn't help, you'd hinder," Reginald told her. "You're a witch and you know it. No man could keep his head with you around."

Several times that morning Reginald looked at the list written in his mother's bold, clear writing. There was no doubt about the lame jumper. Peter took time to telephone to a large department store and asked if they had any lame jumpers in stock, but no one there knew what he meant.

"Maybe it's a new book," someone suggested, and someone else suggested that it might be something to eat. "It sounds like some sort of crippled acrobat," Reginald insisted. Of course it was impossible to try to reach his mother by telephone. She was away on a motor trip.

It was at two o'clock, after Reginald had visited every sort of store he could think of—even the florist's shop—that he telephoned to Daphne. "You haven't an idea what my mother meant by a lame jumper, have you?"

Daphne giggled. "I have an idea," she said. "Only you don't say it right."

"Will you help me buy one?" begged Reginald.

"Gladly, if you'll take me to tea."

At five that afternoon Reginald and Daphne, having finished their shopping, sat together in Daphne's favorite restaurant.

"I knew right away what she wanted," said Daphne. "Of course your mother should have put an accent over the 'e,' but you ought to have known. It's 'lahmay.' Lame jumpers are quite the fashion. I'm thinking of getting one myself, though they are a trifle old."

"So'm I," grumbled Reginald. "You told me so this morning. Daphne, why, when you think I'm such an impossible old fogey, do you torment me so?"

"Because," said Daphne, looking intently at the cinnamon toast before her, "because I want you to propose. I had three proposals last week—and it does seem foolish to keep on saying no to everyone—but then," Daphne interrupted herself, "if you don't care about me——"

"You don't mean you'd have me?"

"Of course I would, you old simpleton," assured Daphne. "And Reginald dear—after we're married I'm going to call Peter Posner 'papa.' May I?"

Uncle Wiggily

To-day's Bedtime Story.

By Howard R. Garis

UNCLE WIGGILY'S STEAMER CHAIR

Once upon a time Mr. Whitewash, the big, shaggy bear gentleman who used to live at the North Pole, gave Uncle Wiggily a steamer chair. It was not a chair that steamed, nor was it anything like a teakettle. But Mr. Whitewash said:

"It is just like the chairs that passengers sit in on ocean steamers, and, as a matter of fact, I sat in it when I voyaged down from the North Pole on a cake of ice. In the warm sun my cake of ice steamed and so I call this my steamer chair. Rather clever, isn't it?"

"Indeed, it is, and thank you," said Uncle Wiggily as he looked at the present. "I shall take great comfort in this steamer chair."

And so he did, only once in a while, the chair being the kind that folds up flat like a camp stool once in a while, sometimes, the rabbit gentleman pinched his paws, and on a certain evening Nurse Jane Fuzzy Wuzzy heard Mr. Longears shouting loudly:

"Help! Help! Help!"

"What is the matter?" squeaked the muskrat lady housekeeper.

"Daddicums sat in his steamer chair and it folded shut on him and he is caught inside it!" cried Bumble, who was one of the forty 'leven little bunny children of Mr. Longears.

And it was true! Uncle Wiggily was caught in the steamer chair, not having unfolded it properly when he went to sit down. It took Nurse Jane and Mrs. Longears half an hour to get the bunny rabbit out.

"I must be more careful of that steamer chair after this," said Mr. Longears. And he was.

But there came a day when Uncle Wiggily was very glad Mr. Whitewash had given him the steamer chair, and on the same day Mr. Longears was glad his chair could shut itself up and hold fast whoever sat in it. Thus it happened, as they say in fairy stories.

Uncle Wiggily was at home alone in his hollow stump bungalow. All the forty 'leven little boy and girl rabbits had gone to school, and Mrs. Longears, with Nurse Jane Fuzzy Wuzzy, had gone down town to the ten and eleven cent store to buy a new diamond dish-pan.

All of a sudden, as Uncle Wiggily was unfolding his steamer chair to sit in it and read a book about how to go adventuring in winter all of a sudden there was a noise at the back door and in came the Bob Cat.

"Oh ho! and Oh ha!" snarled the bad chap as he saw the rabbit. "So I found you in!"

"I would much rather you had found me out!" spoke the bunny rabbit for well he knew what was going to happen.

"Yes, I found you!" went on the Bob Cat, trying to wag his silly little tail, but not doing it very well because there wasn't much to wag. "And now I want you to come with me. My friends the Fox and Wolf sent me to get you. I waited until you were all alone and then I came in. Come on, now, get ready to go with me."

Uncle Wiggily set the steamer chair in the middle of the room. It was not properly unfolded yet, and the bunny knew it. So with a sly look on his face Mr. Longears said:

All of a sudden it collapsed!

"You must be tired, Mr. Bob Cat. Please sit down in this steamer chair until I can put on a clean collar and then I will go with you."

"No fooling!" snarled the Bob Cat.

"No fooling!" repeated Uncle Wiggily. "Sit down!"

So the bad chap sat down. But no sooner was he in the tricky chair than, all of a sudden it collapsed, went together and shut up and best of all, the Bob Cat was caught fast in it just like a trap.

"Oh, what's the matter? Where am I! What happened?" howled the Bob Cat. "Where am I?"

"Caught fast in my steamer chair, and there you'll stay until I can telephone for the Police Dog!" laughed Uncle Wiggily. "More than once I have been nipped in that chair myself, and now it is your turn! Ha! Ha!"

SIMPLE REMEDY FOR BAD STOMACH GIVES QUICK RELIEF

No Need of Strong Medicines or Diet — Famous but Simple Old English Recipe Keeps Stomach in Fine Condition, Banishes After-Eating Distress.

If you are a victim of Stomach Troubles—Gas, Sourness, Pain or Bloating—you may have quick and certain relief by following this simple advice.

Don't take strong medicines, artificial digestants or pull down your system by following unnecessary starvation diets.

Never hurry your meals or overeat of anything, but within reason most folks may eat what they like—if they will keep their stomach sweet, clean and active and free from the souring acids that hinder or paralyze the work of digestion.

And the best and easiest way to do this is to follow every meal with a small amount of pure Bisurated Magnesia—a pleasant, harmless and inexpensive form of Magnesia that promptly neutralizes acidity and keeps your stomach sweet and clean.

A week's trial of Bisurated Magnesia, which may be obtained from any druggist for only a few cents, will easily convince you of the great value of this old English recipe.

On October 18 last, the historic chateau of Chantilly, Paris, was broken into and the famous Rose Diamond, which formerly belonged to the great Conde family was stolen. The French detective force was engrossed in the search for the million dollar gem, but not until a hotel chambermaid afterwards found and took a bite out of an apple which had been left untouched during a search by the police in the hotel room of two Alsatian men who had been suspected, was the mystery solved. She closed her teeth on the diamond. The detectives closed their grip on the thieves. The chambermaid and the apple are shown above.

DEPUTY REEVE'S NARROW ESCAPE

C. H. Davidson's Car Slips On Icy Road and Hits Tree.

BADLY DAMAGED.

COBOURG, Jan. 28. — Swerving off the highway just west of town, while returning by motor from Port Hope at noon Wednesday, Deputy-reeve C. H. Davidson of Campbellford, just missed upsetting his automobile in the six-foot ditch by colliding against a tree. The car was considerably damaged, the top split, fender smashed and windshield smashed. Mr. Davidson, James Ross of Brighton township, and two hikers who had been "picked up" on the highway, were unhurt, but a branch of the tree was thrust through the glass dangerously close to Mr. Davidson's companion. The car was hauled out by Harry Greer, and is being repaired at Greer's garage.

Mr. Davidson had driven ot Port Hope with J. P. Archer of Campbellford and Deputy-reeve Russell Peake of Seymour township, who had been called home because of the serious illness of his month-old baby. On his way back to Cobourg he was travelling at only 15 miles an hour, when the rear of the car began to swing on the icy road near the dye factory, and in a moment was over the shoulder of the highway.

It was learned afterward that Mr. Peake missed the Campbellford train connection in Peterboro and had to return by way of Port Hope and Brighton to reach home.

A portrait of King James I, carved on a plum stone, encased in a crystal and framed in gold, has been presented to the Chapter of Southwark Cathedral.

Bob Cat could not get out of the steamer chair, and soon the Police Dog came and took him off to jail where he may be yet, if he hasn't gotten out.

"Good old steamer chair!" said Uncle Wiggily as he fixed it properly, so it would not shut up again. Then he sat in it and finished reading the book about how to have adventures in winter. And if the sunshine will tickle the toes of the rag doll and make her dance, I'll tell you soon about Uncle Wiggily's tooth brush

ACQUITTED ON THEFT CHARGE

Port Hope Man Faces Two Charges Before Cobourg Judge.

NOT WARNED.

COBOURG, Jan. 28. — John ("Dodger") Lewis of Port Hope was acquitted by Judge McGlade here yesterday on two charges of alleged theft and attempted theft from the C.N.R. "moonlight" freight train that runs between Peterboro and Port Hope.

The first case collapsed when Judge McGlade declined to admit the evidence of Fred Chapman, a C.N.R. special constable, on the ground that Lewis had not been warned when in custody he made a statement to Chapman. When arrested on a charge of vagrancy he had been properly warned, but when held under the more serious count Lewis had not been told of his changed position.

"I can't see how anything said then can be used against him," said His Honor, and the charge was withdrawn.

Mrs. George Ling had testified that on December 14 Lewis had brought a box of 15 or 20 prints of butter to her home, gave them to her and told her to ask no questions. When Chief Murphy, accompanied by C.N.R. agents, arrived later, Mrs. Ling told them she got the butter from a man at the door.

"They came in like a lot of robbers," she said. "They didn't ask to see if they could search. I didn't consider it any of their business."

The Second Charge.

In the second case Chapman testified that during November and December C.N.R. cars had been broken into and goods stolen. On the night of December 20 he and C.N.R. Constable Graham of Belleville went to Port Hope on the "moonlight." They got out at Campbellcroft and climbed into an empty box car. At Port Hope the engine was "cut off" near the Nicholson File Factory.

"Shortly afterward we saw a man approaching from the south. He was looking between and under the cars. He walked past the car we were in. Then he came back and looked in. He was striking a match and looking into the car when Graham hit him on the head with his baton."

Lewis ran down the track, the two "specials" firing their revolvers in the air, and shouting after him to stop. He finally took to the ice and jumped into the river, but, unable to swim against the current, swam back to the ice, which broke twice under him as the constables tried to drag him out.

"He was bleeding and drenched," said Chapman. "I told him he was foolish to run away. He said, 'I never stop until I have to buddy'."

"What would you have done," asked W. F. McMahon of Port Hope, who defended Lewis. "Wouldn't you run if some one suddenly clouted you on the head and fired a revolver behind you?"

"I've never been in that predicament," was Chapman's non-committal answer.

Constable Graham testified that when Lewis was at the car door he thought Lewis had a match in one hand and a revolver in the other. He was not positive about the revolver, because it was too dark to see plainly.

Making a Cigarette.

Lewis declared in his defence that he was going up the railway about 11.30 p.m. because it was the shortest way to George Ling's, where he intended to sleep. Opposite their house, which was near the railway, he saw that it was in darkness, and concluded that the family had gone to bed. He was returning along the track beside the cars to go to his brother's home, and stopped at the empty car to roll a cigarette. He had rested his arms on the edge of the car floor, with a box of matches in one hand and the cigarette in another. Just as he struck the match he was hit on the head.

"I don't remember anything until I was out of the water. I was too dazed, and didn't hear any shots." He denied that he had been looking under and between the cars.

To W. F. Kerr, K.C., conducting the prosecution, Lewis said he had found the butter beside a railway crossing.

After brief summation by Mr. Kerr and Mr. McMahon, the latter contending that the evidence was insufficient for conviction, Judge McGlade held that the Crown's case was not conclusive in the face of the prisoner's account of his actions, and discharged Lewis, supplementing his decision by saying that he arrived at it "with some reluctance."

U.F.O. MEETING AT DOWNEYVILLE

Speakers Tell Audience of Necessity of Work on Farms.

DOWNEYVILLE, Jan. 28.—On Thursday evening last a very instructive and interesting meeting was held here in the hall in the interests of the U.F.O. Mr. McCurdy was the main speaker and spoke strongly on the people remaining on the farms, which, he said, needed to be worked to feed the increasing city populations. He said the cities were nearly over-crowded, and in time the people would have to return to the farm, and if the farms were all worked as they should be and the crops grown, the prices would be better.

F. G. Sandy, M.P.P., was also present, and said he was a farmer all his life and still lived on the farm on which he was born. He said if farmers would co-operate and stay together there was no better money-making industry today. If the people would follow dairying more it would be more profitable. Last year the dairy business was a failure the world over, he said, but it may never be that way again. He was sorry to learn the cheese factory was running on so small a scale, and in such a big territory, he said, there should be a big factory, and for the people not to get discouraged.

Mr. Bruce McNevan, of Reaboro, a prosperous farmer, also made reference to the splendid opportunities in the farming business, and said that if the farmers would install all the labor-saving devices in their homes, how much easier it would be to farm with little help.

Rev. Father Galvin also addressed the crowd, and said he was always glad to hear farming discussed, and a few farmers around here were mentioned as having made a considerable sum in the egg pool and by shipping their cream.

Reeve Martin Carroll said he was delighted to have Mr. McCurdy and the other speakers present, and he was sure all enjoyed the splendid speeches, and hoped often to have speakers present who would encourage the boys and girls to remain on the farm.

Miss Mary Winn sang a solo and Hazel and Violet Duffy danced the Highland Fling, while the orchestra rendered a few selections. The hall was crowded, and after the singing of the National Anthem, all left for home greatly pleased with the evening.

Leave King's Wharf.

On Wednesday evening a large number of the friends and neighbors of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Herlihey gathered at their home to say farewell and wish them God-speed. A very enjoyable time was spent in dancing, music and card playing. A dainty lunch was served. The removal of Mr. and Mrs. Herlihey leaves another farm idle and another vacant house in the parish. Mr. and Mrs. Herlihey left on Saturday for Erie, Penn., where they intend to reside in future.

BANKRUPT PAYS

NEW YORK, Jan. 27.—Santa Claus was good to the creditors of David V. Picker, who was wiped out in 1913 by bankruptcy. Forty-five creditors received checks totalling $30,000. Picker, during the 13 years since his bankruptcy, has been gradually paying off debts that at first amounted to $100,000.

ANNUAL MEETING HAVELOCK CHURCH

Knox Presbyterian Church Has Had Prosperous Year, Reports Indicate.

HAVELOCK, Jan. 28.—The annual meeting of Knox Presbyterian Church was held on Monday evening when very encouraging reports were presented by the officers of the different organizations of the church. Rev. G. E. Lougheed occupied the chair and H. F. McNichol acted as Secretary.

The receipts from all the departments amounted to $2,805.45, which was looked upon as very satisfactory, considering that the congregation was without a minister for eight months in 1926. Since the induction of the Rev. G. E. Lougheed as minister in November, there has been an earnest and growing enthusiasm.

That the young people are taking up their work with deepening interest was manifested by the announcement from the Young Women's Auxiliary of their plan to purchase a piano for the basement of the church. The girls requested the congregation to allow them to give the Sunday School organ as part payment on the piano.

On motion by Dr. A. S. Thompson and Mrs. L. A. Cuthbertson, the auxiliary was authorized to purchase the piano and use the organ as part payment. It is expected that the new piano will arrive in the course of a few days.

New chairs have been ordered for the choir and they will likely be in place for the first Sunday in February. The cost, which will be in the neighborhood of $75, will be paid by the choir from their funds.

The following is a report from each department:

Sabbath School.

Read by A. Wilson. Receipts, $187.63; expenditures, $169.50; cash on hand, $18.13. In this department the receipts show an increase of $70.00 over 1925.

Ladies' Aid.

The report from the Ladies' Aid was read by Mrs. W. Hitchens, showing this society to be very active and working heartily. Receipts, $409.47; expenditures, $274.57; cash on hand, $134.90.

Young Women's Auxiliary.

Report read by Miss Barbara Watson. Receipts, $146.16; expenditures, $60.56; cash on hand, $85.60.

Mission Band.

Report read by Miss Agnes Dewey. Receipts, $8.20; expenditures, $7.92; balance, 28c.

Missionary Report.

Women's Missionary report was read by Mrs. (Dr.) A. S. Thompson. Receipts, $66.41; expenditures, $65.00; balance on hand, $1.41.

Treasurer's Report.

Read by Mr. H. F. McNichol. Receipts, $1,987.58; expenditures, $1,923.10; balance on hand, $64.48.

Session Report.

By Dr. A. S. Thompson, Clerk of the session.

Resident members, 113.

One member had been removed by death.

Three new elders elected in 1926.

Three infants received the ordinance of baptism.

Officers Elected.

The following officers were elected for 1927:

Managers—J. Hunter, G. Rutherford, J. F. McMillan, L. A. Cuthbertson, C. Rowat.

Finance Committee to assist the Treasurer — Mrs. (Dr.) A. S. Thompson and Mr. W. Hitchens.

Treasurer—H. F. McNichol.

Ushers—Angus Clarke and Grenville Rutherford.

Collectors—A. Wilson, James Squire, G. Wright, P. Yuell.

William Mathison and Dr. A. S. Thompson were appointed to write history of Knox Church from time it was built, forty years ago, and were given until next annual meeting to prepare same.

The congregation tendered a vote of thanks to the choir, to the organist, Mrs. H. F. McNichol, to the Treasurer, H. F. McNichol, to Dr. Thompson for tables for the Ladies' Aid, to William Mathison and Dr. Thompson for their work in preparing a new church roll, and to Mrs. Charles Dewey for the clock which she donated to the church in memory of her mother.

The meeting closed with a hymn and benediction, after which refreshments were served in the basement and a social hour spent.

Reports from the A.Y.P.A., the Women's Auxiliary and the Sunday School were satisfactory from every standpoint, each organization having a balance on hand after all obligations had been met.

Rev. Canon Allen and his assistant, Rev. P. C. Howard, extended a hearty vote of thanks to all who had so faithfully and willingly assisted with the work of the church, and who had assumed the obligations of office in the various organizations during the year, and voiced an optimistic outlook for the current twelve months.

Mothers' Allowance.

The report from the commission which administers the Mothers' Allowances Act, J. McCullough, Secretary, covering expenditures in Northumberland and Durham, for December, is:

Northumberland County—Number of beneficiaries, 40; amount disbursed, $1,260.00; 40 families with a total of 119 children.

Durham County—Number of beneficiaries, 27; amount disbursed, $845.00; 27 families with a total of 78 children.

News Briefs.

The Millbrook Agricultural Society is putting on a drive for membership as a special feature of this year's activities, 500 new names on the membership roll being the objective aimed at. The two directors winning the highest number of names will be sent as delegates to the annual Fairs and Exhibitions Convention next year. A substantial reduction in the debt is the idea in view.

The funeral of the late Mrs. Robert Smith (Margaret Hannon), who passed away on Monday, Jan. 24, at the age of 78 years and 6 months, took place from the residence of her son, Mr. L. W. Smith, 5th Concession, Cavan, on Thursday, at 2.30 p.m. Service at the house was at 2 o'clock. Deceased is survived by one daughter, Mrs. Wilbert Larmer, of Cavan, and one son, Mr. L. W. Smith; with the latter she had made her home in recent months.

The evening service at St. Thomas' Church on Sunday, Jan. 30, will be featured by special music from the choir of St. John's Church, Ida. The celebration of Holy Communion will be observed at Trinity Church (the Marsh) at 3 p.m.

An army mule which had strayed away from an army post in Panama was discovered 47 days later in a 10-foot hole, with saddle and bridle still on. He had lived on the vegetation in the hole and such water as fell his way.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

HOW TO OVERCOME TEMPTATION

Text: Luke 4:1-13; 1 Cor. 10:12, 13.

And Jesus, being full of the Holy Ghost, returned from Jordan, and was led by the Spirit into the wilderness.

Being forty days tempted of the devil. And in those days he did eat nothing: and when they were ended, he afterward hungered.

And the devil said unto him, If thou be the Son of God, command this stone that it be made bread.

And Jesus answered him, saying, It is written, That man shall not live by bread alone, but by every word of God.

And the devil, taking him up into an high mountain, shewed unto him all the kingdoms of the world in a moment of time.

And the devil said unto him, All this power will I give thee, and the glory of them: for that is delivered unto me; and to whomsoever I will I give it.

If thou, therefore, wilt worship me, all shall be thine.

And Jesus answered and said unto him, Get thee behind me, Satan: for it is written, Thou shalt worship the Lord thy God, and him only shalt thou serve.

And he brought him to Jerusalem, and set him on a pinnacle of the temple, and said unto him, If thou be the Son of God, cast thyself down from thence:

For it is written, He shall give his angels charge over thee, to keep thee;

And in their hands they shall bear thee up, lest at any time thou dash thy foot against a stone.

And Jesus, answering said unto him, It is said, Thou shalt not tempt the Lord Thy God.

And when the devil had ended all the temptation, he departed from him for a season.

Wherefore let him that thinketh he standeth take heed lest he fall.

There hath no temptation taken you but such as is common to man: but God is faithful, who will not suffer you to be tempted above that ye are able; but will with the temptation also make a way to escape, that ye may be able to bear it.

The International Uniform Sunday School Lesson for Jan. 30—How to Overcome Temptation. Luke 4:1-13; 1 Cor. 10:12, 13.

BY WM. E. GILROY, D.D.
Editor The Congregationalist.

Concerning the speculative details of this lesson we need waste no time. Those who are interested in matters of obscurity and controversy no doubt will question just how Jesus was led into the wilderness to be tempted, and the part the temptation played in the plans and purposes of God. People of this type have spent a great deal of time questioning and discussing the passage in the Lord's prayer, "Lead us not into temptation."

But people of plain practical mind, for whom we are writing, whose deep interest in the study of Scripture is not in speculation, but in the discovery and appreciation of truth that will help them to strengthen their characters and live better lives, will not be unduly concerned about the speculative aspects of temptation either as it applies to ourselves or as it was experienced by Jesus.

Temptation is real enough for us all; it assails us in the most unexpected times, places and ways, and it is a profound comfort and satisfaction to know that temptation in itself is not a mark of sin, that saints and prophets have known its meaning and its fierceness, and that the Son of God himself in his human life was tempted like as we are.

Danger in High Calling.

Perhaps it may help us realize that the temptation of Jesus was incidental to his mission. Every high and holy calling has its inherent difficulties and dangers. The consciousness that made Jesus a world savior made possible in him the lure of worldly ambition, the temptation to become a master of the kingdoms of the world rather than the Lord of the kingdom of spiritual life.

Moreover, the temptations that assailed Jesus are the temptations that come to strong and able men, the temptations to substitute personal will for God's will, and to make one's own ambitions, plans and purposes the goal of life instead of the Kingdom of God and his righteousness.

The tragedies of life are not found entirely among the weak, incompetent and inexperienced; it would be found rather that the worst tragedies of life have been in the downfall of great men and in the misdirection of their lives and energies.

Saul, called to a kingdom under magnificent conditions of opportunity, wastes his power in ignoble jealousy and vain ambition. Napoleon, with the mastery of empire in his blood yields to the things that Jesus renounced only to find himself not given the kingdoms of the world but a broken exile on a narrow island prison.

Triumph of Jesus.

The way to overcome temptation is clearly revealed to us in the triumph of Jesus. One may dwell upon the details of that conquest, the faith of Jesus in the Scriptures, the widsom of his religious outlook, the power of seeing clearly the nature of the temporary allurement of selfishness. But the fact is that all these are lost in consideration of the one great power that enabled Jesus to conquer in the midst of temptation.

There is no power that can guarantee our victory over temptation, but that power of self-mastery through self-surrender to God—the self-surrender that makes it possible for God to reveal his power in our weakness.

It is a happy and wise thought that links Paul's words concerning temptation with the account of the temptation of Jesus. With Paul's clear warning against having a false confidence in one's strength, he indicates the sure way in which the soul may find entrenchment.

If we had to fight in our own power there would be much excuse for our failure, but we should ever remember that God is the friend of the tempted and tried. His power exists to save us from sin and to upbuild our lives in righteousness and truth.

PRESENTATION TO MR. AND MRS. LOWES

On Eve of Departure From East Emily for New Home.

EAST EMILY, Jan. 28.—On Monday night the friends and neighbors gathered at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Wellington Lowes to bid them farewell before they leave to take up their residence in Peterboro.

Mr. and Mrs. Lowes were asked to come forward when the following address was read by Mr. Chas. Graham:

"To Mr. and Mrs. Wellington Lowes:

"Dear Folks,—We, your friends and neighbors of the surrounding community, knowing of your intended departure from our midst, have gathered in your home on this occasion to spend a social evening, realizing it is the last opportunity we shall have of enjoying your benevolence and kind hospitality down on the old farm in Emily.

"We are sorry that you see fit to sever the ties which have bound us as neighbors in the past, but we fully realize that a person's mind is his guide, and we sincerely hope that your minds have been made up for the better, and that in your new environment you will meet and form new acquaintances and associations that will prove even more congenial than those you are leaving behind.

"To you, Willie, we confess that many times we have imposed on your good nature and generosity, and actually usurped a toll that was not ours by rights, but ere you leave us we beg your forgiveness and humbly ask you to remember our failures and short-comings no more.

"We shall miss that hearty laugh at the social gatherings, the community bees and the farm threshings. The Good Book says that a "Merry heart doeth good as a medicine," and now we realize all too fully that to us your supply of good cheer, acting like a stimulant, is soon to be exhausted. The short move you contemplate affords us the consolation that we shall possibly have the pleasure of meeting ing old times, old scenes and old you both at intervals and rehearsmemories.

"Our latchstring will be found on the outside always, and any time you and your family have the opportunity of re-visiting the scene of former days, we sincerely expect you to make use of them.

"Now, dear friends, we candidly feel that these few words are but feeble efforts on our part to express to you our feelings at the present, our gratitude for services and influences in the past, and our best wishes for a happy future, so we desire in a more tangible way to express what words fail to convey by asking you to accept these two chairs, one for each of you, not merely for their present worth but as a further token of our sincerity. We hope their frequent use will not only afford you the comfort, solace and deep repose, the purpose for which they were intended, but that they will also conjure up in your minds sweet memories of your old neighbors and of pleasant days spent on the old homestead in East Emily.

"Our earnest prayer is that you both may be spared long, one to the other, that your family may be spared to become a source of comfort and relief to you when youth is no longer on your side, that a kind and loving Providence may bless your efforts with a heaping measure of health, peace and prosperity.

"Best wishes and fond regards.

"Signed on behalf of the neighboring community—Calvin E. Mitchell, Henry L. McElwain, Charles L. Graham."

Mr. Lowes made a very pleasing reply on behalf of his wife and himself, after which the crowd all joined in singing, "For They Are Jolly Good Fellows." The night was spent in dancing and card playing until a late hour.

GOT HER FEET WET CAUGHT BAD COLD

Mrs. Ernest Hall, Cardinal, Ont., writes:—"Last winter I got my feet wet and I caught a terrible cold. I took different kinds of medicine, but none did me any good and I seemed to be getting worse all the time.

One day I was reading about what your medicine had done for others, so thought I would get a bottle. After I had taken a few doses I found it was helping me, so I took a few bottles and was completely restored to health. I cannot praise too highly, as I believe that if it were not for it I would be an invalid today."

Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup

SAINT and SINNER

By ANNE AUSTIN

Cherry remained locked in her room until Frances Warren and Selma Pruitt had gone away, and after that until Mrs. Lane, who had begged in vain for admittance three times, used the best weapon she possessed to break into that room of doubts and griefs and stormy passions.

For Mrs. Lane gasped, closed her eyes, slumped low on the davenport, and gave every other indication of a heart attack which was only partially feigned.

Faith ran to Cherry's room and beat frantically upon the door. "Quick, Cherry! Mother's having an attack. She's calling for you! It may kill her if you don't come!"

When Cherry flung open the door Faith cried out in pain and pity at the sight of the lovely, tear-ravaged little face.

"Is she very bad, Faith?" Cherry began to sob against Faith's neck. "Have I killed Nuggy, Faith?"

The sob-shaken little body was clad only in the gauzy white chiffon "teddies," a garment which Cherry had filched from her own trousseau. Faith did not stop to dress her, but carried her to the living room and laid her, as if she had been an infant, in Mrs. Lane's arms.

"Feeling better, Mother? Here's Cherry, to say she's sorry. I'll get you some of your heart medicine, dear. Don't talk if you don't feel like it."

But when Faith returned with the tiny medicine glass of water, into which three drops of the potent drug had been measured, she found there was little need of it. Mrs. Lane was rocking her favorite child in her arms, and Cherry's face was cuddled against her mother's vast bosom.

"Muggy's baby!" Mrs. Lane was whispering huskily.

"Oh, Muggy! I'm such a bad girl! I didn't mean to fly off the handle like that! I wonder if Dad will ever forgive me? Where is he, Muggy?"

"He's in the kitchen," Joy answered from her place of semi-concealment on the floor at the end of the davenport. "He's cryin'."

"Make him come in here, Faith!" Cherry pleaded. "Oh, Muggy, what's going to become of me? Frances and Selma will hate me now. Maybe they won't want to be in my wedding!—"

"Maybe you'd better ask Mr. Cluny to let you off," Mrs. Lane suggested in a great sigh. "Your Pa's so set agin it—"

"No, I'll go through with it now if it kills me." Cherry's voice broke on a sob. "Mr. Cluny's been too good to me for me to treat him like that. But I could simply kill myself for being so mean to you and Dad, and making a show of myself before Frances and Selma! Whatever in the world will they think of me? Selma's just nice to me because George is crazy about Faith—oh, Dad," as her father's stooped, small figure shambled into the room, "I'm sorry, Daddy. I been crying my eyes out because I was so mean to you. Won't you forgive me, Dad? I didn't mean it, honest I didn't."

Jim Lane took the little hand that was outstretched to him so appealingly and squeezed it convulsively. "Don't you worry about me, Cherry. I'm gettin' old, I guess. Seems like I can't control my temper and my feelin's like I used to. I won't put no more bars in your way o'marryin' your man, Cherry. Ain't no use, and I don't want you hatin' me. Now," his tired, sad eyes dwelt on her almost little nude body with a fleeting glance of embarrassment. "Reckon you better get some clothes on or go to bed."

"You're a good man, Jim. I always said you was a good man, but muleish," Mrs. Lane sighed. "Now, Cherry, you write a nice, polite little note to Frances and Selma, tell 'em you're sorry the evening didn't turn out so pleasant, and ask 'em to forgive you. Don't be mean yourself to them stuck-up little prissies, but it's no more'n right for you to apologize."

"I will, Muggy. I wish I were good—like Faith," she turned her face against her mother's breast and clutched at her mother's enormous shoulders like a repentant child.

All that terrible evening, the thought of Bob Hathaway and his love for her had quivered like a bar of ineffable music in Faith's heart, sustaining her, making it possible for her to bear anything, even the tragic sadness in her father's defeated old eyes. Now she wanted, above everything else, to be alone with the realization of Bob's love. Obeying an almost irresistible impulse, she began a letter to him, sitting up in her bed, a blanket fluffed about her shoulders.

"I have realized tonight, darling, how miraculously blessed among all women I am. I have a mean little confession to make to you, Bob. All my life I have envied Cherry. She has always had the best of everything—and mother always loved her best. When I was little, that hurt worst of all. But tonight I have realized that all that Cherry has is less than nothing, compared with what she is missing through her marriage to a man she does not love. And all I have missed in the past is made up a thousandfold by your love for me."

"What are you doing?" a small, pathetic voice quavered from the doorway.

Faith, startled, dropped her fountain pen upon Joy's sleeping face, cuddled close against her for warmth.

"Writing a letter. Why, honey?"

"I—I want you to come and sleep with me." Cherry pleaded forlornly. "If you don't, I'll jump out of the window and run away—with Chris."

HOROSCOPE

The Stars Incline, but do not Compel.

SATURDAY JANUARY 29 1927

Astrologers read this as an unimportant planetary government, but a benefic aspect dominates.

This should be a favorable rule for advertising and publicity. All who desire to buy newspaper fame should make the most of today.

Writers this year are to enjoy great profits and to attain unusual success, for there will be much reading.

It will be disappointing to seek employment under this sway which indicates that small pay will be offered, the seers aver.

Financial matters should receive attention while this rule prevails, and there should be new respect for the results of careful saving.

Astrologers foretell emphatically that wars will add to the world's distresses in the coming year.

The conjunction of Jupiter and Uranus, July 15, is read as presaging changes affecting many nations.

Vast political powers and military dictators are to disturb the British empire, it is foretold.

An era of force which will sweep over the whole world is prognosticated. A hurricane of war and carnage is foreseen by those who study the stars.

In the United States the people should eliminate graft and political corruption, for the nation is to become the great helper of a distraught world.

If there is anything in astrology then this country is to be the greatest on the globe, and to bear corresponding responsibilities.

This is an era in which men and women must think not only nationally, but internationally, the seers declare.

Persons whose birthdate it is have the forecast of a quiet year in which they ought to prosper.

Children born on this day probably will have eventful lives over which they will retain control.

DRESS

By MARY MARSHALL

Moire is at its best when very sparingly trimmed. The unusual train on this evening frock is made of the moire of which the frock is made and the slippers also are of black moire. Slippers of this sort are considered smarter in Paris now than those of gold silver or brocade.

The present version of moire, like present-day velvet and taffeta, is somewhat different from the material that originally bore the name. In any study of the fashions of the present day much credit should be given to the fabric makers. We are no longer limited to a rather narrow range of fabrics, because fabrics are now produced to suit the ever-changing fashion. And in this work of adaptation the fabric makers do not lose anything of the essential characteristic of the material. Satin is none the less satin because it is made almost as supple as georgette. Velvet is still velvet though it does not possess the "heavy body" that once characterized velvet. The old sort of taffeta was worn only when bouffant frocks were in fashion. It suffered eclipse when clinging drapery came into vogue. But at present you may find taffeta that is almost as workable as china silk.

Old-time moire was a fabric with a decidedly heavy body. It could be used only for closely-fitted bodices or formally bouffant skirts. Using it for any sort of draped effect was out of the question. But that stiffness was not the essential quality of moire and none of the charming watered effect has been lost now that moire of a fine pliant sort is to be had.

Moire has come into fashionable prominence not only for formal afternoon frocks but for evening wear as well, and there is no type of evening gown smarter at the present time than the one of untrimmed moire. A gown of this sort stands out in striking contrast to the glittering gowns of lame or georgette, and net frocks weighted down with intricate designs of beads and sequins.

Even the shoemakers appreciate the smartness of moire and they find a decided demand among smart women for simple evening slippers made of moire to match the frock with which they are worn. Slippers of this sort trimmed or untrimmed only with a very small rhinestone ornament are coming to the fore in Paris, where smart women are becoming weary of glittering slippers of gold and silver brocade.

THE SWISS FAMILY ROBINSON — The Wonders of the Cavern

MUSSOLINI HAS PASSED THROUGH SEVERAL STAGES

Col. Ricciotti Garibaldi Knew Him First as an Anarchist.

NOW IMPERIALIST.

Grandson of Liberator Says Fascism Will Outlast Present Leader.

LONDON, Jan. 28. (United Press.—From Anarchist to Imperialist, Premier Mussolini of Italy has progressed slowly through five successive stages, Colonel Ricciotti Garibaldi here, preparing to sail for Cuba Feb. 3rd, said to-day in an interview.

"What he will do next, who can say?" asked the grandson of the great Italian liberator.

"Perhaps he will go completely out —Pouf!" I have known him as an Anarchist, a Communist, a Socialist, a Republican Monarchist, and at present an Imperialist.

"I think Fascism has come to stay, and that it will outlast Mussolini."

Garibaldi, who recently was expelled from France following charges that he had sought to involve that country in international difficulty with Italy, declared that he was innocent of accusations made against him in Paris

He hopes to visit New York later if he is permitted to enter the United States.

STAR OF BURNS LECTURE TITLE

Interesting Address on Scottish Poet Given at Knox Church.

APPROPRIATE MUSIC.

A delightful lecture on "The Star of Bobbie Burns" was given in Knox Church last evening, under the auspices of the Sunday School, by Rev. Murdock MacKinnon, M.A., D.D., pastor of Runnymede United Church, Toronto. Rev. William McDonald, B.D., pastor of the church, acted as chairman, and, prior to the lecture, a musical programme, appropriate to the spirit of the occasion, was given, with old favorites in Scottish music, compositions of her own beloved poet, Burns, rendered, in numbers which included "Afton Water," "Scots Wha Hae," "The Birks of Aberfeldy," "Ye Banks and Braes o' Bonnie Doon," and "Green Grow the Rashes, O," sung by Miss Isabel Black, Mr. John Smith and Mr. Bob Hendry, in solos and duetts.

Rev. Mr. MacKinnon treated his subject in a very original manner, departing from the stereotyped fashion in a way that made his address intensely interesting to his audience. He did not make references of a historical nature to the life of Burns, nor quote very much from his works, confining his attention rather to a philosophical, literary treatment of the "star" or genius of Robert Burns, and the influence it had on his own life and that of his country.

Robert Burns, possessed, seemingly, of little education, yet made wonderfull use of the opportunities afforded him in this line, and although he travelled little in his short life, his northern journeys taking him only as far as Inverness and his southern excursions extending only as far as Newcastle-on-Tyne, still he was in touch with the world. Speaking of the likeness of Burns and Abraham Lincoln in spirit, Rev. Mr. MacKinnon alluded to their independence and love of freedom. The love of humanity of Burns was his outstanding characteristic, and his simplicity and naturalness in describing the works of nature was contrasted by the speaker with the works of Wordsworth, who was a man of high education and much polish.

Scotland did not make Burns, Burns made Scotland. No other man in all of Scotland's history so touched and moulded the spirit of his land as did this poet in the course of his brief life.

COMES FROM TWEED.

Charles Terry, a middle-aged man, died under tragic circumstances while visiting at the home of a childhood acquaintance, about ten o'clock this morning.

Just a few minutes before his untimely death he had entered the home of Mrs. Woodcock, 148 Park street. While sitting in a chair and talking to Mrs. Woodcock, he suddenly exclaimed: "Oh, Clara, I'm weak," and fell back in the chair, dying instantly.

Dr. T. W. H. Young, the coroner, was notified and after examination pronounced the cause of death as heart failure.

Deceased was a resident of Tweed, where his wife lives. There is also one son, Roy Terry, and a married daughter, both residents of Peterboro.

TO UNSEAT MAYOR OF PORT COLBORNE

Petition Filed Regarding His Agreement Regarding Sidewalks.

WELLAND, Ont., Jan. 28—After six weeks of uncertainty, definite steps have been taken to unseat Charles E. Steele as mayor Port Colborne. Yesterday a petition was filed and an affidavit sworn to by William Stead, the defated mayoralty candidate. The proceedings will come before Judge Livingstone at Welland on Tuesday next.

The opponents of Mr. Steele claim that a contract entered into between Mr. Steele and the town in 1925 regarding sidewalks in his sub-division is still in existence. They contend that the assignment of the contract to his son a few weeks ago was an entirely ineffectual attempt to relieve him of the penalty of not being able to take his seat.

As a result of the uncertainty, civic business is being held up and overdrafts are mounting up, it is said.

Demand From Liverpool Causes Advance In Wheat

CHICAGO, Jan. 28 (Canadian Press).—Exhaustion of supplies at Liverpool and unexpected higher quotations for future deliveries there led to an early upturn in Chicago wheat to-day. Offerings enlarged on the bulge, however, and gains failed to hold well. Starting unchanged to ½ to 5-8 cents advance, wheat hardened and then re-acted somewhat. Corn and oats were easy, corn opening at 3-8c off to ¼c up, and later showed a general sag. Provisions tended upgrade.

Opening prices were: Wheat, May 142¾, July 132 7-8. Corn, May 82; July 85¼. Oats, May 49; July unquoted.

Toronto Trading Light With Downward Trend

TORONTO, Jan 28. Stocks generally tended slightly lower in lighter trading on the Toronto Stock Exchange this morning, when a comparatively narrow list of stock was dealt in. Hiram Walker's, Imperial Oil and British American Oil were the active leaders, together with Brazilian, which was one of the few firm spots. Brazilian firmed 1 1-8 at at 115, British Columbia Fishing softened 1 1-8 at 87 and Industrial Alcohol was an eight easier at 21 5-8, British American oil eased 1-2 at 89, the new issue losing fractionally. Hiram Walker's firmed 1-8 at 35 1-8, but Gooderham and Worts eased 1-8 at 45 1-4. Imperial Oil sold down 7-8 at 39 1-2. International Petroleum was also fractionally easier at 32 1-2.

General Down Movement In To-day's Mine Trading

TORONTO, Jan. 28 (Canadian Press).—Minor recessions were scattered throughout the whole list of stocks dealt in on the Standard Mining Exchange this morning. A few issues resisted the general downward tendency, in which movement Teck Hughes, with a loss of six at 594, and Area, down three at 56, were among the leaders. Corona softened 2 1-2 points at 23, Nipissing five at 9.65, McIntyre 25 at 25.25, Kirkland Lake 2 1-2 at 86, and Laval Quebec a half point at 35 1-2. Amulet joined the down grade with a loss of six points at 1.56. Vipond was a firm spot, gaining four at 1.67. Trading was comparatively light.

Shorts Lose Heavily In Corner On Wheeling

NEW YORK, Jan. 28 (Canadian Press) — The sensational drive against the short interests in wheeling and Lake Erie common, which soared 11 1-2 points to 65 1-2, on the unexpected demand for delivery of shares purchased by recent buyers, overshadowed all other developments in to-day's stock market. Wheeling common later broke five points from its high, but by early afternoon was selling close to the top level again although trading had quietened down considerably. Such gyrations invariably unsettle the general market and to-day was no exception, although when it became apparent that the immediate needs of trapped shorts in Wheeling had been satisfied the market began to gather strength again. Pools, encouraged by the continuance of easy money rates, started operations in a number of specialties which gave promise of special dividend action in the next few months.

The recent advance in raw sugar prices, part of which was lost to-day, also stimulated a demand for sugar shares, South Porto Rican soaring seven points and Great Western 3½.

Early weakness was most apparent in American Linseed preferred which broke four points to the lowest price in over a year; Pittsburgh and West Virginia, which sagged three points in reflection of speculative disappointment over the failure of the directors to increase the dividend yesterday; and U. S. Cast Iron Pipe; Southern Railway, and Electric Storage Battery. On the other hand outstanding strength developed in Commercial Solvents "B" Vick Chemical, Western Maryland Common, and Missouri Pacific Preferred.

Huge losses which may run into the millions of dollars, have been sustained by "bear" traders on the New York Stock Exchange in what to all outward appearances to-day was a "corner" in the common and preferred stocks of the Wheeling and Lake Erie Railroad.

THE EXCELSIOR LIFE REPORTS ANOTHER SUCCESSFUL YEAR

The statements submitted at the Annual General Meeting of the Excelsior Life Insurance Company, presided over by the First Vice-President Alex Fasken, K.C. show 1926 to have been another good year for this strong and purely Canadian Company.

The amount of new business, issued and revived, $16,814,386.25, is an increase of 15% over that of 1925. This rate of increase was considerably higher than the combined average rate for all the Companies in amount of insurance written for the year throughout Canada. Insurance now in force amounts to $69,401,500.00. Total income, including premiums, interest and rents increased by $262,128.09, making the revenue for the year nearly Three Million Dollars. A reduction in the expense rate as compared with any previous year was shown.

Payments to policyholders amounted to $662,644.17 and included $339,465.23 for death claims; $245,459.27 for matured investment and endowment policies and $377,719.67 profits to policyholders, surrender values, etc. The mortality experience was exceptionally favorable, and although higher than in 1925, due to an unusually large number of claims resulting from accidental deaths, was still well below the expected. The assets total $12,209,960.67 and include over Five Million Dollars of Bonds, Debentures and preferred stocks, the market value of which at the end of the year was $233,339.66 higher than the book value at which they were taken into the statement. The surplus funds, exclusive of special reserve funds, now stand at $1,604,552.59. With an increased volume of business in force, greatly improved Field organization, a further increase in dividends, and the marked improvement in general conditions, opinions were expressed that still greater progress would be made during 1927.

Mr. A. J. McClellan, Branch Manager for Central Ontario is optimistic as to business in 1927.

NORTH AMERICAN LIFE ENDS SATISFACTORY YEAR

Dividend Scale Increased—Interest Earned 6.40

The meeting, of the Shareholders and Policyholders of the North American Life was held at the Head Office, the 27th of January, 1927, Mr. W. B. Taylor, the President, in presenting the report, spoke of the encouraging progress made during the year in every phase of the Company's activities. An increase of $14,686,530. brought the total insurance in force to $152,682,243. New Business for the year totalled $32,540,819. being a record year for the Company. Cash Income amounted to $7,065,821.56, an increase of $684,818.04. Payments made to Policyholders in respect to Death and Disability Claims, Matured Endowments, Dividends, Cash Surrender Values and Annuities amounted to $2,556,663.94. The Assets of the Company amounted to $32,[illegible]3,780.05, an increase of $3,005,770.09, establishing a record for the Company.

The Dividend Scale was increased this year for the fourth successive year. The Surplus of the Company now amounts to $5,738,854.12. The fact that of all the surplus earned, less than one-half of 1% is paid to Shareholders or guarantors, is worthy of notice. The average interest earned on investments during the year was 6.40%, being an increase of .20% over the previous year. Mr. Taylor in his Presidential Address made mention of the improving condition in general trade throughout Canada. He mentioned particularly the marvellous development in water power in the Province of Quebec, the increasingly large amount of newsprint production which this year outstripped the United States and the fact that immigration is again on the upward turn.

"The country has had a successful business year," he stated, "and we trust we have now entered upon a cycle of business activities which will continue for many years and as it extends and becomes more diversified throughout the country a setback in one line or one Province will not exercise the same influence on that country as a whole as formerly. We are assured, however, that confidence in our own country and mutual co-operation between all Provinces for the general advantage of the intersts of Canada will improve and that there will be no desire on the part of any portion of the country to gain an unjust advantage at the expense of any other part. Canadians have a great deal to be thankful for when we consider that the capital wealth of Canada is exceeded only by that of the United States, which has taken first place since the war, and of Great Britain which is now in second place."

The adoption of the report was seconded by the first Vice-President, Mr. W. K. George.

LASHES ADDED TO PENALTIES

Men Convicted of Serious Charges To Receive 20 Blows Each.

SERVE 15 YEARS.

TORONTO, Jan. 28.—(Canadian Press.) — The Second Divisional Court to-day allowed the appeal of the Attorney General of Ontario against the leniency of the sentences imposed on Frank De Young, Richard Darling and Walter Liddiard of St. Catharines, convicted of assault on a young girl.

The sentences of 15 years imposed on each of the three men are increased by 20 lashes each. Ten lashes are to be given each man within six months of the issue of judgment and the other ten within 18 months.

Canada's History

brought fame to Canada," he declared.

During the last few months there has been a curious pessimism disseminated all over Canada. "We should ask ourselves," he said, "What lies before us?" 'What is the destiny of Canada?'" It does seem to be tragedy that in these days when the old world is crowded a country with the inexhaustible resources, with room for millions of people, should have thousands of men out of work. "We know," he continued, "to the south lies a great industrial democracy made up of our own kith and kin; we know they are enormously wealthy; we know they are self-centred and enterprising; we know that thousands of our young people have answered their call — but can you blame them?" he asked.

A great many people, he said, think that Canada is simply the result of the war of independence in the United States "I look at it in a different way," he said. On April 9, 1607, in a little church in London there entered twelve swarthy mariners and partook of the Sacrament. The leader of that band was Henry Hudson. Next day they took a little ship and sailed for the north. "What made this Elizabethan spirit?" he asked — "the spirit of which the Empire was born. I would call it a possession of the spirit," declared the speaker.

He told of several unsuccessful attempts that were made and how finally, after a crew composed of Lascars mutinied, Hudson decided to sail to the south-west, of which there was at that time no map of any description. After many days he reached the mouth of the great river that now bears his name, the Hudson, a river which no white man had ever seen before.

The following year Hudson, accompanied by his son, set out again and reached what is known as the Hudson Straits, and from there to Hudson's Bay, which, the speaker said, was 1,200 miles long and 500 miles wide.

For two years that northland was penetrated by that old Anglo stock simply doing its duty day by day. The difficulty to-day is that "we all want to be too comfortable." "We would do well to get the spirit of these old Elizabethans if we are to remain Canadians."

Canada has her place in the British Empire, there is to the south a great friendly nation, and there is a great moral economic pull in that direction, but "we should remember that Canada is the highway between the old world and the civilized if we would be privileged to fulfill the dreams of those who died."

Joe Wearing conveyed the thanks of the club to the speaker and to the various artists. The speaker's address he termed "a marvellous romance of past history and a vision of the possibilities that lay ahead."

Among the guests were: Rev. T. J. O'Conor-Fenton, Norwood; Rev. G. J. Bousfield, Peterborough; Rev. T. H. Stanley, Havelock; Rev. Dr. R. C. Blagrave, Rev. J. L. Hughes, T. H. Two were given an indefinite term in the Industrial school and the other allowed to go on suspended sentence. The two sent to the Industrial school pleaded guilty to breaking into six residences and two schools and when caught had a revolver in their possession. The police have recovered the greater part of the loot they secured.

Favorite Dancing Club Of Prince Of Wales Closed

LONDON, Jan. 28. (United News.) — Padlocks have been put on the famous Kit Kat Dancing Club, rendezvous of Cabinet members and a favorite haunt of the Prince of Wales. The Marlboro street police court ordered the Picadilly Circus resort closed for three months after fines totalling $5600 and $750 in costs, had been assessed against it.

The management was charged with evading the liquor restrictions

In asking leniency the court attorneys for the club cited the fact that its membership included 30 peers, several Cabinet members and many members of the House of Commons.

Competent to judge

There is no better way for you to learn the true value of commodities in general use than to read the advertisements day by day—regardless of whether or not you have any immediate intention of buying.

Those young housekeepers whose first experiences in marketing began in war-time have a fixed idea of high prices. Those of an older generation have an equally strong conviction that prices should be lower.

With the shifting changes of a rapidly moving world both prices and values are bound to fluctuate. A financier studies these trends with scrupulous care in published financial reports compiled by experts.

An intelligent housewife may similarly make herself a competent judge of values by studying each day's advertisements of the things she needs—just as the broker studies his stock list.

Then as she comes to buy she may do so with full confidence in her knowledge.

To stand the test of advertising, merchandise must be good

ILLICIT LIQUOR QUESTION RAISED

Alberta Says Federal Government Should Stop Manufacture.

CUSTOMS PROBE.

CALGARY, Jan. 28 (Canadian Press).—Appearing on behalf of the Attorney-General of Alberta, R. Andrew Smith, Edmonton, submitted a statement to the Royal Customs Commission which opened this morning. The statement set forth, among other things, that the Federal Government received more than $2,500,000 in revenue from the sale and manufacture of liquor in Alberta last year. Therefore, the Federal Government should take steps to stamp out the illicit manufacture of liquor in that province.

The statement directed the attention to the operation at Fernie, B.C., of the liquor warehouse of the Fernie Consolidated Liquor Exporters' Association and declared that it could only exist for one purpose: "To foster and promote illicit traffic in liquor with a neighboring country, the laws of which prohibit the importation of liquor for beverage purposes.

Chronic Head Colds

A Simple Method of Prevention

Nasal catarrh is not only disagreeable and offensive, but it will lead to serious trouble.

That inflamed condition of the mucous membranes of the air passages of the head, nose and throat may spread to the point where it is incurable and a danger to life.

Dr. Blosser's Cigarettes are composed of medicinal herbs, flowers and berries. The warm smoke vapor is inhaled into the affected air passages and will go where sprays, douches and salves cannot reach. They contain no tobacco or cubebs, and being harmless, are used by children, as well as adults.

If you suffer from any catarrhal trouble, plain nasal catarrh, catarrhal deafness, hoarseness, asthma, hay fever, bronchial irritations, or are subject to frequent colds, get from any druggist a pocket-size package of Dr. Blosser's Cigarettes, and prove for yourself their pleasant, beneficial effects.

MIKE NOT YET ON SCRAP HEAP

Odds on Berlenbach, But Wild Irishman Still Game.

'BOUT ON FRIDAY.

NEW YORK, Jan. 28. — One hard tap on the chin with the referee beating the arm for the well known count of ten, has ended the career of some young and many old fighters.

McTigue Ready.

There is a legend among those who make their living or get their amusement out of professional boxing that a punch on the chin will ruin a career, especially if the chin assaulted is hung on an old man.

Benny Leonard, who was a lightweight champion of high rating, went to sleep from two taps on the chin early in his career, but he went on, and became so good that the old timers and the young timers are still in debate about the unanswerable argument: "Could Joe Gans beat the Benneh or could the Benneh beat the Joe?"

Johnny Dundee in one of his earliest bouts, was knocked out by Willie Jackson, but Jackson later took out his shears and started cutting paper dolls while Dundee, with a record of two world's championships, is still fighting for the fun of it.

Which leads up to the point that in Tex Rickard's Garden on Friday night Mike McTigue, former world's light heavyweight champion, is going to fight Paul Berlenbach, "Der Paulie" and another former world's light heavyweight champion.

No Longer Young.

Mike McTigue is not a young fighter. Like a Vassar co-ed, he wants to be always sweet sixteen and never kissed by a right hand on the jaw. But the records show that Mike must be in the late thirties and his only kiss from a right hand on the jaw came when Jack Delaney, the sharpshooter of boxing, put him down for the count.

When McTigue was knocked out for the first time in his career by the French-Canadian, the boys in the boxing alley ordered flowers for Mike and Jimmy Johnston, Jimmy having spent some money for Mike's contract.

But Mike and Jimmy said it was a mere trifle in their lives and that the blind baggage on the train they were travelling would lead to another championship.

McTigue became an international character when he lured Battling Siki, a very dark hued boy of the jungles, into Dublin to meet a home-bred fighter in Dublin on St. Patrick's day. Siki escaped with his life and without a title.

Then bold Mike McTigue fell into a harrowing experience with the New York Boxing Commission and he invented a phrase that will follow long after his little McTigue's are grandparents: "I hurted me hand."

But old man McTigue laughed off all the jests and when he was carted to the pugilistic cemetery after being crocked by Delaney, he said: "Oime not through."

Test is Friday.

"I've always been a defensive fighter, they say," the Mike added, "and I guess it was because I didn't know that it didn't hurt to be knocked out. It isn't so bad and since then I've been fighting and taking chances."

Since he was knocked out by Delaney, McTigue has knocked off some of the toughest men in the division: King Solomon, Billy Vidabeck, and Johnny Risko. And his victims were not palookas.

SUZANNE PICKS MONEYED LOVER

HAVANA, Jan. 28 (United Press) —Suzanne Lenglen, French tennis ace, was reported yesterday to have surrendered to the rapid fire courtship of a young American.

Baldwin Baldwin, heir to the millions of the "Lucky" Baldwin stock breeding establishment at Santa El Rio Rey, in California, is her fiance, it was said by W. H. Pickens, who signed her contract with C. C. Pyle.

Baldwin met the temperamental Suzanne at Coronado Beach, Calif., near his home, and immediately laid siege to the heart which was reported to have rebuffed noblemen and millionaires in Europe. He followed her on her professional tennis exhibition tour through the south, and then here, where from the sidelines he daily watches her play.

Announcement of the engagement, Pickens said, will be made soon.

(By F. D. C.)

In a tightly fought and well played exhibition, featured by a desperate rally by the Petes that almost turned defeat into a glorious victory, Peterboro's Senior O.H.A. team went down before Varsity Grads unbeaten machine at Brock street rink last night.

The final score was 7 to 4, with Connie Smythe's crew leading 3 to 0 at the end of the first period and 5 to 1 with the second dash over.

The bare figures suggest a decisive win for Varsity's representatives.

But they do not indicate how close the group leaders came to their first loss in the O.H.A. race.

To say that the "breaks" won for the visitors sounds like the usual alibi of a beaten team—so suppose we say that the Grads got a lot of help from the vagaries of luck and let it go at that.

In the first place they got the benefit of two crazy goals, one that started with the deflection of the puck from the tangled sticks of Red Porter and Kenny Kane and ended with a bounce into the net and a second, a lazy drive from beyond centre ice that Ray Rose converted into the curtain when he tried to stop it with his stick.

Those were sheer luck, both of those long ones, made Joe Dwyer look bad when especially on the last one he hadn't a chance to make the stop after the course of the shot was suddenly changed by Rose's stick, and they gave the visitors lots of encouragement.

But the real "break" for Varsity came early in the third period when the Petes launched a terrific onslaught that earned them three goals in six minutes, bottled Varsity in their own end of the rink and had Connie Smythe's machine in the air completely. The sudden transformation in the situation caught the Grads off their guard and they were unable to get the rubber away from their own territory.

Just at this moment Joe Dwyer, who had his hand badly hurt in the first period, almost fainting from pain had to leave the ice until medical attention could be obtained.

The delay saved Varsity.

The five minutes' respite gave them a chance to rally, slowed up the wild offensive of the Petes and although the latter tried everything they knew to get the tieing goal and came close enough to give the Varsity management heart failure, the psychological moment had passed, and finally in the last minutes of the battle the Grads saved the situation with a pair of goals.

It was a grimly fought and fast moving battle, well handled by Referee Tom Munro of London, and the fighting finish staged by the Petes provided plenty of thrills for the biggest crowd of several seasons at Brock street rink.

Varsity were without two of their regular forwards, Louie Hudson and Hughey Plaxton, but even without these stalwarts were a formidable team, Dave Trottier, moved to centre ice in the absence of Plaxton, rose to the occasion and his efforts, both on the attack and defensively, made the Grads line look better than was thought possible with two of the big three missing. Trottier was by long odds Varsity's most effective player, his checking being a thorn in the Petes' side all night while he was always dangerous on the attack. Pinch-hitter Frank Sullivan turned in a good game at left wing and Delahaye, a former Belleville boy, was useful at all times

Varsity had their regular defence in action with Joe Sullivan performing sensationally in the nets behind Porter and Taylor. The lank "Red" scored three goals for the visitors, two of them on lucky long shots, but the defence star slowed up as the game went along and he was not nearly as conspicuous as in the game in Toronto.

The Grads showed plenty of speed the ability to take advantage of their openings, a strong defensive system and clever use of the no off-side area.

Against these strong points of the visitors the Petes opposed lots of speed on their own account, good stickhandling, and in the latter stages a grim determination that came close to being the deciding factor.

Joe Dwyer is being panned for being beaten by a couple of long shots. He lost them, of course, but he hadn't a chance in the world on Porter's long one from centre after Roses' stick had diverted the rubber. And give the Petes' captain credit—he stopped many a nasty one during the fray. McLeod and Rose both played good hockey in front of him and they gave all they had. Rose was a leader in the rally in the last period and his reckless onslaughts put fighting spirit galore into the losers. Up in front Ken Kane gave his best game of the year. He battled every minute he was out there, scored one smart goal after some great stickhandling, and was trying all the way. Bogardis, Collins and Ranger all contributed effective hockey and worked hard enough to have earned a different result.

The Game in Detail.

The Petes had the first two shots of the game. Ranger and Bogardis firing drives at Joe Sullivan that were handled easily. Then a little over a minute from the start Red Porter and Frank Sullivan broke away. Sullivan's shot was wide of the net but Porter was in the right position for the rebound off the end of the rink and rattled the rubber past Dwyer.

The early setback did not discourage the Petes, who staged several dangerous attacks in the next few minutes, only to be foiled by Sullivan. On one of these raids, however, they were caught back of Varsity's blue line and a smart forward pass in the defence area sent three Grads' attackers away unchecked, with Trottier carrying the puck. Instead of passing Trottier went through alone, a beautiful piece of stickhandling that carried him on top of Dwyer for a goal.

That made it 2 to 0, but the Petes rallied and had a big share of the play. Kane was particularly aggressive at this stage and had tough luck several times when a score looked certain. Porter drew a penalty, the first of the game, for tripping McLeod, but the Petes could not score while he was off. Eddie Williams was chased soon after the sides were even again, for tripping, but the teams were at full strength when "Red" Porter got the first of his two lucky markers. The lanky defence man came up left wing and shot from outside the blue line as Kane checked him. The rubber went into the air off Kane's stick, flew into a graceful arc over McLeod's shoulder, took two crazy hops on the ice in front of Dwyer and into the net.

The score remained at 3 to 0 when the first resting spell came.

In the first few seconds of the second session Ranger broke through and came within an ace of scoring. Varsity retaliated and Dwyer made a fine stop of a close-in shot from Delahaye. It was even going for the next few minutes until finally McLeod broke away, passed to Collins and took Frank's return pass to beat Sullivan at close range for the first Peterboro goal of the game.

Collins was chased for slashing Joe Sullivan when he went in for a rebound and while he was off Frank Sullivan scored from an almost impossible angle on a lone rush. He was chased toward the corner but cut loose with a backhand shot that just caught the net.

Delahaye then was benched for holding Rose's stick but Varsity got another lucky goal while he was off when "Red" Porter heaved a long high shot from the left boards on Varsity's side of centre. The rubber was going over the net but Rose tried to stop it with his stick and deflected it into the curtains. It was a tough break.

For the balance of the period the Petes had as much of the play as the Grads, and only tough luck robbed them of a couple of goals. Bert McLeod just missed when he tore in for the rebound of a bullet shot from outside the defence and Bogardis was robbed on another occasion when he picked up a loose puck, only to have Sullivan make a great stop. In another scrimmage Sullivan saved nicely.

The Petes, of course, were not doing all the attacking and Trottier came close on a beautiful rush that was beaten by a great save by Dwyer.

Just before the end of the period Taylor and Ranger got into a jam and were chased.

The last period saw the most excitement of the battle when the Petes rallied and came within an ace of pulling the game out of the fire. The gallant fight staged by the home crew sent the crowd into a frenzy of excitement and there was enough action crowded into that last torrid session to suit anybody. Right off the reel the Petes carried the play to the visitors. Less than three minutes of the period had gone when Bogardis slapped in a rebound from a low shot by Ranger and, fired by that success, the Petes threw themselves into the fight with a dash that caused the Varsity outfit to lose their air of confidence. When Rose came down and fired a hot shot at Sullivan, which the goalie stopped, only to have Collins dose in and bat home the rebound before he could clear, there were signs of confusion in the visitors' ranks and they were on the run completely a minute after when Ken Kane stickhandled out of the corner around two or three Grads to beat Sullivan from close-in.

The Petes were only a goal down with fourteen minutes to go, and coming like wild fire. Then the game was held up until Dwyer received medical attention for his injured hand and the delay gave Varsity a chance to pull themselves together. When play resumed five minutes after they had snapped out of their flurry and held off the desperate Petes, although the deciding goal came round the Varsity net twice on the blade of Frankie Collins' stick, only to be lost by inches. Twice Collins rounded the Varsity citadel on fast plays, the rubber rolling just past the post on the first occasion and Sullivan dropping in time to smother it on the second attempt. Penalties to McLeod and then to Ranger aided Varsity in holding out the Petes but their supporters had plenty of anxious moments until as the end of the game came rapidly nearer Delahaye broke away with Trottier and faking a shot went in top of Dwyer to score Varsity's sixth goal.

With Ranger off for talking "sass" to Referee Munro the Grads registered the final goal of the game when Delahaye backhanded one into the net after Dwyer had stopped two hard shots.

MILL VICTORIOUS OVER MENIE IN SECOND OVERTIME BATTLE

Campbellford District League Leaders Defeated by Score 3 to 2.

GOOD HOCKEY

Victor's Line-up Weakened by Loss of Stewart Through Accident.

CAMPBELLFORD, Jan. 28—The Mill may not win the Town league championship but they bid fair to become the long distance champions. Wednesday night at Covert's Arena they engaged in their second 20 minute overtime battle and this time were returned winners over Menie by a score of 3 to 2.

It was a tidy argument all the way through, with honors nearly even most of the way, although the Mill had more direct shots on goal than Menie did and they must be given credit for gameness and determination for just before the game started Tommy Stewart was struck in the eye with the puck and forced to retire. This brought the youthful Lambert in from centre ice to guard the twine and left the Mill without a capable substitute, the starting sextet playing practically the eighty minutes without relief but they battled to the last minute and were finally rewarded with victory. A good share of the credit for the win goes to Ayrhart and Brown; the pair carried the brunt of the attack and their backchecking was ceaseless. One or the other was on top of the puck all night. Lambert filled the breach in goal in fine style. He was cool and collected at all times and had a number of clever saves to his credit.

Kerr was the outstanding performer for Menie but the ex-Lakefield player was watched closely all night. Rannie failed to play to the form expected of him, and it was only at intervals that he was dangerous and Shillinglaw was not as prominent as in former games, although his brilliant individual effort with less than a minute to go was the means of sending the game into overtime.

Play was up and down the ice, Ayrhart, Brown and Wilks testing Owens. Kerr went the length of the rink only to have Lambert turn the shot aside. Ayrhart was right in on top of Owens but failed to score. Kerr came back with another rink length try and slipped the puck in the Mill goal. The time was 13 minutes. Shortly after Sarginson went from end to end. His shot was wide but he gathered in the rebound off the boards and slammed it past Owens. Sargisson was back again and Reid shot on the rebound but Owens blocked them both. Kerr was through for Menie but Lambert saved. Towards the close of the period the players of both teams were bunching together and the hockey deteriorated. Score 1 to 1.

At the start of the second Brown came down twice and Hume and Shillinglaw combined for a shot on the Mill goal and Kerr was in twice on Lambert. Brown was back for the Mill and his shot settled at the goal mouth. A dispute arose and the goal umpires hanged. Rannie tested Lambert twice and Owens made a beautiful save when Ayrhart was through alone. Ayrhart and Wilks were down together and Reid had a lone try. Coulter and Kerr missed a great chance when they had Lambert out of his net but they both tried to poke the puck in and missed the goal and Owens robbed Brown by diving into the Mill man's shot. The period was scoreless.

The checking was close in the third period and most of the play was around centre ice. Kerr and Lynn had close shots on the Mill goal and Ayrhart at the other end but no score. The period was three quarters gone when Ayrhart relieved Hay of the puck at the Menie blue line and went in alone, with plenty of time the Mill wing man made no mistake. Hay went down alone for Menie and Ayrhart was in close on the first time and hitting the goal Owens twice, shooting into his pads post on his other attempt. Shillinglaw, Kerr and Hay had shots at Lambert and Sarginson at Owens. With less than one minute to go Shillinglaw went through the whole ADD Mill Victorious—C .. .. Mill team to tie up the game. Menie 2; Mill 2.

In the first half of the overtime Lynn and Ayrhart both missed chances to settle the deadlock and they battled on without a score till the last half of the second overtime period. Brown came down and shot from outside the defence and Owens in going to his knees let the rubber slip between his pads and that goal settled the issue. The Mill played defensively and shot the puck down the ice when hard pressed, and Menie's valiant efforts to get the equalizer were unsuccessful.

The Elks were again forced to play with only five men, Heptonstall failing to put in an appearance and Garrison was used in the nets. Before the youngster knew what it was all about "Doug" Runions had slipped the rubber past him four times. Then the Elks went on the offensive in great style and succeeded in tying the score. Hendy and Lambert getting a goal apiece and Grills a pair of tallies. Just before time was up McPherson got through for the winning goal. It was probably the best midget game of the season.

TEAMS DRAW SECOND ROUND SCOTTISH CUP

Celtic, Dumfernline and Airdrieonians Victors in Wednesday's Play.

DUNDEE FEATURES

English Cup Fourth Round To be Played on Saturday.

Scottish Cup games replayed on Wednesday ended as most fans anticipated, in victories for Celtic, Dunfermline and Airdrieonians, the results being:

Celtic 4, Queen of the South 1.
Dunfermline 5; Bathgate 2.
Airdrieonians 2, Ayr 1.

The draw for the second round, games to be played on Feb. 2, provides for two clashes of more than ordinary interest, Dundee, who beat Motherwell at Dens Park by 3 goals to 0, being in for a hard battle at Kilmarnock, while Rangers will certainly have their hands full with St. Mirren at Ibrox Park. Neither of the two last named clubs were given a real test in the first round, the "Paisley Buddies" finding easy victims in Arbroath at Love street and Rangers having just as soft a snap in Leith Athletic. Celtic have the gift of the day in Brechin City, of the third division. The draw is as follows:

East Fife v. Aberdeen.
Hamilton v. Clydebank.
Alloa v. Dumbarton.
Buckie Thistle v. Beith.
Dundee United v. Vale of Leven.
King's Park v. Partick.
Dunfermline v. Airdrie.
Brechin City v. Celtic.
Broxburn v. Dykeh'd or Montrose
St. Bernard's v. Arthurlie.
Kilmarnock v. Dundee.
Mid Annandale v. Forfar.
Bo'ness v. Cowdenbeath.
Falkirk v. Queen's Park.
Elgin City v. Clyd..
Rangers v. St. Mirren.

The English Cup.

Fourth round English Cup games are scheduled for Saturday. Of the .. clubs left in the running 12 are from the first division, 15 from the second, two each from the northern and southern sections of the third division, and Corinthians, the only amateur outfit. Leeds United and Bolton Wanderers will stage the only clash between clubs of the premier division, and the result will be awaited with interest, as two weeks ago Wanderers beat Leeds at Burden Park. On Saturday the game will be played at Elland road. Leeds can go into the fray with some confidence after having knocked out Sunderland by 3 goals to 2. West Ham United, conquerors of 'Spurs, will have an easier task, this time in Brentford, who left Clapton, Gillingham and Oldham Athletic in their wake. Preston North End, who forced Middlesboro to ease up in their rapid advance towards promotion by playing to a draw at Deepdale last Saturday, will have the Ayrsome Park lot back again this week end in a cup engagement. Preston expect to more than repeat the dose, but will they? In three other games second division teams will meet, and Swansea, Notts Forest and Portsmouth appear to have the pull, although the two last-named clubs will be away from home. Liverpool, Wednesday, Derby County, Arsenal, Burnley, Newcastle, Chelsea and Cardiff City look good for a fifth round ticket.

BRISTLING BATTLES of BARE FIST DAYS

(MY LIFE STORY)

by Jack McAuliffe

CHAPTER TWENTY

Jake Hyams, an Englishman, came over to the United States and a big hullabaloo was raised about him. He was a rugged, hard-punching fighter and had just beaten the vaunted Jem Carney to cop the championship of Great Britain.

In view of my 74-round no-decision battle with Carney, my meeting with Hyams was declared a 'natural.'

We met at a skating rink at Williamsburg, admission was charged and for the first time in history, I believe, the fighters were battling for a cut of the gate. There was $1000 side bet and the winner was to get all the gate receipts.

Hyams was big and strong as a bull. He was the best head lodger I had ever seen in the ring. He gave me a great fight. It was so exciting part of the stands collpased and three men were killed.

I stopped him with a left and right to the jaw in the ninth round. Hyams was a good sport. He went back to England and said nobody in the world could beat me and settled a lot of argument that arose over my fight with Carney, who claimed he could have whipped me if the fight hadn't been stopped.

At this time I met Dick Roche, wealthy New York gambler. He agreed to back me and he sure was a square guy. I met him in the bar at the St. James hotel in New York.

Then Roche arranged for a match between me and the "Streator Cyclone." I had never heard of the "Streator Cyclone" and knew very little about him, so I agreed to meet him.

A side bet of $2500 was posted and I began to train.

At this time pugilists "out west" around Chicago were beginning to develop rapidly. I did not know it but this cyclone person was Billy Myers, a murderous puncher. He had been fighting around his home town in Streator, Illinois, and he was making a great name. There was most bitter feeling between the east and west at the time and whenever gangs from Chicago and New York clashed there was blood. Gun fighters were coming into vogue.

When Myers stopped Harry Gilmore, Canadian champion, with a punch, he became hero of the west.

Billy Madden came to me and asked me whom I was training for.

"Oh some guy named Meyers out in Chicago," I says, "a set-up."

'Set-up, hell!" Madden snorted, "you'd better settle down to serious training and quit the fooling. This Myers killed the last man he fought in Chicago with one punch, wearing kid gloves!"

NOTE—In the next chapter McAuliff tells of his fight with Myers and how bandits robbed the safe holding the side bets, but later delivered him his winning purse.

ST. PATS UNABLE TO HOLD LEAD; MAROONS WIN

Champions Score Three Goals in Last Period To Win 5-3.

N. H. L. RESULTS.

Rangers, Ottawa and Pittsburgh Win From Canadiens, Detroit and Chicago.

TORONTO, Jan. 28.—For two periods of last night's game St. Patrick's gave their supporters plenty of cause for anticipating a victory over the world's champion Montreal Maroons, but is was too good to be true, and for the third time this season, the Irish succumbed before the attack of the visitors. In the space of twenty-two minutes the score was turned from 3 to 1 for the local to 5 to 3 for the invaders and these special minutes were the last third of the game.

Rangers 3, Canadiens 2

MONTREAL, Jan. 28—New York Rangers nosed out the Canadiens when they flashed to a 3 to 2 victory over the local team in a nerve-wracking pro-hockey tilt here last night before a crowd of 9,500 fans.

It was not until the third period, after the teams had flown through two sessions to a deadlocked score, that Bill Cook finally clinched the game for Lester Patrick's Rangers, taking the puck at the blue line, tricking Gardiner and closing in on Hainsworth for the deciding tally.

Ottawa 3, Detroit 1

OTTAWA, Jan. 28.—A defeat suffered early in the season was retallated for in a sense here last night, when the Capital's pace-setting Senators trounced Art Duncan's N.H.L. crew from Detroit, 3 to 1.

The Cougars played a different brand of game from that which they showed in trimming the Ottawas on home ice last month, 5 to 0. Last night they lacked the dashing attack which carried them to that sterling victory and except for a time near the end of the contest showed little that was threatening.

Pittsburg 4, Chicago 2

PITTSBURG, Pa., Jan. 28. — The Pittsburgh Pirates, excelling in team play, skating and body-checking, last night defeated the Chicago Black Hawks, 4 to 2, in a National Hockey League contest here. The locals sewed up the game in the second period when they made three goals in rapid succession. One tally was made by Darragh and two by Milks.

The fourth was added in the final quarter by Arbour, who was standing at mid-ice when he mashed the shot.

ARMED INTERVENTION IN CHINA NOT PLANNED BY SOVIET CABINET EVEN THOUGH POWERS OPEN WAR

Vice Chairman Says Present Rising Not Work Moscow.

WILL BE FRIENDLY.

No Ban To Be Placed on Russians Fighting in Nationalist Ranks.

LENINGRAD, Russia, Jan. 28.—(Canadian Press).—Armed intervention in China does "not enter into the plans" of the Soviet Government. Assurance to this effect was given in a speech here yesterday by J. E. Budzutsk, vice-chairman of the Soviet Cabinet. "Even if the foreign powers open war on China, we shall not interfere," he said. "We shall maintain toward Canton (the Cantonese, or Nationalist Government), friendly neutrality and warm sympathy, and shall help Canton in every way, but armed intervention in China does not enter into our plans."

The Soviet Government cannot and does not wish to forbid Soviet citizens voluntarily joining the Cantonese army to "fight the Imperialists," he went on, but from this it must not be assumed that the Chinese revolution is the work of Moscow. "During our own civil war," he pointed out, "we had many foreign soldiers in our ranks, but it would be absurd to say that the October revolution and triumph over foreign intervention were accomplished by foreigners."

ALDERMAN SAYS HE WILL RESIGN

McConnell Quits Because of Efforts of Zealous Partisans.

ILLEGAL VOTES.

WINDSOR, Jan. 28.—The feature of yesterday's session of the Windsor election scandal inquiry before Judge Duncan Ross came in the final hour when F. C. Kerby, counsel for Alderman John W. McConnell, against whom witnesses have alleged more than one illegal proceeding in connection with the vote, announced that his client is resigning his seat in the Council. Mr. McConnell, his attorney declares, is "not resigning under fire," but rather, "from a sense of honor," and because he recognizes no neutral ground between right and wrong. He cannot escape the fact that illegal votes were cast for him by zealous partisans, Mr. Kerby said, in terming his client's position as "awkward and uncharitable."

Earlier in the afternoon counsel for Aldermen Garnet Edwards and E. P. Holden sprang a surprise by calling former Alderman Archibald E. Hooper to the stand and subjecting him to a severe grilling, particularly in the matter of unpaid taxes. Hooper denied having given a cheque to Frank J. Mitchell, Mayor of the city last year, and asking him to hold the cheque given in payment for his taxes, until he could make it good at the bank after election day. He gave Mitchell the cheque, he asserted, because he was "in a hurry" to leave the City Hall, and Mitchell had offered to take it to the tax collector for him. George Campeau, local manager of the Provincial Bank, testified that Hooper's balance at the bank was $2.20 on November 27, the date the cheque was given to Mitchell. On January 15 of this year Hooper deposited $110 and had his cheque certified, the bank manager said.

WRIGHT REGRETS NAMING ACTRESS

Would Have Avoided Speaking of Lily Langtry in Evidence.

LONDON, Jan. 28. Canadian Press. — Regret for bringing the name of Langtry, the famous actress, into his libel action against Viscount Gladstone, for calling him "liar, coward and fool," was expressed by Captain Peter Wright to-day. He said he would have "done anything" to avoid giving his testimony of yesterday in which he said he had been told that the famous actress, now Lady De Bathe, had been intimate with the Elder Gladstone.

A London paper to-day published a picture of Gladstone, the "grand old man," beside one of Lily Langtry in her youth. Among those in the crowded court to-day were T. P. ("Tay Pay") O'Connor, "Father of the House of Commons," and Augustine Birrell, former Chief Secretary for Ireland, who were well acquainted with the great Prime Minister.

Among other grounds he contends that the Magistrate had no jurisdiction to infer from his appearance that the accused was over 18 years of age, and that there was no evidence that he was 18 years of age.

Aimee McPherson Gets Vaudeville Offer

NEW YORK, N.Y., Jan. 28 (United News).—Vaudeville has recognized the tremendous drawing power of Aimee E. Semple McPherson and hopes to enlist her in the ranks of the two-a-day.

A telegram making the famous Los Angeles evangelist "a very fair offer" for a six weeks' tour of the mining districts of Pennsylvania was sent to Mrs. McPherson Thursday by the Harry A. Shea Vaudeville Agency of New York.

The evangelist is now touring the Mid-West as a rest from the strain of her recent kidnapping troubles in Southern California courts. If she accepts the vaudeville offer, Shea said she will be booked for a tour of the 98 theatres owned by the M. B. Commerford Co. of Scranton, Pa.

—Remembered by Jessie.

IN MEMORIAM.

In loving memory of our daughter, Grace Dinsdale, who died 28th January, 1926:

We loved her, yes we loved her,
But Jesus loved her more,
And He has sweetly called her home
To yonder shining shore.

The golden gates were open,
A gentle voice called 'come',
And with farewells unspoken
She calmly entered home.

God knows how much we miss her,
He counts the tears we shed,
And whispers' Hush, she is only sleeping
Your loved one is not dead.

ONTARIO GRAIN POOL ORGANIZED AT BIG MEETING

Will Be Unit of Three Already in Existence in Western Provinces.

CONTRACTS SIGNED.

Project Launched at Meeting of 300 Farmers From Southwestern Ontario.

CHATHAM, Ont., Jan. 28.—The Ontario Grain Pool, a unit to the pools already in existence in the three Western provinces, was launched at an enthusiastic meeting of farmers from various parts of Southwestern Ontario, held in this city yesterday. There were more than three hundred in attendance, and a standing vote indicated that those present were practically unanimous in their endorsation of the scheme.

Yesterday morning officials of the United Farmers' Co-operative were in conference with the elevator men from the district and submitted a proposition to them to handle pool grain, as well as that which is not in the pool. The elevator men held a meeting later in the day, and it is understood that a resolution was drawn up to be presented to the company at a later date, submitting a counter proposition. J. S. Jeffrey, manager of the grain department of the U. F. O. Co-operative Company, in addressing the meeting yesterday afternoon, stated that as far as possible the pool will use the elevators but if these are not available, other provisions will be made.

The contracts which have been adopted for the Ontario Pool are similar to those used by the Western heat pools, and provide for the farmers agreeing to sell all their grain through the pool for a term of five years. Harry Gilroy, of Alvinston, president of the U.F.O. Co-operative, signed the first contract, while F. L. Arner, of Comber, signed the second contract to be issued in the province.

C. H. Burnell, president of the Manitoba wheat pool, and who recently returned from Australia, where he spent several months in the interests of co-operative marketing; J. J. Morrison, secretary of the U.F.O. Co-operative Company; Mr. Jeffrey; D. L. McCreary of Wallaceburg, county president of the U.F.O.; Duncan Brown of Inwood, addressed the meeting, which was presided over by President Gilroy.

Mr. Burnell, in his address, gave a comprehensive review of the work of the wheat pool throughout the Western provinces, and the benefits derived by the growers as the result of co-operative marketing of their crops.

Mr. Morrison maintained that the only salvation for the agricultural industry is the co-operative marketing of the products of the farm.

Mr. Jeffrey outlined the activities of the Co-operative Company in handling wheat the past two years and predicted much greater success with the organizing of the pool.
